Ask America to Join Parley

Formal Invitation to Near East Peace Conference Handed to Hughes

Secretary Makes It Clear Our Participation Will be "Observational"

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Great Britain, France and Italy, in a joint note presented to Secretary Hughes today, formally invited the United States to participate, actively or passively, in the Near East peace conference to be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, November 13.

The presence of the United States in any role this country elects also was requested at discussions on the future control of the Dardanelles to be held at a later date, in which Russia and Bulgaria will take part.

Upon the receipt of the note, Secretary Hughes immediately instructed the American Ambassadors in London, Paris and Rome to inform the governments to which they are accredited that America's part in the Lausanne conference will be confined to observation.

It was made plain that the United States could not participate in a Turkish peace parley, since the United States had never been at war with the Turks. The contemplated observation of the United States, particularly with regard to the ultimate disposition of the straits, however, will be "keen and close."

COMPROMISE HINTED

The note of the three powers handed to Secretary Hughes by Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador; Count De Chambrun, French charge, and Signor Rosso, Italian charge, begins with the statement that the governments of Great Britain, France and Italy have invited Japan, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, Greece and Turkey, "to conclude a treaty of peace to end war in the east."

The statement that Russia will be invited to conversations later appears to be the first news of such a decision by the Allies. And while the note today shows that the agreement on Russia and Bulgaria is obviously a compromise, since the document seems to exclude Russia from the actual peace conference, still it is a provision for at least some consideration of the important interests of Russia and those of Bulgaria in the Near East settlement.

France has been opposing the admission of Russia into the peace conference. Only the general

GOLDEN BEARS HUMBLE TROJANS IN THRILLING FOOTBALL FRAY

Forty Thousand Fans Watch Southerners Stave Off Rush of Bruins for Three Quarters Only to be Crushed in Final Period

BY PAUL LOWRY

California's sun, which was partially obscured by a dark W. and J. cloud last New Year's Day, came out yesterday and the Bear football eleven thundered its way to victory over the fighting U.S.C. team by a score of 12 to 0. Forty thousand persons watched the Cardinal and Gold boys stave off the rush of the Bear for three quarters, only to be submerged under a last-period collection of ten points, due in part to the Trojans' inability to hold the ball and the Bears' uncanny sense of ball following, plus the mighty booting of Archie Nisbet and the terrific line plunges of Morry Morrison, the human pile-driver.

Without Nisbet and Morrison in the Bear line-up there probably would be a different story to write about this game. The toe of the blond fullback was good for at least 45 yards from the line of scrimmage every time he went back to kick, and Morrison was the only man in the Blue and Gold backfield, who was able to make yardage when he was called upon to do it.

BITTERLY FOUGHT

It was a bitterly fought game, featured by hard, vicious tackling and clever blocking, and strangely enough the Bears won by resorting to the G.A.R. system of smashing the line rather than through aerial tossing for which they have become renowned throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The few forward passes that the Bears did try were smeared with eclat by the Trojans, Dolley scintillating particularly in this regard. Perhaps Andy Smith was reserving his open game for later conference struggles, but with a team going through three quarters under the slender encouragement of a 2-point lead this is not a likely inference. Rather, it is to be presumed, as was the case, that every eligible California man was hounded, and smart little Charley

All 'Cooked Up,' Says Waffle on 'Scandal Iron'

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ROCK ISLAND (Ill.) Oct. 28.—Rev. Archie Waffle was on the iron today before the trial board of the Methodist Church at Port Byron, Ill. Alice Berry, employed as a servant by Mrs. Waffle, had made charges that led to the trial of the pastor.

After Mr. Waffle had been grilled for some time, the board decided to remove him. This action was taken pending further grilling by the central Illinois conference of the church.

Mr. Waffle is said to have been very hot, denying the charges. He says the scandal was cooked up by his enemies. Mr. Waffle said he would go back to Moline and engage in his erstwhile occupation, that of printer.

The Waffles are generally well liked here. Some members of the parish are roasting Mr. Waffle, while others deny he is tough. It will be difficult to determine the facts in the case until the smoke blows away. Some predict that the Waffle case will fall flat.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY SIFTED

Secret Inquest Into Deaths of Montana Minister and Woman Slayer Begun on Mother's Plea

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

HAVRE (Mont.) Oct. 28.—Official investigation by a Coroner's jury into the deaths of the Rev. Leonard Jacob Christler and Mrs. Margaret Carleton lasted until late tonight, no witnesses being examined until the night session. The public was excluded from the inquest.

According to authorities, there were no developments tending to disprove the story of Mrs. Christler to the effect that she heard the shots in the next room, opened the door, saw the body of her husband on the floor and saw Mrs. Carleton shoot herself.

The jury was impaneled by Coroner James Holland, Jr., this afternoon at the request of Mrs. J. H. Pyle of Helena, Mont., mother of Mrs. Carleton, who desired an impartial investigation of Mrs. Christler's version of the shooting. Coroner Holland opposed the calling of the inquest, declaring himself convinced that Mrs. Christler had stated the facts in the case.

As soon as the jury was completed its members were taken to the scene of the tragedy, after which adjournment was taken to 8 o'clock, arrangements having been made to hear witnesses at that time.

Indiana Grabs First Victory From Michigan

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BLOOMINGTON (Ind.) Oct. 28. Indiana University won its first game of the season today when it downed the Michigan Agricultural College, 14 to 6. Capt. Panny of the Crimson was a tower of strength and punted his team to safety frequently.

Indiana made her first touchdown near the opening of the game when a costly fumble of the Aggies left Indiana with the ball on the 15-yard line. The rest of scoring was done in the last two periods.

FRAME-UP IN ENGLAND?

Politics Taking New Twist

"Co-operation" Attitude of Rival Chieftains Viewed With Distrust

Platforms Lacking; 'Agreed' Candidates Grow; Return of Coalition Seen

BY SIDNEY THATCHER
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The British public is beginning to grow distrustful of Mr. Lloyd George and Premier Bonar Law and it would not be surprising if these leaders would be forced into a more detailed explanation of how their "co-operation" is expected to work out after the election.

This distrust is based on several facts. Neither has proclaimed an outstanding platform. Premier Bonar Law has left thirty ministerial appointments open and can easily leave most of them open until after the election. There is an increasing number of "agreed" candidates which leave the voter very little choice in selecting a representative.

Taking it all in all many observers fear there is a frame-up in the making which may defeat the purpose for which a faction of the Unionists saw fit to break up the coalition.

Former Premier Asquith, Independent Liberal leader, charges that the country is faced with exactly the same thing it just got away from, but instead of calling it a coalition they are calling it "co-operation" and that the same men who ruled under the coalition will be found handling things under "co-operation."

TRITE RAP AT RIVAL

Austen Chamberlain's manifesto, issued at Birmingham today, did not clarify the situation any. He simply stated that as a Unionist he would give Premier Bonar Law the support he would expect from the Premier if the coalition had not been disbanded and he believes world conditions demanded a coalition government in England and that he was willing to act with his former colleagues in any government.

While the Tory press is proclaiming that no pact exists for agreed candidates, the fact remains that of the 155 candidates adopted by the Lloyd George Liberals, thirty will not be opposed by the Conservatives and in this connection it is significant that Lord Birkenhead, on his arrival in Glasgow today, had a conference with the Scottish Unionists' whip.

Lord Birkenhead and Sir Robert Horne went into Premier Bonar Law's balliwick to support Mr. Lloyd George in the meeting today where the former Premier was given his usual warm welcome when he spoke to about 5000.

Mr. Lloyd George picked up the phrase in the Premier's speech, "I don't know where I am," which is destined to follow Premier Bonar Law throughout his campaign and added:

Extraordinary things are done by people who don't know where they are."

TOO MANY PEERS

The trend of Mr. Lloyd George's speech and that of Lord Birkenhead indicates that the National Liberals intend to strike at the Conservatives through that part of the new Cabinet already appointed.

As already pointed out in these dispatches, the preponderance of peers is distasteful to many and aside from that some of them have not been much in the public eye recently. Mr. Lloyd George asked what good could be expected by supplanting Sir Robert Horne with Sir Stanley Baldwin while Lord Birkenhead said:

"It is no use trying to deal with first-class problems with second-class brains."

These personalities, following so closely after Lord Birkenhead's conference with the Unionist whip, undoubtedly were for the purpose of arranging further "agreed elections," just one of those situations which are breeding distrust of the motives of the leaders. More political ammunition probably will be loaded in Lloyd George's war chest tomorrow, when he meets Chamberlain, Birkenhead, Horne and Balfour at a week-end country party at Lord Balfour's home in Whittinghame.

INVADES SCOTLAND

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The most important event of today's campaigning was the invasion of Scotland by Lloyd George. Supported by two of his Cabinet colleagues, Lord Birkenhead and Sir Robert Stevenson Horne, the former Prime Minister made speeches at Glasgow and Edinburgh, the two leading Scottish cities. There were great crowds at both places.

The Glasgow meeting was held in Saint Andrews Hall under the auspices of the Scottish liberal council. Miss Helen Frazer, national Liberal candidate for Govan was among the speakers.

Mr. Lloyd George has not yet revealed any constructive program; the essence of his argument was the danger of swapping horses while crossing a stream. Something is expected to come of the week-end party at the Earl of Balfour's Scottish home at Whittinghame. Mr. Lloyd George, Austen Chamberlain, Lord Birkenhead and Sir Robert Horne will spend Sunday there. It is believed they will devote themselves to framing a platform or a plan of campaign.

RICHARDSON ANSWERS ECONOMY CHALLENGE

Republican Nominee for Governor Explains How He Will Save People $115,000,000

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 28.—Friend William Richardson, Republican nominee for Governor, received a welcome here today that established a new record for a community demonstration in San Bernardino. He was given the enthusiastic, warm, affectionate greeting that only "a home town" can accord a man who, having won great success and recognition from the outside world, returns to his boyhood haunts and meets a familiar circle of old friends and neighbors.

And here in the community in which he was raised and which, as a young man, he served as the editor and publisher of his first newspaper, Mr. Richardson renewed his pledge to the people of California that if elected Governor he will give this State an efficient, economical, forward-looking administration.

He repeated in detail the guarantees made by him before the primary and amplified his original statement by an explanation of the methods he will use and the manner in which he promises to reduce the cost of government in California by $115,000,000 in the first four years.

Those who heard Mr. Richardson, and cheered his utterances, expressed the decided opinion that the Republican gubernatorial nominee has developed a style of public address in which sincerity, logic and strong purpose are notably apparent.

RENEWS PLEDGE

In his address to more than 1500 men and women in the Presbyterian Church tonight he said:

"Before the primary election, August 29, I made certain specific and considered guarantees concerning the economies I am prepared to effect in State government if elected Governor. I herewith renew that pledge in every single particular and detail and repeat it exactly as I made it, as follows:

"If I am elected Governor I guarantee in the next four years to save California taxpayers a total of $115,000,000, based on the current rate of increase. As Governor I guarantee that the budget I shall submit to the Legislature in January, 1923, will call for an actual decrease of from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 below the last biennial budget of $91,000,000. This I will do without crippling a single humanitarian function and without defeating a single dollar from the State's educational funds.

"A decrease in State expenses will benefit directly every citizen in California, whether or not a taxpayer.

"I have no political machine working for my election; no campaign fund, no one to reward, no one to punish.

"If elected Governor I have but one task in mind, to make good on the job. As State Treasurer I know the facts and I can make good. I solicit the support of the voters of California on no other basis.

"I made those pledges and guarantees after careful study and with full understanding of the obligation I imposed upon myself to carry them out. I have never yet made a promise nor issued a statement for the mere purpose of getting votes; I can and will carry out every promise I have made if, on November 7, the people of the State elect me Governor.

TO HALT INCREASE

"There has been a steady and consistent increase in State expenditures for the last six years disproportionate to the increase in the population and wealth of the State. By halting that rate of increase I will keep down the biennial budgets during my term of office to the extent that at least $115,000,000 will be saved.

"My nomination itself served as the first definite break in the State machine's program for increasing costs of government, a program

SPIKES WET ATTACKS BY OPPONENTS

Congressman Lineberger Nails Last-Minute Attempt by Randall to Injure Him

In a last-minute attempt to injure the candidacy of Congressman Lineberger, Republican nominee for re-election in the Ninth Congress District, supporters of Charles H. Randall, Prohibitionist candidate, yesterday placed page advertisements in the two afternoon newspapers of Long Beach charging that Congressman Lineberger is supported by opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The advertisements quoted a letter written by G. C. Hinkley, secretary-treasurer of "The National Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, Inc.," in which Hinckley wrote the Congressman had "consistently voted dry," but might be expected to come out for the association's program for wine and beer.

This letter was dated Oct. 5, 1922.

In a letter written by Congressman Lineberger Oct. 5, 1922, in reply to an inquiry from Mr. Hinckley as to his attitude toward's the association's program, Mr. Lineberger wrote: "I am in favor of national prohibition and the Volstead Act. Of the part of the program of your organization in which I acquiesce is Article III, i.e., "So long as the prohibition amendment and the Volstead Act are the law of the land they should be obeyed.

"Otherwise, I am opposed to your program."

On October 12, six days before he wrote intimating Mr. Lineberger favored the association's program, Mr. Hinckley replied to Congressman Lineberger: "Thank you for your letter of October 5. I note that you are not in smypathy with our platform."

The advertisements attacking Mr. Lineberger bore the signature of "Lura Hyden Boleyn, president, Long Beach Federation of the W.C.T.U."

Lineberger suporters, indignant over the efforts to mislead the voters as to their candidate's attitude on the dry question, assert that the Randall forces are flooding the district with expensive advertising and literature containing false and vicious political statements.

BOY AUTOIST MISSING

HENRY FORD'S OWN STORY

A dramatic narrative which millions have hoped would be written is to appear in The Times Illustrated Magazine beginning next Sunday, November 5.

Hurling defiance, attacking cherished ideas of both employers and employees and giving utterance to one startling declaration after another, Mr. Ford plunges into his subject matter with the vim and energy of a gladiator. Undoubtedly it is the most outspoken statement of principles ever written by a national figure in the industrial world. He touches almost every human relation; analyzes failure; gives his formula for success; tells how he measures ability, and boldly repeats the question which he says has been asked thousands of times, "When will Ford blow up?" Back of his answer is the fact that he is now worth several hundred million dollars, that he made this colossal fortune in less than twenty years, and that under his guidance the Ford Motor Company has grown from an original investment of $28,000. The question is asked, says Mr. Ford, "only because of the failure to grasp that a principle rather than an individual is at work."

Times readers are going to differ in their opinions; they are going to be amused, puzzled, enraged, mollified and thrilled—but they also are going to enjoy a fearless exposition of ideas. Elsewhere in this issue of The Times a full-page announcement gives further facts.

that raised governmental expenses from $35,000,000 in 1915-16 to $47,000,000 in 1917-18, and from $52,000,000 in 1919-20 to $91,000,000 in 1921-22.

"Those who would have laughed in 1915, when the biennial budget was $35,000,000, at any man who might have dared to prophesy a budget of $91,000,000 in 1922, are the same politicians who, in the primary campaign, scoffed at me when I warned the people that failure to stop the orgy of extravagance at Sacramento would result in a budget of $200,000,000, or more, in 1925. I knew what I was talking about, and the people believed me.

"I accept my nomination as evidence of the trust reposed in me by the citizenship of California; I expect that trust to be further shown through my election Tuesday, November 7, and, as the people have never had cause to charge me with failing to live up to my word in the past, so they will never be able to charge me with bad faith or with failing to carry out in the future the promises I am now making.

"Even members of the State administration who attacked me and belittled me before the primary when I said I could save millions of dollars, now admit that I can do it and that any man who knows his business and is willing to do it can place the State on an efficient business basis. I have been preaching this gospel for five years.

"My chief savings will be accomplished through the elimination of duplication of departmental activities; through the absolute elimination of official sinecures; through the discharge of political parasites and the employment of trained and efficient workers, and through a general change from a political basis of operation to a business basis of operation.

"The wreckers have been on the job for many years; it is my purpose to effect reforms by constructive methods. In humitarian legislation I have helped to make California a Progressive State, and I have helped to keep California a Progressive State. I am concerned, therefore, not alone with the finances of State government, but with the well-being, with the educational functions and institutions, with the various humitarian activities and with all the varied interests and needs of California and her people. There are no other proper issues in this campaign."

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson were guests of honor at a luncheon at noon today and during the afternoon Mr. Richardson held conferences with local Republicans and greeted personal friends and others anxious to personally assure him of the support he is receiving from the people here.

Before reaching San Bernardino Mr. and Mrs. Richardson visited Colton, Rialto, Highland and Patton. At Highland the Republican nominee was introduced to a mass meeting by Attorney Byron Waters, one of San Bernardino's foremost Democrats, who not only praised Mr. Richardson for his record of public service, but energetically denounced Thomas Lee Woolwine, Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

FIFTY DOLLARS FOUND IN HAT

Money and Photograph Are Discovered After Four Years

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONROE (N. Y.) Oct. 28.—Lewis Schuster announced that he just had found a $50 bill that for four years he didn't know was in a soldiers's hat he picked up during the war.

In 1918 a soldier's hat blew off a train passing through Monroe on the Erie Railroad. Schuster took it home and laid it aside in case it were ever called for. He put on the hat this week and while examining the inside band found the bill tucked in it and also a photograph of a girl. He will preserve the currency, he said, and if he ever learns the identity of the owner will see that he or his relatives get it.

"Agreed" Candidates Grow; New Coalition Seen

Conservative and Lloyd George Liberals is spreading, although it is the cause of much dissatisfaction among the extremists of both camps. There are now thirty-one constituencies where the Conservatives have agreed not to fight the Lloyd George Liberal candidates, the Conservative party organization has declared that the question is one which it leaves to the local bodies to decide, but there are charges that the Conservative central office has influenced several candidates to withdraw in the interest of the Liberals.

To his Glasgow supporters Mr. Lloyd George delivered a strong, although not bitter, attack on the new Cabinet. His argument was that the coalition government was slowly but surely leading the country out of the troubles inflicted upon it by the war. He declared that the new Cabinet was not comparable to his point of ability, and gave Balfour a most colorful tribute, describing his services to the country as immortal. He challenged anyone to advance a sound reason why his government should have been deposed.

statement that Russia and Bulgaria will be invited to conversations following the peace conference is made on this question in the Allied note, which indicates the later conversations with Russia and Bulgaria on the Near East settlement would be a sort of second conference.

CLOSE VIGIL PLANNED

The United States doubtless will be represented at Lausanne by more than one observer. Indications are that Joseph Grew, American Minister to Switzerland, and Admiral Mark Bristol, American High Commissioner at Constantinople, will "sit in" for this country.

The questions in the Near East which actuate the United States to watch the developments carefully are:

The problem of maintaining and protecting the freedom of the Dardanelles, which Secretary Hughes in a recent public statement heartily approved.

The protection of religious and racial minorities, which Mr. Hughes has asserted is a policy which the United States must stand for vigorously.

The question of the so-called capitulations and whether the powers are to continue to exercise those privileges in Turkey in view of their repudiation by Mustapha Kemal Pasha. The United States and other powers enjoyed "capitulations" or extraterritorial rights in Turkey under provisions of treaties made with the former Turkish government of the Sultan.

GOLDEN BEARS DOWN TROJANS

Erb saw it was little use to risk interception. He had Morrison in the line-up, and all he had to do was to turn him loose for sure gains. The pile-driver carried the ball on three out of every four plays.

FAVOR FORWARD PASSES

U.S.C.'s style of play ran more to forward passes, end runs from a style of triple threat formation and a queer play with Baker carrying the ball that had the Bears staggering around like drunk guys trying to find out what it was all about. Twice the meaty Trojan back ran through the Bear line on this play, snipping off thirty-eight yards the first time and twenty-eight yards the second time. Both of these runs came at a time when the pill was well within the Trojan territory and the Bears were not endangered thereby.

The wonderful fight of both teams was never better displayed than in the courageous stands they made on their own goal lines. Twice U.S.C. held Morrison by inches right on the last chalk mark, once in the first quarter and again in the third period, and the Bears responded in kind in the last period when they fashioned a stone wall after Cummings had run Nisbet's blocked kick to the California 5-yard line. This was the only time that U.S.C. threatened.

Trojan rooters thought a touchdown was in grasp. Big Swede Anderson had rumbled through the line and stuck his chest in front of Nisbet's boot. The ball bounded back and Cummings scooped it up on the run. The Trojan tackle hoofed it for the goal line with a U.S.C. man and a Bear in hot pursuit. Five yards from the goal line the three players came together, and it looked from the stands as if the Trojan would-be interferer in attempting to ward off the impending tackle had helped to bring down his own teammate by hitting him on the heels.

LINE HOLDS

Four times the Trojan backs tried to pierce the California forward wall and it was fourth down and one-half yard to go when Dolley hit the goal post and the Bear line at one and the same time. Nothing gave, not even the goal post, and Nisbet quickly removed the ball from the danger zone by a smash to the center of the field, having re-entered the struggle after Morrison had worn himself out battering the Trojan line for the only touchdown of the game.

Nisbet played only the beginning and tail end of the game leaving it soon after the initial kickoff after he had booted the Trojans back into their own territory and to a point where Andy Smith believed Morrison could push the ball over. Morrison stayed in until he scored a touchdown, leaving to permit Nisbet to kick the goal and later smash a drop-kick over the bar from the 20-yard line.

BREAKS FAVOR BEARS

Little Gordon Campbell, the peppy safety man of the Trojan backfield and the swing man in all the offensive plays from his triple threat position, unfortunately was the goat of all the California scoring.

Each California score resulted from a break in the Bears' favor, and Campbell figured in all. A penalty in the first quarter for offside play cost the Bears a touchdown, for Morrison had gone over on the play from the 3-yard line.

The Trojans held firm, and the ball passed to U.S.C. on the goal line. Campbell went back to punt, but the ball squirted from his grasp and he was downed behind the line for California's first and only two points for three periods.

Campbell's next lapse, if such it may be called, came soon after the start of the fourth quarter, following U.S.C.'s dogged stand on the goal line. California had fumbled in midfield and Swede Anderson recovered for U.S.C. A clever forward pass, Campbell to Dolley, gained six yards, and Campbell ran far back to throw another. Three Bear forwards were on Campbell when he made his throw, but remembering that he had been downed before with severe loss for holding onto the ball, he heaved it anyway. Three Blue and Gold athletes leaped into the air at the same time and a resounding swat sent it soaring high and straight up. Campbell, in the excitement of the moment, grabbed a Bear pursuer and U.S.C. was penalized fifteen yards from the spot.

MORRISON IN MARCH

A poor punt by Campbell, which sailed outside and only sixteen yards up the field gave California the ball on the U.S.C. 25-yard line. California was not to be denied this time and Morrison marched the ball straight down the field, carrying it over on a skin tackle buck on his final lunge. Out went Morrison and in came Nisbet, who kicked the goal.

Following the kickoff which California downed on her 30-yard line Nisbet unloaded one of his terrific boots, which sailed high and far—forty-eight yards from the line of scrimmage. Campbell fumbled the catch and a zealous California forward recovered the ball on the U. S. C. 30-yard line. Without the bull-like rushes of Morrison to fall back upon the Bears were at a loss for a way to advance the ball, so Nisbet toed one over from the 30-yard line.

California's superiority in carrying the ball from scrimmage is indicated by her ten first downs to U. S. C.'s five, but her outstanding superiority was manifested in Nisbet's broad right toe and Morry Morrison's line plunging. U. S. C.'s ends were surprisingly strong, Milton and Boice permitting Nichols and Spalding to do little damage around their positions. Milton was on the receiving end of several successful forward passes, and attacked with a ferocity and a sureness. Campbell and Dolley, back of the line, were ubiquitous and universal and their sterling defensive play nipped several Bear passes and long runs in the bud.

BAKER SLIPS IN

Muller and Berkey were good, as everyone suspected they were, but Muller looked foolish when Baker slipped between him and tackle for his first long run. The two California flankers were on Campbell on every punt, and the little Trojan made fair catches out of several of them. Nichols was able to get off some pretty dodging runs on the runback of punts, but never for more than 10 or 15 yards, a 21-yard run in the second quarter proving an exception.

Campbell punted better than a lot of persons thought he could, and actually gained on the exchange of kicks with Morrison in the second quarter. In the third period he sent one from the goal line to the middle of the field at a time when the Trojans needed a kick worst.

It's no use talking about Nisbet's punts. They were incomparable, and so long as Andy Smith has him in the line-up he can play that game of waiting for the breaks for which he has become famous. The height Nisbet gets on his lengthy ones would give the slowest end in the world a chance to cover the ball.

California misses Latham in the middle of the line, for what Bear fumbles there were resulted from bad passes by the center. Otherwise the Bear line looked very good, although it was Morrison's personally conducted excursions with the ball that made it look better than U.C.S.'s. Smith and Henderson's forwards waged a bitter fight all day, but it was a clean struggle, without a disturbing element to mar its desperation.

SEE BALKAN UPROAR

Quai d'Orsay is genuinely alarmed today over the prospect of any coup against Fiume, which would throw all the Balkans into another uproar and might tip over the delicately adjusted balances there. The Italians have more serious reasons now to control Fiume, because the latter is a port, helping to strangle Trieste as the commercial gateway to Central Europe.

The French are politely skeptical of Italy making the "Mediterranean for Mediterraneans," which is the Fascisti program, their reasons being the British navy and British naval bases.

All French reports show the day of tension passed off quietly, except for several large industrial cities in the north, where there were slight disturbances.

ORDERS MOBILIZATION OF FASCISTI FORCES

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Benito Mussolini has ordered the mobilization of Fascisti forces throughout Italy, according to a midnight dispatch from Rome. Three hundred thousand armed "black shirts" have responded to the call of their chieftain following the government's unsuccessful attempt to proclaim a state of siege in the entire country.

Communication has been seriously interrupted by the disorders, many wires being cut. Strict censorship over outgoing messages has been established by the government.

New Development
in the Reproducing Piano

Providing at last absolutely unmechanical interpretations of Paderewski, Gabrilowitsch, Hofmann, Godowsky, Bauer, handplayed—the supreme achievement of which men dreamed.

The spirit of genius guiding through space from far-away lands the mastery of Paderewski, Godowsky, Bauer, Zeisler, into the solace of one's own after-dinner hour of music! It was a dream, a hope, which many men struggled to achieve. And great strides were made, of which the familiar type of reproducing piano is one. But properly and fittingly, as should be, the honor of unmistakable realization was reserved for the instrument of genius itself—the Virtuolo. For now come absolutely unmechanical reproductions, in a new way. No single tone, no subtle touch of the Master's hand absent. Newly discovered principles have been applied. Attainments beyond words. Renditions before which world-famous artists have stood with heads bared. It is only by hearing the new Hallet & Davis Virtuolo—by hearing it in comparison with reproducing pianos heretofore acclaimed supreme—that you can grasp the wonder of this new musical attainment!

Whether you are in the market to buy or just want to see and hear for yourself the very latest thing in reproducing grands, you will be welcome and will receive the same courteous attention that has made this old house notably different.

DIARY OF GIRL GIVES LOOPHOLE

Alberta's Daily Entries May be Used in Trial

Aver Frequently Mentioned "Dick" is Phillips

Clara's Own Story is Said to Implicate Peggy

A defense loophole, through which Clara Phillips is expected to draw her plea of "the unwritten law," was discovered yesterday in Alberta Meadows's diary.

The diary had apparently been forgotten as it was said to have contained no information of value to the prosecution of Clara Phillips on the charge of slaying Alberta Meadows with a hammer. But, it was learned through one to whom Clara's husband has told his secrets, though the prosecution has eliminated the diary from its chain of evidence against Clara, there remains a strong possibility that Attorney Herrington, Clara's counsel, will endeavor to introduce the slain girl's diary as one of the strongest bits of evidence supporting the "unwritten law" defense.

"DICK" IS PHILLIPS

The name of Armour L. Phillips appears only once in the diary. But, according to a story Phillips has told, he is mentioned several times in the diary under the guise of another name—a nickname by which Mrs. Meadows spoke of Phillips, the defense will contend.

That nickname was "Dick."

"Dick" appears as one of the principal characters appearing in Alberta's diary. "Dick" was foremost in her thoughts between the dates of May 30 and June 15.

If the defense can prove, through the testimony of Mrs. E. L. McElroy, that "Dick" of the diary is Phillips in reality then Attorney Herrington will endeavor to show to the jury that Alberta's diary partially upholds Phillips's story of his asserted intimacy with Alberta Meadows. By these revelations discovered in the diary it is expected that Attorney Herrington will try to lay a foundation for the "unwritten law" defense; that, if Clara Phillips did plan to punish Alberta Meadows for stealing the affections of Armour L. Phillips, the diary reveals a cause for her act; that the facts hidden behind the vague entries in the diary tormented her mind when they became known to her; that this knowledge, supported by the diary itself, brought on a "brainstorm" and that during this spell of insanity Alberta was slain.

DIARY EXCERPTS

Under the date of April 2, Mrs. Meadows wrote:

"I went to church and to McElroy's for dinner. She sure fixed a lovely table. Met Mr. Phillips."

That was the only time Alberta Meadows wrote the name "Phillips" in the diary, but, if Phillips's story is to be accepted as true, he again makes his appearance in the diary under the name of "Dick."

Following are the excerpts concerning "Dick" in the little black book:

"May 30—Decoration Day. Took some wild flowers to Jesse's grave. I could hardly stand there and see his name engraved in that place. And still, I'm glad I had it done.

"Dick hasn't phoned for two days. I wonder if he is out of town. He certainly puzzles me. Every time I see him he acts different. I can't quite understand his actions and yet I feel sorry for him in one way. There seem to be so many people mis-mated in this world."

And, under the date of June 15, she again wrote of "Dick."

"June 15—Went to McElroy's last night and Dick was there. Oh, what a sad disappointment. He isn't what I thought him to be. I'm sure glad I awoke while the sun was still shining."

Two weeks ago Phillips issued a statement, asserting he and Alberta Meadows were on a picnic on Memorial Day, May 30. This was was denied by Lillian Meadows, Alberta's sister-in-law, who was with Alberta on that day. Lillian Meadows declared she and Alberta visited the grave of the slain girl's husband.

HUSBAND CHOSEN

Armour L. Phillips has been chosen as the one to lay the groundwork for the unwritten law defense. He is scheduled to testify to a series of stormy quarrels he and Clara had had through a two-weeks' period prior to the murder. These quarrels, it has been stated, were based on Phillips's asserted attentions to Alberta Meadows. Phillips's testimony of the quarrels with his wife will be supported by the testimony of Mrs. McElroy. Clara's husband had told a few associates, on the day before his wife's return from Tucson, of these quarrels.

Clara Phillips, when she tells her own story to the jury late this week, is expected to testify that Peggy Caffee, the star witness for the prosecution, was first to strike Alberta Meadows in the struggle on Montecito Drive. Clara also is expected to testify that Peggy urged and coached Clara to punish Alberta Meadows.

These and other salient secrets of the plans of Mrs. Phillips's defense counsel were learned yesterday by The Times from a person to whom the accused hammer slayer had told her complete story, the story which she has declared is true and upon which she is seeking acquittal of the murder of Mrs. Meadows.

Such was the first story that she is said to have told her husband, Armour L. Phillips, on the night of the murder, when she fled in her blood-drenched garments to her home. It is the same story she repeated to a few confidantes immediately after her arrival from Tucson, where she was arrested while fleeing from Los Angeles.

TRUTH WITHHELD?

It is the story that was in Clara's mind when she suddenly shrieked at Peggy last Friday morning in the courtroom:

"Peggy Caffee—tell the truth! You bought that hammer!"

Peggy Caffee, the defense contends, has not told all the truth of her knowledge of the hammer murder. Attorney Herrington, in his cross-examination of Peggy, injected such insinuation in his questions. Deputy Dist.-Atty. Fricke stated yesterday that "95 per cent of Peggy's story is true." As to the remaining 5 per cent, the prosecution maintains that small portion comprises innocent errors and discrepancies of no value to the defense.

Upon the testimony of five alienists the defense will depend chiefly in the contention that Clara Phillips is a victim of psychic epilepsy. These five alienists spent several hours with Attorney Herrington and Clara at the County Jail yesterday afternoon. During this conference the five doctors noted every emotion displayed by Clara while she answered the many questions they asked of her.

The alienists secured to construct an insanity defense for Clara are Dr. W. B. Kern, Dr. E. H. Williams, Dr. E. B. Hoag, Dr. Aaron J. Rosenoff and Dr. Edward Anthony. They would not divulge the findings of their interview with Clara.

Their testimony will be supported by depositions taken in Texas several weeks ago by the defense, touching upon a strain of insanity that Clara is said to have inherited but which is discredited by the prosecution.

BATTLE FUTILE

Peggy's courageous stand under the fire of Attorney Herrington's cross-examination was a topic under discussion yesterday by those interested in the trial. Aside from forcing Peggy to admit she had told conflicting stories of minor phases of the case, the defense was unable to drag any statements of value to Clara's case from Peggy's testimony.

Attorney Herrington will have another chance to grill Peggy tomorrow morning, when the trial will be resumed. He is expected to question Peggy regarding her own black eye, which prominently figured in the earlier stages of the investigation of the death of Alberta Meadows.

BLACK EYE, EVIDENCE

A few days following the murder, when Peggy testified at the Coroner's inquest, she exhibited a black eye. The defense, it was rumored yesterday, may try to show that Peggy received this black eye in the struggle concerning which Clara Phillips is expected to testify.

The prosecution is prepared for the black-eye episode. They have the history of that black eye and the witnesses who will tell about it. Peggy did not receive her black eye on Montecito Drive. It was bestowed upon her at a party which she and Clara attended a few days before the murder, it will be contended.

Three couples were present at the party, but Clara is not expected to tell of this party if she testifies. She will testify to attending a "jinks" on the night the party was held.

Attorney Herrington has declined to reveal the names of witnesses who will testify in Clara's behalf. From a reliable source it was learned that aside from Clara herself, Armour L. Phillips, her husband, will take the witness stand.

TO CALL NEIGHBOR

Mrs. E. L. McElroy, a neighbor of the Phillips family, and who has been accredited with passing on the gossip that has figured so prominently in the hammer murder case, will also be one of the principal defense witnesses. Her oldest son is also expected to testify as a defense witness. Mrs. McElroy is the one who first introduced Alberta Meadows to Phillips.

The defense is also expected to call as a defense witness the salesgirl who is said to have sold the hammer with which Alberta Meadows was killed. She has not been subpoenaed by the prosecution for, on several occasions, after confronting Clara Phillips, the salesgirl said she could not identify Clara as the girl who purchased the hammer.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fricke will conclude the prosecution's presentation of evidence against Clara about Tuesday afternoon. The present plan is to continue in sequence the story of the murder of Alberta Meadows. With Peggy Caffee's testimony the story has reached past the actual crime, and to the evening following the crime.

Following the concluding of Peggy's testimony, Guy Millman, clerk at the Baltimore Hotel, will be called to testify that Clara Philips registered under the name of Clara Jackson at that hotel on the night of July 12.

Milton Carlson, handwriting expert, will testify that Clara Phillips was the author of the signature "Clara Jackson" on the Baltimore Hotel register.

B. Taylor, a bellboy at the Baltimore Hotel, will tell of hearing loud talking in Clara's room on the night of Juy 12.

Other witnesses who will conclude the State's case against Clara Phillips will be Prof. Arthur Maas who analyzed the blood on Mrs. Phillip's shoes; Dr. A. H. Zeller, who will testify it was human blood; Deputy Sheriff Frank Dewar, who took Peggy Caffee to Shorb Station to identify Mrs. Phillips as the slayer of Mrs. Meadows; John Doe Otta, who found Alberta Meadow's blood-stained automobile in Pomona, where Armour Phillips told the authorities the car would be found; Sheriff Traeger, who brought Mrs. Phillips back from Tucson (Ariz.); and Detective Jesus Camacho, who arrested Mrs. Phillips in Tucson.

FISH SUPPLIES ARE LESSENED

Pan-Pacific Congress Gets Sea Information

California Speaker Talks of Lower Mammals

Man Unreasoning in Pursuit of Finny Ones

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU, Oct. 28. — The antique remark to the effect that there are as many good fish in the sea as ever came out of it, reports just so much wasted breath and has no more basis in fact than the equally antique dodo myth, according to two of the speakers at today's session of the Pan-Pacific Commercial Congress.

The taste of man for fish, fresh and canned, and the taste of about eighteen varieties of carnivorous mammals, large, medium and small, for fish in any shape, were blamed by the experts for the rapid depletion of the Pacific's stock of supplies for Friday evening dinners.

Dr. Barton W. Evermann, director of the museum of the California Academy of Sciences, discussed the raw fish eaters of the lower mammalian scale, while O. McLean Frazer, professor of zo-ology at the University of British Columbia, dealt with man and his unreasoning pursuit of finned food products of the deep.

SUPPLIES LESSENED

Man, according to Prof. Frazer, has been so intent on catching salmon, halibut and other of the better known kinds of fish, that he has failed to notice the rapid depletion of the source of supply. On the other hand, said the professor, he has overlooked other species of fish which make just as good eating. Salmon, particularly, said the British Columbia savant, have suffered, and in many localities have been virtually wiped out.

Dr. Evermann went still farther, and asserts that while the smaller food fish were being depleted, the great sea mammals that feed off them also are in danger of extinction. He urged closer study of the mammals of the Pacific, the largest animals in the world, and listed forty-four species as worthy of investigation.

MAMMAL STUDY

He supported his statement that full understanding of the commercial fisheries of the North Pacific could be attained only by the study of the mammals preying on food fish with the information that the stomach of one whale, caught recently, held upward of 3000 pounds of sardines, together with a miscellaneous assortment of smelt, anchovies, shrimps and squid.

Prof. Ishikawa of Japan, in another address, dealt with the fisheries problems of the Far East.

Turning from fish to volcanoes, the delegates to the congress planned to leave late today for Hilo, Island of Hawaii, to investigate the practicability of harnessing the power of the volcano Kilauea, thirty miles from that city.

FAKE PATIENT ROBS DOCTORS

Curiosity Costs One Surgeon $3000, He Says

Physicians Locked in Closet by Two Men

Calls for Medical Aid Lured Victims to Hotel

Leveling a pistol at the heads of Dr. Edwin Larson and Dr. Hugh M. Swift, lured from their Story Building offices to room 2010 in the Rosslyn Hotel on the pretext of an emergency call, a masked hallroom bandit covered them while their "patient" plundered them of $3500 in cash and diamonds late yesterday afternoon, after forcing their victims to enter a dark clothes closet.

Admonishing the pillaged physicians that any noise would bring a bullet, the masked man slammed the closet door, turned the key in the lock and with his confederate ran down a rear fire escape.

Ignoring the bandits' admonition, Dr. Swift, enraged at his loss, kicked the door down. Dr. Larson aided him.

The hotel management was notified and a hurried search was made. The elevator boys, questioned, admitted that men answering the description of the bandits had been carried aloft one at a time earlier in the day, but that neither one of them had been seen again.

POLICE INFORMED

The police, who were furnished with the descriptions of the men, started a still hunt for the hallroom bandits at once.

The unmasked bandit was described by Dr. Larson as being 25 years old. He was six feet tall and weighed about 165 pounds. The "patient" had brown eyes and black "patent leather" hair. He wore a dark brown suit and a light cap. A white handkerchief was used as a mask. He is described as being about five feet, seven inches tall and weighing about 125 pounds. Both doctors asserted, however, that they believed him to be a drug addict.

At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Dr. Larson says he received a call from a man who gave his name as "Jack Meyers" a guest at the Rosslyn Hotel.

"Mr. Vine recommended you to me," the man said, "I have been taken very ill suddenly. Can't you come over right away to room 2017 at the Rosslyn."

Dr. Larson says he replied that he would be over in an hour.

In about twenty minutes Meyers phoned again. This time he told Dr. Larson to visit room 2010 and urged haste.

As Dr. Larson left he met Dr. Swift and invited him to accompany him.

His curiosity cost him $3000, he asserts.

They went to room 2010 at the Rosslyn and knocked at a locked door. It was opened by "Meyer," who at once hobbled to the bed and writhed as if in pain.

Dr. Larson started his examination. Dr. Swift looked about the room and in about fifteen minutes joined in the examination.

It was then that the terse command—"Stick 'em up!" caused both of the doctors to do a speedy about face and gaze at an automatic pistol held by a masked man.

Larson elevated his hands at once, but Swift thought that the masked man was joking.

"Stick 'em up," reiterated the gunman, "or I'll shoot your block off!" Swift obeyed.

PATIENT GETS BUSY

Meyer scrambled from the sick bed and after his confederate had backed the physicians into the closet the patient frisked them.

While Larson was struggling with a ring set with a diamond, valued at $2000, Swift was despoiled of a $700 diamond stickpin a $2000 diamond ring and $300 in cash.

As soon as Larson slipped the ring off his finger he palmed it and elevated his hands again, while his erstwhile patient removed $500 in cash from his inner coat pocket.

In their excitement the hold-up men evidently forgot about Larson's ring. They also overlooked $50 in gold in his vest pocket.

After Larson and Swift broke the door, they found a gag improvised from a bath towel and strips torn from a bedsheet lying on the closet floor.

At a late hour last night the hallroom bandits were still at liberty.

QUAKE JAZZES ROULETTE BALL

While Alps Do Shimmy, Monte Carlo Gamblers Scratch Heads

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Oct. 28.—A slight earthquake lasting two seconds occurred early this morning in the Alps, the inhabitants of several towns rushing to the streets. Although the earthquake was not noticed at Monte Carlo by tourists, the shock was sufficient to make the roulette ball untrue. The queer actions of the spinning ball caused an investigation and the seismograph at Nice revealed the quake.

CHILD DROWNS IN BOILER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MIAMI (Ariz.) Oct. 28.—When Mrs. G. Olmos was engaged in doing the family washing, she left the room for a few moments. Upon her return she found the body of her year-old daughter in a wash boiler filled with water, which had been left on the floor. The baby had slipped into the boiler and drowned.

HUNTINGTON IS AT SAN MARINO

Capitalist and Art Collector Will Winter Here

Arrives from New York City in Private Car

Wife Expected to Join Him at an Early Date

Henry E. Huntington, millionaire railroad man and noted art connoisseur and collector, arrived from the East on the Southern Pacific shortly before noon yesterday for a stay at his country home at San Marino. Information from train officials is that at Shorb station he left his private cars, San Marino 1 and 2, and drove from there to his estate.

International attention was given to Mr. Huntington's recent purchase of Gainsborough's famous "Blue Boy," conceded by critics to be the most valuable painting in existence. It was placed with the purchaser's collection in the Huntington museum gallery at San Marino.

Efforts to get into touch with Mr. Huntington were unsuccessful last night, but it is said that he plans to spend most of the winter in Southern California and that Mrs. Huntington will join him in the near future. Last night he was resting from the fatigue of his journey from New York.

In addition to his almost priceless art collection Mr. Huntington has one of the most valuable private libraries in existence with notable first editions and autographed works.

His private cars were delivered in Los Angeles by the Southern Pacific and turned over to the Union Pacific Railway. The cars were cleaned and then returned to Shorb to await their owner's call.

Se Protege la Frontera Oriental de Polonia

VARSOVIA, octubre 28.—La frontera oriental de Polonia estará en lo de adelante tan bien protegida, que no se permitirá sea cruzada por partidas que vengan de la Ucrania soviet. El Primer Ministro Nowak le ha asegurado lo anterior a una delegación que llegó aquí de Lemberg a protestar de que las autoridades locales no eran suficientemente fuertes para luchar con los bandidos invasores.

NOTAS LOCALES

Mañana se Juzgará un Caso de Cohecho

Morris Orsatti y J. R. Johnson, procesados por el delito de haber querido cohechar a un Agente Federal de Prohibición, comparecerán mañana en la mañana ante el Juez Bledsoe. Tanto Orsatti como Johnson se hallan el libertad bajo fianzas, de $25,000 la de Orsatti, y de $5000 la de Johnson.

Ambos inividuos han sido acusados de haber dado dinero a agentes prohibicionistas para que retiraran los cargos de venta clandestina de licor.

Unos Doctores Fueron Víctimas de un Complot

Ayer, ya tarde, dos bandidos prepararon una astuta jugada, atrayendo al Dr. Edward Larson, del Story Building, 1029, a un cuarto del Hotel Rosslyn, y robándole $500 en efectivo en cheques, y quitándole semejante cantidad de dinero, y diamantes por valor de $2000, al dentista Hugh M. Swift, que iba con el médico, y que trabaja en el Story Building, 408. La policía fué informada de que el Dr. Larson recibió un llamado urgente del cuarto 1010 del Hotel Rosslyn, y suplicando al Dr. Swift que le acompañara, se presentaron ambos en el mencionado cuarto, donde encontraron a un individuo, que dijo llamarse Mr. Vine, encamado y quejándose de fuertes dolores abdominales. Cuando el Dr. Larson le examinaba, surgió otro hombre del cuarto de baño, y amenazó a ambos doctores con un revólver. El enfermo se levantó, se vistió y se puso a registrar a las dos víctimas, escapando después el par de atracadores, no sin haber encerrado a los Dres. Larson y Swift en el baño.

El Jurado Oirá a la Sra. Phillips

Cuando Clara Phillips haga su relato ante el jurado a fines de esta semana, se espera que declare que Peggy Caffee, la principal testigo de la acusación, fué la primera en pegar a Alberta Meadows en la lucha que se registró en Montecito Drive. También se da por sentado que Clara declará que Peggy le instó y la aleccionó para que castigara a Alberta Meadows.

Estos y otros importantes secretos de los planes de la defensa de la Sra. Phillips, fueron conocidos ayer por el Times, mediante la revelación de una persona a quien la acusada del crimen a martillazos contó toda su historia, historia que ha declarado ella ser la verdadera, y basada en la cual, está tratando de ser absuelta del asesinato de la Sra. Meadows.

DEPORTES

Balompié

Una muchedumbre que se calcula en 40,000, la mayor en la historia del balompié en el oeste vió a la Universidad de California derrotar a la Universidad de Sudcalifornia, ayer, en el estadio nuevo de Pasadena, por una anotación de 12 a 0.

Fué el juego una reñida batalla desde el primer puntapié hasta el silbato. En los últimos cinco minutos, la U.S.C. tenía ya la pelota en la línea de 5 yardas de los Osos, y la perdió por un "fumble." Berkeley marcó dos veces en el último cuarto, una por "touchdown" seguido de puntapié de meta, y otra por meta de campo. Hasta el último cuarto, la anotación estuvo a 2 por 0 en favor de los Osos, y la U.S.C. tenía grandes esperanzas de quitar la pequeña ventaja. En los últimos quince minutos, sin embargo, el gran equipo septentrional agregó diez tantos a su cuenta, jugando desesperadamente.

Los Maroons de Chicago sucumbieron ayer a la derrota en la más sensacional batalla interseccional de la historia del balompié, en el campo de Stagg, siendo vencidos en un interesantísimo partido por los bravos Tigres de Princeton, con anotación de 21 a 18.

Balompié Asociación

La pelea principal de las cuatro de "soccer" que habrá esta tarde, será casi seguramente el juego entre los Escoceses de Los Angeles y los Unidos de Long Beach, en el parque de baseball de Washington. Much interés se ha despertado por el encuentro de estos equipos, que sin duda son dos de los más fuertes de la liga, y va a haber probablemente un lleno para verlos combatir.

Baseball

Dieciséis partidos de la Asociación de Baseball de la Mayor Sudcalifornia han sido anunciados para hoy por Joe Pironne, secretario y "booker" de la Asociación. La mayor parte de las contiendas del program de hoy van a ser juegos de bolas rápidas, y todo hace prever que los aficionados locales van a regalarse.

Pugilato

Georges Carpentier atravesó ayer Berlín, rumbo a Rusia, en busca de un Siki el Batallador bolchevique, para amarrar otro negocio de tablado; pero opinan los peritos que por allá es mucho menos probable que encuentre pichones. No llevaba guantes de boxeo, sino únicamente un gran surtido de artículos de cocina de aluminio, de su fábrica rusa, que espera vender bien en el país de Lenine.

MRS. GIBSON THREATENED

Double New Jersey Murder Witness Disappears and Offers No Explanation When She Returns

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW BRUNSWICK (N. J.) Oct. 28.—For several hours today the newest character in the mysterious deaths of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and the choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, stepped off the stage on which the drama is being played.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, a farmer woman and a raiser of pigs, who told of having seen the murder of the rector and the sexton's wife, disappeared from her barricaded home. Then, as mysteriously as she had left, she reappeared, but offered no explanation of where she had been.

Guards who had been thrown about the Gibson home were taken off. Dogs which prevented intrusion were tied. William Gibson, the son of the farmer woman, showed reporters through the house, but would not say where his mother had gone.

On her return it became known that the woman in whose story Special Dep. Atty.-Gen. Mott is still inclined to place a degree of credence, has received threatening letters since telling of the scene she asserts she witnessed in De Russey's Lane on September 14.

"Be careful; remember there is still one bullet left," was one sentence of the letter, Mrs. Gibson said.

Timothy N. Pfeiffer, counsel for Mrs. Hall, today recalled early development in the case, when he admitted that the telephone call the Rev. Mr. Hall received on the night of the murder was from Mrs. Mills. The subject of the conversation over the wire, he said, was the payment of medical bills owed by the sexton's wife.

"Has Mrs. Hall established an alibi?" Mr. Pfeiffer was asked.

"We are not interested in establishing an alibi," he answered.

"In spite of all that has been published, has Mrs. Hall still confidence in her husband?"

"You cannot be too strong on that point," he said. "Mrs. Hall still believes in her husband."

"Do you believe in the authenticity of the letters exchanged between the Rev. Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills?"

"We have no proof as to whether they are genuine," Mr. Pfeiffer said.

Whether the case, as it stands, was ready for presentation to the special grand jury which it is believed is to be called Monday, was not announced.

Birth of Theta Chi Celebrated at Feast Here

Coincident with celebrations in American metropolises and the capitals of Europe, Asia and Africa marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Theta Chi, one of the oldest Greek letter college fraternities, Los Angeles members banqueted last night at the University Club.

The speakers of the evening were Frank H. Buck, president of the fraternity's grand lodge, of San Francisco, Seward A. Simons, a former grand lodge president, Frank I. Wheat, Frank M. Byron, James B. Gesfeld and Dr. Fred L. Johnson.

During the course of the dinner telegraphic greetings were exchanged with other celebrants in both Eastern and Western cities.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

URGES ECONOMY FOR FILIPINOS

Gov.-Gen Wood, in Message, Advises Saving

Government Failure in All Business, He Says

Encouragement of Foreign Capital Sought

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

MANILA (P. I.) Oct. 28.—Gov.-Gen. Wood, in a message to the Philippine Legislature yesterday, urged the strictest governmental economy and the absolute retirement of the government from business. He declared that legitimate investments were safer in the Philippines than in many older countries.

The Governor-General congratulated the Legislature on the enactment last session "of all important legislation necessary to place our finances on a sound legal basis."

He added that this legislation announced to the world the government's intention of maintaining a sound currency system and stabilizing Philippine credit, both at home and abroad.

GOVERNMENT FAILURE

In reaffirming his opinion that the government should retire from business, Gov.-Gen. Wood's message said:

"If experience in the World War demonstrated any one thing more clearly than another it was that a government cannot successfully conduct business. The experience of the insular government confirmed this. Its efforts to engage in business, although entered into with a view of benefiting the people and aiding development, resulted in the loss of many millions of pesos."

Continuing, the message read:

"It is my desire to co-operate with you to the best of my ability in obtaining substantial benefits for the people of the Philippines. While we may have honest differences of opinion, I am confident that, inasmuch as we each have a common purpose, we shall be able to harmonize our views and combine our efforts for the people's good.

"In order to obtain the best results we should observe the distinctions between the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the government and leave each free to discharge its proper functions given it under the organic act.

NEED FOREIGN CAPITAL

"If our commerce is to be built up and our development accelerated, the general policy of the government should be to encourage foreign and domestic capital in all legitimate business. As our own capital is limited, and the demands upon it heavy, we should do what we can, properly, with due regard to the interests of the people, to make investments of foreign capital attractive.

"Conditions of legitimate investments here, are safe, in fact, safer than in many older countries."

The message congratulates the people on the excellent maintenance of public order throughout the Philippines, and says that there has been a marked improvement in the administration of justice in the last year. However, it is pointed out, there is much to accomplish before the working of the judicial branch will be thoroughly satisfactory.

Recommendations made by the Governor-General include:

Granting of woman's suffrage; amendment of the land laws to give the tenant more equitable treatment; enactment of legislation to prevent imprisonment for debt.

IMPROVE SANITATION

The message declared that sanitation was being neglected at a cost of tremendous waste in human life and announced that the public health service had launched a vigorous campaign to improve conditions.

A resolution was introduced in the Philippine House of Representatives today asking the United States to recognize the right of the islands to independence. The resolution was referred to a committee.

The resolution also requested the United States government to fix a date for the summoning of a constitutional convention to frame a constitution upon which an independent Philippine republic would be founded.

IT'S ALL MISTAKE, SAYS ACCUSED MAN

"POISONING" ATTEMPT EXPLAINED BY PRISONER IN SAN FRANCISCO

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28.—Adrien Batchelor, under arrest here on a telegraphic warrant from Portland, Or., where he is wanted on a charge of attempted murder in connection with a supposed attempt to poison his mother-in-law, Mrs. C. H. Pettibone, said today that his arrest was due to a mistake.

"I had put some sleeping powder in a cup, intending to take it myself, and Mrs. Pettibone, not noticing the powder, filled the cup with coffee and drank it," he said.

Batchelor's arrest followed circulation of a report in Portland that his wife had disappeared and that it was feared he had murdered her. This report was set at rest when Mrs. Batchelor walked into an Oakland police station and said that she had been visiting in that city, and that Batchelor had not attempted to molest her.

The supposed poisoning attempt took place last Sunday in Portland, where Batchelor had gone from here in an attempt to find his wife. The Batchelors came here three months ago from Portland.

Stillman Gets Chance to Take His Case Higher

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

POUGHKEEPSIE (N. Y.) Oct. 28.—Supreme Court Justice Seger, in denying today a motion of James A. Stillman, New York banker, to vacate the order of confirmation made by Justice Morschauser on the referee's report between Mrs. Stillman and her son, Guy, offered to the banker the first opportunity to take the case to the appellate division.

A motion filed by consel for Mrs. Stillman questioning the jurisdiction of Justice Morschauser was denied and rendered on the merits of the case alone, which gives a specific basis for an appeal which has, heretofore, been lacking.

D FRENCH UPBRAIDED

ly Methods Used Against Kitchener in Shells Row, Birkenhead Asserts

BY NORMAN W. BAXTER

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

, Oct. 28.—The truth about Earl Kitchener, which bids a disputed point in English history until the end of on a more serious aspect today with the publication of Lord 's book, "Points of View," in which he not only disagrees with Lord Esher, who wrote "The Tragedy of Kitchener," the Earl of Ypres, who as Lord French commanded the at the start of the World War, of using "unsoldierly and against Lord Kitchener in the famous shells con-head's criticism of centers around "The Failure" of the battle Chapelle, when lack of was the main factor. "It became necessary," he says, "for those who had first predicted and then announced success, to explain how it was they were unable to deliver any goods at all.

"In this dilemma they resolved to antedate their own realization of the immeasurable need of high explosives. The means adopted were as lacking in propriety as was the attempt itself in candor."

Lord Birkenhead is even more severe in castigating Lord French for his use of Col. Repington to attack Lord Kitchener. "The method," he says, "so far as I am aware, is without precedent in any other war and without copy in this one. Supposing that the course so indecent had been adopted by the second in command of a battalion in relation to his colonel. What would have been Lord French's judgment upon him?

"Would Lord French have said it is impossible to win the war unless a change is made in the highest command? Lord Esher sees nothing really reprehensible in Lord French's action. 'It was openly done,' he observes tolerantly. Was it? Did Lord French inform Lord Kitchener of the step he was taking? Did he inform the Prime Minister that he—a soldier in the field—was taking active steps to destroy his government?

LACK OF JUDGMENT

"If the shortage of shells was grave enough to justify methods so repulsive and unsoldierly, it was known or should have been known to Lord French and his staff weeks before the battle of Nueve Chappelle and Festubert took place. In fact, nothing in the history of the war is more clearly established than the tardiness of the discovery by Lord French and his staff of the part which high explosives were destined to pay and the scale on which ammunition of all kinds was to be required."

CLOSE RACE FORECAST BY LIBERALIST

Seven States' Contests Neck to Neck, Says Chairman

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The Committee of Forty-eight, functioning as a liberal party, announced tonight through J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman of its national executive committee that in seven States contests have narrowed down to a two-party fight with the chances in favor of the Progressives. The States he said are Pennsylvania, South Dakota, North Dakota, Idaho, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Delaware.

Hopkins has just returned from a tour of Pennsylvania and Delaware and previously had visited all of the States where the party has men in the fields.

Analizing the contests, Hopkins said that in Idaho, where two Congressmen and a State ticket have been named, it is a neck-and-neck race between the Democrats and the Progressives. In Pennsylvania, where the Progressives have nominated two candidates for United States Senator and a Secretary for Internal Affairs, and in South Dakota, where a State ticket and three candidates for Congress have been nominated, the race is between the Republicans and Progressives.

ROADS RECOMMEND LOW TOURIST RATES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Recommendation that the tourist summer rates to western points and the Pacific Coast be put in effect against next summer, thus enabling vacationists to travel at rates which are practically on a pre-war basis, was made by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and the Burlington railroads today to the Western Passenger Association. If approved, the round-trip rate from Chicago to the Pacific Coast will be $86, compared with the present rate of $80 for one-way only. The rate to Colorado will be $41, compared with a one-way fare of $34. The proposed rates will be in effect from May 1 to September 30.

NO MORE WOMEN FOR JUVENILE JOB

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 28.—In the wake of the recent resignation of Mrs. Alma Longgale, former policewoman, and the subsequent scandal said to have involved a number of Racine's prominent business men comes the announcement that the city's next juvenile officer will be a man.

It is planned to detail a member of the police department to act in that capacity.

WANTED
ONE MAN OR WOMAN

A writer and lecturer on public affairs wishes to enlist the co-operation of JUST ONE REAL MAN OR WOMAN IN THE WORLD. The suitable person will have considerable wealth, or some degree of financial independence at least, and will have reached the age when service in any of the altruistic fields has a stronger appeal than personal interests. Although the small initial capital required will be amply secured and refunded to the donor, there will not be the slightest chance of monetary profit for any one concerned. The sole reward will be the consciousness of having achieved nobly for the happiness and the practical welfare of the human race. Hence, the man or woman who assists me needs be a PRACTICAL IDEALIST and something of a PHILANTHROPIST. The movement (to which I have devoted many years of study and research) has to do with remedying one of the fundamental causes of human misery and privation, and the present epoch of economic uncertainty is especially auspicious for its world-wide application. The plan is constructive, sound, conventional, and wholesome. It does not upset existing conditions. In no particular is it socialistic, communistic, or radical—and this latter type positively need not apply. In reply, kindly give sufficient information about yourself so that I may draw correct conclusions from your first letter. Address F, Box 360, Times Branch.

JUST THAT AGE

No single factor plays a greater part in the shaping of human character than the home environment.

Homes of harmony and good taste almost invariably produce fineness in the individual of impressionable age. Sincerity in the quality of the living-room furniture is no small influence in the sincerity of the future man or woman.

For half a century mothers have found at the Los Angeles Furniture Company the sort of furniture, rugs and draperies that build character. Incidentally, they have found that quality furniture—priced the "Los Angeles" way—costs much less than the ordinary, for it will last almost forever, and never grow out of date.

Fine
RUGS

Good rugs are very scarce; nevertheless, the Los Angeles Furniture Company is showing a choice selection. Blues, taupes, mulberrys and beavers mingle in restrained pastel tones of refinement and harmony, to make these fine rugs lovely beyond description, with their beautiful patterns — direct copies of Orientals.

Lift Court Attachment on Property of Mexican Consulate at New York

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Prompt action on the part of the New York State authorities today in causing the removal of a court attachment on the property of the Mexican consulate in New York City ended a situation which had threatened to develop into a diplomatic incident.

Secretary Hughes today received a telegram from Gov. Miller announcing that after a conference with State officials, counsel for the American Oliver Trading Company, who had instituted the attachment proceedings, had agreed to withdraw the writ. The information was telephoned immediately to Senor Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican charge d' affaires, who in turn communicated with his government.

Senor Tellez tonight expressed the opinion that the arrangement would prove satisfactory to Mexico, but the consulate in New York, which was closed upon instructions from President Obregon, cannot be reopened without explicit instructions from Mexico City.

Secretary Hughes's message to Gov. Miller, which resulted in action by the New York State executive today, is understood to have held that the New York court violated the sovereignty of the Mexican government and that the action was contrary to the principles of international law.

EXAMINATIONS DELAY ROSIER SLAYING CASE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—Examination of additional defense witnesses in the trial of Mrs. Catherine Rosier, charged with the slaying of Oscar Rosier, her husband, and his stenographer, Miss Mildred Geraldine Reckitt, will occupy all day Monday and part of Tuesday, the defendant's counsel announced today. A verdict in the present trial which is on the indictment for murder of the girl, is therefore not expected before Wednesday.

Opera Singer and Former Wife Will Marry in Italy; Their Third Attempt

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Jerome Uhl, painter and opera singer, started for Rome on the Majestic today to wed for the third time the woman who first became his bride in 1913, his twice-shattered romance having been patched up a few weeks ago at Greenwich, Ct., when the former Mrs. Uhl heard him sing.

Uhl, then a painter, married Miss Elizabeth Norris, daughter of Henry Lattimer Norris of Philadelphia, in 1903. She divorced him in 1914, charging he paid more attention to his art than he did to her. He wooed and won her again and they were married in 1917 in Santa Barbara, Cal.

In 1919, however, she divorced him again, stating that the addition of singing to his other accomplishments made him pay less attention to her than ever.

Besides getting married again, Uhl said he intended to sing in Rome and Milan. He said he would be the first American singer to appear in Wagnerian roles in Italy, singing in Italian.

FORTUNE CLASPS ARMS AROUND BLUE AND GOLD

Trojan Warriors Rise to Unexpected Heights but Bears' Polish Too Potent for Opponents

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS

Looking down from where this is written, ordered enthusiasm has given way to indescribable confusion, and the bowl is boiling, a varicolored maelstrom of surging, serpentining students, a spectacle softened somewhat by the lengthening mountain shadows, the end of a day in which fortune has swayed uncertainly even as two great football battalions rolled each other back and forth over a gridironed field of green.

But in the end fortune flung her embrace about the Blue and Gold warriors, the escutcheon of California remained untarnished and the Bear adherents are celebrating a 12-to-0 victory over the University of Southern California.

The Trojans rose to unexpected heights and the Bears fought as only those can fight who are driven to the extremity of desperation. Three splotches of ragged play led up to all the California points. The Trojans lacked quite the polish of their adversaries. Nisbet's punting and Morrison's line mauling gave the Bears an edge, but probably not large enough to have saved them from a scoreless tie, but for a vital uncertainty in the Trojan play at three critical points.

REBUFF BEARS

Back early in the first quarter we see the Trojans backed against their own line rebuffing the Bears and gaining the ball on downs. Campbell drops back behind his own goal line to kick. He fumbles, and a Bear is on him with unrelenting grip. It is a safety—two points, and battle as they will, the Northerners seem unable toimprove these two points. Twice the Trojan line holds within scant yards of its own goal, but late in the third quarter it bends and then breaks under the relentless hammering, and California is across with the only touchdown of the game. Later, Nisbet adds three points with a drop kick.

It is now near the close of the game and the thousands rimming the great horseshoe are little more than a hazy blurr. California forced into its own territory, decides to punt. Nisbet lets drive. There is a "boom" as the ball strikes a Trojan who has broken through and breasted the ball. It bounds crazily to one side. A leaping Trojan, Cummings they said it was, breaks from the pack, snatches the ball out of the air and darts up the course with a clear field. Within five yards of the California goal, he either collides with one of his own men, or a laggard heel is clutched in a vise-like grip by a pursuing Bear.

Four times the mass Trojan phalanx hurs itself into the human bulwark of Blue and Gold. Each time that Blue and Gold barrier yields and bends, but it does not quite break before this almost inexorable force, and the last exhausting effort finds the ball three scant feet from the California line.

But back to the beginning as the panorama of a great throng unfolding, and the agitated pantomime of gorgeous color schemes and waving pennants.

My ignorant watch, somewhat weakened by age, says it is 2:15. Rather early for one notoriously dilatory in attendance, but the inmates of the press box tell me that Andy Smith has been pacing the sidelines for an hour. Also, that every fifteen seconds the California coach has inspected the watch which he wears on his pulse. Whether he is watching the minute hand or merely trying to keep track of the speed of his pulse is a question.

There are probably 20,000 in the horseshoe bowl, but it doesn't look like much salad, so immense is the place. These 20,000 in the bowl look about as numerous as the oysters in the average restaurant stew. This is not a boost for oyster stews, but to give some idea of how large the bowl is to make 20,000 spectators look so scarce.

STEADY STREAM

Ten abreast, fifteen abreast, up the road which emerges from the wooded section to the south, crawls a steady stream of people. Most of them unfamiliar with this territory, had parked their machines below, although they could have come farther. In the far distance, this stream of humanity takes on the aspect of advancing troops. Closer, however, the stream is too irregular and ragged. As the stream approaches it suggests refugees, the exodus of an entire people, such streams as I

All Mentors Declare That Both Bears and Trojans Played Clean Football

When the dust of battle had settled yesterday afternoon, and the two teams at Pasadena had retired to the training quarters the tongues of the members of the teams unloosened and the coaches gave their opinions of their respective teams, and of the game as a whole.

Elmer Henderson, head coach of the Trojans said, "The game was a wonderful exhibition of football. California had a wonderful team, but our boys fought them just as hard as they could. We were beaten, but we were not licked. I believe that our boys played a clean game all the way, and I think that the Bears did too. We don't care if we were only beaten by twelve points, we are going to come back next year and try again to beat the California team."

Coach Andy Smith, head coach of the California Golden Bears said, "My boys played a good game, I am very well satisfied with their showing against as strong a team as U.S.C. It was a wonderful game, and both teams played stellar football. The thing that I am most proud of about my team though, is the fact that when the breaks were going against them they did not lose heart, but they tightened up and it was nothing short of heart-breaking to take the ball to the U.S.C. line four times, and then be thrown back."

Leo Calland, captain of the Trojan varsity, said, "We may have been beaten, but we had the fight all the way through. The best team may have won, but we fought 'til the last whistle, and we played a clean straight hard game. I'd have given anything to have beaten that bunch, but we just couldn't seem to do it. But regardless of who won, we outfought the Bears, and they know it."

"Turk" Hunter, assistant coach at U.S.C., stated that the thing that he liked best in the game was the fact that his men played a clean game, and took their defeat like a bunch of thoroughbreds.

Cliff Herd, stated that he had little to say, except that the Trojans couldn't have fought any harder, no matter how hard they tried.

Despite the rumors which were prevalent in some sections of the stands, all of the U.S.C. coaches stated that they did not see any cases of dirty playing and all commented on the cleanliness of the playing of both teams.

HIGHWAY CLEARED FOR AUTO CONTEST

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX, Oct. 9.—The State highway from Douglas to Phoenix will be closed Monday during the hours of the Douglas-Phoenix road race, the State Highway Department officially announced today. The entire course will be patrolled by special officers to keep the course free of traffic, the announcement said. Twenty-three cars will face the starter at Douglas tomorrow morning, Cal Messner, chairman of the race committee, announced tonight. Almost half the number are Phoenix entries. A majority of the local entries left for Douglas today. They just jogged over the course to acquaint themselves with road conditions.

STAGG FIELD, CHICAGO, Oc 28.—Chicago's Maroons, crumbl down into defeat in the most se national intersectional battle football history on Stagg Field to day, losing a heart-breaking gam to Princeton's fighting Tigers, to 18.

With victory seemingly saf with the Tiger line ripped an torn to pieces by the desperate lin plunges of the Thomas boys an turn, the scene suddenly shifte and Princeton's team, fighting long range, scooped a fumbled bal scored a touchdown and then, be fore the stunned Maroons coul rally, they cut loose a desperat assault which carried the bal over the Maroon line again an sealed defeat of the East and th downfall of eastern ball from th fire.

FIGHT DESPERATELY

Even then stunned as they wer by the unexpected attack and turn of the game, the Maroons fough brilliantly and desperately. Refusing to surrender they battled their way through the Tiger team to within two feet of the goal line where the fighting sons of Nassau made the final rally and hurled back John Thomas, recovering the ball almost on the line. Then just as the Tigers kicked out of danger the whistle blew and the greatest intersectional game of history went to the east.

In the early part of the game the Maroons ripped through the Princeton line for long gains. The first half ended with Chicago leading 12-7.

Chicago's line had outplayed the Tiger both in attack and defense and the Thomas boys, while getting credit for their spectacular plunging in the two terrific drives down the field, owed their score to the magnificent line opening of Pondelik, which enabled them to crash through and over the Tiger tackle defenses.

Yet Princeton was playing what the East for years has called western football—passing and running in open and risky style, which Chicago seemed unable to block at times.

ALL CHICAGO

That first half was all Chicago. ce of Princeton was held at ry turn and forced to turn to ward passing to gain ground. ir kicking did some good, but running would not gain through or around the unyielding Maroon wall. But with little Johnny Gorman, cool as if in victory, directing play, Princeton cut loose a dazzling forward pass and the attack carried them again and again within striking distance of the Maroon goal.

Chicago's work was ragged at times, ragged yet powerful—and at the end of the first quarter a forward heave by Cleaves, the field leader of the Tigers, placed the ball near the five-yard line, and when they changed ends the Tigers needed to gain that vital five yards.

With the Maroons holding and throwing back assault after assault, Ken Smith was rushed to the scene and then with a sudden shift Gorman called upon Crum and while the Maroon line massed to hold back Cleaves or Smith, hurled himself through the line and scored. Ken Smith, debonair as if on the dance floor at Princeton, kicked the goal and the Tiger led.

RUSSIA INVADED BY CARPENTIER

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—Georges Carpentier traversed Berlin today en route to Moscow to tackle the Bolshevist Battling Siki business ring, where, according to expert opinion, he is even less up to encounter easy marks than in his last pugilistic conflict. He carried no boxing gloves, but a large assortment of aluminum kitchenware from his French factory for, which he hopes to find a far vorable market in Russia.

Asked whether he intended to fight, he held up both hands and said:

"Both wings are broken. That should answer your question."

FORTUNE FAVORS BLUE AND GOLD

saw pouring down the white roads of France from the Aisne during one of the great offensives. Here the topography is suggestive of the Vosges Hills.

Then one draws another mental picture, and the stream in the extreme distance becomes ants. And this bowl suggests a huge ant hill. Persons entering through the score or more of tunnels from the perspective of the press box remind you of crawling insects. Means of ingress and egress are perfect. Cash customers circle the outside and hunt their tunnels, which, when found, lead them direct to their particular section. Ten, twenty or thirty thousand persons circling the bowl and hunting their holes is something worth watching. While it may require some walking, it is all done without confusion. Passing through the subterranean passages put everybody in a caveman and cavewoman mental attitude for the game.

HUGE FOOTBALL

The playing field and the rounded space back of the goal posts, all covered with Australian grass, form an emerald ellipsis and is suggestive of a huge football.

Down below the California band is playing, "There'll Be a Hot Time," and the first growl of the Bear is heard from the massed California rooters in front of the press box. There comes a tumultuous response billowing across the field. It is the throated challenge of the banked Trojans.

Rising in serried rows from the center of the arena are the circling and banked tiers of the horseshoe bowl. The vast structure seemed chiseled in the mountain rock by a Titan hand, nature's own colossal coliseum, fit amphitheater for sturdy manhood to stride its struggles, a spectacle to delight the gods of high Olympus, or more exacting still, the gallery gods.

BEGINS TO STIR

The general crowd, which seems to have been drowsing in the sun, is beginning to stir itself as the rooting sections, north and south, vocalize their battle cries. One senses something which has been lacking in the annual East vs. West struggle. The crisp air is charged with something more tense. It is college rivalry. The rival sections seem about equal. This, the most gorgeous spectacle of its sort ever seen in the south, is more than a spectacle. The very atmosphere is vibrant, tense, throbbing with a deep-seated rivalry, elemental, but with modern refinements. Eventually this will be the south's great, transcending football event, surpassing in some respects the East vs. West struggle.

California debouches, regulars and substitutes, in one big pack at 2:29. The Bears are big and imposing. Jerseys and stockings are blue and gold, as is seen as they throw away their gray jerseys. Smith's men deploy onto the field, and go through open maneuvers. Muller's passing catches the crowd's collective eye, as does Nisbet's punting. But the blond Pomona giant is booting only about fifty yards, far below his best.

FINELY MOLDED

Henderson sends his men into the arena at 2:49. His first team, finely molded men, dash onto the field. They go through a series of scrimmage formations the length of the field. In their wake come the Trojan reserves. Like all reserves they lack something which the first-line men have, but these minor defects are not apparent to the naked and unskilled eye. These reserves are not weaklings, and one would not fancy being walked on by them, eleven at a time, or less.

The Trojan punting in practice seems inadequate, and it is felt that California's superiority in this department, placing the burden of physical effort on the Trojans, is a fearfully wearing effort which might tilt the apothecary's scruple in a desperately close combat, or one which might transform an unequal combat into a landslide.

GRID HISTORY

Taking a visual census of the California squad, regulars and reserves, one gains the impression that the impending battle is Southern California vs. Southern California. Among those drafted from the sunny side of the Tehachapi to make resplendent football history at Berkeley are observed such of our fellow-citizens as Nigg, Covina; Beam, Whittier; Erb, Los Angeles; Horrell, Pasadena; Nichols, Pomona; Nisbet, Pomona; Muller, San Diego; Burgess, Long Beach; Bell, Redlands; Phelps, Pomona; Dean, Fullerton; Lau, Venice; Evans, Long Beach; Hufford, Los Angeles; O'Brien, Los Angeles; Berkey, Los Angeles; Scott, Los Angeles; Best, Brawley. Then there is Spaulding of Bakersfield. Bakersfield is on the other side of Tehachapi, but too warm to be classed as northern territory. Hence the consoling thought came to us that whoever loses, Southern California would win.

Both elevens shape up with striking symmetry. California seems somewhat heavier, but one would not suspect the Trojans of being even slightly anaemic. Each eleven might have been chosen for the dramatic effect of its assembled appearance.

There is the flip of a perfectly good American dollar. Apparently this dollar had been coined in the San Francisco mint. Anyway it falls favorably to the northerners. First break for Bears who elect to receive from the northern end of the field. As the teams spread away in attacking and defensive formation, the stadium is more than two-thirds full, and still that packed interminable line of crawling things is emerging from the woods below. These crawling things are cash customers coming out of the wilderness.

But before this there was the inspiring spectacle of the rejuvenated Trojan band a hundred strong which paraded the field. In variety of musical instruments and lung power we win.

TENSE MOMENT

There is that agonizing instant as the facing teams, taut and nerve-steeled, Trojans poised for their dash forward, Bears braced to meet the assault, hang on the leash of the referee's as yet silent whistle, a sound which was to stridently send them into the turmoil of a gruelling conflict, while 40,000 sit silent and transfixed in a torture of suspense, an intensity comparable only to zero hour in the trenches. There are no other such moments. It is more tense than when two champions face each other in the ring, and different from the hairline finish of a turf classic. It is supreme repression, a greater depth of feeling than the frenzied screaming, exulting manifestation that greet the finish of great throbbing thoroughbreds.

Interests of 40,000 hangs on the swing of Norman Anderson's solid foot. For Norman has been elected to kick off for U. S. C. There is the shriek of the referee's whistle, it sounds as faint as a cricket's chirp in this vast place, there is the free swing of Anderson's foot, the ball sails into the void, describing a graceful arc as it carries far beyond the California line. It is brought out to the California 20-yard line, there is a stacatto barking of signals, the boys dive into the breakers and the afternoon's sport is regarded as duly launched.

SOCCERITES TO TANGLE HERE TODAY

Scots and Uniteds Will Clash at Washington Park

TODAY'S GAMES

L.A.A.C. vs. Overseas at Washington Park, 1 p.m.
Long Beach vs. L. A. Scots at Washington Park, 3 p.m.
Samson Tire vs. Sons at Compton at 2:30 p.m.
United vs. Rangers at Pasadena at 1 p.m.

The feature struggle of the four soccer battles this afternoon will in all probability be the game between the L. A. Scots and Long Beach United at Washington Baseball Park. Much interest has been aroused over the meeting of these teams admittedly two of the strongest in the league and a capacity crowd should be on hand to watch them in action.

Fast snappy and exciting football should be the result, with the game bitterly contested. Preceding this game, the Athletic Club and Overseas will entertain the fans starting at 1 p.m. Here are two teams very evenly matched and their struggle for supremacy should be productive of excellent football. The Veterans having remedied the defects that developed as the result of last week's play should be a worthy opponent for the Mercury Foot.

Samson Tire will give battle to Sons at Compton, with the latter fighting with their backs to the wall in their determination to enter the win column. The fourth game will be staged at Pasadena between the L. A. United and Rangers.

Southern Peagreen Eleven Holds the State Team to an Even Score

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERKELEY, Oct. 28.—The California and U.S.C. freshmen battled to a 3-to-3 tie at California Field this afternoon. Poor generalship, fumbles and numerous penalties came near losing the game for California. The Blue and Gold was on the offensive throughout the entire contest. They easily lost the ball on fumbles when it was in U.S.C.'s territory.

The first score came in the first quarter when U.S.C. got the ball on a California fumble. Dorsie of U.S.C. dropped back to the California 35-yard line and drop-kicked over the cross bar. California then carried the ball to the U.S.C.'s 5-yard line, but lost it again on fumbles. The second quarter was a see-saw with the ball remaining at midfield most of the time. In the third and fourth quarters, the California freshmen were on the offensive.

With two minutes to play, Palt of California dropped back to the 20-yard line and put over a drop-kick, tying the score. Dixon and Imlay were consistent ground-gainers for California, while Dorsie starred for U.S.C.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Oct. 28.—A field goal from the 25-yard line by Lincoln in the second period and a touchdown by Smith at the beginning of the last period gave Missouri University a 9-to-0 victory over St. Louis University here this afternoon. Though outweighed by nearly twenty pounds to the player, the local team presented a much stronger defense than had been expected.

Passing and Fumbles Win for Bagshaw's Men

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PULLMAN (Wash.) Oct. 28.—Displaying real football in the last five minutes of the game the University of Washington team won the State football championship from the Washington State College eleven here this afternoon, 16 to 13, before a crowd of 10,000 spectators, the largest crowd ever assembled at Rogers Field. The occasion was the annual home coming at the State college.

Up until the final few minutes of play the Cougars had the edge on the scoring. A pass from Ziel to Hall netted the winning touchdown. Forward passing and kicking won the game for the university.

Leonard Ziel for Washington, and Capt. Ford Dunnton for the State college, provided a pretty punting duel throughout the entire contest, Dunnton having a slight edge on the Washington kicker. Ziel booted a place kick from W.S.C.'s 25-yard line, for the first score of the game.

BASEBALLERS ON JOB TODAY

Six Games Carded in Triple A League Series

Glendale Team Will Put on Festival

Knights of Columbus Enter Second Round

Sixteen Greater Southern California Baseball Association games have been scheduled for today's round of play by Joe Pironne, secretary and booker of the association. Most of today's contests figure to be fast ball games and it looks as if the local bush ball hounds are in for a treat.

Perhaps the best game on tap for this afternoon will be played between the Association All-Stars and a picked colored aggregation from Southern California. Doc Anderson's colored all-stars were originally scheduled to play against the association stars but they were delayed in arriving here by having to play several exhibition games in the East. Anderson's team will probably not play here for two weeks. Ed Stuart will manage the association team.

Another important game will be between the Burbank All-Stars and the Murphy Coyotes at La Habra. The Coyotes are managed by Doc Crandall, Angel twirler, and on their team are several other members of the Los Angeles Coast League club. The Burbank squad has several big leaguers among its members.

Chet Chadbourne, star Vernon centerfielder, will take his Tiger team, which is composed mostly of Vernon players, to San Diego to clash with the San Diego squad, which has not been defeated this season. Following is the schedule of tomorrow's association games:

Association All-Stars vs. Southern California Colored Club, at Sox Park.
Chadbourne's Tigers vs. San Diego, at San Diego.
Hollywood Studios vs. Norwalk, at Norwalk.
New Methods vs. Southwest University, at Slauson playgrounds.
Ira Furniture Company vs. Latin Cubs.
White Kings vs. Amalgamated Oil Company, at Olinda.
Cimarrons vs. Lynwood, at Lynwood.
Bradfords vs. Bellflower, at Bellflower.
L. A. Japanese vs. Salt Lake Playgrounds Club, at Arroyo Seco.
Hynes vs. Downey, at Downey.
L. A. Chinese vs. Fraternal Brotherhood, at Ross Snyder Field, No. 1.
Tom Mix Wildcats vs. Pomona Elks, at Pomona.
Palomar vs. Glendora, at Glendora.
Burbank vs. Murphy Coyotes, at La Habra.
Southgate vs. Harper-Reynolds, at Echo Park.
Hollywood Merchants vs. I. O. Foresters.

There will be six games in the Triple-A League today and a record-breaking attendance is expected. The best game for today is scheduled to be played between the Hammond Lumber Company team and Huntington Beach Standard Oils at Maier Park. Both of these teams play a fast brand of ball and the game should result in a speedy brawl. The other games are: Santa Barbara and Ventura Elks at Ventura; Sawtelle and San Pedro Lumber Company at Sawtelle; El Segundo and Shell Oil at Signal Hill; Rose Room Dancers and Huntington Beach Merchants at Huntington Beach; and Cox-Haas and Santa Fe Athetic Club at San Bernardino.

The Knights of Columbus League teams will go into their second round of play today with four games being scheduled. Only one game was played last Sunday because of inability to get grounds. The Santa Ana game was postponed because of a big wind storm. The Long Beach Caseys won the only game played in the league last week, defeating the Anaheim squad, 10 to 7. The games to be played today follow: Los Angeles at Long Beach; Anaheim at Santa Ana; San Pedro at Santa Monica; Pasadena, bye.

The Glendale ball club will hold a big fall festival at Glendale from October 30 to November 6. The ball players promise that everybody who attends the festival will be sure of having a good time. The proceeds of the game will go toward paying the expense of building the new Glendale park.

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce recently wrote back to John McGraw inviting the New York Giants to train in the Glendale park this spring.

PURDUE IS NO MATCH FOR IOWA

Hawkeyes Wipe Up the Ground With Opponents, Scoring at Will

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

IOWA CITY (Iowa) Oct. 28.—The University of Iowa displaying a fierce attack, showed 12,000 football fans here this afternoon that it is still very much in the running for the western championship when it steam-rolled over Purdue University, 56 to 0.

The Iowa offensive, swinging into action in the opening quarter when Miller scored the first touchdown reached its greatest push in the second period when 21 points were scored on three touchdowns.

Only at the beginning of the third quarter did Purdue show any ability to gain. Three forward passes in that quarter had given the Boilermakers as many first downs when Kadesky dashed in and intercepted their fourth aerial attempt and raced 30 yards for a touchdown. After that, Iowa continued to score at will.

HARVARD ON LONG END

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Oct. 28.—The team that Dartmouth brought to the stadium to meet Harvard today after an absence of ten years, goes back to the hills defeated, 12 to 3, but with 53,000 spectators witness to an unrelenting fight and rushing power that flashed into its greatest strength too late.

A touchdown by Percy Jenkins, substitute end, was made when he intercepted an awkwardly thrown pass from Harris to Mills and ran 55 yards to the goal, with half the Crimson scoring. A drop-kick by Capt. Buell, in the second period, booted fifteen yards, and a goal from placement kick by Owen, made in the third period from the 32-yard line, were the other scoring factors. They succeeded where other Crimson kicking attempts for goal failed.

Dartmouth in defeat lost nothing of promise for its later games. Its attack was not as strong as the Crimson's, but its defense was good enough to hold Harvard for downs twice, once on the 2-yard line in the third period.

HILLS
are easily taken if you use
Streett's Ideal Motor Oil

Climb a hill in your motor car. Then drain your crankcase and refill it with Streett's Ideal Motor Oil of the consistency recommended. Make no mechanical adjustments.

Go back and climb that hill again. You will observe more pep, more power, more speed in your motor. And you will have a smoother running engine.

Hill tests, more than any other, show power losses. Streett's Ideal Motor Oil seals the clearance between cylinder walls and pistons, thus stopping the loss of power. That is why we urge that Streett's Ideal Motor Oil be submitted to the hill test.

Keep on running your engine with Streett's Ideal Motor Oil and you will find that economy is added to the gain in power.

Middies Fall Before Crafty Pennsylvania

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—Out-played and out-maneuvered by the midshipmen from Annapolis today in the first half of the game, the University of Pennsylvanian football team pulled itself together in the third period, tied the score and won from the Navy in the final quarter, 13 to 7. Nearly 50,000 persons saw the battle.

Captain "Pos" Miller, halfback of the Pennsylvania eleven, while showing to little advantage with its other members in the first half, had a reawakening in the third quarter and largely through his efforts Pennsylvania scored the tying touchdown and in the next period put across the score that won the game.

The great Barchet, of the Navy team, who was not permitted to start at the opening of the contest, was thrown into the game in the fourth period to turn the tide.

STUBBORN DEFENSE IS BROKEN

Michigan Wins Second Western Conference by Denting Illinois

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Oct. 28.—Beating down the stubborn defense of Bob Zuppke's men, Michigan won its second western conference football game of the season here today, downing Illinois, 24 to 0.

Although balked at many stages in the game by the Illinois line, Yost's machine took advantage of every opportunity, carrying the battle into Illinois territory repeatedly during the second and third periods.

The visitors threatened the Michigan goal line but once. That was in the final period when Zuppke's men smashed their way from mid-field to within eighteen yards of the Wolverine goal on line plunges and end runs by Happenney and McIlwain. Here the Michigan defense held.

In the opening period the Yost men were almost helpless before the Illys, the Wolverine's revamped lines not being able to clear the path for the backs.

Illinois failed to make a first down until the final period, when six were registered. Michigan made eight first downs during the game.

OREGON VARSITY IS VICTOR OVER IDAHO

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 28.—The University of Oregon defeated the University of Idaho football team on Multnomah field here today by a score of 3 to 0. The winning score was made in the second period when Chapman, by a place kick from the 35-yard line, booted the ball squarely between the goal posts. A previous attempt in the same period to score by a place kick failed.

FORWARD PASSES THRILL

Immense Throng Moved by Spectacular Grid Work of Yale-Army in Second Half

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Oct. 28.—Forward passing as a means of touchdowns by each side gave a touch of the spectacular to the Yale-Army 7-to-7 game here this afternoon and brought to its feet the crowd of 76,000 spectators. It was these forward passes, executed after a slow first half, which put life into a seemingly listless game. After a kicking duel in which Wood of the Army battled more successfully than Neale of Yale against a stiff north wind in the first two periods, both teams opened up and put across touchdowns. Although Yale made seven first downs to Army's five, Wood by his marvelous punting and receiving of forward passes saved his team from defeat.

Neither team scored in the first half, although the Army brought the ball to the Yale 9-yard line before being stopped by the Elis early in the second period. Only once did Yale bring the ball into the Army territory in this half when their territory down the field was cut short by a 28-yard penalty for roughness.

The Elis came back strong in the third-quarter when Capt. Jordan and Widdy Neale took the ball down for consistent gains from Yale's 40-yard line to Army's 34-yard line. Here Yale completed one of its three successful passes, the longest of the game, Neale passing to Mallory, sub for Scott, who raced to the 4-yard line before being stopped. Neale took the ball over on a spread off tackle play.

Early in the last period on an exchange of punts, Wood, of the Army, again with the advantage of the north wind on his back, advanced the ball into Yale territory on the 45-yard line.

Then the Army opened up with a series of four forwards, two of which were incomplete. A pass, Smythe to Wood, was good for 20 yards, two line plays gained 6 yards and then Wood saved his team by completing another pass off the same formation, going 17 yards to the 3-yard line before being downed. On two line plays Wood finally plunged over for the touchdown which gave his team the much-deserved tie.

Vernon Club in Farewell Target Shoot

The farewell Sunday shoot of the Vernon Gun Club will be held today, when the Vernon and Los Angeles Gun Club members shoot on the Mark Lane semiperpetual trophy. The Los Angeles club will be closed.

The shoot will be at 100 targets from 16 yards with take-home trophies up for the three high guns in each of the four classes. Following today, all Sunday shooting will be conducted at Los Angeles. Vernon will hold its three registered tournaments each year and keeps its grounds at Huntington Park intact. The first of these registered tournaments will be held November 16, 17, 18 and 19. It will be the semiannual tournament.

BAKERSFIELD COPS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MODESTO, Oct. 28.—A converted goal separated the scores of the Modesto and Bakersfield Junior College football teams at the end of a featureless football game here this afternoon. The score was 7 to 6, in favor of Bakersfield.

AGGIES IN TIE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MANHATTAN (Kan.) Oct. 28.—Bachman's Kansas Aggie Wild Cats proved themselves a machine to be feared in the Missouri Valley race this afternoon when they held the Kansas University to a 7-to-7 tie game.

HUGE BANK FRAUD IS LAID TO MANAGER

FOREIGN BRANCH EMPLOYEE IS ARRESTED; $139,000 INVOLVED

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—H. Fry Werblow, acting manager of the Peking (China) branch of the Asia Banking Corporation, was arrested upon his return from China today on a charge of grand larceny in connection with an asserted attempt to defraud banks out of $139,000 by means of forged cablegrams. His brother, Robert, until recently an employee of the Chase National Bank, was arrested on a similar charge.

A statement issued by the Guaranty Trust Company said that about $110,000 of the lost funds had been recovered and that it was believed the remainder would be recovered. The banks involved in the alleged scheme are fully insured.

The statement said the attempted larceny was discovered following the receipt last July at the London office of the Guaranty Trust Company of cablegrams purporting to come from the Hankow branch of the Asia Banking Corporation.

HEARINGS ON BUDGET TO BEGIN THIS WEEK

MEASURE TO BE SUBMITTED TO 1923 LEGISLATURE TO BE CONSIDERED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 28.—Clarence E. Jarvis, a member of the State Board of Control and chief of the division of budgets and accounts, announced today that the first hearings on the biennial budget to be submitted to the 1923 Legislature will be held here November 1.

The hearings will be conducted by the State Budget Board, which consists of the members of the Board of Control and State Controller Riley. The departments that will appear for hearing on the first day are:

Court of Appeal, Third District; State Library; Secretary of State; Surveyor-General and State Agricultural Society.

Jarvis declined to make an estimate as to the amount of the budget that will be submitted, although he said the board is hopeful of keeping it substantially under the $81,000,000 budget presented to the 1921 Legislature, and which the Legislature increased to $88,000,000.

OPTOMETRIST APPOINTED

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 28.—Gov. Stephens today appointed T. A. Bromback of San Francisco, as a member of the State Board of Optometry to succeed Herman Davis of Sacramento, resigned. Bromback's appointment was recommended by the optometrists of San Francisco.

FAKE CO-OPERATIVE SCHEMES RAPPED

MILLIONS LOST BY WORKERS, LEAGUE OFFICIAL ASSERTS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—At least $15,000,000 has been lost during the past three years principally by workers through the organization and exploitation of fake co-operative schemes, Andrew P. Bowen, vice-president of the Co-operative League, and vice-president of the Pennsylvania Federation of labor, said in an address at the third annual congress of the co-operative organization here tonight.

Workers, he said, have had their confidence in co-operative enterprises shaken by the unscrupulous operations of "co-operative charlatans." The operation of such schemes, he said, constitutes a menace to workers and to the co-operative movement and he recommended that labor bodies advocate for adoption in the various States the model co-operative law drafted with a view to protection against fake co-operative schemes.

EX-KAISER RETAINS TITLE

Latest Bride Will Be Known as Her Imperial Majesty, Kaiserin Wilhelm II, After Marriage

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—The ex-Kaiser's bride at her marriage will take the name and title of "Her Imperial Majesty, Kaiserin Wilhelm II," and not as repeatedly reported merely Queen Hermine of Prussia.

The last was said to be in accordance with Wilhelm's supposed desire to disclaim imperial dignities and be known in the future only by the ancient title of his house. She will not conform to the Allied powers' description of her husband in the peace treaty and become the "Frau Von Hohenzollern."

Her designation as the "Kaiserin Wilhelm," your cordespondent learns from sources closest to the bethrothed couple, is specifically mentioned in the marriage contract drafted since the engagement in accordance with the wishes of both principals in the coming wedding. That not only indicates the ex-Kaiser's intent to maintain his pretensions to imperial dignities as far, at least, as the Hohenzollerns and his still loyal followers are concerned, but also contains a number of other interesting specifications throwing light upon the marriage settlements and some reasons for the earlier objections of the ex-Kaiser's children to his remarriage.

Princess Hermine in the contract renounces in advance all financial rights in the ex-Kaiser's property so she will not infringe on the heritage of the ex-Kaiser's children either by her own nuptial claims or through transfer to the children of her first marriage. The ex-Kaiser, it is learned, desired to adopt the five children of the Princess as his own, giving them his name, but she declined the proposal.

Princess Hermine also specified in the contract that she should be entitled to visit Germany twice a year for a period of eight weeks to look after her own estate and property, in which she retains full title, and to visit her older children who will live in Graz with her former tutor.

COAST SYSTEM PLEA IS MADE

Southern Pacific Official Talks to Bankers

Shoup's Santa Rosa Address on Dismemberment

Great Sums Are Spent for Rail Improvements

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ROSA, Oct. 28.—"What the Pacific Coast needs is a strong local railroad system stretching eastward, serving our territory as the Pennsylvania serves Pennsylvania and adjoining States, or as the New York Central serves New York and adjacent territory.

Paul Shoup, vice-president of the Southern Pacific Company, made this statement here tonight before group No. 8, California Bankers' Association, in discussing the threatened separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific lines.

"Dismembered, with the very heart of its system turned over to a competitor, deprived of a direct route east, what expansive power has this system left with a dagger pointed at its heart," asked Mr. Shoup, "what incentive to build branch lines to feed a rival trunk line and that rival not a Coast system?"

FINANCIAL HISTORY

The speaker touched upon the financial history of the company, showing how the government had been able to collect $58,000,000 from the Central Pacific because the Southern Pacific had guaranteed the Central Pacific debts to the government. The threatened separation, Mr. Shoup said, would dislocate railroad facilities, as to use of shops, terminals, junctions, division yards and storehouses, train runs and the like, wasting millions, forcing employees to move, management to be reorganized, shippers to pay greater charges, and all to no good end, showing that the development of the territory, particularly north Mojave and Santa Barbara, would be retarded. Mr. Shoup said a home road with home interests must be the chief reliance of a community for development, because such a home road depends upon the community growth for its own growth as is now the case with the Southern Pacific.

"In the last twelve years our road has put more money into railroad extensions, railroad shops and railroad terminals in the territory west of the Sierra Nevada and Cascade Mountains, and south from the Columbia River to the Mexican line, than all other railroads put together, two to one," Mr. Shoup said. "It has built locomotives and cars, the finest railroad office building in the country, the most modern warehouses, developed electric railways, and increased its port facilities on a large scale.

"In view of the many misstatements made it is proper to say, first, that the Southern Pacific maintains the Central Pacific as its principal transcontinental highway, and over this line moves more passengers and more tons of freight than any other of its lines. The statement that the Sunset Route fattens at its expense is absurd. Our neighbor to the east, the Union Pacific, need have no fear of alienation of traffic if the Central Pacific remains with us. The instructions to our agents as to the solicitation of traffic have not changed from those in effect when Mr. Harriman was president of both roads. All we ask is that after we have gathered up this traffic from over our system, put it in train loads and delivered it to the Union Pacific at Ogden, that it be well cared for and the cars returned promptly.

SUICIDE NOT TO HALT INQUIRY

San Bernardino Official Takes Own Life

County Auditor's Office Is Accused of Graft

Deputy's Death Follows Embezzlement Charge

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 28.—The suicide of J. Ira Cole, Deputy County Auditor, whose body was found in an orange grove near Redlands early this morning, will not halt an investigation by the San Bernardino County Grand Jury of graft in the office of County Auditor S. G. Berger, it was announced today.

It was authentically reported that the grand jurors are convinced that Cole was not alone responsible for the series of thefts totaling $13,000 during the 1921-1922 fiscal year, but was the "goat" for others.

The investigation threatens to involve a prominent San Bernardino county business man, it was learned, although the jurors are shrouding their activities with secrecy.

DEAD MAN ACCUSED

Cole was charged in a complaint sworn to by County Treasurer M. W. H. Williams late Friday afternoon with embezzlement on two counts of more than $2000 in county funds. Sheriff Walter A. Shay immediately began a search for the Deputy Auditor. At his home it was reported that Cole had left a few minutes before saying that he would be back in a short time.

At midnight the search for the missing auditor extended throughout Southern California. With a revolver tightly clasped in his hand, Cole's body was found by his uncle, J. M. Cole, at whose home the auditor had visited early Friday night and asked for a gun. The auditor told his uncle that prisoners had escaped from a mountain prison camp and he was going to assist in the capture.

Later Cole visited the home of Duane Vanleuven near Redlands and borrowed the revolver which he used to end his life.

NOTE IS FOUND

Indicating that Cole deliberately contemplated death, his hat, filled with personal papers and a note, was found near the body. The note read: "Joe, please give this money to Ruth (his wife.) Sorry for you all. Good-bye. Ira."

Cole had been a Deputy County Auditor for many years. He was 41 years old.

County Auditor S. G. Bergen, who surrendered his office temporarily to Charles P. Fuller, an accountant, Friday noon at the request of the grand jury, was back at his office this morning. He refused to discuss the graft inquiry or Cole's death.

DAUGHTER OF EDISON SURGEON TO MARRY

WILL BECOME BRIDE TONIGHT OF FORMER HOOVER ASSISTANT

The marriage of Dorothy Stinchfield, aged 19, daughter of Dr. Herbert Stinchfield, chief surgeon of the Southern California Edison Company, to Benjamin L. Padgett, aged 29, former secretary to Herbert Hoover, will be performed at the West Adams Methodist Episcopal Church this evening by Rev. Ray Harker, pastor of the church.

The wedding will be the result of an acquaintance made a year ago. The best man at the wedding will be David Conrey. The bridesmaids are Gene Helen Low, Helen Selig and Marcella Rodd.

YOUTH WORKS FAST

Tenders Bill for Purchase and Keeps it With Change

A clever youth walked into the haberdashery store of S. M. Landau, 1204 West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon, and approaching Mrs. A. Landau, in charge of the shop, asked for two handkerchiefs. Receiving his change, $9.75, he pocketed it, together with the original bill, and strode away from the astounded Mrs. Landau. When Mrs. Landau recovered from her surprise she ran to the street, but the man was not in sight. Neighbors called for the police, and Detectives Warn and Knowles, upon receiving a description of the man, said he is suspected of several thefts.

USE DIVIDEND FOR EXPANSION

Standard Oil Explains Why Stock Issued

Better to Capitalize Huge Surplus, Belief

Official Publication Tells Company's Views

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which recently proposed the declaration of a 400 per cent stock dividend, states in its official publication, The Lamp, that the plan was devised to provide for financing the expansion of its business. Company officials believed it better to capitalize its large surplus with a stock dividend than to distribute the surplus and then seek funds in the open market for expansion purposes.

The policy of the company has been to put back into the business a large share of its earnings every year, the article says.

CONSTITUTE SURPLUS

"These now constitute the company's surplus, and are represented in its balance sheet by refineries, pipe lines, steamships, raw and finished products and other investments in property, both in this country and abroad," continued the article, "that part of the surplus which is in cash is a relatively small portion required for the current needs of the business.

"In ten years from 1912 to 1921, inclusive, the company has shown net earnings before taxes of $375,168,280. Of this considerable sum $115,517,677 has been paid to the government for taxes, $222,065,226 represents aggregate dividends for the period and $437,580,357 has been absorbed by the needs of the business referred to."

PAID EVERY TAX

The company says that the return in the past ten years on its investment has averaged only 12.76 per cent and that in the same period holders of common stock have received in dividends 30 per cent of the company's aggregate earnings.

It is also pointed out that the earnings of the company have been subjected to all taxes applicable—income, excess profits and others—both at home and abroad. In the years of highest excess profits tax requirements heavy payments on this account, it was pointed out that the company in order to finance the natural expansion of its business, found it necessary to create and sell to the public two issues of preferred stock.

The article closes with the statement that the company's surplus, having gone into permanent capital, could not be disturbed otherwise than in the proposed form of additional stock certificates.

TRIBES SEE WHITE MEN FIRST TIME

Danish Explorer Finds Primitive Eskimos Living Without Heat

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 28.—Five Eskimo tribes who had never seen a white man were encountered by Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, in a trip of 3000 kilometers from Admiralty Inlet, at the northern part of Baffin Island to Yath-Kyed Lake, Keewatin. Extremely primitive and unable to obtain blubber, these new-found Eskimos dwelt in snow huts without heat.

There was every indication they were inland tribes, which led Rasmussen, in his report made public today by the committee of the fifth Thule expedition to Arctic North America, to indorse the theory of the Danish professor, Stensby, that the Eskimos were originally Indian tribes who became lost in the northern wildernesses.

When Rasmussen came upon the Eskimos in his recent journey, they hid their womenfolk and children and made ready to defend themselves until he saluted them in the Eskimo tongue. Immediately their attitude changed. The women and children tumbled out of their hiding places and men embraced the explorer, showering their simple hospitality upon him.

They were of a decidedly lower stage of civilization than the Greenlanders, but Rasmussen was able to collect a valuable store of their legends and folk lore.

The winter climate he encountered was even more harsh than that of Greenland, both for men and animals. The temperature was 50 degrees Centigrade below zero.

WOMEN OUT TO DEFEAT SINGLE TAX

Committee to Fight Hard in Support of Amendment to Initiative

A "before election-week" campaign in favor of the proposed amendment to the inititative and against the single tax measure has been organized by the women's committee on the initiative, and intensive work among the voters is to start tomorrow, according to the announcement made yesterday by officers of the committee.

Every effort will be made to get in touch with the voters of the county and line them up in support of the measure, which is amendment No. 27 on the ballot, Mrs. W. W. Gardner, who is chairman of the committee, announced. The women who are working for the amendment believe that the initiative must be more wisely used in the future than it has been in the past, or direct legislation will come to an end entirely, members of the organization state, and for this reason are asking voters to vote yes "Yes" on amendment 27.

Among those who are on the women's committee are the following prominent club women: Mrs. Chas. H. Toll, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Mrs. Chas. F. Gray, Mrs. O. P. BOY WONDER PROVES HE'S NO DERELICT

Runaway Makes Way Home, 700 Miles, and Saves Ticket Money, Too

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, Oct. 28.—"Give the boy the $5 and turn him loose—he'll get home all right," read the telegram from the mother of the boy wonder who recently astonished Probation Officer Swanson of Imperial county and other county officials who took him in charge as a derelict and a runaway. This statement was made by the mother despite the fact that the lad was only 13 years old and approximately 700 miles from home.

William Ditty hailed from San Francisco and as a product of the "auld sod" he handled the dialect perfectly. He had been on the road, he asserted, because he was afflicted with the wanderlust as was his father before him. His interests lay in any other direction than public schools and when asked why he held this aversion to schools he grimaced and said, pointing to a newspaper, "That is my school, Oi rade thim ivery day."

Ditty showed himself remarkably well versed in the Irish question and other European problems of the day and picked up his wonderful understanding of them from the daily papers. He entered heatedly into discussion with his captors on most weighty topics of the day, and when asked some direct questions on the Irish-English question he called Lloyd George a dammed liar, relative to some action on the Premier's part.

Officer Swanson wired the mother, asking what to do with the boy. The above reply came with a $5 bill inclosed. Officer Swanson did as directed and the boy, carefully laying his plans, told Swanson that he would be home with mother in three days.

And so he was, it developed later. He paid no railroad fare, either.

COMBINE ELECTIONS

Council to Consolidate City, County, and State Ballots

Formal action will be taken by the City Council tomorrow in consolidating the city election with that of the State and county, to be held on November 7, at which time the city will place before the voters seventeen proposed charter amendments and two bond issues—one of $5,000,000 for water works extensions—and one of $2,500,000 for additional fire-house apparatus.

The action is a technicality required by law, but the ballots have already ben printed and sample ballots distributed bearing the nineten city propositions, as well as the State and county candidates' names and propositions.

SOCIAL AGENCIES COUNCIL TO MEET

The Alliance of Social Agencies will meet Tuesday at 2 p.m. in Room 513, Y.M.C.A. Building, 715 South Hope street.

The election of five members of the executive committee will take place. Bishop William B. Stevens will speak on "The Social Sginificance of the Portland Convention."

CINCINNATI CLUB MEETING

The Cincinnati Club of Los Angeles will hold its first winter reception Tuesday evening at Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, 845 South Figueroa street. All former residents of the Queen City and their friends are invited. The program, including Halloween stunts, will begin at 8 p.m.

Lawson No. 20
"The heater with the 'Glowing Heart'"
Lawson Odorless Gas Heaters

That's a very important word just at this time. Heat! Have you all you need—all you should have—for the health and comfort of your family and yourself?

A Lawson Odorless Gas Heater is designed with one big purpose in mind. To give heat—lots of it—at low cost.

Added to this, a Lawson gives healthful heat—radiant heat—like that of the sun. Radiant heat means odorless heat.

It gives it with entire safety, too—there are no open flames to cause trouble. Compact. Powerful. And there's an economical size Lawson for every room.

Coal is scarce—and high. Why not make use of gas? It is economical fuel when you have a Lawson.

Come in and see us. We'll show you exactly what a Lawson will do in the way of supplying heat! We want to prove to you that the Lawson is the finest little gas heater in the world.

FROWN ON PROJECTS OF PAIR

Police Place Film Stock Salesman and Insurance Writer Under Arrest

Two different methods of what police assert was bilking the public caused the arrest of Darl Hunt and Religh Brady yesterday. Hunt, formerly manager of the North Broadway Club, was arrested by Detective Sergeants Wallis and Zeigler after he had proposed writing insurance for P. Dudley, 1320 West Jefferson street.

According to Wallis, Hunt had been employed by a reputable insurance concern, but was discharged, afterward continuing to write insurance, the proceeds of the sale being put in his own pocket.

Brady was arrested on the complaint of Burke Dodd, Ed Williams, Scott Kenyon, George Day and Byron Carter, all of Los Angeles, after an appeal had been made to Detective Sergeants Trainor and Rich. Brady had incorporation papers from the State Corporation Commissioner for the Arizona-Brady Feature Film Corporation, and, according to the officers, was selling shares of stock at prices varying from one to one hundred dollars.

He was said to have especially plied his trade with cowboys, a new sombrero on the street stirring his salesmanly zeal. The complainants declared they were weary of waiting for dividends which never came. Brady was arrested at 423½ South Spring street.

Both men were booked at the City Jail on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

COUNCIL INVITED

Ask Mayor's Presence at New Stockyards opening

The Chamber of Commerce yesterday invited Mayor Cryer and members of the City Council to attend the exercise to be held next Wednesday morning, marking the opening of the new Los Angeles Union Stockyards, which will be conducted in the administration building on the company's property at Downey Road at Cypress avenue, near Vernon.

The letter of the chamber stated:

"The enterprise marks the beginning of a new epoch in the development of the great Southwest." The program will be in charge of the chamber.

RESERVE OFFICERS TO MEET TUESDAY

Legislation pertaining to retainer pay for naval reserves, classes 1 to 6, will be the chief subject for discussion by reserve officers at a special meeting of the Naval Reserve Association to be held next Tuesday evening at 8 p.m., in the assembly-room of police headquarters, 318 West First street.

At the same time the subject of fifteen-day cruises will be taken up and decision given.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR GIRL CONDUCTED

Funeral services for Isabel Yibens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Yibens, were conducted at the family residence on Lu Dillon avenue Friday, Rev. J. Baker officiating. Interment was at Calvary Cemetery. Six little girls from St. Hloysion's School, representing angels, escorted the flower-lined casket to the grave.

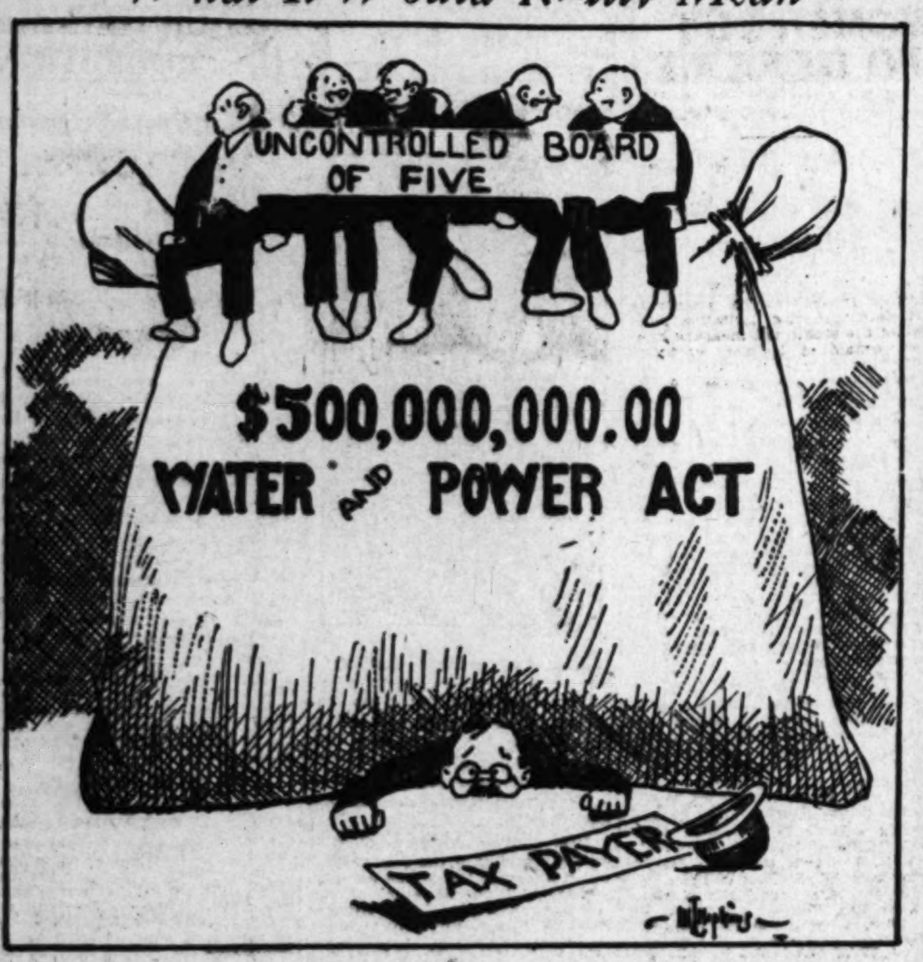
What It Would Really Mean



MAYOR OPPOSES NEW ZONING AMENDMENT

BUSINESS DISTRICT EXTENSION TO BRONSON AVENUE DISAPPROVED

Mayor Cryer yesterday sent to the City Council without his approval an amendment to the zoning ordinance which would permit the business district at Tenth street and Norton avenue to be extended westward to Bronson avenue.

Such an extension, the Mayor said in his message, was not desirable at this time, saying, "Bronson avenue is a residential street, well built up now with new and substantial homes, and there is ample space in the business structures already erected to care for the needs of the district for some years to come.

"To permit Bronson avenue frontage to be invaded by business structures would work a substantial injury to the owners of property on that avenue with no compensating advantages to anyone."

HUSBAND CONDUCTS OTHER WOMAN HOME

ROOM DEMANDED BY SPOUSE, WIFE RECITES IN HER DIVORCE CASE

Mrs. Harriet Butler, who had been married sixteen years and thought she held the love of her husband, Clarence Butler, was astounded one day when he brought "Myra" to their home. He asked his wife to find room for her at the house.

Mrs. Butler, who sought a divorce in Judge Summerfield's court yesterday, stated she objected to another woman in her home. She declared she discovered later that her husband had brought "Myra" to the house while she was away at work. The case was continued for further evidence. W. T. Kendrick, Jr., represents Mrs. Butler.

Observing Young Salesman

Thinking to save money, a jeweler discharged his regular salesman and hired an inexperienced boy. One day when he returned from lunch he said, "Well, Frank, did you sell anything while I was out?"

"Yes, sir. I sold five plain band rings."

"Fine, my boy, fine!" said the jeweler enthusiastically. "We'll make a salesman out of you one of these days. You got the regular price for them, of course?"

"Oh, yes, sir. The price stamped on the inside was 18c and the man took all that were left, sir."—[Boston Transcript.

ROTARIANS TO CRUISE IN HAWAII

Inter-City Visit to be Enjoyed by Clubmen of the Southland and Islands

When the steamship H. F. Alexander sails from Los Angeles next month she will have on board a jolly party of Rotarians bound for the Paradise of the Pacific.

The occasion for the cruise is an Inter-City visit to the clubs of Hilo and Honolulu made by the clubs of the Second District of Rotary International, which embraces California, Nevada and Arizona, a total of forty-three clubs.

A day and night will be spent on the Island of Hawaii with excursions along the Hamakua Coast and to the active volcano of Kilauea with its pit of living fire. From here the party will proceed to Honolulu where four days will be given over to the pleasure incident to a visit to semi-tropical isles. The Honolulu Rotary Club will be hosts to the visiting members.

TRAVEL TO CALFORNIA INCREASING

Heavy Winter Tourist Traffic Expected Here by Rail Officials

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Transcontinental passenger departments are busily preparing for the heaviest winter tourist travel in years, having received more than usual inquiries. A. P. Morrison, assistant general passenger agent of the Atchison, back from California, reports hotels anticipating record patronage. The Atchison will run two extra trains to the coast, beginning November 1. C. A. Cairns, general passenger agent of the Northwestern, which operates in conjunction with the Union Pacific, says:

"Our through business continues heavy, but later we must increase facilities for greater tourist travel than for a long time."

W. B. Dixon, assistant general passengers agent of the St. Paul, has found the height of the tourist movement unusually late in December, but already the reservations indicate an unusually high peak ahead. Many California tourists go to the North Pacific Coast cities first.

AGENT TO CONTINUE RAIDING WET CAFES

LIST OF "BUYS" COMPILED IN PREPARATION FOR NEW CAMPAIGN

Another drive on the "wet" restaurants is booked for the coming week. Prohibition Agent Dolley and his men have been busy lining up the cafes where they had reason to believe the prohibition law was being violated and a number of arrests have followed.

A list has been compiled of the places where "buys" have been made by prohibition agents and others, and further arrests are promised. It has come to the attention of Agent Dolley that there has been a wholesale violation of the law in various parts of the city, and there is to be a reckoning, he says. Open and undisguised sales of wine and liquor with meals have been reported to his office, it is said.

MANN ACT CHARGE

Andrew T. Elliott, an automobile mechanic, was taken into custody yesterday on the charge of violating the Mann White Slave Act. It is charged that he took Beulah Gann from Los Angeles to Winfield, Kan., for an immoral purpose. Commissioner Long fixed his bond at $2500.

Hair dressed in coils over the ears is said to affect the powers of hearing. Some singing masters refuse to teach women who have adopted this fashion.

NEW WELLS PUSH INTO OIL SANDS

Companies Report Outlook Good for More Producers in Torrance Field

Four more wells are being pushed through the oil sand in the Torrance field, according to statements given out yesterday by companies drilling there. The showing in every case is reported highly promising, the logs of the wells corresponding closely to those already producing.

Three of the wells, Torrance No. 3 on the Chanslor Canfield Midway lease, the Fullerton Oil Company's No. 2 well, and a Shell Oil Company well near it, have been cemented off at approximately 3000 feet. Virtually all of the wells now producing in the field have been brought in around 3500 feet after going through 500 feet of oil sand. A fourth well, Torrance No. 2 on the Chanslor Canfield Midway lease, is being drilled with standard tools and is now down more than 3000 feet. The well at one time was down to 3100 feet, but the cement broke through the casing, necessitating redrilling for nearly 200 feet.

Two weeks ago three wells were brought in within a period of three days. Their production is reported to have increased in every case, Del Amo No. 2, a Chanslor Canfield Midway well, having registered the biggest gain. It is now flowing between 300 and 400 barrels a day.

Torrance Community No. 1, on the Standard Oil lease across the highway from Del Amo No. 2, has just been taken off the pump and is now flowing on an average of 340 barrels a day. Considerable difficulty was encountered when the well was first brought in and it was kept on an agitator until it could be adjusted.

Torrance No. 1, a Chanslor Canfield Midway well, has sanded up and is temporarily off the list of producers. This well has encountered sand difficulties from the start and its real production possibilities have not yet been discovered. The drillers, however, are optimistic over the future of the well.

Of the three wells now being drilled by the Standard Oil Company, Kirk No. 1 is the furtherest down, having reached a depth of 2130 feet; Torrance Community No. 2, which is right alongside of Torrance No. 1, is down 1826 feet and Felker No. 1, spudded in a week ago, is down 896 feet.

CHAFFEY WINS HIGH HONORS

Team Takes Championship in Stock Judging

Captures First Place in Individual Contest

Will Represent State at Big Portland Show

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 27. — Fresh honors for Chaffey High School were seen in the receipt today of a telegram from J. B. Lillard, State Supervisor of Agricultural Education, announcing that the team from the Ontario school had captured first place in the State stock judging contest at Davis and that William Beard of the local team scored highest of eighteen men competing.

This announcement means that the Chaffey High team is to represent the State of California in the Western States contest to be staged under the auspices of the Portland (Or.) livestock fair in the near future. The contest just closed at Davis was preceded by preliminary judging contests at the Riverside fair, participated in by schools of Southern California and won by Chaffey High, and at the Sacramento fair, where northern schools participated.

Other members of the Chaffey team are William Armstrong and John McLaughlin and their victory reflects much credit upon the school which they represent.

In preparation for the Portland meet, which is to be participated in by six Western States, the members of the Chaffey team are to be given a week of special judging instruction at Davis under the auspices of the University of California.

INVESTIGATES DEATH

Inquest in Case of Murdered Rancher Scheduled Monday

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 28.—Inquest for George Ragle, wealthy Naranjo orange grower, who was shot Thursday afternoon by John Stromatt, also of Naranjo, as a result of Ragle's attention to Fern Stromatt, aged 17, will be held Monday morning. Funeral services were held this afternoon from Woodlake Church.

Ragle's death is the outcome of a love tangle and feud. Fern Stromatt was named in divorce proceedings last February by Mrs. Ragle. Immediately after, Stromatt warned Ragle to keep away from the girl. He declared he shot Ragle in the back Thursday afternoon when he found him with the young woman in a secluded spot on the river near Lemon Cove. Stromatt gave himself up to the officers.

RUINED ROMANCE

Officer Arrests Prospective Bridegroom

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 28.—A romance was blighted here today when local officers met a northbound train and arrested Harry Walker, 22, of San Diego, just as he and pretty Miss Arlie May Taylor, 16, his intended bride, stepped from the train. Walker was placed in jail and the girl was returned to her mother. The man is charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, according to reports. The girl's mother appealed to the police and furnished a complete description of the girl so that the officers had no trouble in identifying the couple.

KEEP UP RECORD

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Oct. 28.—Ten building permits, representing $9450, were issued during the past week by the office of L. W. Cowles, building inspector. Most of the permits were for repairs and additions, one of them being for a six-room house. The total for the month to date reaches $56,775.

MAN SOUGHT IN FORGERY CASE GONE

Circulator of Santa Monica Petitions Departs as Prosecutors Call

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 28.—Frank Mills, under investigation by the District Attorney's office for his connection with the asserted forgeries of scores of names on the Venice-Santa Monica consolidation petition, has disappeared, according to information obtained today by Chief Dep. Dist.-Atty. Asa Keyes, who is in charge of the case.

According to Keyes, Mills left his home on Washington Boulevard three weeks ago with his wife, packing at night and leaving early in the morning. It was three weeks ago that the affidavits were obtained from a number of voters charging that their names had been forged to petitions, some of which had been circulated by Mills.

Mills's absence was learned yesterday when a letter sent to his address, asking his presence at the District Attorney's office for discussion of charges made against him, was returned. It was then found that he had disappeared.

HURT IN TRAFFIC SMASHES

Alhambra Has Series of Motor Vehicle Accidents; Three Injured

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 28.—Two men were injured, one of them perhaps fatally, and a child was badly hurt in accidents here today, in which motorcycles played a leading part.

Walter Overbeck, a carpenter, of 2201 Isabelle avenue, Ramona Acres, is at the Alhambra Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and other serious injuries received when the motorcycle which he was riding crashed into an automobile driven by Mrs. J. Munson, 1314 Porta street, Los Angeles, at the intersection of Ocean to Ocean highway and Garfield avenue, here early this morning.

Arden Hanson, 1252 West Hellman avenue, who was riding with Overbeck, received deep cuts on the head. Both men were thrown violently to the pavement when their motorcycle hit the side of the automobile at the crossing.

Dorothy Johnson, 12 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Johnson, of this city, was painfully injured when she was struck by a motorcycle driven by Russell D. Jennings, shortly before noon today. The child, with her mother and her younger brother, was crossing Main street shortly before noon, and evidently became confused in the traffic. The motorcycle dragged her for several feet and she received many cuts and lacerations. She was taken to the Alhambra Hospital and later removed to her home.

Halloween to be Observed in Proper Style

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

VENICE, Oct. 28.—"There is only one Halloween—and Halloween's the big night in Venice." With this as their slogan, the Venice Amusement Men's Association announced today that all was in readiness for the big annual Halloween Mardi Gras and Carnival Tuesday night.

For this one day of the year, the Venice pier has been elaborately decorated. Pumpkin lanterns, funny faces, corn stalks, hobgoblins and all manners of weird and eerie things are being used as decorations. Yama Yama girls, mad cap musicians and becostumed citizens will vie with one another in making this the greatest event of years. In the Venice ballroom a "Spooks Frolice" and masquerade ball, with all sorts of weird and startling dances, special music settings and electrical effects, has been arranged.

The evening's doings are scheduled to start at 7 p.m., and last until the wee sma' hours, but the Venice pier and amusement zone will be going full blast all day.

TEXAS TWAIN IN JAIL AT POMONA

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Oct. 28.—Harry O'Neill, 20-year-old ex-resident of Texas, and his companion, Albert R. Watson, 24, also of Texas, are now residing in the local jail after being apprehended in San Diego, attempting to pawn some articles stolen from the home of W. L. Mansfield, 755 North White avenue, of this city.

Included in the articles recovered by local officers are a saxophone and a checked suit of clothes. O'Neill took the suit from the Mansfield home and left his old serge suit in its place. Today the action is reversed, both O'Neill and Mansfield have their own clothing.

Bail in both cases was fixed at $1000 and upon failure to raise the amount both men were remanded to jail to await prosecution by District Attorney W. B. Hencke in the local justice court.

AUTO CRASH AT ONTARIO

Three Severely Injured as Machines Come Together

Mother and Baby Son Thrown to Pavement

Four Occupants of One Car Escape Unhurt

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 28.—Two women and an infant were severely injured, two men received lesser hurts, and four others escaped injury this afternoon when a touring car driven by Harold Alexander 1000 East California street, was struck at Bonview avenue and Ontario Boulevard by a sedan belonging to Mrs. Thula Paschall of 228 North Myrtle street, Monrovia, and driven by Russell Dyer.

In the car with Mr. Alexander, who sustained minor cuts and bruises, were his wife and 18-month-old son, Thomas, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Moran, and James Moody of California street and Greenwood avenue.

Mrs. Alexander received a deep cut over the left temple which required four stitches to close and many painful bruises and was suffering from shock. She was hurled to the pavement in the crash as was her mother, Mrs. Moran, who was bruised and cut about the face and was picked up in a dazed condition. She was taken to the San Antonio Hospital where she is being examined for possible internal injuries. The baby sustained severe cuts and abrasions about the head and face and was badly bruised. Mr. Moody escaped with bruises and shock. The accident victims were taken to the offices of Dr. Calvert L. Emmons.

None of the occupants of the Monrovia car were hurt. Accompanying Mrs. Paschall were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burgren of San Francisco.

According to Mr. Dyer, the car he was driving was moving west on Ontario Boulevard when the car driven by Mr. Alexander, moving north on Bonview, suddenly cut in directly in his path. The rear left wheel of the Alexander machine was demolished, the top broken and the car generally wrecked.

Buy Clubhouse to Use as High Class Resort

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, Oct. 28.—R. H. Schwarzkoph and O. E. Winkler, Arcadia realtors today completed the purchase of the Santa Anita clubhouse, swimming pool and ten acres lying in the heart of Arcadia, from the Santa Anita rancho.

The consideration was not given, but is understood to have been between $40,000 and $50,000.

The new owners are planning to remodel and enlarge the clubhouse and bath-house and to throw open the swimming pool and club as a high-class resort next season.

It is proposed to subdivide the acreage, which extends west and north, from the corner of Santa Anita avenue and Falling Leaf avenue and which will include some exceptionally choice residential and business property.

The property adjoins the Arcadia Army post, Ross Field, on the north, the clubhouse having been used during the occupancy of the balloon school as an officer's club.

BANK CLEARINGS IN BAY DISTRICT GROW

NEW RECORD FOR MONTH IS SET; FURTHER INCREASE EXPECTED

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

VENICE, Oct. 28.—Bank clearings for the fiscal month announced today have established a new record in Bay District totals. Exceeding by over $60,000 the totals of last month, bank clearings to date have reached $5,170,862.80. With two more days to go before the end of the month, bank officials believe that more than $500,000 will be added to the present figures. Totals for last month were $5,104,000.67.

CHECK PASSERS HELD

Men Accused By Long Beach Officers Will Be Tried There

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—Two alleged check artists wanted in this city for passing worthless checks are under arrest in two different California cities, and will be brought here for trial, it was announced today by Detectives J. B. Worley, head of the bogus check bureau of the local police department. The prisoners are: F. T Briles, 20 years old, charged with passing a total of forty-six checks here, and now under arrest at San Bernardino, and J. A. Martin, 33 years old, being held by the Richmond authorities for Long Beach. Martin is said to have passed a dozen or more worthless checks on local merchants. Briles is said to have secured more than $800 through his operations here.

COSTLY STORM

Early Rain Does Great Damage in Kern County

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 28.—Damage estimated at several thousand dollars was done by the storm which visited this county yesterday and early today, according to Harold Pomeroy, county horticultural commissioner.

The precipitation for the storm which was the first of the year amounted to .34 of an inch. The total for the same time last year was .69 of an inch.

GAMBLING AT FIESTA CHARGED

Investigation Started to Determine if Heads of Labor Union Responsible

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—An investigation to determine whether or not officials of Oil Workers' Union No. 128 are technically guilty of violations of the law in connection with the establishment of a veritable Tijuana just over the city line was launched here today by officials of the District Attorney's office, working in conjunction with local police officers. The investigation followed a raid conducted last night by county and city officers on a carnival being conducted on East Anaheim Boulevard by the oil workers.

The outstanding feature of the so-called fall fiesta was a large tent in which roulette wheels, Klondike games, chuck-a-luck and a wheel of fortune are said to have vied with each other for patronage. The games began Tuesday night and ran until Thursday night, suddenly ceasing after the operators received information that complaints had been lodged with Sheriff Traeger.

Last night investigators from the District Attorney's office, aided by local police, swooped down upon the carnival grounds, but the operators of the roulette wheels and other big gambling devices had folded up their paraphernalia and departed. The officers contented themselves with seizing a number of so-called candy wheels and similar devices at the various booths about the grounds and arrested eleven men on charges of operating gambling devices. They will be arraigned Monday morning before Justice of the Peace S. H. Underwood.

Acting on the theory that the oil workers' union which operated the carnival, was to reap a portion of the profits of the gambling concessions, local authorities will endeavor to connect the union officials with the alleged infractions of the law at the fiesta.

ISSUES OF RECALL TO BE MAILED

Long Beach Voters Will be Informed of Accusations Against City Manager

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—The outstanding issue in the recall election to be held in Long Beach on November 29, at which time voters will decide whether City Manager Charles E. Hewes is to be ousted from office, will be printed in ballot form and mailed to the voters of this city, it was announced today. These will be mailed out about November 11, it was said.

Hewes's opponents charge that he has failed to effect proper economies in municipal expenses, to solve the city's garbage problem, to provide the city with proper street repair, storm drainage, sanitation and sewage disposal, to devise plans for beach improvements and to establish public confidence in himself as city manager. It is charged by his opponents that, appointed as a nonresident, he has been unable to grasp the present needs of Long Beach or to vision its future. The City Managers' Club is the organization behind the ouster movement.

A general denial of the charges is contained in Mr. Hewes's reply, which puts emphasis on his work in effecting oil leases for the city and on an economy contention.

City Clerk Maughop expects that the registration will reach the 30,000 mark before the recall election.

Building Boom at Long Beach Makes Record

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—Long Beach building permits amounting to more than $78,000 today pushed the year's total beyond the $12,000,000 mark.

It is the first time in the history of the city that such a figure has been reached in a ten-month period. That Long Beach will establish a high record in building for the year was predicted here today by building contractors and others.

Last year's figures for the twelve months passed the $13,000,000 mark.

PROMOTER HIT BY LEGAL SNAG

Dr. Miller's Motion Picture Venture in Court

Subscriber Sues to Recover Invested Funds

Other Stockholders Also May Take Action

Orlando Edgar Miller, Ph.D., promoter of innumerable schemes here and in Europe to cure disease, relieve troubled minds, make money, build cities and produce motion pictures, appears to have struck another snag.

Eugenia Brahan, one of the many women here who bought stock in Dr. Miller's "Rellimeo Film Syndicate," yesterday filed an action to recover a part of the $482.50 she invested. W. A. Alderson, her attorney, also is framing the action on behalf of all other stockholders, and asking for a receivership.

WAILED AT PICTURES

Rellimeo is Dr. Miller's name and initials spelled backward. His proposal was to produce motion pictures psychologically or psychological motion pictures. In addressing many meetings here and in his advertising circulars he bemoaned the shortcomings of motion pictures and proposed to apply psychology to the matter, he being president of the International Society of Applied Psychology.

In Miss Brahan's action the United States National Bank of this city is made a joint defendant. This bank is the depository of the syndicate's funds as authorized by the Corporation Commissioner. The complaint sets forth that the Corporation Commissioner required Dr. Miller to deposit 80 per cent of the funds he raised by the sale of stock and to complete a certain sum on a given date. He failed in the latter requirement, the complaint declares.

NOT ENOUGH FUNDS

Furthermore, the complaint says, when Miss Brahan asked the bank to return the 80 per cent of her investment the institution refused on the ground that the money it holds, $47,385.74, is not 80 per cent of the total investments, and thus that if the remainder is not forthcoming Miss Brahan would not be entitled to 80 per cent of her particular investment.

When this difficulty first arose Dr. Miller asked the stockholders to sign waivers of the deposit requirement, but some of them refused to do so, and the present suit is the outcome.

Dr. Miller went to Portland, Or., to sell stock in the syndicate, but Mayor Baker of that city objected, even to his giving lectures on psychology. The Mayor threatened to give publicity to Dr. Miller's record in promotion, and the psychologist left town, but not without being followed to the train by creditors.

MEXICAN VENTURE

Dr. Miller's psychological cinematographical venture was begun about the time he attempted to promote a $20,000,000 "international university and co-operative city" in Mexico. All went well with the latter project until President Obregon denied claims of a government grant of land to the project, also that the Mexican government had had or would have anything to do with it.

In his motion-picture venture Dr. Miller uses the name of Atty.-Gen. Webb as counsel. He set about to capitalize the syndicate at $1,000,000.

TO EXHIBIT SURFACE SILVER AT PHOENIX

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 28.—Five hundred pounds of surface silver-lead nuggets from the Cornelia-Gunsight glory hole have been brought to Phoenix for an exhibition in the mineral department during the Arizona State Fair.

The nuggets were obtained at depths ranging from two to ten feet. Other ore samples representing varying depths will be placed in the exhibit. Excellent results showed in assays of ore samples sent to El Paso for that purpose. The Cornelia-Gunsight property comprises ten claims, sixteen miles west of Ajo.

YOUTHS ARRESTED

Thefts From Oil Workers Around Signal Hill Thought Ended

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—With the arrest here of three boys, the eldest of whom is only 13, local police believe they have put an end to a series of thefts on Signal Hill of which a number of oil workers were victims.

The boys, Frank Hoffman, 11, Guy Arnold, 13, and Walter Arnold, 11, were arrested by Detective Barney Kane of the local force and Murphy Brewer, special deputy Sheriff. After a grilling all confessed, it is said, to the theft of more than $65, several watches and a number of other articles of value.

The youths, it is charged, hang about oil derricks and when opportunity offers, steal money and jewelry from the clothing of the oil workers. They will be sent to juvenile hall.

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING GIRL

Miss Audrey Dora Barrett

Completely vanishing from her home and circle of acquaintances, Miss Audrey Dora Barrett, 635 West Twenty-Third street, has furnished a police mystery that indicates self-destruction or murder, according to her relatives.

Miss Barrett disappeared early on the morning of the 8 inst., leaving behind her all of her personal articles and considerable jewelry. Her parents, who reside at Niagara Falls, N. Y., are said to be wealthy. A brother, Lyle Barrett, has retained the local Burns detective agency to investigate the case. Detective D. G. Wiggington said yesterday that not the slightest trace of Miss Barrett could be found.

The missing woman is 33 years old and attractive. She is 5 feet, 4 inches tall, weighs 100 pounds, has blue eyes and brown hair. When last seen she wore a green dress trimmed with fur.

Reprieve Came Too Late for Safety Circle

"The pardon came too late," were the words of the old ballad and they applied yesterday to the case of the "magic circle" or traffic regulator at Wilshire Boulevard and Western avenue. The City Council ordered the circle torn down as an impediment to traffic. City workmen at once started in to tear down the circle, which was made of concrete.

Then protests began arriving at the City Hall from the Los Angeles Safety Council, the Automobile Club of Southern California, the Los Angeles Traffic Commission and other organizations asking that the executioner's ax be withheld from the circle until reconsideration could be given by the Council and declaring that the circle had been a success in eliminating acidents.

The Board of Public Works hearkened to the cry of distress from the traffic organizations and ordered the dismantling of the circle stopped. But, alas, when the board's order was delivered to the foreman on the job at the circle yesterday, the work was 99 per cent done and the circle was practically a memory. But 1 per cent of it will remain until the Council decides whether or not to rebuild it or to tell the workmen to remove the remainder and let the circle pass into history.

SIGNAL HILL JOINS GASOLINE PRODUCERS

CASING HEAD YIELD REQUIRES TRAINLOAD SHIPMENTS AT THIS TIME

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Oct. 28.—The Signal Hill oil field will soon take its place in the ranks of gasoline producers, it was indicated here today, following the announcement that gasoline is now being secured from casing heads in sufficient quantities to make train load shipments necessary.

The first full trainload of casing head gasoline from the local field will start out from the Shell Oil Company's loading racks Monday. The product comes from the Shell Company's own absorption plant.

DEATH CLAIMS WELL KNOWN REDLANDS MAN

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS Oct. 28. — Richard L. Leaverton, one of the prominent retired residents of the city, died at his home on Palm avenue this morning after an illness of a few days. He had been feeling ill for two or three weeks and an examination showed him to be suffering from a severe ulceration of the teeth. An operation failed to save his life as the poison had gone through his system.

Mr. Leaverton was one of the prominent workers of the Methodist Episcopal Church here and the funeral is to be held from the church on Monday, Rev. George B. Cliff officiating. He was a member of the official board of the church.

Mr. Leaverton is survived by his wife and daughter who lived with him at the home on West Palm. There is also a sister living in Illinois. The Leavertons came to Redlands from Illinois ten years ago.

HOSPITAL HEADS TO FIGHT AMENDMENTS

More than twenty superintendents of various hospitals in Southern California will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Methodist Hospital, under the auspices of the League for the Conservation of Public Health, for the purpose of considering final plans to campaign against the osteopathic, chiropractic and vivisection amendments to be voted upon in the coming election. The executive committee of the league includes Dr. Granville MacGowan, W. T. McArthur and Dr. Walter Brem.

FRENCH TO WAR ON PROHIBITION

Merciless Campaign Against U. S. Drys Proposed

Wine Interests Pledge Huge Sum for Fight

Pro-Liquor Propaganda Will Mark Efforts

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Oct. 28.—A fund reaching many millions of francs has been pledged by the wine interests of Europe to make a "merciless" campaign against prohibition in the United States and other countries. The fight will be waged through the newly organized International League Against Prohibition with headquarters here.

The American campaign will be carried on in co-operation with the liquor forces of the United States, it was learned today.

Organizers of the league say that they have little to fear from the prohibition forces in Europe. Their chief concern is to give every possible assistance to American wets.

TO AVOID MISTAKES

It is explained that the European forces do not want to make the same mistake that the American prohibitionists did when they came to Europe preaching prohibition. Officers in the new organization will communicate with the antidry leaders of America to offer the full support of their organization.

"We are not going to America to ask the United States to overthrow prohibition," says Jean Couprie, one of the French delegates to the Brussels convention, which organized the league. "We would probably be politely but firmly ejected if we did, and rightly so. However, we believe our cause is just as legitimate as that of the prohibitionists. American supporters of prohibition have taken the liberty of sending their apostles to Europe. We believe we have at least the right to offer our whole-hearted support to American wets if they will accept. They will find our organization amply backed financially and with a hundred million advocates back of it.

WILL SHOW TEST RESULTS

"We believe Americans are much impressed by scientific facts and investigations by unbiased professional men. Tests of the effect of the moderate use of wines and beers on the average human being are now being conducted by well-known scientists and doctors. They will be completed in several months and will be passed on to America without comment.

"Further details of the American campaign naturally await the attitude of the American wets toward our offer of co-operation."

Count Bertrand Demun, president of the new antiprohibitionist international organization, is a former Deputy and president of one of the largest champagne companies in France. He was formerly an extensive exporter to the United States.

Col. Vasquez is a native of the State of Guerrero, the home of Gov. Lugo. He will make several improvements in the department and will act under the orders of the Governor only.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—[Advertisement.

VOTERS AFRAID OF POWER ACT

Riverside Mayor, on Tour, Learns of Fear

Immense Bond Issue Declared Not Practical

Distrusted by Advocates of City Ownership

Opposition to the $500,000,000 Water and Power Act is making great headway in Ventura county, according to Mayor S. C. Evans of Riverside, who has just returned from a speaking tour through that part of the State. Though he is an ardent advocate of municipal ownership, Mayor Evans is strenuously opposed to the $500,000,000 measure to be voted on at the November election.

"It is unworkable," he declared, "and would wreck California's system of taxation. It would ruin the mutual water companies. It would create the most powerful political machine the country has ever known. The credit of the State would be irreparably injured and taxes would show a tremendous increase. Altogether it is the most dangerous measure, I believe, ever proposed in California."

LEARNED OPPOSITION

Speaking to large audiences at Ventura, Fillmore and Santa Paula, as well as to smaller gatherings at more than a score of other points in Ventura county, Mayor Evans became thoroughly acquainted with the situation in that section, and declared that many voters, believing like himself in the principles of municipal ownership, were convinced, through study of the act, that it was impracticable.

"It would be a dangerous precedent to set—to pass this detailed and ambiguous act as an amendment to the constitution. Following this precedent the constitution would soon be filled with acts which should really be a part of our statutory laws," Mayor Evans declared.

MANY TALKS SCHEDULED

Besides his Ventura county addresses Mayor Evans last week spoke before the Santa Monica Women's Club, the Kiwanis Club and Present Day Club of Riverside, and a large public meeting at Corona. He will speak before the Farm Community at Winchester on Wednesday and the Lions' Club here Thursday noon. The same evening he will make an address at La Crescenta. He will speak before the Covina Women's Club tomorrow night.

Mayor Evans declared yesterday that in debate with the proponents of the measure he had been unable to hold them to provisions of the act. "They talk about the Ontario hydroelectric development and many other things, but not about this measure," he declared. "They talk principles, but not ways and means."

POSTAL MEN PROMISE TO SPEED MAIL

Congestion Discussed at Luncheon by Visiting Government Aides

Pledging their full support to improve mail transportation facilities in this city, Paul Henderson, Second Assistant Postmaster-General, and a group of postoffice officials declared their intention of cooperating with the local postoffice department, at a luncheon held at the Beverly Hills Hotel yesterday noon where they were guests of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

At the meeting, presided over by W. T. Bishop, first vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, local transportation troubles and plans for the relief of the present difficulties in the mail service were discussed. Motley H. Flint, former postmaster of this city, addressed the gathering on increased mail business.

The party, which included W. H. Riddell, general superintendent, J. H. Edwards, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, Edwin McGrath, superintendent of the eighth division, and John H. Edwards, was taken on an automobile tour through the city after luncheon, under direction of the local chamber committee, including W. T. Bishop, F. P. McComas, J. P. Burke, M. De Brabant, Morris M. Rathbun, Motley H. Flint, Charles Bayer, Guy Adams and Frank Walsh.

The delegation will leave tonight for San Francisco after an afternoon's inspection of the orange groves in Southern California, through the courtesy of the local mail employees.

Wife Declines to Adopt Girl Given Gifts

After buying his secretary a car, furs, luggage, wrist watch, a silver toilet set and furniture, Calvin E. Woodside, wealthy bond broker, suggested to Mrs. Fannie G. Woodside that they adopt the young woman, the complain in a separate maintenance suit filed yesterday by the wife states. The young woman, referred to as Ethel Lane Kysella, was not adopted.

Mrs. Woodside charges that her husband falsely accused her of poisoning his food. Some time later, he said, the complain reads, that he desired his freedom more than anything else in the world and that if his wife did not sue him for divorce within twenty-four hours, he would commit suicide.

Mr. Woodside is also said to have taken automobile trips to San Diego with Mrs. Kysella, who is also referred to as Ethel Lane and to have spent many of his evenings in her company. The complaint says that the husband is earning $12,000 a year and has community property valued at $80,000. Mrs. Woodside asks for $400 a month support for herself and daughters.

TRUCK LEASING NOT APPROVED

Mayor Disapproves of Act by Councilmen

"Cold Feet" Are Predicted; May Drop Matter

Proposed Contracts Not in Open, Says Cryer

Mayor Cryer yesterday sent to the City Council without his signature contracts for the leasing of sixty trucks for the engineering department, involving an expenditure by the city of $207,831.17, the Mayor declaring in his message accompanying the agreements that the contracts were illegal as their intent was to bind the city to a purchase of the trucks, although the transaction, the Mayor stated, "was thinly disguised as 'leases.'"

The Mayor also disapproves of the contracts on the ground that the award for the trucks was not made to the lowest bidder, as required by the city charter. The Times exclusively predicted one week ago that the Mayor would refuse to sign the truck contracts.

The present program of the Council, which has anticipated disapproving action by the Mayor, is to instruct President Criswell to sign the contracts on behalf of the city, as is provided for by the city charter. Councilman Mallard will vote against these instructions being given, just as he has voted against the approval of the contracts.

There is a possibility that in view of the City Attorney's warning in September that the Council must take the responsibility for its action, and of the Mayor's message, that the Council will get "cold feet" on the proposition and drop the entire matter.

CONTRACTS DISCUSSED

The Council, upon receiving nine bids for the sixty trucks, after much discussion, divided the order equally between the General Motors, Moreland and Garford truck companies. Of this action, the Mayor in his message said:

"Under the charter it was incumbent upon the Council to determine the lowest responsible bidder and lease or purchase from that bidder. If this was not done the contracts are void. This does not mean that the truck offered for the lowest price must necessarily be selected. Quality must also be considered. But in this instance the award was made to three separate bidders, each of whom was awarded one-third of the number of trucks to be supplied.

"In other words, 3-ton dump trucks are rented from the Garford Motor Company at $1560.45 per truck per annum; from the General Motors Truck Company at $1833.33 per truck per annum; and from the Moreland Motor Truck Company at $1656.52 per truck per annum. It seems inconceivable that the Council could determine that each one of these three bids was exactly the equivalent of the other and that each of the three was 'the lowest responsible bidder.' Considered as a rental proposition, is it as advantageous to the city to rent General Motor Truck Company trucks at $1833.33 per annum as to rent Garfords at $1560.45 per annum?

"If, all things considered, Garford trucks at a rental of $1560.45 per truck per annum and at a purchase price of $4681.35 per truck, was a better value than General Motors Truck Company's truck at a rental of $1833.33 per truck per annum and at a purchase price of $5082.10 per truck, then no award could legally be made to the General Motors Truck Company.

"There is no finding that the bids of the three bidders selected are the lowest. I think the splitting up of the contract among three bidders was in violation of the charter and that for this additional reason the proposed contracts would be void."

LEASE SUBTERFUGE

Great emphasis is laid by the Mayor in his message on the point that, in his opinion, the contracts are not for a bona fide leasing of trucks, as the contracts state, but for purchasing them. The Mayor said:

"While the contracts submitted are written in the form of a lease with the option to purchase, I have reached the conclusion that the real intention is to consummate a sale and purchase of the trucks upon installment payments.

"In other words, the city is obligated under these contracts to pay the exact amount named as the purchase price of the trucks, only it is called 'rental' instead of purchase money. Does anyone doubt that the so-called 'option' to purchase the trucks will be exercised? To fail to exercise it and keep the trucks at the end of the three-year period would simply be to hand back to the 'lessors' sixty-six trucks for which the city had already paid as 'rental' the full purchase price, amounting to over $200,000.

"As already stated, these contracts do create a present debt for the full amount of the purchase price of the trucks. There is no future contingency upon which the payment of this money depends. The only contingent or optional feature of these contracts is the option which the city has to say whether or not it will keep the trucks. But this option or contingency does not in any manner affect the amount of money to be paid. Under the leases the city must pay the amount of the purchase price whether it elects to keep the trucks or not."

BRIBERY CASE UP TOMORROW

Asserted Dry Law Violators to be Arraigned

Accused of Giving Money to Prohibition Agent

Entrapment Defense Will be Used, Report

Morris Orsatti and J. R. Johnson, indicted on a charge of bribing a Federal prohibition agent, will be arraigned before Judge Bledsoe tomorrow morning, but it is understood that a week's time will be asked within which to plead. In the meantime a demurrer to the indictment will be filed and argued.

U. S. Dist.-Atty. Burke says it is his intention to clear the docket of the local court, that there may be an early trial of the case. That probably means that it will be set for some time in December. Both Orsatti and Johnson are at liberty on the bond heretofore given, $35,000 in the case of Orsatti, and $5000 for Johnson.

It is understood that the defense of entrapment will be employed, especially in the case of Orsatti, counsel for the accused basing their fight on the decision of the higher Federal courts in the appeals of Sam Yick and Wu Weh, convicted of violating the immigration laws. It is claimed that the government became a party to the violation of the prohibition law by accepting the bribery money from Orsatti, conniving with him to violate the law.

Just how far such a defense will prove effective depends on the circumstances appearing at the final hearing. Prohibition Agent Dolley had the advice of U. S. Dist.-Atty. Burke and others, before he met Orsatti by appointment at the Alhambra, and the advice he acted upon is presumed to have been sound.

HOLLYWOOD CARNIVAL IS LOOMING UP

Event to be Held in Bowl Next Saturday Night Will Keep Woodcrafters Busy

High revelry and a full quota of fun-making are scheduled for the Halloween Carnival to be held at the Hollywood Bowl next Saturday afternoon and evening. The affair is planned by and for the members of the Western Woodcraft Association, numbering some 750 or 1000 boys, for whom is set an ideal of outdoor life and standards designed to develop them into a fine manhood both physically and morally.

Mrs. Roy Koster is chairman of the carnival executive committee and under the direction of Harry C. James, chief of the association, a group of two hundred or so prominent men and women are lending every effort to make the huge carnival a success.

Side shows, fortune-telling, dancing, a fish pond and many other diverting pastimes are being programmed. A variety of booths and concessions will serve to provide amusement and pleasure. Each day new events are being added to the already generous entertainment offerings.

One of the novelties will be the white elephant booth, wherein will be sold all kinds of odd and useful articles, donated for the occasion. The costume parade also promises to be interesting as well as spectacular, while prizes offered for the best costumes will insure some real competition.

Ask Funds to Clear Debt on Home for Aged

An appeal to the public for finances to clear up the indebtedness on a home for poor aged persons is being made by the Sunshine Homes Association. The home in question is located on West Avenue 42. Indorsement of the campaign has been given by the Social Service Commission of Los Angeles.

The Sunshine Homes Association is a nonsectarian Christian charity, incorporated under the laws of California. Dependent aged persons are given care and companionship. Contributions should be sent to the Sunshine Homes Association offices, 114 Coulter Building, 213 South Broadway.

Laguna Will Give Carnival to Celebrate

The Laguna district will stage a carnival November 15 to 19 in celebration of the completion of the new $100,000 boulevard. Booths will be operated by Whittier Boulevard merchants, the gross receipts to go to the Laguna fire department.

Plans for the celebration are being made by the Laguna Social Club. John Kuntz, chairman of the Laguna Fire Commission, will be in charge of the festivities, assisted by Fire Chief C. G. Jones and Merrill M. Tobey.

DISCLAIMS PARENTAGE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST LOUIS, Oct. 28.—The second suit in which a husband disclaims the parentage of his wife's child was yesterday filed in court by Edgar Carlin, 8933 West Pine Boulevard, against his wife, Mrs. Merle F. Carlin, a school teacher. Carlin asks for a divorce and questions the child's parentage. Mrs. Carlin has filed a cross bill asking for a divorce and denying the allegations of Carlin.

NEGROES IN FIGHT FOR RICHARDSON

Woolwine's Resurrection of Dead Issues Fails to Interest Women

A committee of negro women, workers in civic, social and welfare activities, yesterday declared that they had failed to be converted by the blandishments of Thomas Lee Woolwine and were enthusiastically supporting the candidacy of Friend W. Richardson for Governor.

This committee, which includes some of the best-known women of Los Angeles' negro population, indicates that Woolwine's resurrection of and attacks on dead issues have failed to have the desired effect in the quarter where it was expected to do the most good for the Democratic nominee.

Among those who are working for Mr. Richardson's election are: Mesdames E. R. Baldwin, C. A. Bass, Katarine J. Barr, Eva Carter Buckner, H. B. Busby, Harriet Brown, Wm. E. Easton, Gwendolyn Gordon, A. Hill, Clara Hurlburt, Tina Little, Fred Mason, J. W. Palmer, Alice Patton, Mary Reid, M. B. Robinson, J. M. Scott, Lulu Slaughter, Dr. Vada Somerville, Eloise B. Thompson, Beatrice S. Thompson, B. T. Washington, W. T. Wilkins and a number of others.

Orphans Enjoy Great Time at Loew's Theater

"I kin get back to where I live alright but it takes monek," remarked one lone orphan lad who had seen about six summers, yesterday after he left Loew's State Theater. He was the only one who went astray out of 1400 orphan children whom Loew's State Theater entertained. The lad was given the fare to Gardena and the last seen of him he was headed toward the station munching an Eskimo pie and carrying some ten "lolly-pops."

Fourteen hundred youngsters assembled from the various orphanages at the Central Police Station from there they paraded down Broadway to Loew's escorted by the police and fireman's band. At the theater they were unloaded with the assistance of police officers sent by Capt. Heath.

For the first part of the program, Mrs. Don Philippini sang and Ethel O'Donnel sang "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" written by Charlotte Laskey Waller, a local girl. After that the children saw Bull Montana in person and in his latest comedy "A Punctured Prince." Then came "Forget-Me-Not" and after that Bessie Love, who plays a little orphan girl in that picture, sang and played for the kiddies.

When it was all over the children filed out and were treated to Eskimo pies and "lolly-pops" then they each received a large dunce-cap as a special present from Wesley Barry, whose picture "Rags to Riches" comes to Loew's next week.

PATROL TO GIVE DANCE

ACHING CORNS EASILY REMOVED

How Anybody Can End Tortures of Corns and Callouses at Once.

Many an otherwise pleasant hour is made agony by the aching and stinging of corns. These painful growths interfere with walking, dancing and other pastimes and have a bad effect on the nerves.

This suffering, however, is needless. All drug stores have now a "paint" which stops the pain of corns and callouses almost at once and causes them to soon dry up and fall off. It is called Cactus Corn Compound.

A small bottle of Cactus Corn Compound, costing only a few cents at any drug store, is sufficient to end dozens of corns. Get it and be relieved. Your druggist will refund your money if it fails. —[Advertisement.

Santa Clara Wins Game by Close Margin

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) Oct. 28.—After being outplayed in the first half of the game by the University of Arizona, Santa Clara turned the tables and nosed out the visiting team here today, 8 to 7.

Arizona shone particularly in the line in the first half. The Wildcat's fullback, Captain Hobbs, scored for his team by a touchdown following a series of plays through left tackle.

In the third quarter Halloran, Santa Clara fullback, received a punt on Arizona's 35-yard line and dashed around right end for a touchdown. Noonan failed to kick the goal.

Santa Clara's second score was a safety in the last quarter. Santa Clara carried the ball 40 yards on line plunges to the shadow of the Arizona goal posts, where the visitors held the local team for downs. McClellan, Arizona's left end, was forced to kick from behind his own goal line, but the ball was fumbled and Logan of Santa Clara fell on it, a safety resulting.

MILITARYMEN BATTLE OTHERS ON GRIDIRON

The Los Angeles Military Academy was squelched on the home field yesterday afternoon by the Oneonta Military Academy team, by the disastrous score of 38 to 0. Walton, Oneonta right half, was the star of the whole affair. Three end runs made a total gain of 200 yards and three touchdowns.

Although the Los Angeles Academy had such stars as Garcia, a well-known local athlete, and Green who played quarter, they were unable to put the oval in a position where a tally could be made. The Oneonta team has not yet been scored on and is trying to schedule some harder games than have been played this season.

Notre Dame Winner Over Southerners

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Oct. 28.—Notre Dame's football warriors for the first time today invaded the Southland and with an aerial attack too perfect for Georgia Technical's Golden Tornado to solve, won 13 to 3, before a crowd estimated at 18,000.

Tech fought hard to stave off defeat, ripping through their opponent's line many times during the first half only to fumble when within striking distance of a touchdown. The Tornado's field goal came in the second quarter after Brewster Hunt and McDonough had rushed the ball to Notre Dame's 30-yard line. Brewster dropped back five yards and drop kicked the goal.

Notre Dame's second string backfield had been in action up until this time, but after this play Castner went at full; Miller and Crawley at halves, Stuhl-Dreher at quarter. Capt. Carberry of the Indiana eleven was injured in the first quarter and was forced to retire for the remainder of the game. Capt. Barron of Tech was hurt when tackled around the neck a few minutes later, but he remained in the battle.

Think Bandit Stole Papers Before Death

Possibility that the oil station bandit killed last Monday night on South Grand avenue by Edward Larke is not James A. Loftus of Steubenville, O., was being investigated last night by the police after the Washington Undertaking Company received the following telegram from the supposed uncle of the slain man who lives in the Ohio city:

"My nephew, James A. Loftus, is alive and well in Akron, O. Send me a photo of dead party. I believe I know who obtained birth certificate falsely.

"S. A. LOFTUS,
"Dep. U. S. Marshal."

In the pockets of the slain bandit the police found a birth certificate in the name of James A. Loftus, and a passport to Australia. The dead man was further identified by F. E. Kelly, 5623 Sunset Boulevard, as James A. Loftus. Mr. Kelly said he had known Loftus in Bakersfield and also in Steubenville.

RIO BROTHERS MADE WHISKY, IS CHARGE

NAME SUGGESTS MILDER BEVERAGE, BUT OFFICERS FIND STILL

Tony and William Rio, formerly of Chicago, were arrested at Eighth and Marine streets, Santa Monica, late last night, on charges of violating the local liquor ordinance. Detective Larry Beiger, representing the Federal Prohibition Director's office, aided by Detectives Sandlin and Carrillo, made the arrests. They seized a ten-gallon whisky still, a large grape press and two gallons of moonshine.

FRED W. CARL DIES

Death Occurs Suddenly at Hollywood Residence

Fred W. Carl, aged 55, Hollywood real estate operator, died suddenly at the family residence at 1545 Formosa avenue, last night. Death was pronounced due to an affection of the heart.

Besides his widow the dead man is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Harry Wilson, Miss Bethel Carl and a son, Harry Carl, all of Hollywood.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

PLAN SPOOKY LUNCH

Electric Club Will Enjoy Special Halloween Program

"Mystifying, mystical, mysterious, goblinesque and ghostly" is the way officials of the Electric Club describe the Halloween program to be given at noon tomorrow in the ballroom of the Alexandria Hotel. Among other features of the program, according to D. C. Pence, chairman of the entertainment committee, will be "bewitching community singing and spiritual music transformed, rendered by Edison company's witches."

The bride went to the altar with her father. She was a graceful and lovely figure in her draped gown of white duchesse satin, made with a court train and trimmed about the low-cut bodice and on the skirt with rose point lace and embroidered with pearls. Her tulle veil was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, cyclamen and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Kenneth B. Wilson was matron of honor and wore turquoise blue satin charmeuse trimmed with silver lace and a long garland of silver rosebuds fastened at the waist.

Herndon J. Norris of Prescott, Ariz., stood with his brother.

Six girls, wearing gowns in pastel shades of pink, apricot, green and blue, formed an aisle through which the bridal party passed. They were Mrs. Charles Sturgeon, Mrs. Jean Blanche, Misses Elizabeth Davidson, Lura Hodge, Ruth Staub and Agnes Polsdorfer. Each of them carried a bouquet designed with baby chrysanthemums in autumn shade that framed a huge chrysanthemum in copper tones.

Supper was served after the ceremony and the couple left for their honeymoon trip. Opon their return they will reside in their new home at 433 South Harvard Boulevard.

Dr. Norris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Norris of Prescott, Ariz., who came on for the wedding. Mr. Norris is an attorney for the Santa Fe Railroad.

The bride is a graduate of Marlborough and of Mt. Vernon Seminary in Washington, D. C., and spent a year in New York. Dr. Lobingier, her father, is a well-known physician of the city, and Mrs. Lobingier is president of the Friday Morning Club and one of the most prominent club women of the State. At the wedding she greeted the guests in a Paris gown of black net embroidered in peacock sequins and worn over peacock satin.

Dr. Norris is a graduate of Yale and Columbia and is practicing medicine here.

News From Abroad

Lucien Brunswig, who has spent the last eight months traveling through Egypt, Algeria, Southern and Central Europe with Mrs. Brunswig and their debutante daughter, Miss Marguerite, has recently returned here, leaving Mrs. Brunswig and Miss Brunswig in Paris, where they will remain for another year. Miss Brunswig is a student at the Sorbonne University of Paris, where she is attending a series of lectures. She and her mother are domiciled at the Hotel Berkeley, Champs Elysees, where they are neighbors to Commander and Mrs. Randolff Huntington Miner and Miss Kathryn Ramsey of Los Angeles.

Complimenting Debutantes

As a courtesy to Mr. and Mrs. William K. Brackenridge's lovely daughters, the Misses Marian and Margaret Brackenridge, who recently made their formal debut, Miss Susan Valentine has issued invitations for a bridge tea on November 6 at her parents' home in Pasadena.

Mrs. Leonardt at Home

Mrs. Carl Leonhardt of 2 Chester Place, who, with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Powell, has been traveling in Europe for six months, returned to her home here the first of the week, coming by way of Canada. Mrs. Powell, who was met by Mr. Powell in New York, will return in three weeks after visiting some of the eastern cities.

Mrs. Felix McGinnis, Mrs. Leonardt's other daughter, is planning to entertain for the travelers at the new home which she and Mr. McGinnis have taken at 534 South Virgil. They have just moved there from their home at 4025 West Twenty-fifth street.

At Midwick Country Club

Mr. and Mrs. Myron Etienne of Oak Knoll, Pasadena, gave a dinner last evening at the Midwick Country Club Halloween dinner-dance, having as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Young (Miss Mary Dockweiler,) Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hays Busch, Mr. and Mrs. Keil Pulliam, Mr. and Mrs. Hamer Jamieson, Mrs. June Braun Schultz, Miss Betty Bettinger, sister of the hostess, Miss Rosario Dockweiler, John Pike, Jack Chalice, and Preston Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Etienne attended a box party at the Pasadena football game in the afternoon.

Mrs. Bayer Returns

Mrs. Alfred Bayer, who went East to place her daughter, Miss Leontine, in a New York boarding school, returned Wednesday to her home in South Alvarado street after spending two months visiting eastern cities. Miss Bayer is planning to come home for the holiday season.

Country Club Tea

Mrs. John Percival Hunt had twenty guests at a delightful bridge tea Monday afternoon at the Los Angeles Country Club. The affair was given for Mrs. A. L. Bass who, with her little daughter, is here from Louisville, Ky., visiting her sister, Mrs. Howard L. Grace of South Kenmore avenue. Mrs. Bass has been elaborately feted during her stay here, and is planning to return to her home in two weeks.

Back From Pleasure Trip

Mrs. Homer Eades, who has been absent for the past three months visiting in Kansas City and in Texas, has returned to her home, 601 Virgil avenue.

At Flintridge Club.

The Flintridge Country Club, beautifully decorated with autumn flowers, was chosen for two delightful affairs Tuesday. In the afternoon a reception was given there by Mrs. William Parrish Jeffries and her sister, Mrs. W. L. Graves, for Mrs. M. F. Le Roy and daughter, Miss Dora Le Roy, who have recently arrived from Iowa. A luncheon was also given at which both the honor guests and the hostesses were entertained by Mrs. Stephen C. Hubbell. Fifty friends who received with Mrs. Jeffries and Mrs. Graves were also Mrs. Hubbell's luncheon guests. Two hundred invitations were issued for the reception.

Mrs. Le Roy, who is a sister of Mrs. Hubbell, is planning to make her home here and has taken a house at 552 South Gramercy Place.

Evenings Lengthen—Home Ties Strengthen

Now comes the season of longer evenings spent in the home and the Living Room becomes the family shrine, dimming the lure of outside attractions.

Friends, too, drop in with added frequency and to their mental appraisal your Living Room will be constantly subjected.

This is a most appropriate time to embellish the appointments of the much-to-be-used Living Room. It is a doubly opportune time because never in its history has the "California" offered more luxurious and inviting furniture pieces for the Living Room at prices that reflect perfectly the policy of the "California" for honesty and fairness.

Value comparisons are invited among the entire stocks here—from the moderately priced to the most luxurious.

Exclusive Greeting Cards For Christmas

Orders should be placed now

The engraved Christmas Greeting Card skillfully executed and giving original expression to an appropriate sentiment, is finding ever-increasing favor in friendship circles.

Individuality is, however, a very definite essential in the Greeting Card for the sincerity of the sentiment is measured to a very large degree by the smartness of the embellishment.

Feagans & Co., long famous for the exclusive character of their Greeting Card suggestions and for the superiority of their engraving, present very unusual and extensive selections in new Greeting Cards for this Christmas Season.

Where so desired the family coat of arms may be illuminated in proper colors in connection with the greetings, thus assuring an added touch of exclusiveness.

The Feagans Department of Heraldry, which is operated in connection with the Feagans Department of Stationery, makes this special service possible.

It is important, however, that orders for Christmas Greeting Cards, whether the family coat of arms is used or not, should be placed now.

Feagans & Co. will welcome the privilege of showing you the new designs.

Mrs. Charles O. Nourse entertained with a small tea Friday afternoon.

Betrothal Revealed

Added interest was given to the buffet supper-dance at which Lieut. and Mrs. Harry Montgomery entertained Wednesday evening at their home at the Army post in Arcadia in honor of Col. and Mrs. T. A. Baldwin, when the betrothal of Mrs. Florence Parke Day of South Van Ness avenue and Capt. Garth Haddock was announced. Capt. Haddock is leaving soon for the East. Col. and Mrs. Baldwin are going to Washington shortly, also. Mrs. Baldwin is leaving today ahead of Col. Baldwin and is taking her young daughter with her to place her in an eastern school. Forty guests were at the party.

Last evening Mrs. Day entertained with a supper-dance in honor of Col. and Mrs. Baldwin and had a company of fifty. The affair was arranged as a Hallowe'en function. Mrs. Day and Capt. Haddock have not set the date for their wedding.

Here from Bay City

Paul E. Curtis of San Francisco is a visitor in the city and is being much entertained by old friends. He came here on business in connection with moving his art studio on Western avenue to its new quarters at 640 South Figueroa street.

Opening Dinner-Dance

Of exceeding brilliance was the annual opening ball and dinner given last evening at the Maryland Hotel in Pasadena. The affair, which predicted a fall and winter season of much interest and gayety, was suggestive of the Halloween spirit interpreted in the artistically unique favors and decorations. Over 300 places were arranged for dinner and the guests included society folk of Los Angeles and Pasadena, as well as prominent eastern visitors and many who had come down from the north for the football game at the Tournament of Roses Field.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. W. Moore had as their guests at dinner Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ashburn, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dye, Dr. and Mrs. Irving Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Prisk, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pitney, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Runyon, Mrs. S. Mitchner and Arthur Dodson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hargis of North Kenmore avenue entertained a party of twenty-four and at the table, where Miss M. B. Gilbert and Miss Elizabeth Milligan of Altadena were cohostesses, covers for thirty-eight were placed.

Miss Ruth Davis of Alhambra had as her guests Miss Lyle Rooks, Miss Isabel Percival, Miss Gene Kentle, Walter Robertson, Con Supple and Raymond E. McCrea.

Other hosts of the evening were Joseph Caunt, Mrs. Phillip Lind, W. G. Huller, L. A. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Singer, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shuford, O. J. McQuiston, Mrs. Frank Rose, W. H. Wills, Miss Priscilla Gedsden, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Churchill, O. L. Demond, Miss N. Forbes, H. D. Gibson and Miss Helen White.

Col. Davis Abroad

Col. Jefferson Davis of Coronado who has been abroad since August in connection with the Air Service of the American Army, will finish his special detail this month and will then go to Italy to spend several weeks on the Riveria and in France before returning home. He is now in Berlin.

Col. Davis was designated by the Air Service as legal adviser and assistant to the military attache at our Embassy in Berlin to attend the Congress on International Aviation Legislation at Prague, Czecho-Slovakia. The sessions of the congress, which have been devoted the drawing up of an International Air Code, are now ended and he is making a special study of the air laws of foreign countries before returning to California.

He has just been made a member of the Committee Juridique International de l'Aviation and was selected as one of the representatives of our country on the executive committee of the Comite. The others are Governor S. E. Baldwin of Connecticut and James Brown Scott of Washington, D. C.

Daughter Is Guest

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Mitchell of 1001 South Alvarado are back from a five months tour through Europe. Returning by way of the Canadian Pacific, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell stopped at Portland to visit their daughter, Mrs. Ella B. Haw who accompanied them home and will remain until after the holidays.

Wedding Date Announced

At a delightful breakfast and bridge party given by Miss Dorothy Rogers for Miss Meldon Schu, who will be married on Wednesday to Chauncey Dekker, the wedding date of Miss Kathryn Hardin and Norman C. Reeves was announced for Jan. 3, 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman at Home

Mr. and Mrs. J. Herman have leased the William E. Hacker home at 2091 West Adams street, while the Hackers are sojourning in Europe.

Back from the North

Mrs. William J. Pearson of 694 South New Hampshire avenue has returned from a brief trip to San Francisco.

Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schwanbeck of Eagle Rock announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Elizabeth Schwanbeck, to Vernon M. Spencer of Hixon, Mich.

Hallowe'en Carnival

Society will lend an active hand in the success of the big Hallowe'en Carnival to be held by the members of the Western Woodcraft Association next Saturday afternoon and evening at the Hollywood Bowl, under the general direction of Harry C. James and Mrs. Roy Koster, chairman of the carnival executive committee.

Diverting pastimes are being arranged for the event while entertainment features and a score or more interesting booths will offer their share to the pleasure. A costume parade for the young folk will be staged and prizes will be awarded the best and most novel in this event, while the parade as a whole will lend to the Mardi Gras spirit of the occasion.

Among the many novel concessions and booths which will be scattered about the grounds will be the "white elephant" booth. What one doesn't want and can't use may be just what someone else does want and can use. Gifts to the "white elephant" booth from those who can't use an article will be in turn sold to the person who needs it—and vice versa.

Mrs. James E. Woolwine, chairman of the committee on patrons and patronesses, has as sponsors of the gala event:

Mrs. Joseph F. Sartori, Mrs. T. E. Newlin, Mrs. J. J. A. Van Kaathoven, Mrs. Albert Krutcher, Cleveland Moffett, Mrs. William Rogers, Mrs. C. J. Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Glass, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dana Lombard, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky, Mr. and Mrs. Carmen R. Runyan, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk of the summer, was presented with a silver cream and sugar set, Mrs. L. C. House making the presentation speech. Other guests attending the luncheon were Mrs. Will S. Fawcett, Mrs. C. E. Paris, Mrs. F. E. Albright, Mrs. Don C. Bitler, Mrs. Rodney Hermon, Mrs. C. E. Coggins, Mrs. C. H. Richmond, Mrs. W. F. Mosher, Mrs. F. B. Fuller, Mrs. Howard P. Meyer and Mrs. Robert J. Welch.

Woman's Club Meets

The Calipatria Woman's Club met Friday afternoon for the opening meeting of the season. Mrs. S. R. Van Dyke was elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, who is now living at Calexico. Other officers elected were Mrs. Harry Winterburn, recording secretary, and Mrs. Ira D. Aten, corresponding secretary. An excellent musical program follower the business session. The artists participating were Mrs. John V. Scott, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. J. L. Stewart and Mrs. F. A. Groger. Refreshments were served at the close of the program.

Bridge Luncheon

One of the most attractive affairs of the week in Calexico was the bridge luncheon given by Mrs. George Pulliam last Friday. Halloween decorations adorned the luncheon table and the rooms of the house. The prize scores of the afternoon were made by Mrs. Rodney Clark, Mrs. A. M. Shenk, Mrs. Herbert Going and Mrs. Sidney McHarg. Other guests were Mrs. George Willoughby, Mrs. Dan A. Leonard, Mrs. W. Lorenz, Mrs. L. B. Kirby, Mrs. W. B. Hammers, Mrs. P. P. Anderson, Mrs. L. N. Rockwood, Mrs. Karl Edmunds, Mrs. E. C. Stevens, Mrs. M. C. Atchison, Mrs. Al Richardson and Mrs. Harry Wright.

Circle Elects Officers

At the opening meeting of the Ladies' Circle of the Community Church of Calexico, Mrs. W. B. Hammers was elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. H. B. Little, who is leaving the city. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. R. L. Glasby. Prof. Y. P. Rothwell gave the address of the afternoon, discussing "Work Among Spanish-speaking People." He urged the study of the Spanish language for economic as well as ethical reasons, and as the surest way of hastening better relations between the American and Mexican peoples. Mrs. George Willoughby was heard in delightful vocal selections. Following the program a social hour was enjoyed during which refreshments were served by the hostess of the day, Mrs. F. H. Essert.

Mrs. Scott is Hostess

Mrs. Charles E. Scott of El Centro was hostess Monday afternoon to the members of the twice-told tales section of the Woman's Ten Thousand Club. Dr. Frances Elliott told the story of the day, giving an excellent review of "This Freedom," by A. S. M. Hutchinson. Discussion of current events followed the story. Refreshments were served by the hostess during the social hour at the close of the program. Those present were Mrs. Burritt S. Allen, Mrs. W. W. Apple, Mrs. F. B. Fuller, Mrs. R. B. Kepley, Miss Agnes Ferris, Mrs. C. W. Barton, Mrs. J. F. Baker, Mrs. Forrest B. Kutz, Mrs. Clarence E. Conant, Mrs. Roy Thompson, Mrs. Don C. Bitler, Mrs. Rodney Hermon, Mrs. Isabella Hermon, Mrs. Ben Garland, Mrs. T. H. Gebbie, Mrs. J. S. Larew, Mrs. W. H. Lavayea and Dr. Frances Elliott.

Charming Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Al Cravath entertained with a charming dinner party Friday evening at their home in Holtville. The table was prettily centered with yellow and white chrysanthemums, the same color scheme being carried out in the favors and place cards. Covers were laid for Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Lester, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Harden, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beale, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Fahring, M. C. Blanchard and Mr. and Mrs. Cravath.

Bridge Supper Given

Miss Evelyn Bowman of El Centro entertained with a brid supper Wednesday evening at her home on State street. The table was charmingly decorated with a huge basket of marigolds and ferns and Halloween motifs adorned the place and score cards. The prize scores were made by Mrs. Robert Welch, Mrs. William Reed and Miss Ione Sammons. The guests were Mrs. Keys Mitchell, Mrs. Peter MacDonald, Mrs. Perry Rogers, Mrs. Harry MacKim, Mrs. John McNeece, Mrs. William Reed, Mrs. John Chesebrough, Mrs. Robert Welch, Miss Mildred McGovney, Miss Rose Sammons, Miss Irene Brooks, Miss Mildred Brewer and Miss Ione Sammons.

Celebrates Birthday

In celebration of her birthday, Miss May Sweet entertained at a dinner party Wednesday evening at her home in Brawley. Pink roses and foliage were combined in charming floral decoration and places were marked for Mrs. Sweet, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Bangle, Miss Lela Sweet, Miss May Juvenal, Miss Mary Hovley, Miss Amelia Hovley, Miss Margaret Bangle, Miss Margaret Hovley and the hostess, Miss May Sweet.

Dinner Party Given

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lavayea of El Centro presided over an enjoyable dinner party Friday evening at their home on Sandalwood Drive, at which marigold and cornflowers were employed in effective table decoration. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Grow of Redlands, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Anderson and Miss Ethel Anderson, all of Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Anderson.

Lander-Martian Wedding

Miss Lucille Watson Lander and Ernest Hartwell Martin were married on the 21st inst. at the home of the bride's aunts, Mrs. Caroline Lamb and Miss Harriett J. Watson, 1726 North Boulevard. The Rev. P. Ryland officiated.

The bride attended by Mrs. Harriet Lander, wore a gown of ivory satin and her bridal boquet was of pink rosebuds. She was given in marriage by her brother, Warren J. Lander.

A petite ring bearer was Mary Simmons of Long Beach and Little Lois Lander, niece of the bride was flower girl. Owen V. Lewis attended the groom.

The couple will spend their honeymoon, visiting friends in San Francisco and will return here to reside in North Harvard Boulevard where they are building a home.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Annah E. Lander of Hollywood. She is formerly of New York.

Entertain in New Home

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene F. Storke are at home in their residence, 1202 Westchester Place, where they entertained forty guests last Saturday evening. A literary and musical program was arranged by Miss Mary Isabelle Alpaugh, Miss Helen Sheehan and Mrs. E. L. R. Wallace. The affair marks the first of a series which is being planned for the winter by Dr. and Mrs. Storke.

Will Winter Here

Mrs. Edward Mann, who has been visiting here from Texas with her attractive daughters, the Misses Ruth, Jane and Gladys, has planned to spend the winter in Los Angeles, and will be joined shortly by Mr. Mann. Both Miss Ruth and Miss Gladys are popular members of the Dallas debutante set, while Miss Jane, who is still a subdeb, will not be formally introduced to society until next winter.

The Manns are leasing a house at 645 Catalina street.

Wed in San Francisco

The marriage of Miss Helen Yoder of Kansas City and Ira Malleroy Remsen of Boston, which occurred in San Francisco recently is of interest to their many friends here in social and artistic circles. Miss Yoder was a much-feted visitor here last year and Mr. Remsen, who is a distinguished writer and painter, spent two years at Santa Monica, prior to leaving last February for Carmel, where he has been interested in making a series of sketches and in playwriting. The couple will make their home temporarily in Carmel.

Betrothal Told

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Porter of 2620 Gleason avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Julia Porter, to Paul Chandler Williams of Los Angeles. Both are members of pioneer families here. The wedding will take place in December at the Boyle Heights Christian Church.

Gives Midnight Supper

Miss Ellen Galpin gave a midnight supper party at her interesting home in Eagle Rock Thursday evening for the cast of "The Money Moon," a play being given by the Municipal Players, of whom she is director. The party followed the performance given under the auspices of the Eagle Rock Community Players. Included were Miss Miriam Meredith, Miss Louise Phelan, Miss Dorothy Thickett, Miss Mary Shipeman, Miss Marjorie Capron, Miss Evelyn Nair, Miss Lloy Galpin, George Meredith, Bruce Boteler, Wyclif Taylor, Christian J. O'Connor, Arthur Egbert, Howard Humphrey, J. G. Chellew, George Gerlach and Paul Vickers.

Giving Mah Jongg Parties

Anticipating the mah jongg tea to be given at the Ebell Club November 18, a number of hostesses have been entertaining with Mah Jongg parties. Mrs. Harry Cardell has given a series of such teas at her home in South Manhattan Place, having as her assistants Mrs. Harvey L. Deardorff, Mrs. W. A. Moses, Mrs. Laura Joyce, Mrs. Thomas Oakley, Mrs. J. C. McCormick, Mrs. Zeb Terry, Mrs. H. G. Roberston, Mrs. A. B. Griffith, Mrs Frank Jean, Mrs. William C. Warmington, and Mrs. C. P. Blackmore, who is the hostess's daughter.

Mrs. William C. Warmington had a skilled mah jongg teacher to give instructions in the subtleties of the ancient game at a tea which she gave at her home in Manhattan Place last Wednesday afternoon and she has issued invitations for a similar affair for next Tuesday afternoon.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Maybell Baker of Argyle avenue, Hollywood, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Gladys Baker, to Vincent McClure, son of Mrs. Nellie McClure of Los Angeles, but formerly of Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Baker is a graduate of the Hollywood High School and has been a student of the Otis Art Institute. The wedding is scheduled for the middle of next month.

Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buck of 2224 Budlong avenue celebrated their fifty-fourth anniversary last Sunday. Autumn foliage and yellow chrysanthemums adorned the rooms and a hundred of their close friends were guests, many of whom they knew formerly in Kansas City and London, O. Many of the guests wore quaint costumes that were over fifty years old.

The Bucks have been residents here for over thirty-five years. Of their six children, those present at the occasion were the Misses Jessie and Mary Buck, Mrs. Horace Dame of San Jacinto, Clifford Buck and Frank Buck of Indianapolis.

Gives Musical Salons

Dr. Frank Nagel, who is giving a series of musical salons on the last Sundays of the month, is to entertain in his Hollywood studio this afternoon for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Skidden, known to musical audiences in this country and Europe. Mr. Rene Henery of the Paris Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. Vivian Strong-Heart will appear on the program.

At the Palisades

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell Patterson and their sister, Miss Maurine Dyer, entertained with a reception for Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, the noted contralto, at their interesting home, 1247 Santa Monica Boulevard, which was formerly the famous old De Baker place. There were over 200 guests, representative of the musical and social worlds of Pasadena and Los Angeles.

Home Wedding

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kingsbury in West Fifty-first Place was the scene of a pretty wedding Monday when Miss Harriet Miner and Burnham Conant were married, the Rev. J. M. Schaefle, officiating. Twenty guests were in attendance. Following their wedding trip, the couple will make their home in this city.

Church Wedding

Miss Hazel Josephine Harding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyston Harding, and Sherman L. Caldwell were married at the St. Vincent's Methodist Church the 25th inst, Dr. A. W. Lamport reading the ceremony.

Mrs. Muriel Harding was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Pauline Thomas and Miss Winona Smith. The flower girl was little Barbara Crawford and Master Junior Feith carried the rings. Mr. Caldwell was accompanied by his brother, William Caldwell; Ralph Bravo and Harold Harding, brother of the bride, were the attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Caldwell will be at home after November 20 at 260 Albany street.

Miss Wagar at Home

Miss Marie Wagar, who spent the summer with relatives in Cleveland and other eastern cities, has returned to her home here after a three months' absence. Miss Mary Elizabeth Sawyer, who has been a guest at the Wagar home in St. James Park, has recently returned to her home in Toledo, O.

Visiting in the East

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Newell, who have been spending the past ten months in a tour around the world, have arrived in New York City and before returning to Los Angeles they expect to visit several of the eastern cities.

Home from Canada

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Griffith Bartlett and Miss Florance Bartlett, who have been spending the past two months in the Canadian Rockies, with stops at Victoria, Vancouver, Seattle and Portland are expected home tomorrow.

Mrs. Bartlett will leave for the East the latter part of the week in company with her other daughter, Mrs. Cecile Frankel.

Postnuptial Courtesy

Mrs. John Tilden Donnell, who before her recent marriage was Miss Ida Selby, was complimented at a luncheon and shower party given by Miss Laura Harrington at the Vista Del Arroyo Hotel in Pasadena. Bridge was played during the afternoon and the guests were Mrs. Ben Reese, Mrs. Charles Iron, Miss Gertrude Cohen, Miss Lola Matkinson, Miss Cecelia Lower and Miss Cassie Seay.

Events Past, Planned.

Pasadena hotels at the Maryland last night, had a number of entertainment features and carried out well the Halloween idea. On the program were a "Danse Acrobatique" by Dorothy Lambdin, "Pas de Trois" by Elizabeth Cohn, Gladys Delzelle and Hilda Jacobson; "Pom Pom Dance" by Dorothy Dilley and "Halloween Jazz" by Elizabeth Cohn, Dorothy Dilley, Hilda Jacobson and Gladys Delzell. Hancock's orchestra furnished music.

The annual faculty reception at Pasadena Military Academy Friday evening, introduced to the patrons and friends of the institution several new members of the teaching staff. Capt. Dan B. Hall, assistant commandant, Lieut. H. A. Stromberg, Lieut. W. Crandall, Lieut. D. L. Reddick, Lieut. Walter Moore, Lieut. Frank Smith and Lieut. Otto Halzeig are the new members. Dancing followed the reception.

Ensign and Mrs. Harold Watters gave dinner yesterday at 6 p.m. for twenty friends, at the home of Mrs. Watters's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Stanley Morse, 450 San Rafael avenue. After the dinner the party motored to Midwick Country Club for dancing.

Miss Louise Mansar gave a bridge party Wednesday at her home on Mariposa street, Altadena, in honor of Miss Gladys Parker, whose engagement was recently announced. There were fifty guests.

Annandale Golf Club will open its social season Tuesday with a masquerade "spook party." Reservations for the affair are now being made.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Towers and Mrs. T. E. Makepeace entertained Tuesday evening at 1247 Garfield avenue in honor of Bryan Makepeace, who has just returned from three years in Europe.

Mrs. William Parish Jeffries and Mrs. W. L. Graves gave luncheon and an afternoon reception at Flintridge Tuesday for Mrs. M. F. LeRoy and Miss Dora LeRoy, sister and niece of Mrs. Stephen C. Hubbell. There were sixty guests at luncheon and about 300 attended the reception.

Mrs. Grace Strohm entertained Wednesday at Flintridge Country Club with a luncheon and bridge.

Among reservations for parties at the Flintridge dinner-dance November 4 are Lynn Reynolds, H. F. Mackay, M. C. A. Barker, Mrs. H. Colyer, A. J. Hosking, Dr. A. Peterson and S. Cavanaugh.

Recent arrivals at Mt. Wilson Hotel include Dr. Lilla Vance and Miss Irene Rule, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hinton, Sierra Madre; Mrs. and Miss Backus, Hollywood; Mrs. Alma P. West, Mrs. E. Norman, Miss K. Norman, Paul L. Magill, Palmer Miller, W. C. Davids and W. E. Reis, Jr., Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace A. Towne have returned to Pasadena and will make their home on Prospect Boulevard.

Mrs. E. L. Roberts of 509 Prospect Boulevard has as her guest, her sister, Mrs. Lida Thompson.

The Misses Lena, Lillie and Anna Perrin of Medicine Hat, Alberta, are guests for the winter of their aunt, Mrs. Walter T. Hall of 895 North Los Robles avenue.

SOUTH PASADENA

Surprise showers for Miss Virginia Samuels of 1128 Fairview avenue, who is to marry Charles Gilroy in November, were a special feature of this week's social activities. On Monday, Presbyterian Church friends of Miss Samuels arrived at her home, laden with useful gifts. Those present included: Mrs. Dorothy Robinson, Mrs. Helen Eldred, Mrs. Jimmie Cook, Mrs. Alice McNulty, Mrs. Madeline Parks, Mrs. Fannie Eagan, Mrs. Dorothy Ewing, Miss Dora Gilroy, Miss Velma Sperling, Miss Helen Rutherford, Miss Elsie Peet, Miss Grace Lawyer, Miss Mildred Martin, Miss Pearl Austin, Miss Nellie Divall, Miss Bessie Divall and Miss Myrtle Farrar. Tuesday evening other friends honored Miss Samuels at the home of Misses Maude and Marie Putney of Los Angeles. A short musical program was a feature, selections being given by Miss Mary Harbor, Mrs. Alice McNulty and Mrs. William Parks, and Mrs. George Bragonier. Those present included: Mrs. Lenore Hamm Rannow, Mrs. Marion Robinson, Mrs. Gladys Payne Hovey, Mrs. Edith Wilde Elmer, Mrs. Claire Wilde Bennett, Mrs. Alice Vier McNulty.

Saturday evening intimate friends were entertained at dinner by the Misses Beulah and Myrtle Coward of 607 Mound avenue. The list included: Mrs. Ella Bosworth, Miss Nannie Beedle, Miss Helen Beedle, Mrs. Sally Moffitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Longey Hilliger of 1128 Hope street announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred E. Fuller, to Oscar Thorngren of Pasadena.

Mrs. Max Everett Hayward of 1620 Milan avenue was the honor guest at a large reception given Friday at the home of Mrs. Charles A. Hayward, 5515 Ash street.

Miss Doris Marvin of Denver was the honoree Tuesday at a charmingly appointed luncheon tendered her by Mrs. Paul Vallee of 1912 Monterey Road.

Miss Lillian Wendling, niece of Mr. and Mrs. G. Spencer Shimmin of 309 Oaklawn avenue, a bride-to-be of early December, was the honor guest Thursday at an afternoon affair given by her sister, Mrs. Homer J. Sharp of 811 Milan avenue.

WHITTIER

One of the subjects of absorbing interest to East Whittier maids and matrons just at present is the entertainment which the East Whittier Woman's Improvement club will present on the evenings of November 2 and 3 in the Whittier High School auditorium. Two one-act plays are to be presented. The first, "Other People's Husbands," is a rollicking farce, which the Pasadena Community Players recently presented with pronounced success. The vamp, for the title itself suggests a vamp, is to be Mrs. Louis Wicker, popular young society woman. Miss Mildred Aiken is the bachelor girl, and others appearing as wives or husbands are Mrs. Roy Cole, Mrs. Beulah Redman, Miss Marybelle Wilson, Miss Evelyn Fowers, and the Messrs. Earl McNew, Roy Cole, Russell Caldwell and Gerald Ritchie. In the second play, "Miss Ellsworth's Orphan," the leads are well taken by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mendenhall, and others in the cast are Mrs. A. T. Emory, Mrs. C. C. Bennett, Mrs. Roy Cole and Miss Alice Mendenhall. Miss Laura Frankenfield of the high school is coaching the cast of the two plays. The overtures and incidental music for the entertainment will be by Prof. W. H. McDonald's high school orchestra. Miss Margaret Jones will give a group of artistic dances and a male quartet from the Whittier Men's Chorus will sing.

In compliment to Miss Maybelle Irvine of Berkeley, who is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. W. J. Phelps, Miss Bessie Pickard entertained at her home, 414 North Comstock avenue, Whittier, Tuesday evening with an attractively appointed dinner. Halloween motifs were used, and covers were laid for Miss Irvine, the honor guest, Miss Mary Eaton, Miss Leone Doty, Miss Alma McLean, Miss Bessie Pickard and Mrs. W. J. Morgan, the aunt of the hostess.

Mrs. Alphonso Bell, formerly of Santa Fe Springs, but now living in Los Angeles, entertained a number of ladies who assembled at the Hacienda Country Club golf links every Tuesday to play golf. Mrs. Bell's entertainment was in the nature of a luncheon, and her guests were the Mmes. J. B. Chaffey, Barbour and Reynolds of La Habra; E. W. Reider, Rivera; J. W. Urinsel, Santa Fe Springs; Lloyd, Agle and Underwood, Los Angeles.

Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Farquhar entertained informally at dinner Sunday evening, their guests being Miss Bertha Hole, a niece, and Miss Hole's brother Alfred. Miss Hole was for some time assistant librarian at Whittier Public Library, but is now at Riverside. Alfred Hole is from Santa Fe Springs.

Mrs. Emma Taylor, who has been the guest of her brother, H. A. Randall, for the past three weeks, returned to her home in Santa Clara Saturday.

ANAHEIM

Miss Julia Albertson of Fullerton and Joseph Huarte of Anaheim were the winners of prizes for the best costumes at the masquerade dance given by the members of the Young People's Catholic Society Tuesday night. Many unique and comical costumes, several of which were of the Halloween type, were worn by the fifty persons who attended the party. Miss Katherine Huarte, Miss Elizabeth Stoffel, Ray Lazerroni and Albert Stichlin had charge of the box supper and program which followed the dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mauerhan were hosts Tuesday night at a dinner at their home at 307 East Wilhelmina. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mauerhan, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Faris, Frank Dahn, Miss Edna Clark and Miss Eleanor Faris.

Many new members of the history and travel section of the Anaheim Ebell Club were present at the meeting of the society Tuesday, when Miss Kate Rea gave an interesting talk on the people of the smaller European countries. "Greeks and Their Customs" will be the subject of Miss Rea's talk at the next meeting of the section, November 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil S. Gibson of Denver have arrived in Anaheim after an extended tour through Canada and the Northwestern States. They visited Portland, Seattle and San Francisco and spent some time in the Northern California oil fields. Mr. Gibson is attorney for the Carter Oil Company, operating subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. While in Anaheim they are visiting Mrs. Gibson's brother, Blaine Gibson.

Greeted and entertained for a time for ghostly figures, members of the Bankerette Club had a "spooky" time at the home of Mrs. C. B. Goodson Tuesday night. A Halloween napkin attached to the front door of the home directed them to the rear door, where they were admitted by a towering ghost. They were then led through a veritable labyrinth of ghosts, some perched upon the buffet stools and tables, and all posed in terrifying and threatening positions. After greetings were over the living spooks unmasked and were found to be Mrs. Violet Losey, Mrs. Ruth Ward and Mrs. Marion Miller, all former members of the club. After an evening of games and conversations an appropriate lunch of salad, crackers, doughnuts and cider was served. Members of the club present were Miss Philura Sparkes, Miss Hazel Rainey, Miss Dorothy Schellens, Miss Muri Gossett, Miss Evelyn Degryse, Mrs. Ethel Harling, Miss Vera O'Rourke and Mrs. Lena May Noland.

DELANO

The Delano Woman's Club yesterday met in regular session at the high school and listened to an address by Rev. William Malan. The Wright Act was the principal topic of discussion. A special musical program interspersed the discussion.

Week-end guests at the E. Curtis Clark home were Mr. and Mrs. G. Lester Tarleton of San Jose.

Miss Elaine Cole of Bakersfield visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Cole, on Saturday evening.

Mrs. C. W. Cline and her daughter, Virginia, were shopping in Bakersfield on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall Shannon of Ducor were the guests of friends here on Saturday evening.

Mrs. S. T. McCawley is in Pasadena visiting her daughter, Miss Doris McCawley, who is a senior in the high school there.

"Alice in Hungerland" drew out a large audience at the Methodist Church on Sunday night. Near East needs were clearly depicted.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Woodward motored to Porterville Park Sunday to participate in the Oregon reunion held there.

Miss Alice Moss and two children, Dorothy and Walter, arrived Sunday afternoon from New Jersey and will pass the winter here with their relative, Dwight Ward. Mrs. Moss left the East in cold weather, passing through snowstorms in Pennsylvania. They say the days here are like days in June in their eastern home.

BURBANK

Mrs. William Andrews of Providencia avenue, was the hostess to the members of the Sunset Canyon Bridge Club Wednesday. A delicious luncheon was served before the game. Mmes. Arnheim, Herrmann and Kirkman made high scores.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Aiken and daughter Miss Pricilla Aiken were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rouscup. They left Sunday evening for their home in Chicago.

The Burbank Five Hundred Club met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. H. N. Wilbur. There were eighteen members present.

Monday afternoon, November 1, the Commercial Club will give the regular first Monday afternoon card party for the wives of members. Mrs. R. O. Church assisted by Mrs. W. P. Coffman and Mrs. P. A. Farley will be the hostesses of the day.

Last Sunday Mrs. E. A. Fischer entertained with her annual family dinner party at her home on Olive street. Covers were placed for twenty-four.

Jewelry for Yourself

It is a singular fact that many people make frequent gifts of diamonds or other precious stones, yet rarely think of buying any for themselves. Imbued with a love of a particular gem, therefore, they rarely enjoy the possession of it—at least, in the form that expresses their keenest preference.

Yet for reasons both practical and esthetic, that preference should be consulted. A man, for example, may fill a definite need for a scarf pin and at the same time gratify his fancy for rubies, by having that stone as the setting. It would be a most exceptional coincidence if a gift hit both marks—his need and his fancy.

Again, a lady whose favorite stone is the diamond and whose immediate requirement is a wrist watch—by personal selection, she may possess both in a beautiful, diamond-paved bracelet watch.

Let your gifts be of jewelry that they may be gifts which will last—but let yourself be included in the giving.

What Hostesses Have Been About Lately.

brated their fifth wedding anniversary with a dinner party Wednesday evening. Sharing honors were Mrs. Arthur Benedict of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. Ziess and Mrs. Elmer H. Thompson of Burbank, at whose wedding Mrs. Ziess had served as maid of honor. Yellow chrysanthemums in large baskets and vases were used to decorate the living rooms. White roses were used to center the beautifully appointed dinner table where covers were placed for twelve.

MONROVIA

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Bowman of Linwood avenue have as their guests Mr. Bowman's brother, Thomas Bowman and Mrs. Bowman of Eureka, who are en route home from Illinois. While in this city Mr. and Mrs. Bowman will visit the various places of interest in Southern California. On Tuesday they spent the day at Riverside at the famous Mission Inn and Wednesday they went to Mt. Lowe and spent a couple of days. On Sunday they were the guests with Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Bowman of Lin Bowman of Long Beach and they also plan a trip to San Diego before continuing their homeward journey.

Mrs. M. Eubanks and Mrs. F. Irwin entertained the ladies of the southwest section of the Presbyterian Work Society at the church on Thursday. The ladies assembled at 10 o'clock and spent the day quilting.

Mrs. Allan Stauty of West Olive avenue is at home after a visit to her old home in Galesburg, Ill., where she was called by the illness of her father, C. O. Jacobson. Mrs. Stauty was accompanied East by her brother, Martin Jacobson of Los Angeles. It is almost twenty years since Mrs. Stauty visited her old home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Whitehead, of East Hillcrest avenue have returned from the north, where they spent two weeks visiting in Portland, Oregon and San Francisco.

G. W. Crozier and daughter, Miss Gertrude Crozier of Inglewood, were the guests of Mrs. Crozier and her son, of Poppy avenue, on Sunday. Mrs. Crozier is a music teacher and is the mother of three boys and three girls, all musicians. Mr. Crozier is superintendent of the grammar schools of Inglewood.

Hugh Griffith, aged 64 years, and little Marybelle Rogers, aged 4 years, his grand-daughter, celebrated their birthday anniversaries with a joint dinner party at the Rogers home on Sunday, the two birthdays occurring on the same day. Little Marybelle was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Archie Griffin and daughters, Mildred and Ethel, have arrived in Monrovia from Blackfoot, Idaho, to make their home in this city.

The Hotel 'Leven Oaks furnished the setting for the lovely luncheon at which Chapter AK of the P.E.O. Sisterhood of Long Beach entertained the officers of the Monrovia M. and chapters. BI. Mrs. John F. Craig of North Encinitas avenue and Mrs. Lipsey were the hostesses at his charming affair, which included about fifty ladies. After luncheon at the 'Leven Oaks the ladies adjourned to the home of Mrs. Craig and the Long Beach chapter gave a very interesting program.

The October meeting of the Royal Daughters' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church was held on Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. F. E. Shafer of Poppy avenue. Dinner was served at 5:30 by the hostesses. A consecration service was held for the new members. Mrs. Henry A. Fisk was present and told among other things of certain people that she and Mr. Fisk met in their tour of Europe and of the life of people in general. Hostesses for the occasion were Miss Emma Jensen, Miss Katherine Bateman, Mrs. P. H. Bennett, Mrs. Hardy Harris, Jr., Mrs. Walter Irwin, Mrs. A. W. Buhler and Mrs. Clark Fancher.

The members of the Baptist Sunday school orchestra and their friends were guests on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Eva Rehrman of West Palm avenue, where they spent a most enjoyable evening. After a short rehearsal everyone joined in a number of games and were also entertained with a number of violin solos by Harold Scott, who was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Scott. Delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Rehrman was assisted by Mrs. Charles Deming and Miss Alice Deming. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Papoon, Mr. and Mrs. Denslow, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, Miss Margaret Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. George Irwin, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scott, R. M. Fleming, Frank Richards, Chester and Milton Deming, Glenn Smith and Elwood Irwin.

Dr. and Mrs. F. R. Silverthorn of West Orange avenue entertained with a pleasant gathering on Sunday when they were hosts to a number of friends at dinner. Their guests were Hon. P. E. Berry of San Pedro, Mr. and Mrs. Bryson R. Silverthorn of Long Beach and Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Silverthorn of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Bowes of this city who have been spending the summer in Michigan are now in Toronto, Can. They motored to Canada with friends and are now visiting friends and relatives of Mr. Bowes.

GLENDALE

Mrs. C. M. Crist was the guest of honor at a party given by the members of the J. O. C. class of the First Methodist Church, Tuesday evening. The affair was held in the church parlors, and was in farewell to Mrs. Crist who with her husband Rev. C. M. Crist have left Glendale, Rev. Crist to assume his duties as superintendent of the San Diego district. The members of the class presented Mrs. Crist, who has been their teacher, with an exquisite cameo pin.

China Dinnerware—A Five-Day Feature Selling

—fine china and linens are gifts dear to the feminine heart.

—tomorrow—a presentation of imported china sets that proclaim Hamburger value leadership in no uncertain terms

Now if ever is the time to buy imported china ware. Hamburger's is making a five-day special offering of its magnificent new stocks that were purchased the past summer by our local buyer from the best china makers in Europe. These stocks were imported direct which means a big saving in price. Moreover, they were landed before the new tariff went into effect and these special prices are placed, not on their replacement price, but on the before-tariff prices. Such an opportunity may not offer itself again for years. So those who want to save on fine china will not be slow to take advantage of this unusual value event.

100-Piece Imported China Dinner Sets, Special, 39.50

A different, delightful pattern is the first thing that will appeal to you—a new blue fan border decoration. These sets contain service for twelve persons, and are of a quality much superior to that ordinarily found in sets at 39.50. Only a limited quantity at this very special price.

51-Pc. Imported China Cottage Sets, 25.00

A very little price, indeed, for such unquestionably good imported china. Various border decorations of pleasing floral and conventional designs.

100-Pc. Imported China Dinner Sets, 45.00

These come direct from one of Europe's best makers of fine china. Original in design with beautiful floral and conventional patterns. Service for twelve.

100-Pc. Imported China Dinner Sets, 50.00

A set you'll be proud to exhibit when your most fastidious friends are dining with you—a most delightful rose bud decoration and blue conventional borders.

100-Pc. Imported China Dinner Sets, 85.00

One of the outstanding values of the chinaware event. The patterns show the rose bud garland interlaid with gold borders. Service for twelve.

100-Pc. Imported China Dinner Sets, 135.00

China sets of the finest quality the European market affords, and a pronounced Hamburger value at 135.00. New gold garland border artistically dotted in blue.

100-Pc. Imported China Dinner Sets, 150.00

Wonderful in quality and exquisitely finished in the newest gold lace patterns these sets will be instantly recognized by all who know and love fine china as most unusual values.

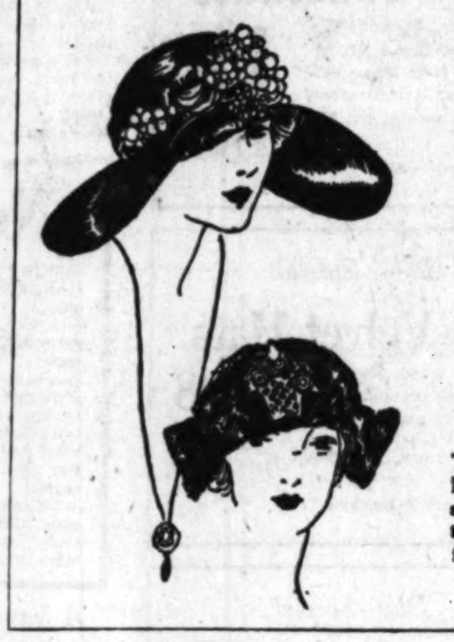
Mid-Season Millinery Opening



—presenting a world of new millinery, Monday, that which is smartest and most authentic

A splendid showing, indeed, of all that is new in Mid-season millinery. There is the latest whim—borrowed from Paris—satin combined with fur. Perhaps Kolinsky, ring-tail, squirrel, mole, ermine or monkey fur—and you will admit the effect is quite as stunning as it is novel. Then there are the soft laces, metallic cloths and brocades, but come and see for yourself—and you, too, will be delighted!

Very Special—

100 Satin Hats, 10.00

This is a value surprise for those who are early! For certainly they look to belong to a MUCH HIGHER priced group. But this is a special feature for our Mid-season opening. Satin hats, lace trimmed, flower trimmed, ostrich ornament trims, and even include fur combinations. All the most favored colors.

(Hamburger's—Second Floor—Monday)

54-in. Amazon Coating, 6.50 of the most popular of the season's coatings because it is of that soft, supple weave that lends itself so successfully to the prevailing coat modes. All-wool, of course, and in black and brown.

54-Inch Venetian Velour Coating, 3.50 Yard

Priced sharply under its regular price to make a special Monday value. A high grade novelty coating of elegant quality and unusual smartness. Good range of colors.

40-Inch Black Chiffon Velvet, 4.95 Yard

Lustrous finish with that distinctive chiffon weave that exalts it above other velvets. An extra good value.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—Monday)

St. Andreasburg Canaries, 10.00

—new shipment just arrived

These little birds are trained roller-singers, famous the world over for their musical ability—some have a range of threeoctaves. Part of a large shipment—just 25. Ordinarily priced much higher, hence there can be no exchanges, no refunds and no deliveries. Not responsible for birds after they leave the store.

(Hamburger's—Fourth Floor—Monday)

Women's New Brown Pumps

—new arrivals offered at specially low prices.

At 7.50—Brown Kid One-strap Pumps with light, flexible soles and a smart new note in the form of a new box heel.

At 9.00—A very clever brown suede or beige pump with smart brown kid or patent leather trimmings.

At 12.00—Smart dress pumps in beige or brown suede with hand-turned soles and Louis XIV heels.

At 10.00—Brown suede or brown kid—patent leather trimming.

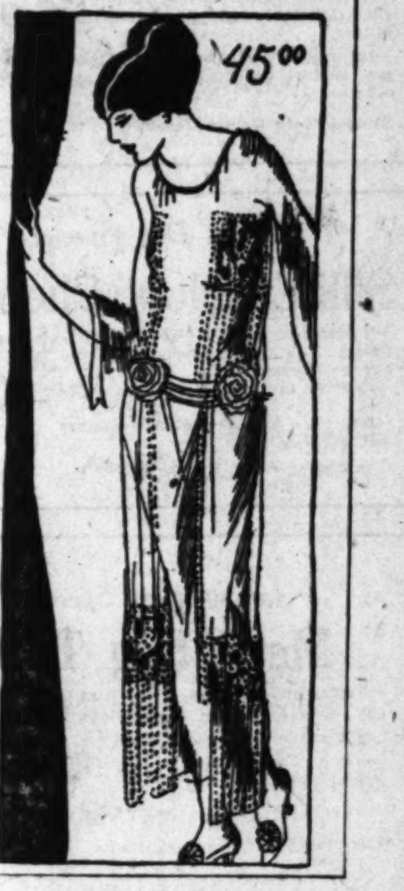
Announcing an Important 3-Day Selling of

Misses' French "Bab" Dresses, 45.00



—150 just arrived—every one hand made in France—lavishly beaded

What a lot of happy and delighted misses will welcome this opportunity! For we have not been able to offer a stronger value in dresses for quite some time, nor one that more fitly exemplifies the Hamburger leadership in value giving. "Bab" dresses are known by all those women who recognize Parisian designed frocks—so we need not tell you of their beauty — the exquisite perfection and simplicity of line—of the lavish beading—nor that they are all HAND MADE. But imported dresses of this type to sell at just 45.00 is the wonder of it all—for, of course, as a usual thing you would have to pay MUCH MORE for these. Developed from Canton, georgette and the new crepe lizard in practically all colors, including many new French shades. Sizes 14, 16 and 18.

Misses' New Frocks, 25.00

—of tricotine and Poiret twill, satin, satin crepe

Just when that crispness creeps into the air and demands dresses that belong to the Fall and Winter season—Hamburger's steps forward with a specialized price, dress opportunity. The new straight lines with panels, circular skirts, smartly embroidered, braid or fur-trimmed. Most certainly a splendid buy for only 25.00. Sizes 14 to 20. Fall colors.

Ruth Newhouse entertained twenty-six friends at a Halloween party Saturday evening at the home of Miss Clausen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clausen, 629 East Hill avenue.

The Sunrise Civic Club will give an old-fashioned Halloween party Tuesday evening at the Women's clubhouse.

Three dances were given at the clubhouse last week. The first was an old-fashioned Halloween party and dance given Tuesday evening by the Master Plumbers' Association of Pasadena, Glendale and Eagle Rock. The second was given Friday evening by Mr. Hancock of the Hancock Music Company and the third was given last night by the women of the club and was the first of a series to be given by them.

VAN NUYS

One of the pleasant events of the week was the delightful dinner given by G. A. Huffaker, manager of the local Ford agency, to his entire force of salesmen and department managers, at the Hollywood Country Club Wednesday evening.

Mr. Ernest Gollins and daughter, Miss Ethel, of New York City, and Mrs. Francisco and Mr. Edward Gollins of Los Angeles, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Linn on East Delano street this week.

Preparations for the masquerade party to be given by the local chapter of the Eastern Star on Halloween are about finished and it is expected that a large crowd will enjoy this entertainment, as this organization offers much that is unique and delightful at its social functions.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Clever of Haskell avenue left Wednesday for Iowa, where they will spend several months with relatives. Mr. Clever is owner of a valuable bean and walnut ranch and is one of the directors in the Van Nuys Bean Growers' Association.

Mr. Olmstead, H. C. Sorgenfrey, L. S. Granger, W. E. Bierkamp and Walter Mendenhall were among those who were guests of the Orange county Shrine Club at a ceremonial held in Orange County Park on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Thompson were hosts to about all the grammar school children Monday evening at their store on Sherman Way. Many grown-ups were present and a delightful time was enjoyed. Punch and wafers were served. At this time Mrs. Steere of the Woman's Club and Mr. L. Lewis awarded the prizes for the most school tickets. Those who received the honors were Dorothy Alcock and Russell Squires of the high school, Dorothy Dert and Charles Canby of the grammar school.

Mrs. Minnie Anderson, who just returned from a six months' visit with friends in the East, was welcomed home by a group of friends this week at a delightful surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Nilson, on West Sylvan street. Delectable refreshments were served and the evening spent in various entertainments, of which the original poem expressing "welcome home" to Mrs. Anderson, was especially enjoyed.

SAN LUIS OBISPO

The chapel at the Convent of the Immaculate Heart was the setting for a pretty wedding Sunday morning, when Miss Neva Morganti became the bride of Nicholas Maddock. The ceremony was read by the Rev. Father P. M. O'Flynn in the presence of the family and a number of intimate friends. The bride was given away by her brother, Milo Morganti, and was attended by her sister, Miss May Morganti, while the bridegroom was attended by William O'Sullivan. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left by automobile for Santa Cruz and San Francisco, where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return they will be at home to their friends after November 1, at 1357 Palm street. The bride is a daughter of Mrs. E. Morganti, and is an accomplished and popular young woman. She is a graduate of the Hollywood Convent. Mr. Maddock is a prominent young business man, and is a veteran of the World War.

An enjoyable feature at the meeting of Corona Chapter, O.E.S., on Monday evening, was a lecture by Miss Mabel Herrick on her recent visit to Oberammergau, where she witnessed the famous Passion Play.

A delightful reception was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lindsey and Mrs. Lindsey's mother, Mrs. Willard Nelson, on Saturday evening by the members of the Woman's Civic Club and their husbands, at the clubhouse. The affair was in the nature of a farewell, as the Lindseys and Mrs. Nelson leave shortly for Oakland, where they will make their home in future. The evening was spent at cards, and was concluded with a midnight supper. The three guests of honor were presented with remembrances by the club.

Henry Tatjes was pleasantly surprised Tuesday evening when a party of friends gathered at his home on Santa Barbara avenue to celebrate his birthday. The evening was spent playing games, and an elaborate supper was served at midnight. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tatjes an daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Akelly Poletti, Mr. and Mrs. John Christenson, Mr. and Mrs. George Christenson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Tatjes, Miss Florence Leitner, Misses Gladys, Eeaonor and Dorothy Tatjes, Charles Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. J. King and family, and Mrs. N. Jesperson.

Mrs. Earl Merrifield was hostess at a delightful bridge party at her home on Pismo street on Friday afternoon. Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the games.

Miss Jeannette Stewart, whose marriage to Wilbur Morrison of Los Angeles is to be an event of early November, was the guest of honor at a delightful dinner and shower tendered by a group of friends Monday evening at the Cloisters. The centerpiece at dinner was a charming doll bride, and the place cards caried out the motif. Decorations were in autumn flowers of pastel shades. Following the dinner the honor guests was taken to the sun room, the scene of the shower, which came as a complete surprise. Gifts were arranged in an umbrella, and the honoree was literally "showered" with them. Those attending the affair were: Miss Stewart, Mrs. R. M. Bradbury, Miss Jean McMillan, Miss Helena McMillan, Miss Rilla Parsons, Miss Mayne McMillan, Mrs. Gertrude Tilsley, iss Nellie McMillan and Dr. Mignon Story.

WHITTIER

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kirkwood, pioneer residents of the Whittier district, entertained at their hospitable home on South Painter avenue Tuesday evening with a birthday dinner in compliment to their son Leland. Halloween motifs were used decoratively and a merry evening spent following the dinner. Covers were laid for the Misses Mercedes Lucas, Minnie Witherow, Maurine Spradley and Garnet Alexander, and the Messrs. Leland Kirkwood, Marvin Kirkwood, Harvey Davis, Chalmers Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kirkwood and their house guest, Mrs. W. L. Kirkwood of Tulsa, Okla.

In compliment to Rev. and Mrs. George B. Cliff, the Ministerial Union of Whittier gave a reception Monday evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Lewis, the affair being planned as a farewell courtesy to the Cliffs, who are leaving soon for their new home in Redlands, where Mr. Cliff will have charge of the First Methodist Church. A silver loving cup, engraved with appropriate inscriptions of appreciation was presented to Mr. Cliff, who has entered largely into the civic and educational as well as the religious life of the community during the six years he has been in Whittier, as minister of the First Methodist Church.

Since the announcement of her betrothal to Mr. Clay C. Johnson, Miss Priestley has been the motif for a number of pleasant showers and parties, among the latest being that given by Mrs. D. Delmore at her home in Los Angeles. The entertainment was in the nature of a luncheon for Miss Priestley, and all the appointments were in pink. The guests were Miss Vera Priestley, the honoree, and her mother, Mrs. G. W. Priestley, Mrs. Ernest Priestley, Mrs. Morris Bogue and her sister Miss Mary Butman, all of Whittier; Mrs. William Farrand, Miss Dorothy Farrand, Brea; Mrs. William Green, Mrs. R. C. Ruggles, Miss Mary Cohen, Los Angeles; Mrs. Albert Tietse, Mrs. Phil Henry, Huntington Beach.

Mrs. Louis Wicker, one of Whittier's popular young matrons, entertained at the Wicker home, 524 North Washington avenue, with a series of card parties Friday and Saturday evenings. Friday evening the guests were entertained at bridge and the fortunate prize-winners were Mrs. Will Blaich and Mrs. Abbott Jenks. Saturday evening the guests played five hundred and the high score holders were Mrs. Oval Redman and Mrs. Aubyn Coffin. Mrs. Wicker utilized the Halloween motif in her attractive decorations and served refreshments following the card games.

ALHAMBRA

Members of the membership committee of the Wednesday Afternoon Club met with Mrs. Charles Garrison, chairman, on Thursday for lunch. The remainder of the afternoon was spent with needlework and in making plans for work throughout the year. Again, on Tuesday, the same group of workers was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Fred Gillenwaters at her beautiful home on Main street. Those present were Mrs. Fred Wood, Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Chris Walker, Mrs. A. A. Watson, Mrs. Ralph Johnson, Mrs. C. H. Munson and Mrs. H. C. Baldwin.

Saturday night at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Watson, in South Sixth street, Miss Dorothy Watson, as hostess, gave a real Halloween party, with witches, cats, jack-o'-lanterns and other appropriate decorations. Dancing and games afforded amusement for the evening. There were thirty guests.

A Halloween party was given Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Young on the

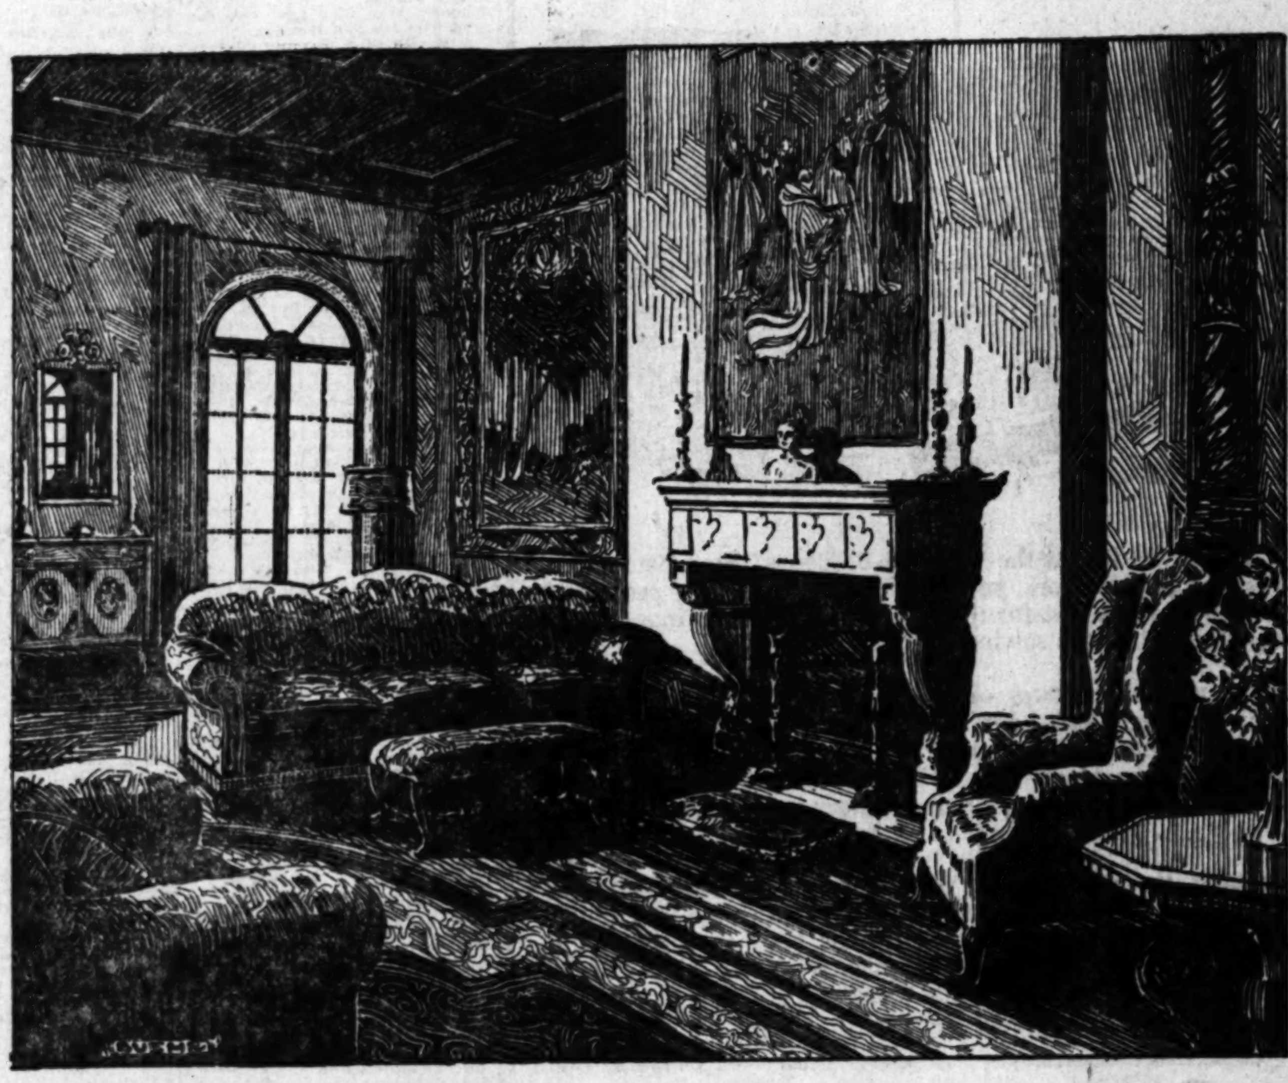
The Artists' Series of Successful Homes



WALTER FRANKLIN BUEHR, creator of this, the Sixth of the Artists' Series of Successful Homes, received his basic art training in Philadelphia and Detroit. In the latter city, his etchings and water colors were formally exhibited a few years ago. An interesting turn was given Mr. Buehr's art work by the world war—during which time he gained prominence abroad in the Camouflage Division.

Locating in Los Angeles, after his return from France, Mr. Buehr has, by the versatility and originality shown in his productions, gained rank among the foremost commercial artists of the Southland, being also, a member of the California Art Club. A recent cover of Western Advertising Magazine was made from an original wood-block, executed by Mr. Buehr; while the drawing above is evidence of his ability in pen and ink work. The vibrant strength of contrast in mass effect and richness of finish, notable here, are characteristic of his work in general.

Barker Bros.' Own Make Upholstered Furniture

More than forty years experience in distributing furniture—in judging by the practical test of public approval—the lines and finish that gain immediate admiration from discriminating patrons and the construction that is worthy the guarantee of Barker Bros. for lasting satisfaction—have given this house more than ordinary power to produce Upholstered Furniture that is Right, in every way.

Styles take their motif and lines from the most worthy pieces that have been produced by past periods of furniture art—with a refinement of proportion in keeping with present-day homes.

Frames and Upholstery Fabrics are carefully selected with the constant ideal of obtaining the best possible materials for any given cost—assuring quality in each piece.

Construction is particularly emphasized, with a feeling of responsibility in meriting the confidence of our clientele, that each hidden detail shall be the "best for the purpose."

Better Values are apparent to both those who reason why they are possible—and to those who actually compare prices with consideration to equal worth. Barker Bros.' Own Make Davenports, covered in choice of velours or tapestry, may be chosen as low as $75—with Chair or Rocker to match at $47.50.

The particularly distinctive group shown above includes a Davenport of noteworthy lines, with solid mahogany carved base and upholstery of very fine quality mohair, in choice of colors—at $286.50. The Chair, suggested in the foreground, matches the davenport and is priced at $162.50. Chippendale in influence and decidedly impressive in dignity and comfort, the fireside Wing Chair, is covered in choice of mohair, and priced at $242.50.

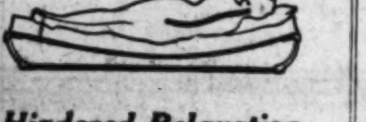
Are You Awake To The Importance of Sleep?

How many days do you feel at the top notch of fitness? How many mornings do you rejoice in your work, your friends—yes — in your problems? For, even problems have a zest for the man or woman who brings to them a mind fresh and alert for the solving of them.

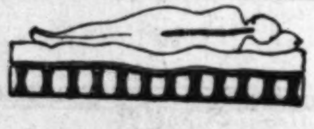
A creaky spring, a harsh mattress, or a sagging bed may seem to have very little to do with one's state of mind during the day, but any one of them can drive sleep away altogether, or so disturb the subconscious mind that all reconstructive processes which take place during sleep are seriously impaired. And the next day tells the story in listlessness and depression.

On the other hand, the right kind of bed—springs of just the right tension; mattress of just the right resiliency—both suited to the individual's requirements and scientifically built to carry the body in proper alignment, will bring the wonderful relaxation which results in perfect repose and insures renewed physical and mental vitality.



Hindered Relaxation

Note upper curve of the body—hip and shoulder almost together, ribs telescoped inside the hip. Then note lower line of the body—hips and ribs stretched apart. See the crescent-shaped spinal column through which all nerve sensation is transmitted to the brain. Imagine the tension on millions of nerves protesting to the brain! And the strain on the muscular system caused by the hammock-shaped surface of the bed. This posture is the greatest cause of unrefreshed sleep and the result of the wrong type of bed.



Perfect Relaxation

Note how the coils support the waist line—the body rests in its natural curve lines—the spinal column is held in proper alignment. The bed is correct because, no matter what the position of the sleeper, the tension of the springs carries the body straight, never allowing it to sink beyond the natural curve lines. Springs are so tied that each coil acts independently of the other, insuring perfect-fitting qualities—and complete relaxation.

The mattress has the proper resilient filling and weight.

Barker Bros.' Individualized Box Springs and Mattresses and Simmons Coil Springs (built to our own specifications) are constructed to bring perfect relaxation because they are built to comply with the natural principles which control sleep. Ask for experts to explain more fully the natural laws of sleeping—Department of Scientific Sleeping Equipment — Third Floor.

REDLANDS

Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Holt last night celebrated their fourteenth wedding anniversary in a happy manner, entertaining about seventy-five friends at their home on Cajon street. They were from Arrowhead, Los Angeles, Ontario and Long Beach. The evening was spent with dancing and a buffet supper was served. Mrs. Holt was formerly Miss Cleo Lée, and has lived here most of her life.

A wealth of pink roses adorned the table at the lovely luncheon Miss Lillian Pastorious gave for eighteen of her friends at her home on Palm avenue. The guests were Carrol Finlay, Emily Lombard, Harriett Hasbrouk, Lillian Williams, Mary Frances Hunt, Elizabeth Cope, Nina Moore, Ruth Alexander, Ollie Thorn, Ruth Moore, Catherine Hynson, Dorothy Henney, Julia Hunt, Betty Hilliard, Mary Elizabeth Rabe, Jean Herold and Frances Mullen.

Hostesses for the first fall meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution were Mrs. Grace Austin, Mrs. G. W. Beattie, Mrs. Mary Churchill, Mrs. Lulu Coggeshall, Mrs. J. T. Cranmer and Mrs. Margaret Crandell. The evening was a very delightful one.

Mrs. E. H. Brennan entertained a number of her friends at her home in Clifton Court with a prettily appointed luncheon.

Local society folk are greatly interested in the announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Mary Montague Riggs, widow of the late Col. Frank Riggs, wealthy mine owner, to Alban V. Thomas of Virginia. Friends here say the wedding will be about Thanksgiving time.

Rev. and Mrs. Herbert C. Ide kept open house at their new home on Alvarado street during the week. He has just recently returned from a summer spent in touring Europe.

Mrs. Halsey Allen entertained with a supper at her home on Summitt avenue, among the guests being a number of the men from the Arrowhead Hospital near San Bernardino.

Mrs. A. L. Hunt entertained with a tea, honoring Miss Alma Lightall of Prescott, Ariz., her house guest.

Mrs. Harriet Prescott entertained at her home on Cajon street in honor of the birthday of her son, J. R. Prescott, fifteen friends being present.

Miss Margaret Curtis, former university girl here and popular sorority woman, is being welcomed home by her friends, for she has returned from Boston and will spend the winter with her parents, Judge and Mrs. J. W. Curtis, at their home in San Bernardino.

An informal supper party announced the engagement of Miss Mamie Goodman to Leonard Casebolt of San Francisco. The Halloween movement was used by Miss Goodman and her mother in the table decorations and those of the home. The guests were Gladys Suess, Ida Crusan, Elizabeth Gross, Eunice Gilman, Francis Warfle, Lucy Spilsberry; Mesdames Esther Long, Stanley Goodman, Claude Rhoades, Emil Suess, Thomas Goodman, Sr., and Miss Ida Wilson of San Bernardino and Miss Jean Kelly of San Bernardino.

SIERRA MADRE

One of the initial social events of the season was the fancy dress dance held on Friday last at the Women's Clubhouse, the occasion being the celebration of Halloween. Many couples were present and enjoyed the affair.

Miss Gwen Jameson of Oakland is spending the week-end with Miss Betty Shaw. She made the trip primarily for the purpose of attending the U.S.C.-California football game at Pasadena on Saturday.

Miss Beatrice Ward and her father Mr. Irving N. Ward, attended a luncheon aboard the flagship California at the harbor on Saturday. The affair was given by the officers and staff to the members of the Laguna Art Association. One of Miss Ward's paintings was given very favorable comment at a recent exhibit of the association.

Mr. Prentiss Buie returned Wednesday from a three-months' trip in the East where he has been visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Karpf entertained with a delightful party Saturday at their home on Grand View avenue. The evening was spent in cards and dancing.

Mrs. Guy Steinberger was the hostess at an afternoon tea to several of her friends on Wednesday.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Farman are Mrs. A. E. Sortor and daughter, Miss Margaret Sortor of Santa Ana.

PASO ROBLES

Mrs. J. H. Hilbert entertained at a charming affair Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. J. Parker of Ashland, Or., who is visiting her son, Jesse Parker of this city. Mrs. Hilbert was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Austin Rowe. A delightful afternoon was concluded with the service of dainty refreshments. Those present were: Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Jesse Parker, Jr., Mrs. C. G. Melgaard, Mrs. O. C. Monterno, Mrs. H. Shinbine, Mrs. Austin Rowe and the hostess.

Miss Opal New, who has been the motif for many charming affairs during her stay here, was the guest of honor at an evening given by Mrs. W. W. Hughes on Monday. Hearts was the game played, and at the conclusion of the games a delicious supper was served. Those present were: Miss New, Mmes. Frank Cummings, Roy Warden, Joseph Nygren, Amos Meininger, Aubrey Gano, Nell Brewster, M. Freeman, and Messrs. Cummings, Warden, Nygren, Meininger, Gano, Hamilton and Rody McNeil.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Trussler have been spending the week in Oakland.

Miss Gladys Stafford of Hollywood is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. McDougal.

Miss Alice Williams has gone to San Jose, where she will visit her sister, Mrs. William Beaudoin.

Mrs. S. S. Sanderson arrived Tuesday from Nebraska to visit her nephew, Louis S. Woolman.

Mrs. Geno Booth entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of her mother, Mrs. Mary Hardin, and her sister, Miss Pearl Hardin of Hollister, who are her house guests. Those present were the guests of honor and Mmes. Susie Booth, Frank Booth, R. O. Hanson, Will Lewis, J. Fleming, W. Harvey, G. A. Martell, Will Classen, Samuel Eddy and Miss Belle Churchill.

Complimenting her small daughter on her second birthday, Mrs. A. H. Wilmar entertained in honor of the young lady, Edna Lillian, on Tuesday afternoon. Games, stories and refreshments were enjoyed by the young guests, who were: Master Edwin Harrold, little Miss Alice Campbell and Constance Tilden, and Mmes. T. C. Tilden, Ellsworth Harrold, J. Stewart Campbell and G. W. Tape.

BAKERSFIELD

The marriage of Miss Geraldine Boynton and C. P. Oldershaw was an event in Bakersfield during the past week. The affair took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boynton. A group of intimate friends and immediate relatives were present. Rev. George Warmer of the First Methodist Church officiated.

Blossoms grouped effectively with ferns decked the living-rooms of the Boynton home for the occasion. The bride was attractively gowned in white satin and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Irene Weber. The best man was Charles Oldershaw, a brother of the groom. Both of the young people have a number of friends here who are extending congratulations upon the happy event. The groom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Oldershaw, is employed with the San Joaquin Light and Power Company, and following a short honeymoon the young couple will make their home at 620 M street.

Ralph Switzer, who has just returned from overseas, where he has been in service, was honored at a dinner party with which his cousins, Miss Marie Nelson and Miss Nellie Nelson, entertained a group of friends Sunday evening. It proved a joyous occasion for the honor guest who was greatly pleased to greet his friends. Following the serving of dinner, dancing and music furnished diversion for the remainder of the evening. Those present included, besides the honor guests and hostesses, Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson, Mrs. S. Smith, Misses Emma Nelson, Esther Nelson and Messrs. Frank P. Smith, John J. Smith, Edward Nelson, John Nelson, William Nelson, George Smith and Fred Smith.

Among the numerous affairs honoring Miss Zeta Olcese, a socially prominent bride-elect of the season, one of the most delightful was a tea given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Leslie King and Miss Alva Lucey, at the latter's home, 2027 Cedar street. A number of the social elite shared the affair. Mrs. Frank Easton and Mrs. Errol Clare presided at the tea tables. Others who assisted were Mrs. Asa Dimon, Mrs. James Burke and Misses Alberta Wishon, Helen Coyne, Bertha Combs ad Muriel Cravath.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sedgwick, who reside at 2200 D street, will leave next week for San Francisco to make their home permanently, much to the regret of their many friends here. The young couple are very popular in club, social and business circles, and will be greatly missed in the city. Mr. Sedgwick, who is employed here in the Bank of Italy, has been transferred with a promotion to the San Francisco office.

To the complete surprise of gathered friends, the engagement of Miss Lucille Rowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Rowland of 1131 D street, to Hugh Temple, son of Rev. and Mrs. O. M. Temple, who reside at 2117 Twenty-third street, was announced Monday evening at a smart affair in the Rowland home. The affair was also planned to honor Miss Helen Coyne, whose wedding this week to Hermon Rowland, will be one of the brilliant social events of the season.

SANTA PAULA

Standing before a hedge of ping oleanders Miss Margaret Teague Briggs, the elder daughter of the George M. Briggs's of the Santa Paula Canyon became the bride of Mr. Harry H. Bassett of South Pasadena at a high noon garden wedding on Tuesday. Just at 12 o'clock the bride and groom took their places without attendants in front of a mass of shrubbery in the wide garden of the Briggs country home. The ring ceremony was used, the Rev. George A. Miller, friend of the family of the bride and former pastor of the Universalist church, officiating. The bride wore a tailor suit and hat and carried lilies of the valley and Cecile Brunner roses in an arm bouquet. After the service the wedding party and guests were served to a wedding luncheon set in a floral setting with a wealth of blossoms brought from the garden into the home. Mr. and Mrs. Bassett left for Glen Ranch for their wedding journey and will make their home in South Pasadena, where Mr. Bassett is an employee of the postoffice.

Preceding her wedding on Tuesday, Miss Margaret Teague Briggs was the honoree at a luncheon and shower given on Saturday by eight of the friends who have known her during her girlhood; the hostesses uniting in the buffet luncheon and shower were Mmes. Fred Brown, at whose Eighth-street home the affair was held, L. W. Corbett, Clarence Beckley, A. A. Goodyear, A. L. Kelsey, I. P. Browne, Miriam Davis and J. R. Cauch. Thirty guests were bidden to the affair.

Mrs. Arthur Blumenthal entertained twice during this week at her spacious new home on West Santa Paula street. One of the affairs was a dinner in honor of her mother, Mrs. J. Levinson of Los Angeles with covers laid for ten and the other function was an afternoon party for Mrs. Benjamin Small, who is visiting here from Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fryer of Glendale have been entertained in Santa Paula during the past week, visiting with the family of W. W. Pope, east of town, and also with Mrs. Miriam Davis on Hill street.

AZUSA

Mr. and Mrs. George Walters entertained at their home on Midway on Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Humphreys, newcomers to this city. The rooms were attractively decorated with cosmos. Games were played and a social time was enjoyed. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. Guests invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey were Mrs. Jamison and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Otto, Mr. and Mrs. Lane, Mr. Jamison, Mr. and Mrs. Compton, Mr. and Mrs. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie, Miss Ritchie and Mr. and Mrs. Love.

Mr. and Mrs. George Belles entertained at dinner on Sunday,

Brubaker became the L. Stensgaard marriage taking place at 11 o'clock in the morning. The bride, who, for the past three years has been in the employ of the Southern Counties Gas Company here, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brubaker of Benson avenue, Ontario. Mr. Stensgaard is the son of Mrs. L. R. Stensgaard of Pomona.

COVINA

During the year there has been no wedding which was of more interest to residents of Covina as well as people of the surrounding cities than that of Mrs. Emma Henry and Dr. James D. Reed, which took place on Saturday morning, October 21, at the Reed home on East Badillo street. There were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. Reed's son, Justice of the Peace T. B. Reed, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hugg of Abilene, Kan.; Dr. Reed's other sons, Dr. W. A. Reed and James Reed, Jr., Mrs. W. A. Reed, Mrs. T. B. Reed and Mr. and Mrs. V. O. English. The living-room, where the ceremony was performed, was handsomely decorated with orchid and white chrysanthemums and ferns, while pink roses were used in the dining-room, where a wedding breakfast was served. Dr. and Mrs. Reed are now on a month's motor tour of the State. Mr. and Mrs. Hugg, who came here for the wedding, and who have been house guests of their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. August Schetzer, of Baldwin Park, left on Tuesday for their home in Abilene.

Mrs. M. E. Bell and Irene Bell of Atwood, Colo., are guests of the former's daughter, Mrs. Otis Dudderar and son, Ira Bell.

Dailey S. Stafford, who last week attended the national American Legion convention at New Orleans, is this week visiting relatives at his former home at Louisville and in Lexington, Ky., where he graduated from the university.

Henry Holloway arrived this week from Grand View, Wash., and is a guest at homes of his cousins, P. E. Stanton, J. M. Stanton and J. I. Stanton.

Chrysanthemums, zinnias, marigolds and other yellow flowers of autumn decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wilke Sunday afternoon, when Mrs. Wilke's sister, Miss Lillian Fischer, daughter of A. Fischer of Santa Ana, became the bride of Arthur Angle of that city. Fifteen relatives witnessed the impressive ceremony, which was read at 4 o'clock by Rev. Edward Williams, pastor of the Covina Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Wilke played as the hour of 4 approached, "Love Song," by Cadman, which was followed by the Lohengrin Wedding March. First of the bridal party was little Miss Helen Wilke, who scattered rose leaves before the bride and her attendant, Miss Emma Fischer. Standing with Mr. Angle was Elmer Dietrich of Santa Ana. The bride wore for the service a heavily beaded gown of blue satin crepe. After a wedding dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Angle left for San Francisco. Upon their return they will make their home in Santa Ana, where Mr. Angle is cashier for the American Express Company.

Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Magan entertained at dinner Monday evening as a farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Houser, who sailed Wednesday from San Francisco to make their home at Kohala, H. I. There were present Mr. and Mrs. Harold Houser, Mr. and Mrs. J. O.

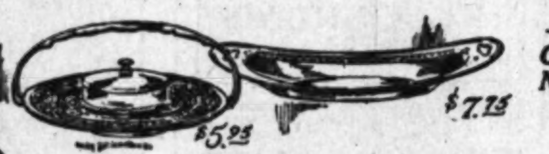
The Dream of the Pilgrim Fathers Finds Realization in the Better Homes of Today

When the days of hardship had passed and the time had come for ushering in an era of "larger living"—our worthy forefathers of Pilgrim days celebrated by gathering about the festive table—set in keeping with their progress and good fortune.

By material things were they judged in the olden days and so we are judged today. For though Dreams of Better Homes had led the settlers far from their native land, giving them courage to sail uncharted seas and dare life in a land of savages and wilderness—dreams are but dreams until they come true.

The fullness of development in home furnishings seems incredible in the comparatively short period since the first Thanksgiving Day. More complete understanding of the varying phases that have been provided for greater comfort and beauty in the home, is afforded by a tour of the world's largest house of home furnishings.

Model Home, Model Bungalow and Wallace Nutting Collection on the Fourth Floor, Ten Model Bedrooms on the Third Floor, the numerous Display Rooms of Dining Furniture on the Fifth Floor, the Art and Picture Galleries on the Main and Mezzanine Floors, and the spacious Music Salons on the Main Floor particularly invite your inspection.



—A Real Chance for New Table Beauty

Designed to Appeal to the Discriminating "The Granada" Dining Room Group Will Always Give Pride of Possession

Hand carved and developed from solid oak—"The Granada" Dining-Room Group, by every detail of line, finish and construction is obviously "high grade."

Showing the influence of Italian masters in patterning, this furniture is particularly suitable to the homes of the Latin type so favored in Southern California.

Complete Nine-Piece Group for $345.00

Consisting of the wanted Oblong Table, Sideboard and Serving Console, 5 Side Chairs and Arm Chair—the complete nine-piece group is an extra good value at $345. China Cabinet may be had for an additional $70, if desired.

Choosing to Advantage Is Afforded By Seeing the Greatest Collection of Dining Room Furniture In the West

Taking their motifs from every favored period of past furniture art and showing the most modern trend of furniture style—more than thirty different patterns in dining furniture may be had in groups of five to ten pieces—at prices ranging from $66.50 to $500. Finer productions may be chosen here, if desired; but for moderate cost, there is almost unlimited diversity for comparison in selecting just the kind you want.

Smoking Stands That Combine Artistic and Practical Merit at $5.75

A new shipment of 250 Smoking Stands gives wide privilege of selecting the finish preferred—whether it be black and gold, Tiffany, or gold polychromes, with a variation of color tones.

In fact, any room may be given extra and harmonizing beauty—while each Stand has the regulation glass tray and brass fixtures.

Choice—many models at the same price—$5.75.

Reservations for Christmas Will be Made Upon a Small Deposit

The Role of the Tea Wagon

Wherever there is an informal gathering of friends, the Tea Wagon is a favorite—whether it holds afternoon tea, after dinner coffee or just acts as a maid to serve the next course at luncheon or dinner.

Many styles may be chosen—for instance, one of simple lines and high grade construction at $29.75—and elaborately decorated ones of brilliant lacquer, at higher prices.

Mann were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Henshaw, Mrs. Henshaw returning to the Park with them for a short visit, and Mrs. J. P. Johnson, who made a shopping trip on Monday.

ONTARIO

The attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. John Maffett, 1357 West A street, was the scene of a supper-dance of charming appointments Wednesday evening, the occasion being the birthday anniversary of Mr. Maffett. Graceful baskets of bright-colored zinnias added to the attractiveness of the rooms. The early hours of the evening were devoted to dancing and supper followed at midnight. Present were Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart Ingalls, Mr. and Mrs. Welles Thompson Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Harris Frankish, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wyland Heinecke, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Monroe Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Isbell Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Oliver Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Montrose Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vincent Combs, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Baugh Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Harlow, Mrs. Amy M. Huntoon, Paul W. Nichols and Mr. and Mrs. Maffett.

Of more than ordinary interest in Ontario society circles was the marriage Tuesday evening of Clarence C. Peabody, assistant secretary of the People's Mutual Building and Loan Association, and Miss Margarita Collins, daughter of Mrs. Kate Collins of Belleview, Kan., which was solemnized at the Mission Inn, Riverside, with the Rev. R. A. Kirchhoffer officiating. Only immediate relatives and one or two intimate friends attended the nuptials and the wedding dinner, which followed. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Clara Gale Peabody, 1313 North Euclid avenue, and has scores of friends in Ontario, where he has made his home for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Peabody departed on a motor honeymoon. They will make their home here on their return.

Miss Margaret Hamilton and Miss Patty Palmer were hostesses Saturday evening at a merry masquerade dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald T. Hamilton, 519 North Euclid avenue. The Halloween motif was effectively carried out in decoration and in the supper which followed the dancing. The guests numbered the Misses Constance Cummins, Helen Roloff, Fudora Fredendall, Olive Shattuck, Hilda Johnston, Margaret Cushman, Amy Streeter, Alma Casler, Avis Humphrey, Margaret Sulley, Hannah Gilman, Kathryn Palmer, Janet Fiddes and Jane Allen; Messrs. McGready, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Philip Carder, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Glass and Mr. and Mrs. William Lester Benedict.

Ralph Ware was the guest of honor on the occasion of his birthday anniversary Monday evening when his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hampton Fuller, entertained at dinner at their home in North Euclid avenue. Covers were indicated for Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Hofer, Miss Jessie Fallis, Miss Lois Craig, Ralph Ware, Dr. Stephen A. Craig and Mr. and Mrs. Fuller.

FRESNO

Mrs. William O. Blasingame, who motored to San Francisco Monday, was accompanied by Miss Jennie Atkinson, who returns to Miss Head's School in Berkeley after spending the week-end with her relatives, Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Duff.

Miss Dorothy Brison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Brison of this city and graduate of the Fresno high school, now attending the Comnock College of Expression in Los Angeles, was honored by her fellow students, who elected her editor-in-chief of the "Comnock Chronicle," a bimonthly publication of that institution. Miss Brison is specializing in journalism and literature.

Mrs. Donald Forsyth, a bride of a few months, was the complimented guest of honor at a tea given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Peter Anderson at her home in the country.

Mrs. Joseph Blenkiron was hostess at luncheon Monday afternoon at the Hotel Fresno. The guests included Mesdames Alfred McKenzie, H. H. McDonald, J.

Blaine Rogers, J. W. McAllister, Jr., Herbert Gundelfinter, Dudley Bates, John Phillips, Joseph Collins, W. F. Forsey, Misses Dorothy Forsyth and Margaret Cory.

Mr. and Mrs. Blendiron, who formerly lived in this city, left Tuesday for their home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. James Finley entertained at bridge Monday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. A. E. Williams, on T street, where she complimented Mrs. Irving McDonald and Mrs. Charles Cowan. At the conclusion of hje games the trophy for high score was awarded to Mrs. Al Lockwood, while Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Cowan each received an attractive guest prize. Mrs. Finley's guests included Mesdames Herbert Dunn, Carsten Hennington, Kenneth Stanniford, Edward Leyden, Robert Sparks of Tipton, Al Lockwood, Frank Everts, Hollis Pierson, Robert Campbell, Clark, Earl Fenstemacher, Blanchard Johnson, DeWitt Helm, William Helm, Henry Walrond, Arthur Bradford, Lynn Wright, Harry Sample, William Bryan, Jr., Leland Gregory of San Francisco, Carnal Balaam of Berkeley, G. Penn Cummings, Misses Florence Bradford and Don Wolley.

VENTURA

Miss Pearl Foster was honoree at a handkerchief shower given for her by members of the Avenue Reading Club at her home Monday afternoon. Miss Foster leaves with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Burson soon for an extended tour of South America.

A pretty children's party of the week was one Mrs. Ed Bader gave for her 3-year-old daughter Nan on Monday afternoon. It was a Halloween birthday party.

Mrs. Forrest Mills, Mrs. J. B. Mead and Mrs. Ray Weigle entertained with a Halloween card party Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mills.

The birthday anniversary of Mrs. Helen Roberts was marked by a fine dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jack Miller, Monday. Children and grandchildren were present to help in the celebration.

At a lovely home wedding, Miss Esther Rudolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Rudolph, became the bride of E. M. Ginty, a business man of Berkeley. Rev. T. M. Patterson performed the ceremony and the attendants were Miss Genevieve Rudolph and F. G. Beckner. Mr. and Mrs. Ginty are now on an extended automobile tour. They will reside at Berkeley.

Mrs. George Baker entertained the members of her card club at her home on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Selwyn Beaman entertained her card club of girls and young matrons on Saturday afternoon.

H. B. Reinhardt's birthday anniversary was marked by a prettily appointed dinner given in his honor by Mrs. Reinhardt for a few of their friends.

Mrs. Alan Pope entertained the M. T. Twelve at her home on Friday afternoon.

UPLAND

The attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Brown, 759 Second avenue, was the scene of a wedding of charming appointments Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Miss Venetta Brown, became the bride of Everett Earle Simpson, well-known business man and musician of Ontario. The Rev. Charles Augustus Kent, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, was the afficant. The rooms of the Brown home were converted for the occasion into a veritable floral bower, roses, carnations and cosmos being the blossoms employed. Just before the ceremony, Edward Middough of Ontario sang D'Hardelot's "Because," and at its close Way Middough of Long Beach sang "For You Alone." The approach of the wedding party was heralded by the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," with Mrs. Charles Simpson of Long Beach at the piano. The bride was attired for the ceremony in a beautiful creation of Spanish lace over white satin and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses, lilies of the valley and maidenhair fern. She entered on the arm of her father, who gave her away, and met the bridegroom for the nuptials beneath an archway of asparagus, plumosis fern and Cecil Brunner rosebuds. The ceremony was witnessed by an admiring group of twenty-five relatives and friends. A reception and wedding collation followed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Simpson departed on a motor honeymoon to the northern portion of the State. The bride's going-away gown was a tailored affair of navy Poiret twill, with hat and gloves to harmonize. Upon thir return, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson will make their home in Ontario.

Mrs. Louis Kronmeyer was hostess Thursday afternoon at a tea of charming appointments at the Sycamores. The autumn tones were effectively carried out in the colorful decorations. Mrs. Kronmeyer was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Mrs. Harold Dundas, and the guests numbered Mrs. Charles Marsden Sikes, Mrs. Charles O. Deverts, Mrs. Mark Bailey, Mrs. C. Thudium, Mrs. J. F. Hamilton, Mrs. Robert R. Wisely, Mrs. N. I. Hamer, Mrs. Bert Spicer, Mrs. A. M. Wisely, Mrs. Edward Lutz, Mrs. Charles Allen and Mrs. E. R. Son.

Miss Frances Dewey was happily surprised Saturday evening on the occasion of her birthday anniversary when Mrs. Charles Dewey and Miss Neyl Hobbs entertained a group of her friends at an informal supper-dance at the Hobbs home on San Antonio Heights. Autumn foliage and blossoms in pink and white added to the attractiveness of the rooms. A musical program was contributed to by Douglas Patterson, Harry Howe and Joseph Teuscher. Supper followed the dancing. Present were Miss Frances Dewey, Miss Velma Moser, Miss Viva Moser, Miss Ethel Edward, Miss Esther Ayers, Bryan Rutledge, Harry Howe, Joseph Teuscher, Charles Ayers, Douglas Patterson, Miss Neyl Hobbs and Mrs. Charles Dewey.

PLACENTIA

Changing the usual routine, Mrs. Henry Tuffree entertained the B.G.N. Five Hundred Club in the tea-rooms of the "Mary Louise" in Los Angeles Tuesday. Miss Los Angeles, roses and blue corn flowers were effectively used. Favors, score cards and prizes were Hawaiian in design, Mrs. Tuffree having brought them back from a recent trip to the islands. Luncheon was served at 1:15, after which the game progressed. Mrs. Cline, Mrs. McFadden and Mrs. Sullivan won first honors, and Mrs. McFadden and Mrs. Pierotti tied for consolation. Guests were Mrs. C. Trapp, Mrs. D. D. Shinn of Buena Park, and Mrs. H. L. McLellen of Placentia. Members present were: Mrs. William Berkenstock, Mrs. Ralph McFad-

Nature Study Jaunt

Los Angeles Audubon Society will conduct a nature study excursion to Eagle Rock Park November 2. Two routs are planned. Nature students may take Buena Vista car marked "W" to city limits where Miss Helen Pratt, official leader for the day, will meet them at 9 a. m. Those desiring a longer hike will take South Pasadena car and transfer to Annandale car where Mrs. Robert Fargo will meet them at 9 a. m. at the Church of the Angels, for a tramp over the hills to the park.

The little tireless workers of the feathered army have returned from their arduous family duties in the North and have "pitched their tents" among the hills and valleys and resumed the ceaseless task of "cleaning up" the multitude of insect and weed enemies which destroy vegetation and lessen prosperity.

October American Forestry says "Over 8,000,000 acres of timberland are destroyed yearly by insects." Woodpeckers, nuthatches and creepers help save our forests. The Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture estimates the annual loss by insects in the United States at over $800,000,000 and by weed seeds at $17,000,000.

Field identification marks of the birds listed during the walk, will be pointed out and discussed at the luncheon hour. All interested in this study are welcome.

Playcrafters Club

That the Playcrafters are rapidly becoming a valuable and constructive factor in the artistic development of Los Angeles was quite evident Thursday evening on the occasion of their annual banquet held at the new location of the assembly tea rooms on Flower street.

Sydney Sprague, president of the club, in his introduction of the guests of honor, spoke briefly of the hopes and aims of the club. Our own L. E. Beyhymer gave a most delightful talk on Ignace Paderewski and Tagore, touching upon the personal impressions of each other on the occasion of a meeting between the two men when Mr. Beyhmer was present. Miss Helen Freeman, leading woman of the Pilgrimage Play, mirrored for her listeners the many things which are tending to make California, and especially Los Angeles, one of the great art centers of the world. Mr. Nagle, father of Conrad Nagle, the popular screen star, also spoke briefly of community opera in which he is deeply interested.

Lemuel Josephs of the Sargent School of Dramatic Art read a scene from "Macbeth," in a most dramatic and finished manner.

Woman Now Minister

On Sunday last, a beautiful and impressive ceremony was performed at the Kingdom of Light New Era Church Universal, corner of Washington and Hobart boulevards. This was the ordination of Margaret Scott Marshall of 536 Duquesne avenue, Culver City, into that church as a minister of the gospel and missionary. Dr. Alice Baker, H. M. D. D., founder and pastor of the church, ordained the new worker. Several beautiful floral tributes were presented. The subject of the Rev. Margaret Scott Marshall's address at the church today will be "The Morning of the New Day." Mrs. Marshall has been a public lecturer in this coutry and South Africa, for about twenty years, and it is said she speaks entirely from inspiration, according to the Master's dictum: "Think not of what ye shall say, for in that same hour it shall be given unto thee."

Mothers--Your Children's Hair Needs Special Attention
Baldness Often Comes From Neglect in Youth

The hair of some children is backward in healthy development. The rapid growth of these boys and girls makes a tremendous demand on their vital forces, and when there is not enough of that vital force to supply all needs the hair suffers. Scanty, dry, faded, brittle, lifeless hair and dandruff is the result.

The genuine Parisian Sage is the ideal hair and scalp treatment for growing children, as thousands of mothers can testify. This delicate and wholesome scalp vitalizer is perfectly harmless, and its nourishing ingredients supply just what is needed to properly invigorate the starved hair roots, dissolve every particle of dandruff, and stimulate a healthy normal growth. Good-looking hair is half the battle in anyone's personal appearance. Neglect in youth means thin, dull, brittle, lifeless hair, and finally baldness, while a little attention now insures long, thick, lustrous hair for years to come.

Parisian Sage is equally good for grown-ups. You will be amazed and delighted with the first application—your hair and scalp will look and feel 100% better. Itching scalp, falling hair, and every trace of dandruff are quickly banished, and your hair will not only appear heavier, but soft and lustrous. A large bottle, enough to last the whole family for a long time, is not expensive at any drug store. Be sure to get Parisian Sage (Giroux's), as this will not color or streak the hair, and is sold with guarantee of perfect satisfaction or nothing to pay.—(Advertisement.

den, Mrs. C. W. Blatner, Mrs. Fred Cline, Mrs. Winthrop Bowen, Mrs. A. Pierotti, Mrs. T. L. McFadden, Mrs. J. P. O'Brien, Mrs. John E. Scott, Mrs. Clarence McFadden and Mrs. H. Palmer.

"Guest day" at the Round Table clubhouse was a very pleasant affair with the members of the Round Table Club, Wednesday afternoon, Miss Ada Sturdevant, first vice-president, presiding. The president-elect, Mrs. Charles Thamer, being unable to serve this term, Mrs. Lisle R. Morehouse was elected president. The balance of the executive force are: Mrs. Robert McKee, second vice-president; Mrs. L. S. Moore, recording secretary; Mrs. Fred Cline, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. L. McFadden, treasurer; Mrs. C. A. Cuff, critic; Mrs. Frank Dowling, parliamentarian. Mrs. C. Irvin and Mr. Robertson gave a group of vocal solos each, and T. A. Stephenson of Santa Ana entertained with a very interesting history of Orange county. A social hour followed, at which delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kinney received the large package that Mrs. Kinney's sister, Mrs. W. E. Snider of Belvidere, N. J., had written her to expect, in the form of the whole family, who arrived Thursday night in the family car that they had driven all the way from the eastern seaboard in fifteen days. The Sniders will remain in Southern California for several weeks, and with the Kinneys will tour the southern part of the State.

ARCADIA

Mrs. G. Strausser is entertaining her brother, Guy Warren of Shasta county, for the winter. Mrs. Martha Coon and her daughter of Sioux Falls arrived in this city on Wednesday and will be the guests of Mrs. Strausser a part of the time during their winter in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Catherine Wachtel and children of Paso Robles motored down on Tuesday to spend the week with Mrs. S. T. Clover of the Double Drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Rumfelt of First avenue entertained a number of friends with a wienie roast on Tuesday evening in their beautiful garden. Other refreshments and games were enjoyed until a late hour.

Miss Ollie Palmer returned to Catalina Island on Monday, after a two weeks' vacation spent at her home on Huntington Drive. During the summer Miss Palmer has been in charge of the telephone office at Avalon. The first of November she will resume her duties as chief operator in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Wiley and son and Morris Nash of Superior, Neb., arrived in this city on Saturday evening, having made the trip by automobile. Mrs. Wiley is the daughter of Arthur Bishop of Second and Valnett avenues. They have taken possession of their new home on Valnett avenue.

Miss Mary Brown, who has been on a furlough from Chinese missionary work for the past year, left Monday for China, where she will resume her work. She has been visiting at the home of her brother, W. J. Brown, on Second avenue. While here Miss Brown contributed to many interesting programs at local entertainments.

Mrs. M. B. Bower of Santa Anita avenue was hostess to the A. B. Circle of the Church Federated Societies on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Beadle presided in the absence of Mrs. C A. Hawk. Mrs. W. A. Andrews was elected president to take the place of Mrs. Hawk, whose illness will deter her from reassuming the duties of president. Twelve members were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Graham and family were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sparks of Santa Anita avenue.

The B.I.M. Club gave a shower on Wednesday evening in compliment to Miss Myrtle McDonald, who is to become the bride soon of Richard Griffith of Long Beach.

YORBA LINDA

Mrs. Warrick Murry was the honoree at a delightful affair given at the home of Mrs. George Kinsman on Saturday. There were thirty friends of Mrs. Murry present, who is a recent bride. A delicious collation was served by the hostess, assisted by Misses Dessa Jepson, Carmen West, and Sallie and Jean Kinsman. Among the guests were several former residents of Yorba Linda. These were: Mrs. Eva Gage of Costa Mesa, Mrs. Marie Marsh of Brea, and Miss L. Maddock of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Jennie Beacon entertained at luncheon recently. House and table were a bower of beautiful flowers. A delightfully informal meal was enjoyed and the afternoon pleasantly spent. Those to enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. Beacon were: Mrs. C. Hummell, Mrs. Mary Gale and Mrs. W. A. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Knight entertained with Le Roy Johnson on Sunday, with one of the dinners that this trio is famous for. Fifteen relatives and friends were present. The affair was at the ranch home of Mr. Johnson. The afternoon was spent with music, at which a number of neighbors joined.

Returning from a three months' visit with friends and relatives in Hibbing, Wis., Mrs. Angie Bosworth is glad to be home again in her loved California. Mrs. Bosworth is making her home with Mrs. Charity Murry.

FULLERTON

Maj. and Mrs. James M. Hobson of this city were dinner guests Sunday at the home of the major's brother, Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, and Mrs. Hobson in Hollywood. Other guests were Mrs. W. J. Bryan, wife of the "Silver Tongued Orator," whose home is now in Hollywood, and Mrs. Bryan's daughter, Mrs. Hargraves. Maj. Hobson returned last week from Fort Travis, Tex., after receiving his discharge from the Army for which he applied some months since. The major was with the Second Division and had been with the Army for twenty-four years.

The marriage of Miss Anna Vogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Vogan of West Amerige to Mr. Leland O. Mitchell of Brea will take place at the First Methodist Church Wednesday evening, the pastor, Rev. C. R. Montague, performing the ceremony. A reception will be held following the ceremony at the home of the bride, after which the young couple will leave on a bridal trip, the destination of which they refused to divulge. Returning, their home will be in Long Beach, where the groom is employed in the oil business. Miss Vogan is an attractive girl of the younger set, having graduated from the local high school but last spring. She has a pleasing voice and is a member of the Methodist church choir and prominent in church activities. The groom formerly attended the high school here, and is a fine upstanding young man with many friends to his account.

Members of the Woman's Club will listen to the erudition of the several State amendments at their next meeting held at the home of Mrs. E. A. Ames of East Orangethorpe. Albert Launer, City Attorney of La Habra, will talk on the amendments, and E. A. Ames will give an address upon a topic of much interest at present, radium and its future.

The home economic section of the Ebell Club has a Halloween party scheduled for Friday evening to be held at the attractive country home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hale. The alleged better halves are to be the guests of honor, ceremonies to begin with a potluck dinner. Halloween appointments and Halloween sports will characterize the evening.

LINDSAY

The first social event given by the American Legion Auxiliary this season was the Halloween dance given at the Arboretum Friday evening. Entertainment features were unusually clever. The committee in charge included: Mmes. John H. Boardman, E. T. Gable, M C. Leeds, and H. J. Ingoldsby, E. T. Gable, Mr. Ferry and M. C. Leeds.

The Lindsay Council, 2581 Security Benefit Association, gave their annual Halloween social Wednesday evening. Following initiation of candidates the doors were opened to visiting friends who joined in the program and dance. A number of prizes were given to the best dancers.

At a quiet wedding Friday evening at the E. G. Rooke home, Mrs. Gertrude Bolin was united in marriage to J. V. Stayton, both of Fresno, Rev. Charles L. Thornton of the Christian Church officiating. By a happy coincidence, the date of the wedding fell on the birthdays of the minister and the groom's brother-in-law, B. G. Rooke. A beautifully decorated wedding cake and birthday cake formed the center of the attractive decorations on the dining table. Orange and white were tastefully combined in decorating the living-rooms. Mr. and Mrs. Stayton left Saturday morning for a motor trip in the south, and will make their home in Fresno on their return.

The next event on the calendar of the Tuesday Club will be the annual dinner and social in which gentlemen will be the honor guests, October 31. Mrs. W. B. Kiggens is chairman and will be assisted by Mmes. W. H. Maack, W. S. Sluser, J. W. Irwin, J. Guy Rinker, H. A. Brody, H. G. Nutt, G. H. Waddell, A. M. Robertson and G. T. Edwards

DINUBA

The Thursday Bridge Club meeting with Mrs. Roy E. Boone gave a surprise miscellaneous shower in honor of one of its members, Miss Maye Dopkins, whose marriage is to be an event of the coming month. Autumn flowers formed the pleasing decorations and French corsage bouquets were used as favors. Miss Dopkins received many beautiful and useful gifts. The guest prize was awarded Mrs. Dopkins and the consolation to Mrs. Tackaberry. The club prize went to Mrs. Seligman and the consolation to Mrs. McCord. Members and guests present included the hostess, Miss Dopkins, her mother, Mrs. J. Rene Clotfelter, Mrs. Stanley Dechmar, Mrs. Tackaberry of Reedley, Mrs. Clarence Wilson, Mrs. Harris McCord, Mrs. Ray Duncan, Mrs. Milton Seligman, Mrs. R. E. Morton, Mrs. Rolley Williams, Mrs. H. H. R. Hunt of Bakersfield and Mrs. Loyd Dunn.

Miss Alvina King, daughter of Mrs. Mathilda King of this city, was complimented at a party given in Fresno at the home of Mrs. Al Johns Monday evening. The party was the occasion for the announcement of the betrothal of Miss King to Elmer Richter. Mrs. Johns was assisted as hostess by Misses Muriel Buckman and Cleo Thomas. Pleasing decorations were used in the living-rooms and on the dainty tables, tiny brides being used as the central motif. A shower of lovely gifts was presented Miss King for her new home.

The Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion is planning a Halloween party to be given Monday evening in honor of new members. Mrs. Adolph Seligman, Mrs. B. Stevens, Mrs. C. Moore, Mrs. T. Hegan and Miss Louis Seligman are the committee in charge.

DUARTE

A delightfully informal affair took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson in this city a few nights ago when Miss Ivy Anderson entertained a number of friends at an informal dinner party. Plates at the daintily appointed table were arranged for . Miss Sally Edwards, Miss Margaret Broxon, Miss Ethel Crall, Dick Howie, Alvin Vollmer, Jack Hale and Carroll Bihlmaier. After the delicious repast the evening was spent with cards.

Thomas Hagerman of Benton Harbor, Mich., was a Sunday guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Seligman of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Northup were hosts at a delightful affair on Monday evening when they entertained the Duarte Bridge and Dinner Club and a few other friends at a beautifully appointed dinner. The dinner was a most delicious repast, being of barbecued steak. Afterwards the evening was spent playing bridge. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Northup were Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Woolston, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Rutledge, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Radabaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Byerly, Miss Louise Colwell of New York and Miss Rosamond Smith of Baltimore, the latter two being house guests of the Northups.

The Duarte section of the Presbyterian work society held a dime social on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. A. Moore in this city. Hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. E. A. Moore, Mrs. F. H. Hunter, Mrs. W. C. Parsons, Mrs. S. B. Elliott, Mrs. A. Ryder, Mrs. E. D. Northup, Mrs. E. B. Norman and Mrs. C. B. Blain.

Mrs. J. A. Maddock was hostess on Tuesday at a charming luncheon at which her guests were members Park Densmore substituting for of the Duarte Bridge Club, Mrs. Mrs. E. E. Edwards. Mrs. Clarence won first prize for high score at bridge.

BREA

Four generations of relatives and two of the guests at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bowie twenty-five years ago, were present when Mr. and Mrs. Bowie celebrated their silver wedding anniversary, Thursday evening. A large number of relatives and

DANDRUFF—FALLING HAIR!

35-cent "Danderine" will Save Any Man or Woman's Hair—Delightful Tonic—See Hair Thicken!

Don't lose another hair! Don't tolerate destructive dandruff. A little Danderine now will save your hair; thicken and strengthen it; double its beauty.

Falling hair never stops by itself! Dandruff multiplies until it forms a crusty scale, destroying the hair, roots and all, resulting in baldness.

Your druggist will tell you that "Danderine" is the largest selling hair saver in the world because it corrects and tones sick, ailing hair every time. Use one bottle of Danderine, then if you find a single falling hair or a particle of dandruff, you can have your money back.

Man Could Not Eat Anything

Mr. Mervin Could Eat Nothing—Not Even Fruit

"I suffered for six years from stomach trouble and could not eat anything—not even fruit. I took a carload of pills. I have now taken two bottles of Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) and can eat anything. I could write a newspaper full about Adlerika and certainly would not be without it." (Signed) H. C. Mervin.

Intestinal Antiseptic

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter its brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—[Advertisement.

DYE SWEATER, SKIRT, DRESS STOCKINGS OR DRAPERIES IN "DIAMOND DYES"

Buy "Diamond Dyes" and follow the simple directions in every package. Don't wonder whether you can dye or tint successfully, because perfect home dyeing is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes even if you have never dyed before. Worn, faded dresses, skirts, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, draperies, hangings, everything, becomes like new again. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade or run.

R A
Underwear

Look for Values
when you buy underwear for yourself and the children.

Buy R. A. and get the fit, comfort and wear to which you are entitled.

Don't put up with skimped poor fitting, short-lived underwear for the children. Buy R. A. with its roomy seats, full fit and long wear. Also Waist Suits.

No need to have bunchy unions which nag at the armholes and gap at the seat. Buy R. A. and the long, wide, curved gusset will keep the seat closed and give you comfort.

With careful washing R. A. will last two or three times as long as ordinary underwear.

1700 Pieces Sheffield, Flemish, Dutch and Britannia Silver Hollow Ware In a Great Sale, $10.00

This is Silverware of a very practical type that would ordinarily sell for a figure greatly exceeding $10. In fact, many piece would sell for double this amount and more.

This silver-plated Hollow-ware, so appropriate for gifts, is in bright or Butler finish. Some pieces are plain, others pierced. There are wreath and Grecian borders—both very narrow. The assortment of Flemish Silver is extensive, as is also the Silver which so closely reproduces Old Dutch.

In the three groups are some twenty-seven items in many styles.

See the three windows of Silverware on Sunday.

Engraved Cards

ONE'S Christmas Greeting Cards may express the spirit of Old England, with its jolly squires and buxom lasses, its mistletoe and holly; or they may reflect the sunshine and color of California, with its missions, its poppy-strewn hillsides and its groves of slender eucalyptus.

But whatever type of Card one may choose, it will be quite certain to reflect good taste and holiday cheer, if selected from among the very unusual, and in many cases exclusive, designs shown by Robinson's.

If desired one may have reproductions made by the engraving department, of favorite photographs — either of the children or of attractive spots about one's home or garden.

Or Robinson's photographer will take pictures for this purpose. Tiny, colored reproductions of children's photographs are almost irresistible when used in this way.

Christmas Cards for many tastes, and many incomes—will be shown upon request.

ENGRAVING DEPARTMENT—FIRST FLOOR

Swagger Bags $12.75

A GROUP of Swagger Bags has just arrived and will be available to Monday shoppers at an extraordinary price. They are Bags which ingenious skill has fashioned to link together beauty and utility.

They are bags which add immensely to the effect of one's costume. Their very new design, the beautiful leathers of which they are made, and the convenience of their fittings, all contrive to make them generally intriguing.

In several sizes, all with single handles, extra pockets, and wide flaps which cover bevel mirrors, they are made of pin seal, patent leather and combinations of the two leathers. Colors are all black, all brown or black and brown.

Priced at $12.75.

FIRST FLOOR

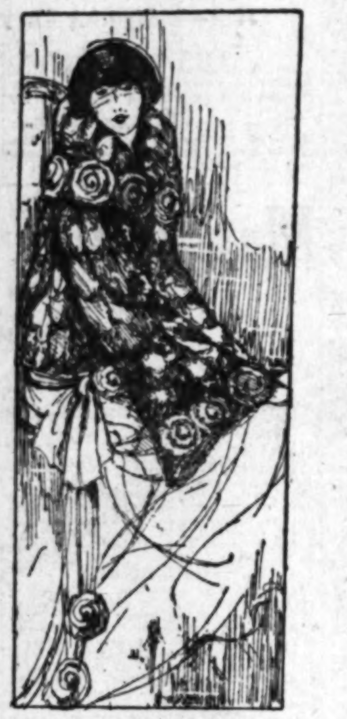
Silk and Wool Union Suits for Children

SILK and Wool Union Suits are particularly in demand for winter wear—having both warmth and a comfortable, non-irritating silkiness of texture.

In sizes for children these Union Suits are of excellent quality medium weight, nicely finished and well fitting. All sizes from 2 to 12 years. Priced unusually low at $2.50 each.

FOURTH FLOOR

The Jacquette Coat sketched below is of Mole—a fur which will be exceedingly popular during the coming season. The design illustrates the unusual possibilities in this soft, clinging fur for it is as intricate as though the coat were of chiffon instead of mole, $475.00.



Furs

SINCE two kinds of furs are better than one in many Wraps of distinction, the mode has combined furs in new and very effective ways. Caracul takes to itself soft Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat) and Kolinsky joins forces with Viatka squirrel while the Coat (sketched) combines mole with black satin and silver embroidery instead of fur.

Robinson's are displaying wraps for all occasions, in styles for every type. Some are large and cape-like, others are short and very jaunty—all are reflective of the newer and lovelier styles that characterize the season's Fur Garments.

THIRD FLOOR

Imported Chiffon Velvets

A VERY beautiful group of imported Chiffon Velvets have just been received—in a veritable garden of unusual colors.

Velvet is to be among the supreme fabrics of the season. It would need to be soft and drapable to maintain its supremacy in a season when draped frocks are in every woman's wardrobe.

Such delightful shades are included as tea rose, American beauty, jade, apple green, champagne, turquoise, Copen, silver gray, violet, slate, French blue, rose, midnight, maple, royal blue and black. In 39-inch width, at $10 a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

All Silk Jersey Petticoats, $3.95

ALL Jersey Petticoats, extremely recent in design and embodying colors in combinations and patterns seldom seen, will be offered at an exceptional price on Monday.

Fitting well, slimly straight and widely ruffled with fine accordeon pleating, and with plain or scalloped edges, they may be had in shades of blue, green, henna, American beauty, gray, brown and other colors.

Triangular insets and narrow or wide borders in harmonizing colors adorn the ruffles. Priced at $3.95.

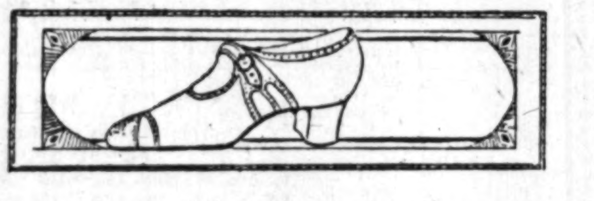
FOURTH FLOOR

The "Annabelle" Walking Slipper

THE Cuban heel, the sensible yet graceful lines, and the snug strap with its military buckle give this one-strap slipper an air of having been made for a trim, energetic wearer.

Developed in black ooze and black kid, or fawn ooze and brown kid; and priced at $12.50.

FOURTH FLOOR



Glove Silk Underwear

Glove Silk Underwear bearing the Robinson label, is of a pure, heavy silk, that withstands long and continued usage, and retains its rich lustre till the last.

It is made to careful specifications regarding fit and tailoring, and is reinforced to resist wear. Distinctly Underwear of quality and great beauty, it includes Vests, Bloomers and Union Suits.

Vests may be had in pink with bodice, fitted or elastic tops. $2.95 each. Bloomers, cut full, reinforced and finished with a frill at the knee, may be had in the same color, at $3.95 each. Union Suits in bodice or fitted shoulder styles, $6.50.

Extra as well as regular sizes are available.

FOURTH FLOOR

Trefousse Gloves from France

TREFOUSSE Gloves, exclusive to Robinson's in this city, bear a name for quality wherever good Gloves are worn.

Suede is particularly desirable for winter, combining softness and grace with great effectiveness. In 2-pearl clasp style, Trefousse Suede Gloves may be had in the following shades: the new "Topaz," as well as sand, beige, squirrel, sable, and black, at $3.75 a pair.

8-Button lengths in either overseam or pique sewn styles, at $5.00 and $5.50.

12-Button lenghts, full pique sewn, with two toned embroidered backs, in all the new shades, at $6.50.

FIRST FLOOR

Hallowe'en Favors

GREAT splashes of orange and black greet the entrance of the hostess-to-be into the Toy Department, for Hallowe'en is almost here. Favors for parties, dinners, luncheons and other affairs may be found in fascinating diversity. Black Cats and witches vie with pumpkins and hobgoblins to express the spirit of magic that is "Hallowe'en"—

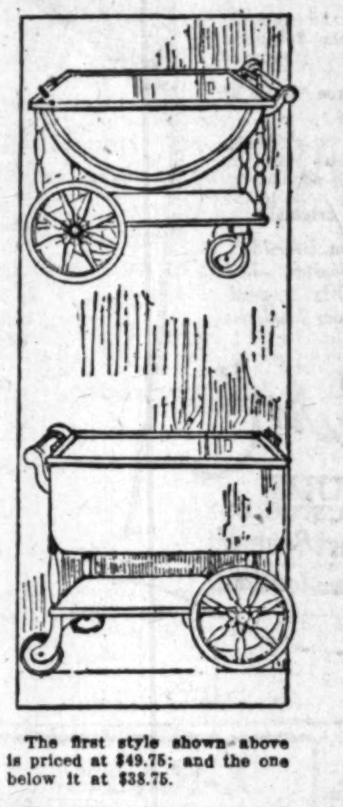
And the spirit of helpfulness to perplexed hostesses-to-be.

FIFTH FLOOR

Tea Wagons Low Priced

Built primarily for service and convenience, these Tea Wagons are at the same time decidedly beautiful in design and materials.

They may be had in solid mahogany or walnut, and are suitable for other purposes than serving—proving their usefulness countless times over.



The first style shown above is priced at $49.75; and the one below it at $38.75.

Six other styles may be had at various higher prices.

Some have a drawer for silverware; all styles have drop leaves with extra glass serving tray, and handles of the new disappearing kind. The wheels are rubber-tired and smoothly moving.

SEVENTH FLOOR

The "Laurel" Linens

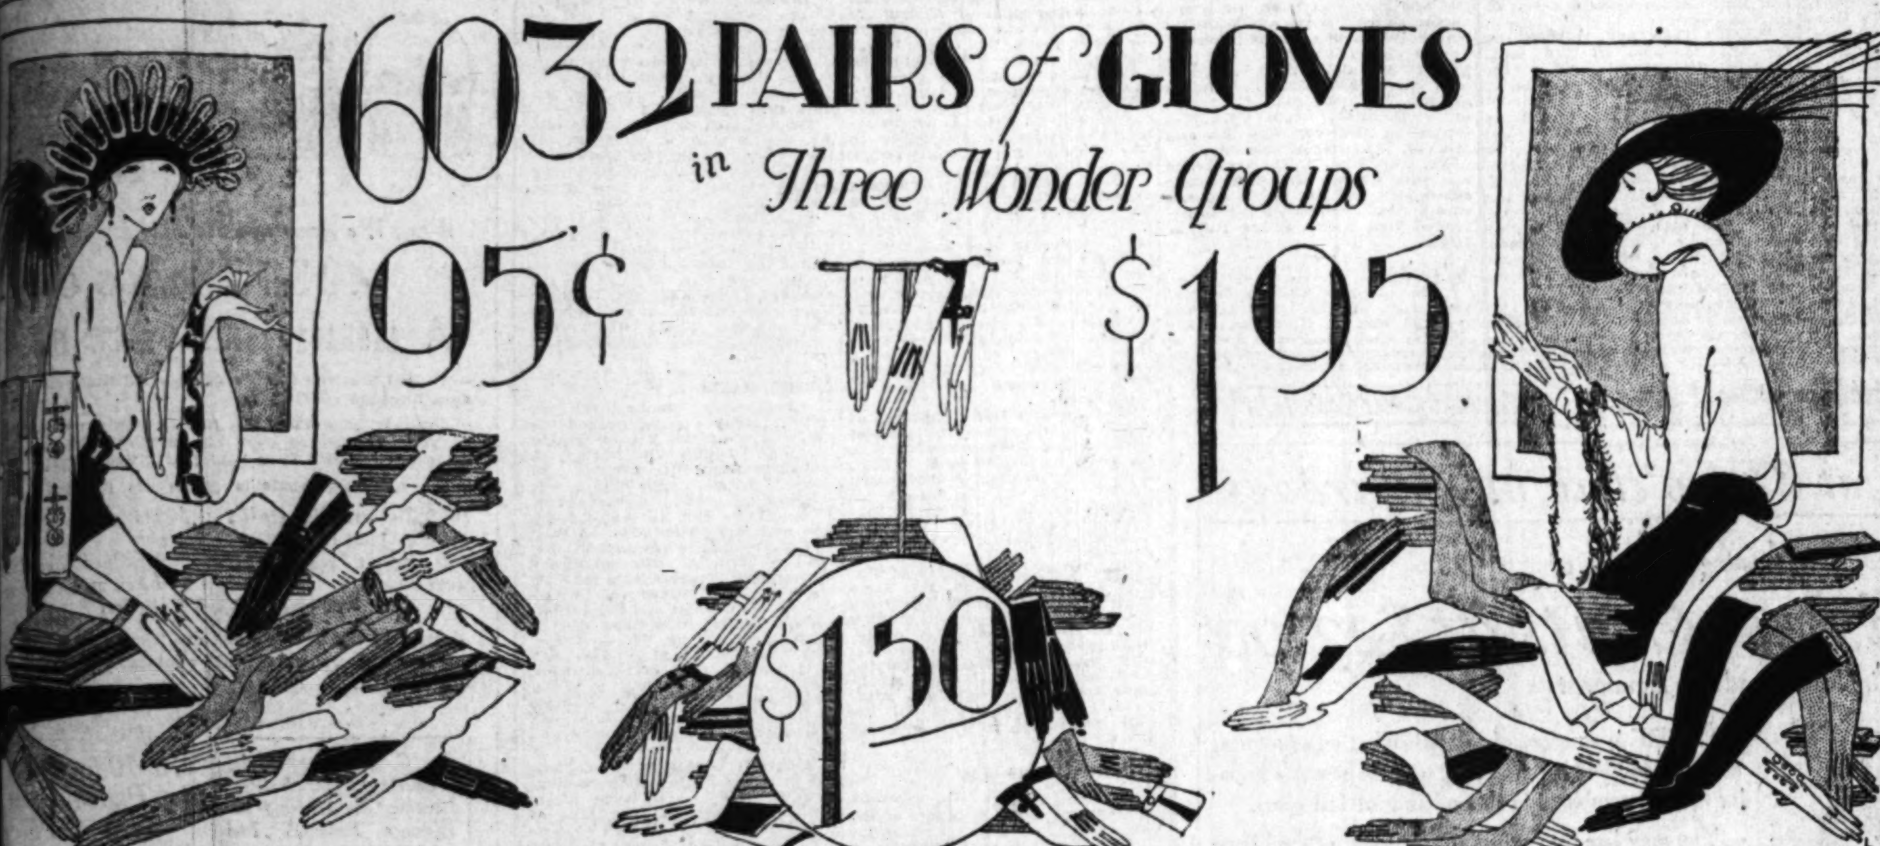
6032 PAIRS of GLOVES in Three Wonder Groups



Long Gloves, Short Gloves, Medium Length Real Imported Kid, Imported French Lambskin and Washable Suedette Gloves

ust a year ago, if you remember, we held a glove sale that was e talk of all Los Angeles—the most notable glove event in the tory of The Broadway merchandising.

o many gloves were sold—and so quickly—that the department s almost overwhelmed.

At that very time we began laying our plans for another glove e that should at least equal if not surpass this successful event; d we have the word of the glove buyer that the merchandise is re remarkable than that of the previous occasion.

This in spite of the fact that the import duty on gloves has advanced the price of those of French make.

—We have been months in assembling this merchandise, which accounts for the tremendous quantity and the ridiculously low prices that we are able to quote.

—Several of the main aisle booths, all of the glove counters and many of the aisle tables will be given over to this event.

—We have allotted three days to the selling — Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, providing the quantities hold out. Those who have seen these gloves predict that they will be bought in quantities of two, three, four and six pairs at a time.

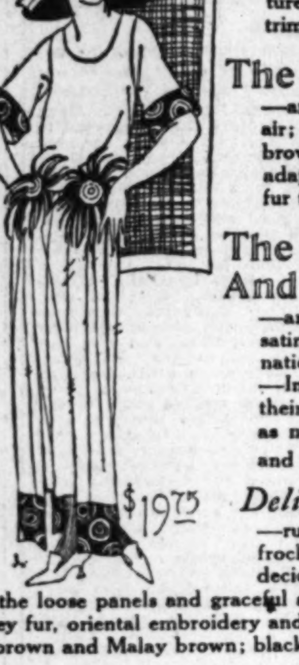
Coats and Dresses At $19.75 and $29.75

—will furnish attractiveness to Monday shoppers, so appealing are they from the standpoint of appearance, as well as of pricing. We think ourselves very fortunate in having such garments to offer at these low prices.



The Coats at $19.75

—are of velours, Bolivia, tweed and other coatings in black, Malay, Sorrento, navy and mixtures; some of them are tailored, others fur trimmed; embroidered sleeves are featured.

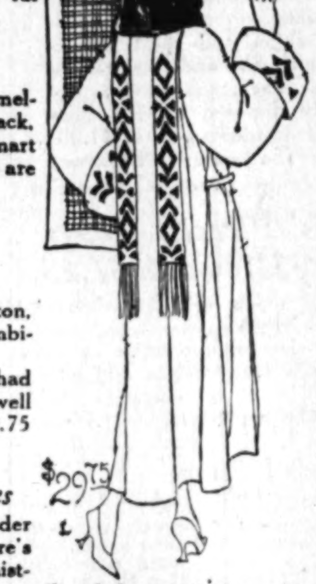
The Coats at $29.75

—are of Normandie, Bolivia, velours and camel-air; a few of tricotine; choice of navy, black, brown and taupe; the styles show various smart adaptations of the mode; some of the coats are fur trimmed.

The Dresses at $19.75 And at $29.75

—are of tricotine, Poiret twill, crepe canton, satin-faced canton, georgette and canton combinations.

—Included are various frocks that have had their prices lowered for this occasion, as well as models that are regularly priced at $19.75 and $29.75.



Delightfully Varied are the Styles

—running the gamut from the long slender frock to that which is modishly draped. There's decided charm to the lower-than-usual waist-lines, the loose panels and graceful sleeves; then, too, there are some demure tailored dresses in the array. Monkey fur, oriental embroidery and metal beading provide trimming. The choice of colors includes navy, dark brown and Malay brown; black, too.

Monday Has Been Set Aside as a Day For

Featuring Furs and Skirts at Less

—and we have no hesitation in speaking of the plans for the day as being quite out of the ordinary in their attractiveness.

The Furs Are Priced at $15.00, $35.00, $65.00 and $95.00

—There are chokers and collars at $15.00; chokers, stoles, capes and coats at $35.00; chokers, stoles, collars and coats at $65.00; and stoles, coats and capes at $95.00. Such peltries as fox, German fitch, coney, stone marten, baum marten, natural mink, Jap mink, squirrel and French seal are included.

—The furs in all four groups are exceptionally low in price—seeing them is being convinced.

The Skirts Are Priced at $5.00, $8.95 and $12.95

—There are plain and pleated models of such wanted fabrics as prunella, velours, silvertone, basket weaves, eponge, covert, serge boucle, wool ratine and so on, variously patterned with plaids, checks and stripes.

—There are sizes 26 to 38 in all three groups; at the $12.95 pricing there are, too, some skirts in still larger sizes.

New Fall Sweaters at $8.95

—in many charming shades of buff, as well as brown and navy. There's a new style twist also that will appeal—the new sports coat effect that is worn open to show to advantage a handsome vest or charming blouse. Priced attractively at $8.95.

New Slip-on Sweaters, $4.95

—Fancy weaves set aside these sweaters as being extremely "the thing." Mohair is used in their making, in smart ribbed effect; round necks and narrow belts are apparent as are shades of mohawk, buff, rust and radio.

—The Broadway—Second Floor.

Miladi's Wardrobe is Hardly Complete This Season, 'Twould Seem, Unless It Contain One of Those Stunning Jacquettes

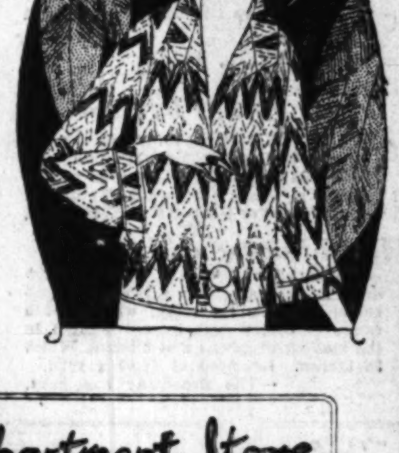
—which own relationship to both the blouse and jacket families, but claim superority to each! They base this assertion on the fact that while they may be used with separate skirts or suits, blouse-fashion, they may also be worn over an entire dress with a successfully charming effect.



Jacquettes of Satin Matelasse

—are being accorded great favor. We have them in a host of delightful fall and winter shades—some of them showing delicate traceries of gold and silver threads; others quaintly stitched in self-color.

The Model Sketched

—is of emerald green matelasse, with stitched design in black and silver thread.

Balkan Blouses, Too

—have much to offer in the way of adding smartness and individuality to the suit-costume.

—The Blouse Section has many beautiful models on display, their materials and styles being of an almost infinite variety.

Prices range from $6.95 to $29.50.

BROADWAY · · FOURTH AND HILL ARTHUR LETTS, PRESIDENT

What Society Has Been Busy About, and Many Plans for Future.

friends were present to wish the hosts many happy returns. An old fashioned chivaree was staged by some of the guests and the hosts were reminded noisily of their wedding which took place in Smithfield, W. Va., on Oct. 17, 1897. The Bowles have been residents of Brea for ten years. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and visiting, until a late hour when a delicious two-course collation was served by the hosts.

Mrs. W. Swoap and Mrs. C. Nickols, and Ray Swoap, were the guests for the day at the home of Mrs. W. A. Carroll at Long Beach, on Thursday. Mrs. W. W. Davis visited in Los Angeles Wednesday, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Dilker were visitors at Alhambra Sunday of the latter's brother, William Bobbit.

A wedding of considerable interest to families of the Graham and Loftus lease was the marriage at Santa Ana of Miss Ruth D. Dwelly of the Stearns lease but formerly of the G. and L., and Leo Goss. The young couple were married Monday without announcing the fact to their friends until afterward. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Goss will be at home to their friends in the pretty new home in Anaheim.

GARDEN GROVE

The D. L. Tyler home was the setting for a pleasantly informal gathering Sunday. A delicious dinner was served at noon, the well laden table prettily decorated with fall flowers, was surrounded by the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner, Mrs. Priscilla Moore and son Jack, of Los Angeles, Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. William A. Clark of Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Tyler and children, and Mr. and Mrs. George Tyler and son of Garden Grove.

Holding their annual reception for the teachers of the local schools, the Parent-Teacher Association met Thursday evening at the Y.M.C.A. hall. There was a large attendance. An interesting program was given by local talent. Community singing led by Mrs. E. M. Hunt, Miss Mable Woodworth, pianist, opened the meeting. Prof. P. M. Magnusson, welcomed the guests. Prof. F. R. Frits responding. The high school glee club entertained with several selections, Mrs. C. B. Henry with a pianologue, after which a social hour with refreshments was enjoyed.

Entertaining with a family dinner party Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. German were hosts to a number of out-of-town relatives. A real old-fashioned country dinner was served at noon, the well-appointed table was made beautiful with cosmos and other fall flowers. Covers were laid for the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Irvine German, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Winters and son, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Ogbornal of Burbank, Miss Constance Irvine of Downey, and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Adler of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Armstrong are entertaining Mr. Armstrong's sister, Mrs. William Elder and son who arrived Wednesday for an extended visit from Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

VISALIA

Dr. and Mrs. Stanton Youngsberg of Manila, P. I., and Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Gross of Los Angeles were week-end guests at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards. Dr. Youngsberg is head of the Department of Agriculture in the islands and has lived there for fifteen years. Dr. Edwards was associated with him while he served as a government veterinarian for a number of years. Dr. and Mrs. Youngsberg came to the States early in the summer to attend the Shriners' convention in San Francisco and expect to return to the islands shortly.

Miss Ruth Pool of this city acted as bridesmaid at the marriage on Wednesday of Miss Cecil Bump of Oakland and Paul Pierce of Woodland. The wedding occurred in Oakland. Mrs. Pierce is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bump, former residents of this city, and the granddaughter of "Grand" Cecil, late well-known resident of Visalia. She was graduated from the University of California in June with Miss Pool. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce will make their home in Woodland.

Miss Annette Isabel Stearnes of Paris, Me., became the bride of Leslie Edwin Gibson Sunday in a ceremony performed by Rev. L. A. Rice, pastor of the First Methodist Church, in the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Gibson, South Court street. Only immediate relatives and friends were present.

Mrs. Gibson, a graduate of Hebron Academy, Hebron, Me., came to Visalia three weeks ago from her home in Paris, Me., to prepare for the wedding. She was becomingly gowned in an afternoon dress of brown crepe meteor, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. After a brief honeymoon they will reside temporarily at the home of the groom's parents.

REDONDO BEACH

Mrs. Herbert C. Howard complimented the members of the Thursday Club with a delicious bridge luncheon at her home, in Hermosa Beach, her guests including Mmes. E. S. Metzger, Leon B. Stern, M. J. Hutchinson, Henry Kinsley, T. A. Gould and William McKnight. Fall garden flowers made the event a festive one and lent an attractive setting for the afternoon of bridge which followed the luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Beckwith were hosts at a delightful dinner party on Sunday evening, on the occasion of the birthday anniversary of the former. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Carl Platz of Long Beach, William Ambach, Stanley Ruse, Miss Adele Beckwith, Billy Beckwith and the host and hostess.

Delightfully informal was the pretty evening party given at the home of Mrs. Kate Tyler, when her daughter, Miss Edith Tyler, entertained a company of friends in honor of Miss Theresa Stone. Games and music furnished enjoyment for the following guests: Misses Ann Trenberth, Ethel Wright, May Quandt, Irma Richardson, Adele Beckwith, Ruth Umpstead, Mrs. Owen Umpstead, Mrs. Maude Stendel, Mrs. Hubert Ferris, Mrs. J. E. Walker, Mrs. Tyler and Miss Edith Tyler.

All of the joy of the Halloween season was evident in the elaborate dancing party given by the Elks' Club last night, with many elaborate costumes worn in the masquerade. Dancing continued from 8:30 until midnight, when supper was served. Mrs. Fred Stock, Mrs. J. R. Richardson, Mrs. J. W. Wimberly and Mrs. Catherine Lewis were patronesses of the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kearney, who have been the house guests of the W. F. Reeds for the summer and early autumn months, will return shortly to their home in Corpus Christi, Tex., after a pleasant sojourn here, where they were the center of many social attentions.

TAFT

The marriage of Victor Lutz of Taft, to Miss Mary King of Pennsylvania, which took place on October 3 at the home of the bride's parents, is just being announced to the friends of the bridegroom here. Mr. Lutz went East some time ago for a vacation, but his friends were not aware of the fact that he contemplated bringing home a bride. The young people have arrived in Taft and will make their home at Eighth and Lucard, where they have taken a cottage. Mr. Lutz is employed by the Standard Oil Company.

Mrs. George F. McKinnie delightfully entertained at luncheon, honoring Mrs. George F. Turner of Fresno, president of the San Joaquin Valley Federation of Woman's Clubs, who was here to attend the Kern county convention on Saturday. Invited to meet Mrs. Turner were Mrs. V. D. Black, county federation president, Maricopa; Mrs. Ulah B. Mattison, president of the Maricopa Club, Mrs. G. Kay Johnston, head of the Taft Club; Mrs. B. M. Starksen, secretary of the Taft Club.

Honoring Mrs. Clarence Cochrum, who leaves this week to reside in San Mateo, Mrs. H. C. Knofler and Mrs. Harry Preston entertained at the home of the former. The afternoon was pleasantly spent and a dainty repast served at the close. Sharing the affair with the honor guest were: Mmes. J. Ramage, D. Steward, Erbe Knick, Froyd Grinner, W. Munker, G. H. Eddinger, E. Foss, C. H. Ferguson, Harry Morgan and Mrs. Perry B. Stickles.

Members of the Woman's Improvement Club and their friends will gather at the clubhouse for the first card party of the season. This is the first of a series that will be given by the women. Mmes. E. H. Conklin, J. Van De Luyster and Guy Merritt are the hostesses and there will be handsome prizes and refreshments.

The affair is open to everyone who cares for a game of cards. Five Hundred will be the game tonight, although plans are being made to add a bridge section later.

Resignation of Mrs. V. D. Black of Maricopa as president of the county Federation of Women's Clubs, and election of Mrs. H. R. Peacock of Bakersfield as her successor, was one of the outstanding features of the annual convention of the county federation held here Saturday.

RIALTO

Mr. and Mrs. William Burrington delightfully entertained as house guests Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dodge and two children of Detroit, Mich., who left on Monday for their eastern home. Mr. Dodge is Mrs. Burrington's nephew.

Mr. and Mrs. William Koch dispensed delightful hospitality on Sunday at their North Olive-street home. It was a family dinner and was given out of compliment to Mrs. E. Neiner and her four children of San Francisco. Blossoms of the season were used in artistic decoration and, being after the usual style of such affairs, quite informal, the day was happy indeed. Covers were arranged for the honor guests, Mrs. B. Sieck of Upland, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rickman, the host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Kingman and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Kingman attended the Illinois picnic at Sycamore Grove, Los Angeles, stopping on the way back for a view of the display at the Pomona fair.

Prof. Henry, Miss Lida M. Henry and Miss Friend left for the home of Prof. Henry at Sarasota, Fla., where they will spend the winter.

This week Mrs. A. D. Litts accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Harper of Ontario on a delightful trip to Santa Paula, where they visited Mrs. Ewing Shumaker and family.

PORTERVILLE

A pleasing dinner-dance on last Thursday evening opened the fall season of the Tulare County Golf and Country Club, being attended by about 100 members and guests. Latest dance music was supplied by a five-piece orchestra. These affairs will be featured the first and last Thursdays of each month during the season until the summer vacation. The committee in charge of arrangements includes Mmes. M. C. Mattinson of Porterville, C. R. Burnett and Sol Rosenthal of Tulare, Nate Lang and R. E. Hyde of Visalia, W. C. Keeley and Star Warson of Lindsay and Miss Lucile Linden of Strathmore. Messrs. E. G. Hall and Paul J. Robinson of Porterville, Charles Gaines of Strathmore, B. Woody and Charles Towt of Lindsay and Peter Perkins of Visalia.

Walter H. Girder and Mrs. Thelma Emery of Porterville were married in Visalia Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Earl L. Karsteadt of the First Christian Church officiating. Miss Alice Hamilton of White River acted as maid of honor. The young couple are well known in the Porterville and White River districts, where the groom is engaged in ranching.

The first meeting of the season of the drama section of the Porterville Improvement Club was held Monday afternoon at the Woman's clubhouse. Mrs. F. F. Stowe gave a short paper on the "One-Act Play," and was followed by the presentation of "Hearts," under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Tharp, and written by Alice Gerstenberg. The cast included Mmes. H. C. Carr, A. S. Mapes, Jack Scott and S. I. Braderick. Tea was served at the conclusion of the entertainment, hostesses being Mmes. J. W. Stephens, A. T. Warden, Leo Pohlman, G. E. Lawrence and J. A. Trowbridge.

WOODLAKE

The Tuesday Evening 500 Club resumed its social events for the season of 1922-23 on Wednesday evening with a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morton W. Fraser.

Mrs. F. J. Mains was elected president and decision was made to meet twice a month. Prizes for the evening were captured by W. C. Phillips and Mrs. Gordon C. Day, while the consolations went to Mrs. O. H. Ruth and H. Van Patten.

A pleasing musical entertainment was given at the high school Friday evening. Among attractions of the program were numbers by Keener's Symphony Orchestra and Joe Joseph of Visalia. Among Woodlake musicians appearing were Marion Whiteman, teacher of music in the Woodlake schools; Corrinne and Mrs. Rucker, Miss Eva Denton, Miss Gladys Day, Mrs. R. C. Ainley and Mr. and Mrs Irma Cole.

Among the out-of-town people attending the Elderwood Citrus Association banquet Saturday night were Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Ballard of Exeter, Mr. and Mrs. John Bell of Corcoran, Judge and Mrs. Allen of Visalia and Enos Barton of Three Rivers.

Albert Lucas and George Kimball entertained a number of young people at the church last Monday evening. Those present were Mada and Lorine Solmun, Ruth Clayton, Arlean Arney, Laura Dykes, Ealine Welch, Doyle McGuire, Lenel Shuck, Edwin Ropes, Johnnie Blalock and Herman Anderson.

TULARE

Miss Mattie Webb of the Tulare grammar school faculty was a week-end guest at the home of her cousins, Mrs. Robert A. Mack and Miss Mary Ellen Eastwood in Porterville. On Sunday evening Miss Webb was complimented by a delightful dinner party. Autumn flowers were used profusedly in decoration. An amethyst glass bowl, filled with lavender cosmos, purple petunias, pink roses and ferns, formed the center of table decorations featuring the grape harvest. Huge bunches of purple and red grapes, combined with grape leaves and smilax were used flat—interwoven among amethyst glass candlesticks, and the soft lights added to the attraction. Hand-made place cards, featuring girls in green gowns with grape leaf aprons marked the covers, while appropriate limericks created merriment. Lavender and pink baskets of pastel candies were used as favors and the color scheme was carried out in the menu. With the coffee amusing fortunes were read and the guests made sketches of the honor guest, also writing "good wishes" for her fortune. A program of music completed the entertainment. Covers were laid for Miss Mattie Webb, Miss Leota Williamson, Miss Mary Ellen Eastwood, Mrs. Robert A. Mack, Messrs. Albert J. Barker, Mervin Fulton Carlos Templeton and Sardie Templeton.

At a quiet wedding performed Saturday morning in Hanford, Miss Mima Rush of Tulare, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Rush, became the bride of Lee Sanders, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Sanders of the Linder district. Only immediate friends and relatives were present. Following the ceremony the young couple left for the north to spend several weeks' honeymoon.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Sanders are well known in Tulare and will return to make this city their home.

LA HABRA

Members of the Valada Five Hundred Club were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Wester, at the Hacienda clubhouse on the golf links, Saturday evening. The game was a lively affair, Mrs. Little and Frank Lightfoot receiving the first prize, and Mrs. Launer and Mr. Bishop the consolation. At the close of the game Mrs. Frank Armstrong, the club hostess, served a delicious three-course luncheon, after which dancing was enjoyed by the members, which included Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Wester, Mr. and

Doyle Calls Chicago Noisiest City He Has Ever Known—But Has Interesting Psychic Experiences There—Aviator Tells Him of Drifting Spider Webs and Spiders 12,000 Feet in Air

The children are what the Americans call good mixers, and their jovial, smiling, British faces have, I am sure, left a trail of good feeling behind us: It is most amusing to listen to their conversation and to notice the effect which it has upon their chance acquaintances. Today on the way from Toledo to Chicago they were seated in the dining car beside a very staid business man of mature years, while we sat at the next table, and our horrified ears caught occasional snatches of the unbroken conversation. "Were you ever in a railway accident?" "Yes, I was in my bunk and the engine jumped the line." "Oh, how lovely! Where did it jump to?" "What made it jump?" "What had you in your bunk?" "Did you want to dress?" "Well then, how did you manage?" "What did the people say?" Muttered explanations from the good-natured traveller. Then we catch an outburst again. "Did you ever fire a revolver?" "Who at?" "Was it a poisonous snake?" "How long was the snake?" "Have you ever been in Florida?" "We are taking a snake home with us." "Have you ever been chased by Indians?" "Would they torture you if they caught you?" These dear good Americans try to keep up but it is breathless work, and they love it and become children themselves before they are through. Mr. Keedick, my manager and good friend, forgets all about business when he is near them. He has started them with a baseball set, and they are already "fans," "rooters" and every other word for enthusiasts. Today they came back from a game shining with joy, because Alexander, a famous pitcher, had given each a ball, and they had been photographed holding his hands.

NEGROES INTEREST DOYLE

I have taken such chances as I could to have chats with the negro waiters on the cars and I have found some of them very well-informed and intelligent men. One of them told me that he had been a medical student until he had been forced to quit "by this accursed color bar." Several of them were interested in psychic subjects and they have a fine lecturer and medium of their own race in Mrs. Crear of Columbus, who afterward made a very favorable impression at the International Spiritual Congress in London. Although I found myself of quite a contrary opinion to a friend who maintained that they were really of a different order of reason to ourselves. One of his anecdotes, even if apochryphal, was amusing. A negro lodged $35 at a negro bank. A few years later he called to draw his money. "No, no," said the cashier, also a negro. "It was only $35 at the beginning and the interest has done eat that up long ago."

the American Congress and Mr. Willett of Sloane Square in high cabal have mussed things up in such a way that one can never tell in traveling in this country what the time may be. When I remember that gentle little white mouse of a man, whose early efforts I supported, it is a most comical thing to think he has had a more direct and in some ways a more confusing effect upon mankind than any modern reformer. He was really under his humble exterior (I remember him in a bowler hat and a frock coat) a great original-minded Englishman and deserves any posthumous honor that could be paid him. But here he had done things to drive one crazy. Some States have adopted him and some have not, and you never know when you are over the border. One mile of longitude makes you an hour late for dinner. Then, on the top of this, Congress has forbidden the railways to alter their times so as to match with the local change, so that there is local time and also railway time with an hour of difference. When in addition you realize that the clock is naturally changed in any case by an hour to every 1000 miles as you go westward you will understand why the lunacy statistics are steadily rising.

REACHES CHICAGO

I spent my first morning in Chicago at the Loomis street headquarters of the spiritualists, where they have a fine, solid, well-furnished place, not unlike Mr. Hewat MacKenzie's Psychic College in London. A young medium and inventor, Mr. Burket, was waiting for me with an amplifying machine with which he hoped to be able to reinforce the human ear, and so get fine whispers, possibly preternatural, far above what we can hear normally. My own feeling is that what we need is an aparatus which will not only amplify but will turn high sounds into low ones, for I could conceive that the buzz of a mosquito would be a deep bass compared to the octaves, if any, on which etheric sounds would register. Mr. Burket assured me that he had actually got messages, and the future may prove that he is on the right track. The amplifier increased sounds a hundredfold and could, theoretically, do so a thousand-fold but for some reason which is beyond my limited science, after the hundred-fold point a sort of droning echo sets in, like the moan heard in a seashell, but infinitely louder, and this drowns all other sounds. We sat with a strong circle, Mrs. Cadwallader, one of the leaders of the spiritualists, and editor of the Progressive Thinker, Col. West, Dr. Burgess and Mrs. Langley, the latter a veteran medium. I strained my ear at the huge horn from which sound issues, but alas I could get nothing. I was sorry for the young inventor, who was cast down at the result, but if he is on the true path he will surely emerge in time. I have a strong feeling that it is on this line, radio plus amplifier, that we shall open up fruitful lies of research.

In spite of our familiarity with great meetings, Chicago rather took our breath away. We are certainly ending on our top note. All seats were sold out by the afternoon, and there were 250 people crammed on the platform. It was with some difficulty that my wife and I reached our central chairs. It was a wonderful bank, or series of banks, o ffaces, stretching away back into the gloom. My wife tells me that I rose to the occasion, I was moved myself and so perhaps I was able to move others. There was hardly a cough or a movement for the hour and a half of the address. When I ended there were cries for my wife, and I glanced at her, but she prefers not to speak in public. If she could let her burning feelings have full play, and voice her deep womanly desire to bring comfort to the stricken, she would be a world force. She has that human touch, that natural touch of the heart, which no man can ever attain. When we got into the street it was raining heavily and Widdecombe disappeared in search of a cab. In an instant, under the pelting shower, a group of people, without an umbrella among them, pressed around us with eager questions about life and death. A poor, ragged man with unsold papers under his arm was the most eager. Why did we remember nothing before birth? What about reincarnation? They were eager to know more, but the cab came and we left them still arguing—a scene no man could invent.

RECEPTION BY SPIRITIST

The good spiritualists of Chicago had arranged a reception very much on the lines of that which we had in Melbourne over a year ago. It was a very pleasant evening, but instead of congregations, only delegates seem to have been present, so that the numbers were not imposing. I had hoped that it would have been an occasion for showing our strength, whereas it gave a wrong impression to the press as to our numbers. However, the proceedings were very hearty and cheerful and we received so many flowers that the cab was absolutely filled with them. I proposed that an obelisk be built by international subscription and erected at Rochester and the proposal was well received. We put forward $250 and the Chicago headquarters did the same, so we start level. The task of collecting the money has been left to me. I can only hope that they will take my view, but for some reason we have never found our people very generous and many continually receive the greatest of all blessings at our hands without any return. It is at present the same small group of men and women who do all the work and find all the money.

I had an interesting talk while in Chicago with Maj. Schroeder, who broke the height record in 1920 in his airplane. He reached 37,000 feet. At that point something went wrong with his oxygen tube and he fell down in the car among the carbon dioxide which came from the exhaust. This poisonous stuff would soon have killed him, but the machine, left to itself, fell seven miles in less than three minutes. The improved air revived Schroeder and he was able to regain command when only about 1800 feet above earth. Fancy falling like a stone for seven miles! I am not sure if it is a nightmare or a dream of bliss. He had read my story, "The Horror of the Heights," and admitted to me that he always, at great altitudes had a subconscious fear that he might meet some new form of life. "Look out for those big angle worms!" they had called to him as he left the ground. After all, the deepest sea sustains life—why not the highest air? As a matter of fact the only strange thing he ever saw was a flight of snow white birds, like robins, flying at 12,000 feet altitude. Also drifting spider webs with spiders still on them. The great problem is to prevent your eyes freezing, which is done by double glasses with a sort of thermos arrangement. No one, he thinks, will ever get much higher because the tenuous air will not give a grip to the machine. Altogether I was very interested in our talk.

YOUNG DOYLE TURNS WRITER

The reporters are certainly hard to please. In Toledo they proclaimed, probably with truth, that I was careless of dress. In Chicago they described me as exquisite, or at any rate they depicted me as wearing a light blue suit, a purple tie, purple silk socks and white slippers. The latter I must plead guilty to, and they would have elicited "Niagara, I perceive," from the late Mr. Holmes, for the children gave them to me there as a local curiosity. The papers have been making free with the children, also, saying, to their great indignation, "the young Doyles are bored stiff with their parents, spiritualism but want more yarns from him." "I'd like to see that editor," said Denis, grimly, as he read it. "Same here!" piped the small voice of Billy. "I'm bored stiff with his paper, said Malcolm. But the press usually holds the balance true in the end, and they have actually published Malcolm's first story, which is told in a series of pictures in the Evening American. They are really excellent and we are all very pleased at it, from the first legend "The black gang going to raid the house of James Banker, a millionaire," through "'Hands up, you dog!' cried the captain" up to "We drop a bomb on one of the motor cars of the black gang." The picture of the young author in a moment of inspiration was appended.

Chicago is the very noisiest city I have ever known. It is a serious drawback to its amenity. All the pavements seem to rumble, all the trains whistle, the taxis hoot, the brakes grind and the wheels scream. On the other hand, the great lake is splendid, and I see it sparkling in the sun even as I write. The drives and parks are beautiful, and the people among the kindest and best that we have met.

The Chicago press treated me with great courtesy and I had every fair play, in spite of a howl from one Voliva, who is the head of Zion City and successor of Dr. Dowie. He attacked on the ancient lines of Demonism, but his argument was not very effective, and I have seen the points, such as they are, better made. From my point of view it is almost as important to religion, in this age of unimaginative materialism, to show the existence of a evil spirit as of a good one. Anything to make us understand that we are in the midst of great unseen forces and that three meals a day and a feather bed do not fill all the possibilities of life.

COL. WEST'S EXPERIENCES

I had a long talk with Col. West of the United States Army as to the causes which led to his understanding these truths. Like myself, he had been an agnostic until these phenomena forced themselves upon his attention. One of his own little children developed automatic writing and wrote out the whole life of one George Smith of the Confederate Army, describing his imprisonment at Andersonville, his death, and many family particulars, which were afterward verified. As an example of how children grow up and are educated in the other world, one of his daughters died when two years old. Two years later she returned at a seance, lisped out a message of greeting, told that her grandfather Price was looking after her, and finally said some words of Welsh which he had taught her. Another child who had died at sea and was buried in the Pacific Ocean came back. "I am your little girl. Don't think that I was left in all that water," said she. The colonel is in the same happy position as I, for his wife has shared the evidence and therefore feels the same convictions with equal strength. Together they should be powerful instruments for good, now that he is free from his military duties. In the war he was head of one of the greatest prison camps in the country.

As I look back upon the mediums whom we have tried in America it must be confessed that the result has not been striking. Save for Miss Besinnet, whose powers had already been tested, there had been nothing outstanding. I had been unable to meet the elder Keeler at Washington, though I am assured that his powers have been very real, though now somewhat impaired and under suspicion of the researchers. The criticism that his messages are all written in the same hand is really beside the point, for it is always admitted that, save in certain test cases, the writing is from the control using the medium. The younger Keller was also unable to meet me, but the evidence is strong for his true powers upon occasions. For the rest, we had one setback in New York, and several "as in a glass darkly," where gleams of evidence, like the "Floreat" of Mrs. Soulis, came through a mist of words, and John Ticknor was also interesting and impressive. It was our good fortune now to come once again in contact with a really great medium in Mrs. Pruden of Cincinnati, who had come to Chicago for my lectures. We had a sitting in the Blackstone Hotel, through the courtesy of her host, Mr. Holmyard, and the results were splendid. She is an elderly, kindly woman, with a motherly manner. Her particular gift was slate-writing, which I had never examined before. I had heard that there were trick slates, but she was anxious to use mine, and allowed me to carefully examine hers. She makes a dark cabinet by draping the table and holds the slate under it, while you may hold the other corner of it. Her other hand is free and visible. The slate is double, with a little bit of pencil put in between. After a delay of half an hour the writing began.

AUTOMATIC SLATE WRITING

It was the strangest feeling to hold the slate and to feel the thrill and vibration of the pencil as it worked away inside. We had each written a question on a bit of paper and cast it down, carefully folded, on the ground in the shadow of the drapery, that psychic forces might have correct conditions for their work, which is always interfered with by light. Presently each of us got an answer to our question upon the slate, and were allowed to pick up our folded papers and see that they had not been opened. The room, I may say, was in full daylight and the medium of course could not stoop without our seeing it. I had some business this morning of a partly spiritual, partly material nature with a Dr. Gelbert, a French inventor. I asked in 'my question if this were wise. The answer on the slate was "Trust Dr. Gelbert. Kingsley." I had not mentioned Gelbert's name in my question nor did Mrs. Pruden know anything of the matter. My wife got a long message from a dear friend, signed with her name. The name was a true signature. Altogether it was a most utterly convincing demonstration. Sharp, clear raps upon the table joined continually in our conversation. It is certainly a very beautiful form of mediumship, and I have tried to persuade Mrs. Pruden, who is not a professional medium, to come over to the Psychic College and give demonstrations. The more I see of this subject the more I feel how indebted we are to Mr. and Mrs. Hewat MacKenzie for that exellent institution.

Impersonates Woman But Is Real Live Chap

Behind the pseudonym of the "Creole Fashion Plate," and in spite of dainty feminine costumes, penciled brows and delicately minced manners, lies a personality of a very likeable boy. Down in Baltimore, whence he came, his schoolmates still know him as George Peduzzi, but in the theaters of the Orpheum circuit he is known as "Karyl Norman."

Until recently, however, neither the people of the theater nor the general public knew any name for him other than the Creole Fashion Plate, but George Peduzzi is too manly a fellow to masquerade all through life in petticoats, and so when he began his present tour—a tour which brings him to the Orpheum Theater this week—he gave the vaudeville executives his ultimatum that a boy's name had to be used in conjunction with the advertising of the act.

His father's name was Norman Peduzzi. Orpheum executives are too wise and too widely experienced in dealing with the amusement-seeking public to believe that such a name would be an asset, hence, at their suggestion, the Creole Fashion Plate adopted his father's given name and prefixed it with "Karyl." It is the boy's ambition to some day discard skirts altogether and appear as his very self.

He has a voice of double quality and sings soprano and baritone.

"I am a regular fellow," he said with some feeling, the other day, "and I do most strenuously object to any suggestion that because a man impersonates women, there must be something feminine about him," and he illustrated the negative of this with a clenched fist hit roundly upon the make-up table in his dressing-room.

George, or Karyl, is an enthusiastic fight fan, a great rooter at football games, an ardent baseball patron and an amateur player of no mean ability. He has a fine sense of the artistic, as is evidenced not only in the beautiful gowns he wears in his feminine impersonations, but also in the rendition of his songs.

Mrs. Peduzzi, Karyl's mother, travels with him, assists in his preparations for the stage, aiding in his dressing and make-up. His father died recently.

STUDENTS WIN FAME

Pupils of Dancing School Are Known On the Stage

Many students of the McAdam Normal School of Dancing are winning fame and recognition in the professional world. Pierre Morneau, a young dancer, has recently appeared at several musicales and club programs with his artistic numbers which showed training to a high degree. His costumes added much to the beauty of his numbers.

Miss Katherine Grant, who was recently chosen to represent Los Angeles in the beauty contest at Atlantic City, is now appearing at the Greenwich Village Theater in New York City. Miss Grant, who is a protege of Adeline McAdam, and received her training at the McAdam Normal School, is versatile, executing with equal skill ballet, classic, character, eccentric and acrobatic dancing. Many offers have been made this young artist, who is at present considering motion-picture contract with Lasky.

SEARCHING FOR SHOCK

There are so many instances where speech and hearing have been restored by a severe shock that there is a general notion among deaf and dumb persons that their salvation rests in this direction. Consequently they are resorting to airplane trips as a means of restoring their functions. The manager of the air station at Croydon, England, reports that he is besieged with requests from these afflicted persons who are hopeful that an experience in midair might supply the necessary shock. The parents of an afflicted child brought their offspring to the station and made a request that the child be taken aloft with the idea of possibly curing her, but aside from the tonic effect upon the child there was no other result. The child returned to the ground in a very happy frame of mind and was delighted with her experience. It has been suggested that the trip aloft does not have the desired effect for the reason that the various experiences in the air are more or less expected and therefore the element of suddenness and shock are lacking.

Society.

Mrs. R. F. Frantz, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Little, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Ridgeway, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Leuhm, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. E. Lutewiler, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Launer and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lightfoot of Fullerton. Miss Fotheringham and Miss Naomi MacGilvery of Santa Ana were guests.

Triple T's, a club of young matrons, laid aside their thimbles and needles Thursday and enjoyed an afternoon of five hundred. The affair was at the home of Mrs. Ray Frantz, it being the regular meeting day of the club. A short business session was followed by the diversion of the hour. High scores were made by Mrs. Bishop and Miss Pauline Crumrine, Mrs. C. L. Crumrine receiving the consolation. Halloween favors, score cards and decorations were used. Those present included Mrs. E. A. Bishop, Mrs. A. J. Wilson, Mrs. H. H. Peabody, Mrs. Louie Mochow, Mrs. William Heiden, Mrs. N. M. Launer, Mrs. Edgar Leuhm, Mrs. Thomas Mahoney, Mrs. A. J. Sweany, Mrs. Rollo Hilbert, Mrs. A. H. Johnson, Mrs. A. S. Chunning, Mrs. Edgar Lutewiler, Mrs. L. J. Wester, Mrs. C. L. Crumrine, Mrs. H. E. Little and Mrs. Bruce Standford, and Mrs. Charles Brewster of Huntington Beach, Mrs. Wanda Davis Phillips of Los Angeles, and Miss Pauline Crumrine.

The La Habra Woman's Club will be represented in the huge Armistice Day program that will be held in Fullerton on November 11. Plans were made at the club meeting Tuesday, and France will be represented in the international peace division by the La Habra Club. Mrs. C. L. Crumrine, Mrs. Walter Hole, Mrs. Rollo Hilbert, Mrs. McBurney and Mrs. F. E. Proud will have this matter in charge. Members to attend the county federation meeting at Santa Ana Saturday were: Mrs. C. E. Tower, Mrs. W. L. Rhodes, Mrs. C. L. Crumrine, Mrs. Mae Bloomer, Mrs. M. F. Davis, Mrs. J. I. Williams, Mrs. H. H. Peabody, Mrs. A. H. Hart, Mrs. Emma Sweany.

OLINDA

Delightfully surprising her sister, Mrs. Earl Abbott, Mrs. Elmore Venable of Lynwood, took possession of the Abbott home in its mistress's absence, and staged a birthday party for her. The guests were the mother, Mrs. C. May, and the six sisters of the honoree. These were the hostess, Mrs. Venable, Mrs. B. F. Feel, Mrs. Gordon Alon, Mrs. Kenneth Grotengier, Mrs. C. W. Pellet of Los Angeles, Mrs. J. H. William of Pasadena, and the honored guest, Mrs. Abbott. A delicious chicken dinner was served, gifts of growing things, plants and rare bulbs were presented to their sister by the guests. Pink cosmos were used profusely in decorating the pleasant rooms.

Mrs. C. H. Dauel entertained at dinner Sunday. Guests were: The Rev. Reese Robbins of San Diego, who has charge of the Pilgrim church during the absence of its pastor, Rev. Dauel, who had been attending the International Holiness Association, convened at Cincinnati, O., Miss Reese, Miss Mary Powers of Pasadena, and Mrs. W. Blood of San Diego.

Sunday dinner guests at homes in Olinda were: Mr. and Mrs. Guy Loomis, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Walker of Whittier were guests at the Wayne Loomis home. C. E. Kinline, Miss Heids of Santa Monica, Mr. and Mrs. C. Heids and daughter of Los Angeles and Mrs. Elmer Seguine and son Ray, enjoyed the day with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schneider.

NEILAN EXPLAINS SCREEN MYSTERY

NOTED PRODUCER TELLS WHY WHEELS GO BACKWARD IN PICTURES

Riding to work one morning, Marshall Neilan and a companion were enjoying the scenery between Hollywood and Culver City, when suddenly an apparition confronted them. It was a flivver seemingly gone all wrong. As they approached they discovered that the body of the car had been reversed on the chassis, and the steering wheel was where the back seat out to be.

"Oh!" exclaimed the fellow-companion, "It's all fixed for the movies, isn't it? That's the first time I've ever seen one, but I knew they had to fix automobiles that way to get them going right in the picture." Whereupon Mr. Neilan laughed heartily.

"No," he said, "when you see that car in the movies, it'll be running just as it is now with regards to scenery and everything. It's probably a comedy car."

"Well," asked the f.c., "what does make the wheels go backward in a picture?"

Mr. Neilan proceeded to enlighten him as follows:

"Suppose a close-up of a turning automobile wheel should be photographed. Suppose the wheel had one white spoke. The first picture registered on the film would show the white spoke in a certain position. Then, if the wheel failed to make a complete revolution before the next picture was registered on the film, the white spoke would be shown in a position not quite up to where it was before. And if in each succeeding picture the wheel kept falling a little short of making a complete revolution, it would give the wheel the effect of turning in the opposite direction when the picture was finally projected."

And thus another great national question was solved.

WILKES RETURNING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. — Tom Wilkes, manager of the Majestic Theater Repertory Company of Los Angeles, traveled 6000 miles to see the New York opening of "The Fool," Channing Pollock's new play, at the Times Square Theater. Mr. Wilkes arrived in New York Monday for the opening and left yesterday for Los Angeles.

COMPOSER IN CONCERT

Carrie Jacobs Bond appeared in concert in the auditorium of the Hollywood Women's Club Monday evening for the benefit of the building fund of the club. Her program consisted of original stories and songs.

MORE ENSEMBLE CONCERTS

A series of chamber music recitals are being planned by Frederick Grover, violinist, and Grace E. Bush, pianist, for the coming winter. Mrs. Bush is also conducting a girls' chorus which is to give some concerts.

They are Happy and Well

You Should Be the Same

A LARGE number of women's ailments are not surgical ones. Serious displacements or radical changes have not yet taken place.

A tiny part in a fine clock may become loose and cause the clock to gain or lose. If not attended to in time, the part may fall from its place and cause serious trouble. So it is with women's ailments, they start from simple causes; but if allowed to continue, produce serious conditions.

When the warning symptoms are first noted, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present troublesome ailment, and to prevent the development of serious trouble.

Portland, Ind.—"I was troubled with irregularity and constipation and would often have to lie down because of pains. One Sunday my aunt was visiting us and she said her girls took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got well, so mother said she guessed she would let me try it. It is doing me good and I praise it highly. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial."—STELLA NEWTON, R. R. No. 8, Portland, Ind.

Baltimore, Md.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WAIDNER, 3818 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

Syrup Pepsin Helps Nature Give Relief

Try it when a Laxative is needed and see the wonderful results

IT is not necessary to take a violent physic for so simple an ailment as constipation. Yet many thoughtless parents give mercury in the form of calomel, and coal-tar in the form of phenol when a natural vegetable compound like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do the work equally well and without danger. People should realize that mercury may salivate and in certain conditions loosen the teeth; that phenolphthalein, by whatever name known and however disguised in candy, may cause dermatitis and other skin eruptions; that salt waters and powders may concentrate the blood, dry up the skin and cause lassitude.

You can take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin yourself or give it to a babe in arms, as thousands of mothers do every day, with the confidence that it is the safest and best medicine you can use for constipation and such complaints. A teaspoonful will relieve you over night even if the constipation has been chronic for years. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and does not cramp or gripe. Every druggist handles it, and bottles are so generous that the cost amounts to only about a cent a dose. You buy it with the understanding that if it does not do as claimed your money will be refunded. The names of all the ingredients are on the package.

Mrs. A. Arceneaux of Orange, Texas, suffered from constipation for six years and found no relief until she took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin; and Mrs. Gus Anderson of Ball, Kans., corrected her bowel trouble so that she now eats and sleeps normally. Bring a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin into your own home and let the family use it for constipation, biliousness, wind, gas, headaches, flatulency, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight

Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. He says neglect causes more eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing say they had their eyes restored through the principle of BonOpto.

One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me."

A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses."

Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily and exercise them daily as directed.

You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them." The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family. It is sold by all good druggists.

Stop Rheumatism!

S. S. S. Is the Great Builder of Red-Blood Cells and Rheumatism Must Go! Used Since 1826—Just Try It!

"Rheumatism? Me? No, indeed, it's all gone, every bit of it! It's sunshine and joy for me now for the first time in years. I feel a wonderful glory again in the free motion I used to have when my days were younger. I look at my hands and think of the twists and swellings they used to have. I bend way over to the floor. I haven't been able to do that in many years. I can thank S. S. S. for it all! To me it was a rising sun of joy and liberty. Brothers and sisters in misery, do not close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. It is here and now for all of you. S. S. S. is waiting to help you." There is a reason why S. S. S. will help you. When you increase the number of your red-blood cells the entire system undergoes a tremendous change. Everything depends on blood-strength. Blood which is minus sufficient red-cells leads to a long list of troubles. Rheumatism is one of them. S. S. S. is the great blood-cleanser, blood-builder, system strengthener, nerve invigorator. It stops skin eruptions, too, pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, eczema. It builds up run down, tired men and women, beautifies complexions, makes the flesh firmer. Charlie Batiste, Florence, Texas, writes:

"I take great pleasure in letting you know what S. S. S. has done for me. I have used four bottles of S. S. S. I am up so I can walk. The pain has left my leg. Before using S. S. S. I was in bed three months and could not walk. I will recommend S. S. S. to all who suffer with Rheumatism."

Start S. S. S. today. It is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical.

"Suffering has gone from your face, mother!"

People and Their Troubles

Elizabeth Jordan's Column

BALANCING ONE'S BOOKS

"I have been balancing my books this morning," said Mrs. X. to her sister, Mrs. Y.

Mrs. Y. looked patient. She thought Mrs. X. was referring to household accounts—and that she was about to add, with sisterly candor, advice about Mrs. Y.'s accounts. Mrs. X., reading her thoughts, shook her head.

"That isn't what I meant at all," she explained. "What I am getting at is that I have been making an annual inventory of my own mental and spiritual equipment. I shut myself up in my study and I asked myself what sort of a woman I am."

Mrs. Y. chuckled.

"I could have told you, and you would have avoided all that trouble," she murmured.

Mrs. X. smiled, sadly.

THE FAMILY CRITIC

"No, you couldn't," she said. "In fact, I don't know anyone whose opinion of me, taking me all in all, would be less accurate."

"You mean," suggested Mrs. Y., cheerfully, "that my love for you would blind me to your faults—but it wouldn't."

"I don't mean anything of the kind," said Mrs. X., with some asperity, "and I know perfectly well that 'it wouldn't', as you say.

"As a matter of fact, you are the worst possible judge of me, because you magnify both my good qualities and my faults. You are infinitely more critical about my smaller failings than anyone else is. Indeed," she ended candidly, "you think so much about them and are so constantly on the watch for them that you are in danger of forgetting all about your own faults."

"If you are going to talk like that," began Mrs. Y., huffily.

"I'm not. I'm going to tell you about my inventory. I realize, notwithstanding all theories to the contrary, that the average intelligent woman knows more about herself than anyone else can tell her. She knows her virtues and she knows her faults. She heartily admires certain qualities in herself, and she heartily despises and regrets others. Sometimes, over long periods, she doesn't think much about these things. But if she is sane and progressive she sits down with herself at least once a year and takes account of stock. She asks herself whether she has developed or lost ground during the past year—and she accepts the answer frankly."

"Where does the answer come from?" asked Mrs. Y., somewhat impressed.

THAT INNER VOICE

"From her own soul," said Mrs. X.—"if I may be allowed, for once, to mention it. She asks herself 'Am I as selfish as I was? Am I as quick tempered? Am I more tolerant this year, more sympathetic, more understanding?' And something within her says 'yes' or 'no.' If it tells her that she has improved in even one little point, she feels an increasing self-respect, and she can enter upon her struggle for the next year with more courage. If she can't see any improvement—Oh, then she is an unhappy woman!"

"How do you feel about it?" asked her sister, curiously.

"Rather confused," Mrs. X. confessed. "I think—that is, I hope—that I have gained a little in understanding and courage. But I am afraid I have lost a trifle in poise. Little things irritate me more than they used to. I try to tell myself that it is nerves—that it doesn't go deep. But I am worried about it. This year I have resolved to concentrate on poise—not to let myself be upset by the small annoyances of life. It is so silly to be upset by them. They are so absurdly insignificant compared with the things worth while."

"Yet they are the things that color one's daily life," said Mrs. Y., thoughtfully. "The cook spoils the dessert, the delivery boy forgets the most important article on one's order, one's husband is grumpy at breakfast table, or the waitress breaks a valuable dish, and the whole day is spoiled."

"Ah, but it mustn't be," said Mrs. X., radiantly. "That's just the point. For the next twelve months I'm going to rise above all those things!"

"I wish you success," said Mrs. Y., gloomily. "But I give you exactly one week to keep rising!"

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Let Uncle Sam Do It

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I notice that the officers of the Anti-Saloon League are objecting very much to the display of electric signs, etc., against the Wright bill, although the statements therein are facts. This bill has been voted down twice. Officers of the Anti-Saloon League are not taxpayers. I think it is an incorrect statement to say that the Los Angeles police force does not carry out at present the enforcement of the Volstead Act.

It is not alone carried out by the police in Los Angeles and elsewhere, but in Los Angeles in particular. There are published in your paper daily many hold-ups and robberies for want of proper police protection and I believe the reason of this is, the greatest part of the police are kept busy arresting the violators against the Volstead Act; and as the hold-up men know the police are kept busy that way, has created more crimes than before.

Believing that the Federal government is well able to take care of the enforcement of the prohibition laws, the citizens certainly have a right to have their police attend to the city business.

The Anti-Saloon League, which by the way is now sailing under a wrong name, as there are no more saloons, ought to be made aware of the fact that the Hearst papers, the mouthpiece of the Saloon League organization, is fighting the Wright law in San Francisco and also the Prohibition Act, while here Saloon League's paper is against the Wright law. This is sailing under more false colors.

A Joker In It

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the discussion of amendment No. 5 known as the Housing Act, I see that mention is seldom made of the fact that it will absolutely prohibit the use of shingles for roofs. I think that if this fact was generally known the measure would be defeated. Only a few people besides those interested in paper roofing want to prohibit the use of shingles. The present measure was put through the last Legislature by a trick. Only two or three members of the Legislature knew of the clause prohibiting the use of shingles. It seems possible that it may be passed by the people by the same trick. Those favoring the measure are careful to avoid this matter and to enlarge upon the good features of the bill. To prohibit the use of shingles would be one of the most high-handed outrages which was ever perpetrated upon the public. It would give the paper roof people practically a monopoly.

I am sure that if the voters realize what they are voting for they will not vote no on No. 5 entitled The Housing Act.

Dream Fades Away

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly say for me, that against my will, I am beginning to be opposed to the "dream of city ownership" of public utilities, although they in most instances are or have been most abominable when in the hands of money-grabbing corporations.

We were told that when the city buys the Edison electric service, we were going to get a reduction. Two months has proven this a lie, pure and simple. I am a user of power, and instead of obtaining power at an advance of 10 per cent over alternating current I'm being charged 20 per cent advance—a raise of 10 per cent. The two months the city has had the lighting circuit, my bill for residence has jumped from $1.10 to $1.90, with no increase in usage, approximately, and the highest I have ever paid in my ten years of using.

When asked to explain, one city employee at the Bureau of Light grew indignant and insulting, and said he didn't know and didn't care. I made a suggestion that there was "too much graft," to which he replied warmly, that "I might have to prove that." When I asked him if city employees across the street were not stealing it in lumps of from $2000 to $10,000 he wanted to fight and refused to discuss it further. The bureau of city service has in its employ several old pensioners who are too aged and decrepit to try to fill positions requiring speed and tact, and while they are doubtless good and worthy people, I cannot believe that the city should have in its employ inefficient and wornout men, simply because they "have been good." If the city is going to run a pension bureau at the public expense like the Pacific Electric does at the Hill street station, then it is time the people who pay the bills have something to say.

Am I right or wrong?

M. L. GARRIGUS.

Too Much Propaganda

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am inclined to the opinion that the present Near East Relief campaign smacks too much of propaganda to appeal to the masses. In the first place the people of this country are realizing more and more that the "unspeakable" Turk would be rather a harmless sort of semi-savage if it were not for the civilized enlightenment he is constantly getting from one or more European powers. Christian nations have never hesitated to employ savages in their wars against other Christian nations and the post bellum appeal to Christianity is beginning to pall. The organized churches are always national, they side with the country in which they exist. The recent World War would have been impossible if the organized churches professing to follow Christ had really preached Christ instead of Wilhelm II in one instance, Czar Nicholas in another and so on down the line, in any case national boundary or figure. Then, after it has exhausted Christ as an incentive to fight, it brushes Him up a bit and holds Him up once more as the Prince of Peace.

In the second place, some one is paying for these page advertisements in the newspapers and it is a goodly sum. No doubt, the situation in the Near East is appalling. But, with the men at the head of the relief organizations in this country, its indorsement by the President and by the heads of all the Christian organized churches in the land, it is obvious that adequate money could be raised by submitting the case of the refugees to a limited number of people of large means who would then put up substantial sums to meet the emergency. In fact, I believe that the bulk of the relief fund will be raised in this manner, leaving the advertisements to create a subtle public consciousness which might be of use in case the situation gets away from the diplomats and another war, this time to make the world safe for Christianity, should become necessary or expedient.

Question: Who was Joe Miller, who wrote the "Joke Book?" F. L.

Answer: Joe Miller was an English comedian who lived from 1684 until 1738. So illiterate that he was unable to read, he married that he might have some one to read his parts to him. About this time it became the vogue to publish books of jokes, attributing them to some one person. A year after Miller's death John Mottley compiled a book of seventy-two pages, containing 247 jests, and called it "Joe Miller's Jests." Only three were in any way connected with the author. In 1745 the number of jokes included had risen to 257, and by the middle of the nineteenth century to 1546.

Q.: Is grapefruit more akin to oranges or to lemons? F. H.

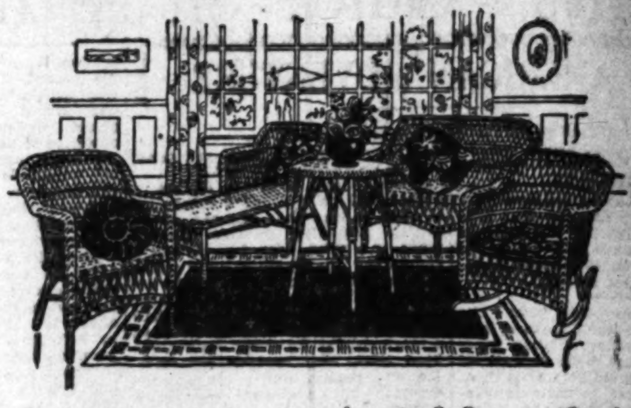
A.: All three belong to the citrus family, but the grapefruit more nearly approaches the orange in amount of sugar and citric acid it contains than the lemon.

Q.: What part of the railroad's receipts are paid out for labor? J. E. H.

A.: In 1920 the total operating revenues of railways of Class I amounted to $6,178,438,459; of this $3,424,075,109 was paid out in salaries and wages, exclusive of that portion of the payroll chargeable to capital account. In 1921 the corresponding figures were $6,515,556,462 and $2,585,329,497. In 1920 55.4 cents in each dollar went to labor, and in 1921 46.9 cents.

Q.: What was the origin of the name Bridget? E. A. E.

A.: There is much romance identified with the name Bridget, which was first used by the ancient Celts. The original form of the name was Brighid, indicating strength. One legend is to the effect that the first girl to bear the name was a daughter of Erse, goddess of wisdom and poetry, and the god of fire. The Scotch version of the name was "Bride." Another bit of Irish folklore has it that after St. Patrick got through with his job of ridding Ireland of snakes he took up the problem of supplying the people with a fit substitute for their heather goddess. With this in mind, he selected a pretty Irish lass just freed from a King's bondage, and rebaptized her Brighid. She became famous as St. Bridget, and was mother superior of a convent with 500 nuns. The name Bridget became popular throughout the British Isles, and modified versions of it are found in all European countries.



Artistic, comfortable—for porch or sun parlor

This set is the ulitmate in artistic design. It is the result of several years' effort to perfect a set for porch and sun parlor which would express beauty, lightness, coolness and withal—extreme durability. It is as light as a Spring breeze and as strong as old Hickory.

Though sold at a popular price, it would grace the most exclusive mansion.

All the frames are of hardwood throughout, covered, as shown, with rich variegated brown rattan—a material stronger than any other used for wicker or reed furniture.

A. H. Knott's "Sunny Cove" is virile, though a trifle heavy. Franz Bischoff gives us very beautiful color, and much good drawing, too, in his study of boats in Los Angeles Harbor, "Between Runs." There is good painting, close study, in William Lees Judson's "Waning Summer." Paul Lauritz's "Silvery Night in Alaska" is a fine piece of snow-painting. This gifted artist is still busily finding himself, and when he does—Well, just look out for something big, that's all. I have heard him criticised for "imitating other painters," but I have not felt the justice of the criticism—in fact, I have, always maintained what I said above, that he is still seeking his stride.

"Portrait of Miss Freda Gosser" is a clever sketch—hardly more than that—in a scheme of reds. Good, direct painting is found in William A. Paxton's "The Lower Road." An admirable arrangement is Marian Leaver Sprunck's "Still Life." Lilia Tuckerman's "Smoke in the Moonlight" is handled with a light touch. Blanche Whelan's "Harbor Mirror," ships at anchor, is fine in color. Frederick Zimmermans "Early Morning, Arroyo," is alive with fresh and vivid greens.

There are only four miniatures in the exhibition—two by Laura M. D. Mitchell and two by Emma Siboni. Miss Mitchell's "Mrs. Tanberg" is a sympathetic portrait of a charming and beautiful woman; Miss Siboni's "Miss Dagmar Godowsky" is vital and colorful.

A finely imaginative piece, though a small one, in the sculptures is Ella Buchanan's "Young Lincoln," the railsplitter shown with an ax in one hand, a squirrel in the other, though you may rest assured he is not going to brain the squirrel with the ax! Maude Daggett's low relief in bronze, "Dorothy Deane," has something of antique simplicity and restraint and beauty. Lora Woodhead Steere's small portrait head, "Frances Ada Patton," is admirable in execution. From Andrew Bjurman comes a small bust in figurine size, "A Winter Girl," that has charm of expression. Indeed, figurines seem to be all that our sculptors have dared to attempt of late. There is only one piece that is life size, Casper Gruenfeld's notable portrait bust of Walter B. Stevenson.

Beulah May has genuine character in her head, "The Pioneer." Marguerite Tew's vivacious figures of Indians, "Fire Dancer" and "Okoya," are extremely interesting. Julia Bracken Wendt, born liontamer and charmer of snakes, offers us an august wildcat of an age that is still tender, "Baby Bob," and a delightful tiny group of a mouse and a lizard, "Wee Sleekitt Beasties," both of them full of sympathy and knowledge—and humor and poetry.

I hope I have interested you in this interesting exhibition. Now go out to the Los Angeles Museum and study it well.

Counterfeit Presentments—XVIII

I believe he's a pretty good publicity man. Sometimes I think he's a hopeless painter. Then suddenly I see a group of his things—some of the very ones I've condemned—under certain conditions, and I'm surprised at their artistic quality and charm.

Of this I'm convinced in my own mind—he's not a sure-fire painter, or maybe he shows his bad stuff as well as his good, and so creates that impression. You see, all of us do a lot of rotten stuff, but we ought to keep it dark, we shouldn't let the public in on our skeleton and closet affairs.

But all this isn't charateristic of any one man—as a portrait it is composite. So I'll try again.

He is a good publicity man. He's wide awake and fires quick on all current questions in art. He doesn't put himself forward so you can notice it,—and yet—we all know him through his indefatigable efforts.

His water colors are prolific—a mad riot of impossible colors, without rhyme or reason,—and if he can get a rise out of any one as to their unreasonableness he rides their criticism to the limit—lifts himself as far as their rise will let him. A question of a rainbow is a mere promise to him of mounting the sky, swallowing the whole prism, and then doubling it.

In a way he is a wonder.

He's as full of ideas as a dog is of fleas. And they are active, working, busy ideas that he puts right out to service, and they bring him returns. Incidentally, every one concerned is kept so busy they never question how it came about. And new ideas in the meantime are hatching. And new water colors are being made. And some people rave over their exotic beauty, while others rave over their bilious banality and before the question is settled as to worth, other ideas and more water colors are appearing.

Solon Borglum Memorial Fund

The friends and associates of Solon H. Borglum, patriotic American, eminent sculptor and teacher, who died last January, have planned to raise a fund to commemorate his life and influence. It is difficult to estimate how great was the loss to American art through his premature passing. It is proposed that the fund shall be applied in the following ways:

First—A memorial window, designed by Putnam Brinley, is to be placed in the porch of St. Mark's Church, New Canaan, which Borglum attended during the last years of his life. Second, Solon Borglum's book on "Sound Construction," a volume of lasting value, is to be published. The purpose of the book is thus expressed in Borglum's words:

"The master workers of all ages devoted a large part of their lives to the understanding of the construction of the natural form. With this understanding the student is enabled to demonstrate, with courage and conviction, his individual expression of the ideals of his time and country."

Tolles Chamberlin, who was associated with Solon Borglum as teacher of art in New York, and who is now instructor in the Chouinard School, says that his friend often read to him, even into midnight and long after, from the manuscript of this book, on which Borglum was working enthusiastically when time permitted.

The list of subscribers to the memorial fund will be printed in the volume, and notification of its issue will be sent to each subscriber. On the committee for the fund are such men as Herbert Adams, Robert I. Aitken, Paul W. Bartlett, George Grey Barnard, E. H. Blashfield, Daniel Chester French, Jules Guerin, Anna Vaughn Hyatt, Hermon A. MacNeill, and Frederick MacMonnies.

In this connection it may be interesting to remember that Solon Borglum spent part of his early manhood with his now equally famous brother, Gutzon Borglum, in Santa Ana. Gutzon writes of his brother in the New York Times:

"Solon was a sculptor, of whom we have in the world too few. His creations met Angelo's strictures, in that they might roll down a mountainside and the best of them remain. He felt beauty in the mass, isolated, contained, and he enveloped his forms, not with incompleted bulk, but in studied mass."

The brothers were separated for many years. Gutzon writes further: "I did not again meet him until on my return from France in 1894. He was running a ranch in Western Nebraska. . . . On scraps of writing paper he had recorded with photographic truth movement, walking, trotting, single-foot galloping of horse, steer and lesser animals of the prairie. I pleaded with him to give up his ranch and follow art, and this he shortly did and joined me in California."

The rest we know, if not in detail, at least in its ultimate result.

Artists Visit U.S.S. California

There was an exodus of artists from Laguna Beach on Saturday of last week, their objective point being San Pedro and their incentive an invitation to inspect the U.S.S. California, flagship of the Pacific Fleet, view a boat race between crews from the several ships and take luncheon with officers on board the California.

Augmented by artist members from Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Pasadena and other points, the party aggregated over 100. Launches were in waiting at the Submarine Base to convey visitors to the California, where they were greeted by the ship's band.

Admiral Eberle having expressed a desire to meet all the artist visitors, Miss Anna A. Hills, president of the Laguna Beach Art Association, did the honors, introducing them in person to the admiral.

Then came the call to luncheon, and the visitors were shown into the dining salon. Capt. Bell extended welcome to the members of the Laguna Beach Art Association, and voiced the appreciation of Admiral Eberle and his brother officers in having the opportunity to meet them. He spoke of the incident that had led to the invitation to visit the ship, that being the presentation to the flagship of a painting by Clarkson Coleman, who at one time was a sailor himself.

It was especially fitting, said Capt. Bell, that the artists, working in the development of their ideals in their chosen profession, should see what the men of our Navy were endeavoring to do in their field of labor, and even more appropriate that the California, as representative of the State, should have its walls ornamented with handiwork of its artists. Therefore he hoped that other members of the association would remember them.

Miss Hillis responded on behalf of the visitors, thanking Admiral Eberle, Capt. Bell and the other officers for the splendid welcome and the pleasant entertainment provided. The occasion is one that will linger long in the memory of those who were on the California that day.

Club's Special Meeting

The California Art Club held a special meeting at the clubrooms Thursday evening, the 26th inst., for the purpose of taking more definite action on their building program. It was been deemed advisable by the board of control and the building fund committee, to place the entire campaign in the hands of a man of long experience in raising funds for museums and the like. This is not intended to minimize the work already done by the committee and other individuals who have given their time and thought to the plan thus far. The ground has been prepared.

The club has now reached the point where the undivided time and energy of an expert are required to bring the financial side to fruition.

Exhibitions will be conducted on Broadway, in which every member will be able to assist without interfering with his work of production. There will be publicity aplenty, but always in keeping with the dignity of the profession and the high ideals of the club.

News and Notes

The trustees of the Southwest Museum have issued an invitation to friends of Los Angeles art, for a private viewing of the competitive exhibition of works by California painters on the evening of the 31st inst., from 8 to 10 o'clock. The exhibit opens to the public on the following day. It will undoubtedly prove to be a very interesting one, with representative works from many of our strongest painters. If you are lucky enough to have an invitation for next Tuesday evening you will meet the exhibiting artists, as well as the trustees of the museum and the hostesses for the evening.

A tribute to the little band of undaunted enthusiasts who first bore the torch of art across the Sierras; to those who, true to the traditions of their kind, gave their all in spirit and energy to keep that torch aglow, and to so elevate it that a few faint rays of beauty might penetrate and help to illuminate the thorny path through the wilderness for their associates and neighbors—this is the thought from which was born the "Pioneer Dinner" of the Hollywood Art Association that is to take place at the Hollywood Woman's Club on the evening of November 18 at 7 o'clock.

The Group of Eight held their first meeting of the season at the new studio of Henri de Kruif on Tuesday evening, the 24th inst. Plans for coming exhibitions were discussed, and there was much friendly jollification. In spite of Mr. De Kruif's explicit directions and porch lighting, most of the guests insisted on coming through the back door.

Prizes will be awarded at the exhibition of the California Art Club by members of the club. They are therefore invited to visit the gallery at the Los Angeles Museum at their convenience between October 19 and November 2, to cast their ballots for first, second and third choice for the figure, landscape and sculpture prizes.

Landscapes and figures, the landscapes predominating in numbers, are being exhibited through the month of October by Jean Mannheim at the Public Library in Long Beach. The papers of Long Beach are giving the exhibit every favorable comment—naturally enough.

Bill Hart's latest book for boys has just been published by Houghton Mifflin Company. This is a sprightly bit of autobiography, "Told Under a White Oak Tree," by Pinto Pony, edited by Bill Hart himself. The illustrations and the paper cover are by James Montgomery Flagg.

The collection of prints, with two small paintings, that Merle Armitage is showing to November 1 in the printroom of the Los Angeles Museum will convince the most skeptical that a lover of art need not be rich and yet, with taste, patience and foresight, may be able to possess genuine treasures of art. Mr. Armitage's collection is small—there are only fifteen prints—but how exquisitely right! Look at his Rembrandt, his Seymour Haden, his Zorn, his Whistler, his Daminakes! Then look at his two paintings—perfect little gems by John F. Carlson and George Elmer Browne. But, of course, not everybody has such perfect taste as Mr. Armitage.

Ella Shepard Bush of Sierra Madre showed eleven miniatures on the 17th and 18th insts. at the print rooms, 540 Sutter street, San Francisco. One of the miniatures was a highly successful portrait of the young daughter of Mary Cass Moore, noted musical composer of San Francisco.

Last Friday evening the Southern California Camera Club held their second annual banquet at Paulais's Cafe. Brief speeches were delivered, new ideas in regard to artistic photography were exploited, good things were eaten and everybody had a good time.

The members and friends of Los Angeles Art Center had an enjoyable evening of "program and dancing" yesterday at the studio of Finn Haakon Frolich, 1444½ South Wilcox avenue, Hollywood.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS

A class adoption and an entertainment by the prize-winning drill team of the M.W.A. will be features of the meeting, November 1, in the evening, of Golden State Camp, No. 7110, M.W.A., at 845 South Figueroa street. Visitors are welcome to the weekly meetings of the camp, which are conducted Wednesday evenings.

An initiation will be conducted by Sunny South Camp, R.N.A., No. 3302, next Thursday evening in the Walker Theater Building.

Pacific Camp, R.N.A., extends an invitation to all Royal Neighbors to meet with members of the camp next Friday evening at their headquarters, 134 West Seventeenth street.

Two new members were added to the roster of California Camp, R.N.A., at the meeting last Saturday evening. A feature of the initiatory ceremonies was the presence of State Supervising Deputy Christina Hammill.

The Modern Woodmen of America have organized a camp at Huntington Park with a membership of eighty. It is expected that the membership will have reached the 200 mark by January 1 of 1923. M. J. Sellers has been selected as consul and weekly meeting will be conducted as soon as a hall can be secured.

ODD FELLOWS

Golden Rule Lodge, I.O.O.F., will entertain District Deputy Robert Hand on Monday evening, November 6. The degree staff will confer its initiatory degree on a class of candidates after which refreshments will be served.

Under the auspices of Fraternity Rebekah Lodge, No. 72, I.O.O.F., a grand concert will be given by the Ensemble Club, followed by an impromptu dance, Monday evening, the 30th inst., at the I.O.O.F. Hall, 220½ South Main street.

Columbia Rebekah Lodge No. 194 will have a "darky wedding" evening, November 8, in the K. P. Hall, 230 South Spring street.

A class of candidates was initiated at the last meeting of America lodge and another class was given the finishing touches of Odd Fellowship last Tuesday evening in the Main-street Lodge. The first degree staff will have rehearsal next Thursday evening.

Orange Grove encampment conferred the Royal Purple degree on a number of candidates last Friday evening. The Patriarchal will be exemplified at the next Friday evening meeting. The Senior Warden declines to announce the program in advance, but requests every member to come up and see for himself.

There were "big doings" last Saturday evening at the instituting of "Comus Sanctorum No. 316, in the Main-street Temple, when 116 were initiated into the mysterious rites of the Orient and thirty charter members transfered from Haoma Sanctorum 212, Santa Ana. The new Sanctorum will meet the first Saturday of each month in the Main-street hall.

The Fraternal Press Club has sent out letters through the secretary, Mr. Patterson, to all lodges in the county urging them to appoint a lodge correspondent in order to turn in the lodge news for the local daily press.

District deputy of District No. 30 will make his official visits to all lodges in the district during November.

NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

The Grand Director, Mr. Charles L. McEnerney, of the Native Sons of the Golden West, delegated Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, N. S. G. W., to send to San Francisco, some sand from a historical spot in Los Angeles county. Sand is being sent from every county in this State, for the purpose of making a mortar for a corner-stone laying in San Francisco on Sunday, October 29.

The sand sent by Los Angeles Parlor was obtained from the spot where Gen. Fremont and Gov. Pio Pico's representatives met to sign the articles of agreement on the occupation of Pueblo, Los Angeles and vicinity.

Water is also being sent north from the Parlors of the Southern California Counties to be used in the mixing of this mortar. This plan is to be used in all cornerstone laying ceremonies conducted by the Native Sons of the Golden West in the future.

On Thursday evening, November 2, Los Angeles No. 45, N. S. G. W., will receive an official visit from Grand Second Vice-President Edward J. Lynch of San Francisco. The evening will be devoted to initiation of candidates and will close with an entertainment and supper.

On Thursday evening, November 9, Los Angeles Parlor N. 45, will celebrate its thirty-seventh anniversary with a big vaudeville show and supper at the meeting hall of the parlor, 134 West Seventeenth street.

Arrowhead Parlor of San Bernardino held an open meeting last Wednesday evening to hear Judge Emmet Seawell of Santa Rosa, a candidate for Associate Justice of the Superior Court. Judge Seawell was highly elated over the reception accorded him.

Native Sons have endorsed proposition 14A, to be voted on at the election on November 7. This amendment permits the city to set aside 6 cents of the tax rate for public improvements of a permanent character without raising the tax rate. It has the backing of the City Planning Commission.

The dance given under the auspices of the Native Daughters at Payne's Dancing Academy was well attended. Many new members have affiliated with the local parlors during the last six months and it is intended to follow up the first social gathering of the season by others of a similar character.

A class of thirteen candidates was initiated in Ramona Parlor last Friday evening. The list included Charles M. Shortridge, nephew of Senator Samuel Shortridge; Charles E. Rice and Vincent Mangerino, deputy United States Marshals, and Robert Camarillo, deputy United States Attorney.

A life-sized portrait of Sheriff Traeger was presented to Ramona Parlor and will adorn the Club Rooms of that organization. A duplicate copy will be presented to the Grand Parlor and will be hung in the headquarters at San Francisco.

Los Angeles Parlor initiated a class of eight at their last meeting and have another class of fourteen ready for the initiatory ceremonies which will take place next Thursday evening. A large gathering of native sons is expected.

STATE SOCIETIES

The most important event in State society circles this week will be the reunion of Minnesotans next Friday evening in Music-Art Hall. All Minnesotans, whether members of the society or not, are invited. Col. A. C. Shafer will tell the story of the charge of the famous Minnesota regiment at Gettysburg, and the last surviving member of that regiment will be present. The evening will be featured by musical numbers, roll call, dancing, and the presentation of prizes. H. J. Brubaker will lead community singing.

Former residents of Michigan are invited to attend the reunion of the Michigan State Society next Wednesday evening at Music-Art Hall. A musical and speaking program will be given, followed by dancing.

Members of the New York State Society will reopen their monthly meetings next Thursday evening in Forum Hall, 203 Mercantile Place. President G. H. MacNeill has secured Mrs. Lillian Byington as soloist for the occasion, and dancing will follow the musical and oratorical program.

Capt. Joseph B. Alexander announces the reopening of the West Virginia Society socials in the Angelus Hotel Hall, beginning next Thursday evening. A program and social dance will be given.

The Maple Leaf Club will entertain Canadians at the Gamut clubhouse next Saturday evening. All former residents of, or visitors from the provinces are invited. There will be dancing and refreshments.

At a recent meeting of the Virginians, H. P. Jordan was elected president and the announcement was made that meetings will

Original Suit Bids by First or Second Hand

The best theory of Auction yet developed by the best players is to give exact information whenever possible. With this idea in view they have restricted all bids to one meaning. This is particularly true of the original suit bid. Rather than deceive partner as to the character of their hand, they prefer to pass and await another chance to bid. An original suit bid by first or second hand always conveys the information either that the bidder has two quick tricks in the suit bid or else one quick trick in that suit and one in an outside suit. The requirements, therefore, for an original suit bid by first or second hand, are: first, a five card suit; second, with two quick tricks, such as A K, K Q J, or A Q J, in the suit bid, or, third, one quick trick in the suit bid, such as Ace or K Q and an outside quick trick, such as an Ace or KQ.

With such factors, the hand is worth at least four tricks with suit bid as trump. With the three requirements above noted kept in mind, the following hands illustrate the principles involved:

Hearts—10, 9.
Clubs—A, K, 7, 6, 2, (2 quick tricks.)
Diamonds—4, 3.
Spades—8, 7, 6, 2.

Hearts—K, Q, J, 7, 6, (2 quick tricks.)
Clubs—4, 3.
Diamonds—7, 6, 5.
Spades—J, 4, 3.

Hearts—10, 7.
Clubs—J, 3, 2.
Diamonds—7, 6, 2.
Spades—A, Q, J, 4, 2, (2 quick tricks.)

Hearts—A, 3, 2. (1 quick trick.)
Clubs—4, 6, 2.
Diamonds—K, Q, 9, 7, 6, (1 quick trick.)
Spades—10, 8.

Heart—4, 6, 2.
Clubs—K, Q, 4, 3, (1 quick trick.)
Diamonds—5,
Spades—K, Q, 4, 3, 2, (1 quick trick.)

Hearts—A, Q, 10, 7, 6, (1½ tricks.)
Clubs—10, 9, 8.
Diamonds—J, 7, 6.
Spades—K, 8 (½ quick trick.)

Hearts—A, 10, 7, 6, 2, (1 quick trick.)
Clubs—J, 7, 6.
Diamonds—A, 4, 2, (1 quick trick)
Spades—J, 4.

The last hand should not be bid. The requirement as to two quick tricks is present but the suit is too weak. This is a border-line hand and no suit as weak as this Heart should be bid unless holding more than one outside trick.

Certain four card suits may be bid, such as A, K, Q, 4 or K Q, J, 10, without any outside tricks. Suits such as A, K, 4, 2,; K, Q, J, 6, or A, Q, J, 8, should not be bid without at least an outside trick preferably an Ace. Four card suits may also be bid if hand contains a strong secondary bid, that is a suit that can be bid on the second round of bidding. For example:

Hearts—10, 9.
Clubs—A, K, 7, 6.
Diamonds—7.
Spades—K, J, 10, 9, 8, 7.

With this type of hand it is much better to bid the Club as the original bid, and bid the Spade on the second round. If the bidder holds two four card suits, each headed by A K, the better bid is a No Trump. The hand is too strong for a suit bid of one. Please note that all of the above refers only to original suit bids by first and second hand.

Our 53rd Christmas Season in Los Angeles gifts that last

We announce the opening of our fifty-third Christmas season in Los Angeles—and our complete readiness to supply the gift requirements of our many thousands of patrons.

In anticipation of what we sincerely believe will be our largest Christmas business, we have made adequate preparations. Our buyers have secured many of the choicest offerings of the nation's best craftsmen.

The display cases in our handsomely reconstructed establishment are now filled with the latest modes in diamond jewelry—masterpieces of jewelcraft.

—Oriental pearls of surpassing beauty.

—the newest achievements in women's bracelet watches and men's strap watches.

—smart new effects in gold jewelry.

—unusual ideas in goldware.

—distinctive creations in sterling silver toiletware, flatware and hollowware.

—correct stationery and new styles in leather goods.

THE NEW

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

BY OLIVE GRAY

Dress Don'ts

Take heed as to the neckline chosen for your gowns. Study well as to the exact decolletage best to offset your good features, that which will minimize your faults. So wide a range is permissible at present, that one may take advantage of the boat-shaped neck opening,—the low extending "V," the round neck, the high collar, or other variations, and still be within the mode. Just how much to expose, how much to hide, must be a matter for discussion between yourself and your mirror; and let it be a matter well thought out and to your best advantage.

Fascinating Auctions

Always fraught with allure, auctions seem even more than ever fascinating in the autumn. As thoughts turn toward indoor life, we take a keener interest in the beautification of the home, whether that home be a simple bungalow, a "genuine colonial mansion," or merely a one-room apartment, with kitchen and bath. Los Angeles is particularly gifted as to auctions, if one might put it thus as a personal characteristic. Here come many bringing treasured collections in furniture, in pictures, in rare tapestries and rugs—and it sometimes happens that the sojourn of those newcomers is brief, for one reason or another. Lares and penates become mere impedimenta when the desire for flight takes hold, and then it is that the auctioneer becomes a family factotum. Then it is that we who linger may benefit by the decision or indecision of the departing. Then it is that, yielding to the auction urge, a heritage so inherent, we venture forth with pockets full of "bids," returning with much loot or with little, according as it is our lucky day or the reverse. Let me pay a word of tribute to the local auctioneers, who, by their honesty and straightforward methods, have raised the auction to the rank of a legitimate and trustworthy business. Few thrills are left in this lotteryless land, and I for one delight in the feeling of anticipation while awaiting the result of the almost involuntary word, forced from the lips by the wish for possession of some rare article put upon the "block." I know a woman who would forego any social function, for the sake of a good auction—and I'll confess I do not think her taste so very strange.

Plant Bulbs!

The autumnal slogan of the florists and seedmen—"Plant bulbs!" finds an echo in many hearts, just now. The heralding signs: "Dutch bulbs have arrived," bring to mind enthralling visions of bud and bloom. There is something so marvelous about bulbs which send forth from brown, homely depths, flowers so exquisite in coloring and in shape. Not alone is it that these visitors from foreign lands bring with them an aroma of romance, but they seem, also, to embody much of symbolism. All life is miraculous, of course, if we philosophize, but the quick and certain production of blossoms from those sealed depths seems most pointedly so.

The First Doll

Do you remember your first doll? How you loved her and how the mother instinct stirred within your little heart as you beheld her "sleeping eyes," her wavy hair, her rounded hands and feet! Think of it! Each season some little girl comes into possession of her first doll! Is her ecstacy as great, I wonder, as was yours and mine? If the joy is in proportion to the ever-increasing beauty of the dollies, children of today should experience happiness beyond expression; when Christmas brings to them the life-like children of bisque or wood, or cloth, now obtainable.

Does Thine Eyebrow Offend?

Should thine eyebrow offend thee, then pluck it out! Such might the new dictum in the Book of Beauty. It is declared that eyebrows will be "in," but not too "in" for 1923. In other words, instead of erasing all or nearly all semblance of the hirsute browage, as has been the fad for several seasons, the beauty of 1923 will train them to a distinct, but realizable arch. She will, of course, tweeze out all unruly hairs, this being considered the better way than to razor them off.

Aunt Jane Says:

"If you would prolong the life of Turkish bath towels, bind the edges with tape." She adds, convincingly, that it is the edges of such towels which wear out first and the tape prevents this.

Dejeuner Coats

They sound so much more fetching, when named thus, I think, than when called breakfast coast. But, under whichever name, they are having their innings, these chilly mornings. And are not the new ones delightfully warm and wrappy and inspiring in colors? Prices, also, are so low as to allow of several. On the day when upon rising, you feel the need of heightened tone, you may don the cerise, the purple, the crimson coat. When, on the other hand, you feel dreamy, poetic, put on the lavender, the blue, the dainty rose. Oh, it makes a difference, I assure you!

Thus Remarks Dame Fashion

••The buttonless gloves have gained great favor in Paris.

••Highly colored felt hats are being worn for sports just now.

••The dress showing contrasting bodice and skirt is in vogue.

••Paris favors the short coat for the more dressy type of suit.

••A Georgette frock uses self-toned velvet in applique decoration.

••Deep bertha collars are made of fine lace and richest embroidery.

••With velvet is combined muslin enriched with silk and metal embroidery.

••Alternating rows of gold and silver lace trim an evening gown of gold tissue.

be conducted regularly the second Thursday evening of each month, starting November 9, in the Angelus Hotel Hall.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE

Golden State Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, turned out in full force to attend the Frolic Unity Legion No. 6 at Whittier. Deputy Herder Peterson was highly gratified at the showing made by the lodge and to know that this lodge carried off the honors in having the largest number of members in attendance, also in furnishing thirty-two candidates for initiation. This is convincing proof that Herder Sterling used excellent judgment in selecting his deputy.

The Whittier Frolic was the best attended and resulted in more "pep" and enthusiasm than any of the Frolics yet staged. Whittier Lodge is to be congratulated on the excellent banquet and the entertainment furnished by Bobby Miller. Members all returned home at a late hour, satisfied that they had had a day worth while. Deputy Herder Peterson, with the scalps of the other deputies hanging around his waist, promises he will be back at the next Frolic stronger than the feet of those in the class.

Secretary Hurley, who has received a wire from Secretary of Labor Davis, announced that the visit would occur early in November, the date to be announced shortly.

A large attendance turned out Wednesday when a full form initiation was put on during which fifteen neophytes were put through for Golden State and several others for near-by lodges.

Plans are completed for the Masque Ball on October 31 and it is believed that the dance will be a great success. The committee members have several stunts "up their sleeves."

Next Wednesday night a representative of the police and firemen's pension proposal to be voted upon at the coming election, will explain to the lodge members the necessity of voting for 8a.

The regular monthly prizes for attendance were awarded. These prizes are proving a great stimulus to attending lodge meetings. The Convention Club, under the chairmanship of Walter Gould Lincoln, is making remarkable progress and Mr. Lincoln remarks that between his candidacy for justice of the peace and his lodge work he finds no time for anything else.

Ruth Roland Tells How To Instantly Have A Rosy —White Complexion

Los Angeles, Cal.—Miss Ruth Roland, the beautiful young actress, attributes much of her success to her wonderful complexion. At a recent interview, she said: "Anyone can have a beautiful rosy-white complexion if they will devote just a few moments each day in caring for their skin. There is nothing so attractive as a smooth, clear, unwrinkled, rosy complexion, and since it is so easy to acquire it is astonishing why so many girls neglect their skin.

"A woman fifty years old with a skin well cared for looks more youthful and attractive than a woman of thirty whose skin has been neglected. It pays to stay looking young just as long as possible. Let me tell you the secret. Tonight, before you retire, look in your mirror and study carefully the coloring of your skin, also its texture. Note if any roughness appears, look for coarse pores, blackheads, wrinkles, sallow skin or other imperfections. If you find any of these objectionable defects, just remember they may be quickly overcome if you will do what I tell you to.

"After you have taken stock of yourself, then massage your face, hands and arms for a few minutes with a good cold cream (I use Liska because it seems especially adapted to this purpose and it is put up in tubes—the only sanitary way). Wipe off the cream with a soft cloth. In the morning wash your face with warm water and Derwillo Oatmeal Soap, rinse with cold water and dry thoroughly. Before going out apply Derwillo, that popular beautifier which is now used by discriminating women and girls everywhere.

"Then glance in your mirror again and notice how youthful you appear even after one application of this Derwillo-Liska combination. Derwillo comes in three shades, flesh, white and brunette. It instantly brings a rosy tint to your cheeks and a white baby softness to your neck, hands and arms, and unless you have reached that point where you don't care how you look you will thank me as long as you live for suggesting this method to you."

Practically all the leading actresses now use Derwillo and Liska cold cream and since they have tried about everything their judgment should carry great weight with you. If you really want a beautiful complexion try Derwillo and Liska cold cream for one day, and if you are not satisfied in every way it costs you absolutely nothing. They are sold with that understanding at all toilet counters of department stores and druggists in this city, including the Owl Drug Company stores.—[Advertisement.

CIGARETTES .. TERRIBLE, .. CRIES .. THE .. FLAPPER .. SET .. IN .. CHORUS!

Lady Nicotine Has Lost Her Siren Sway in the Picture Realm

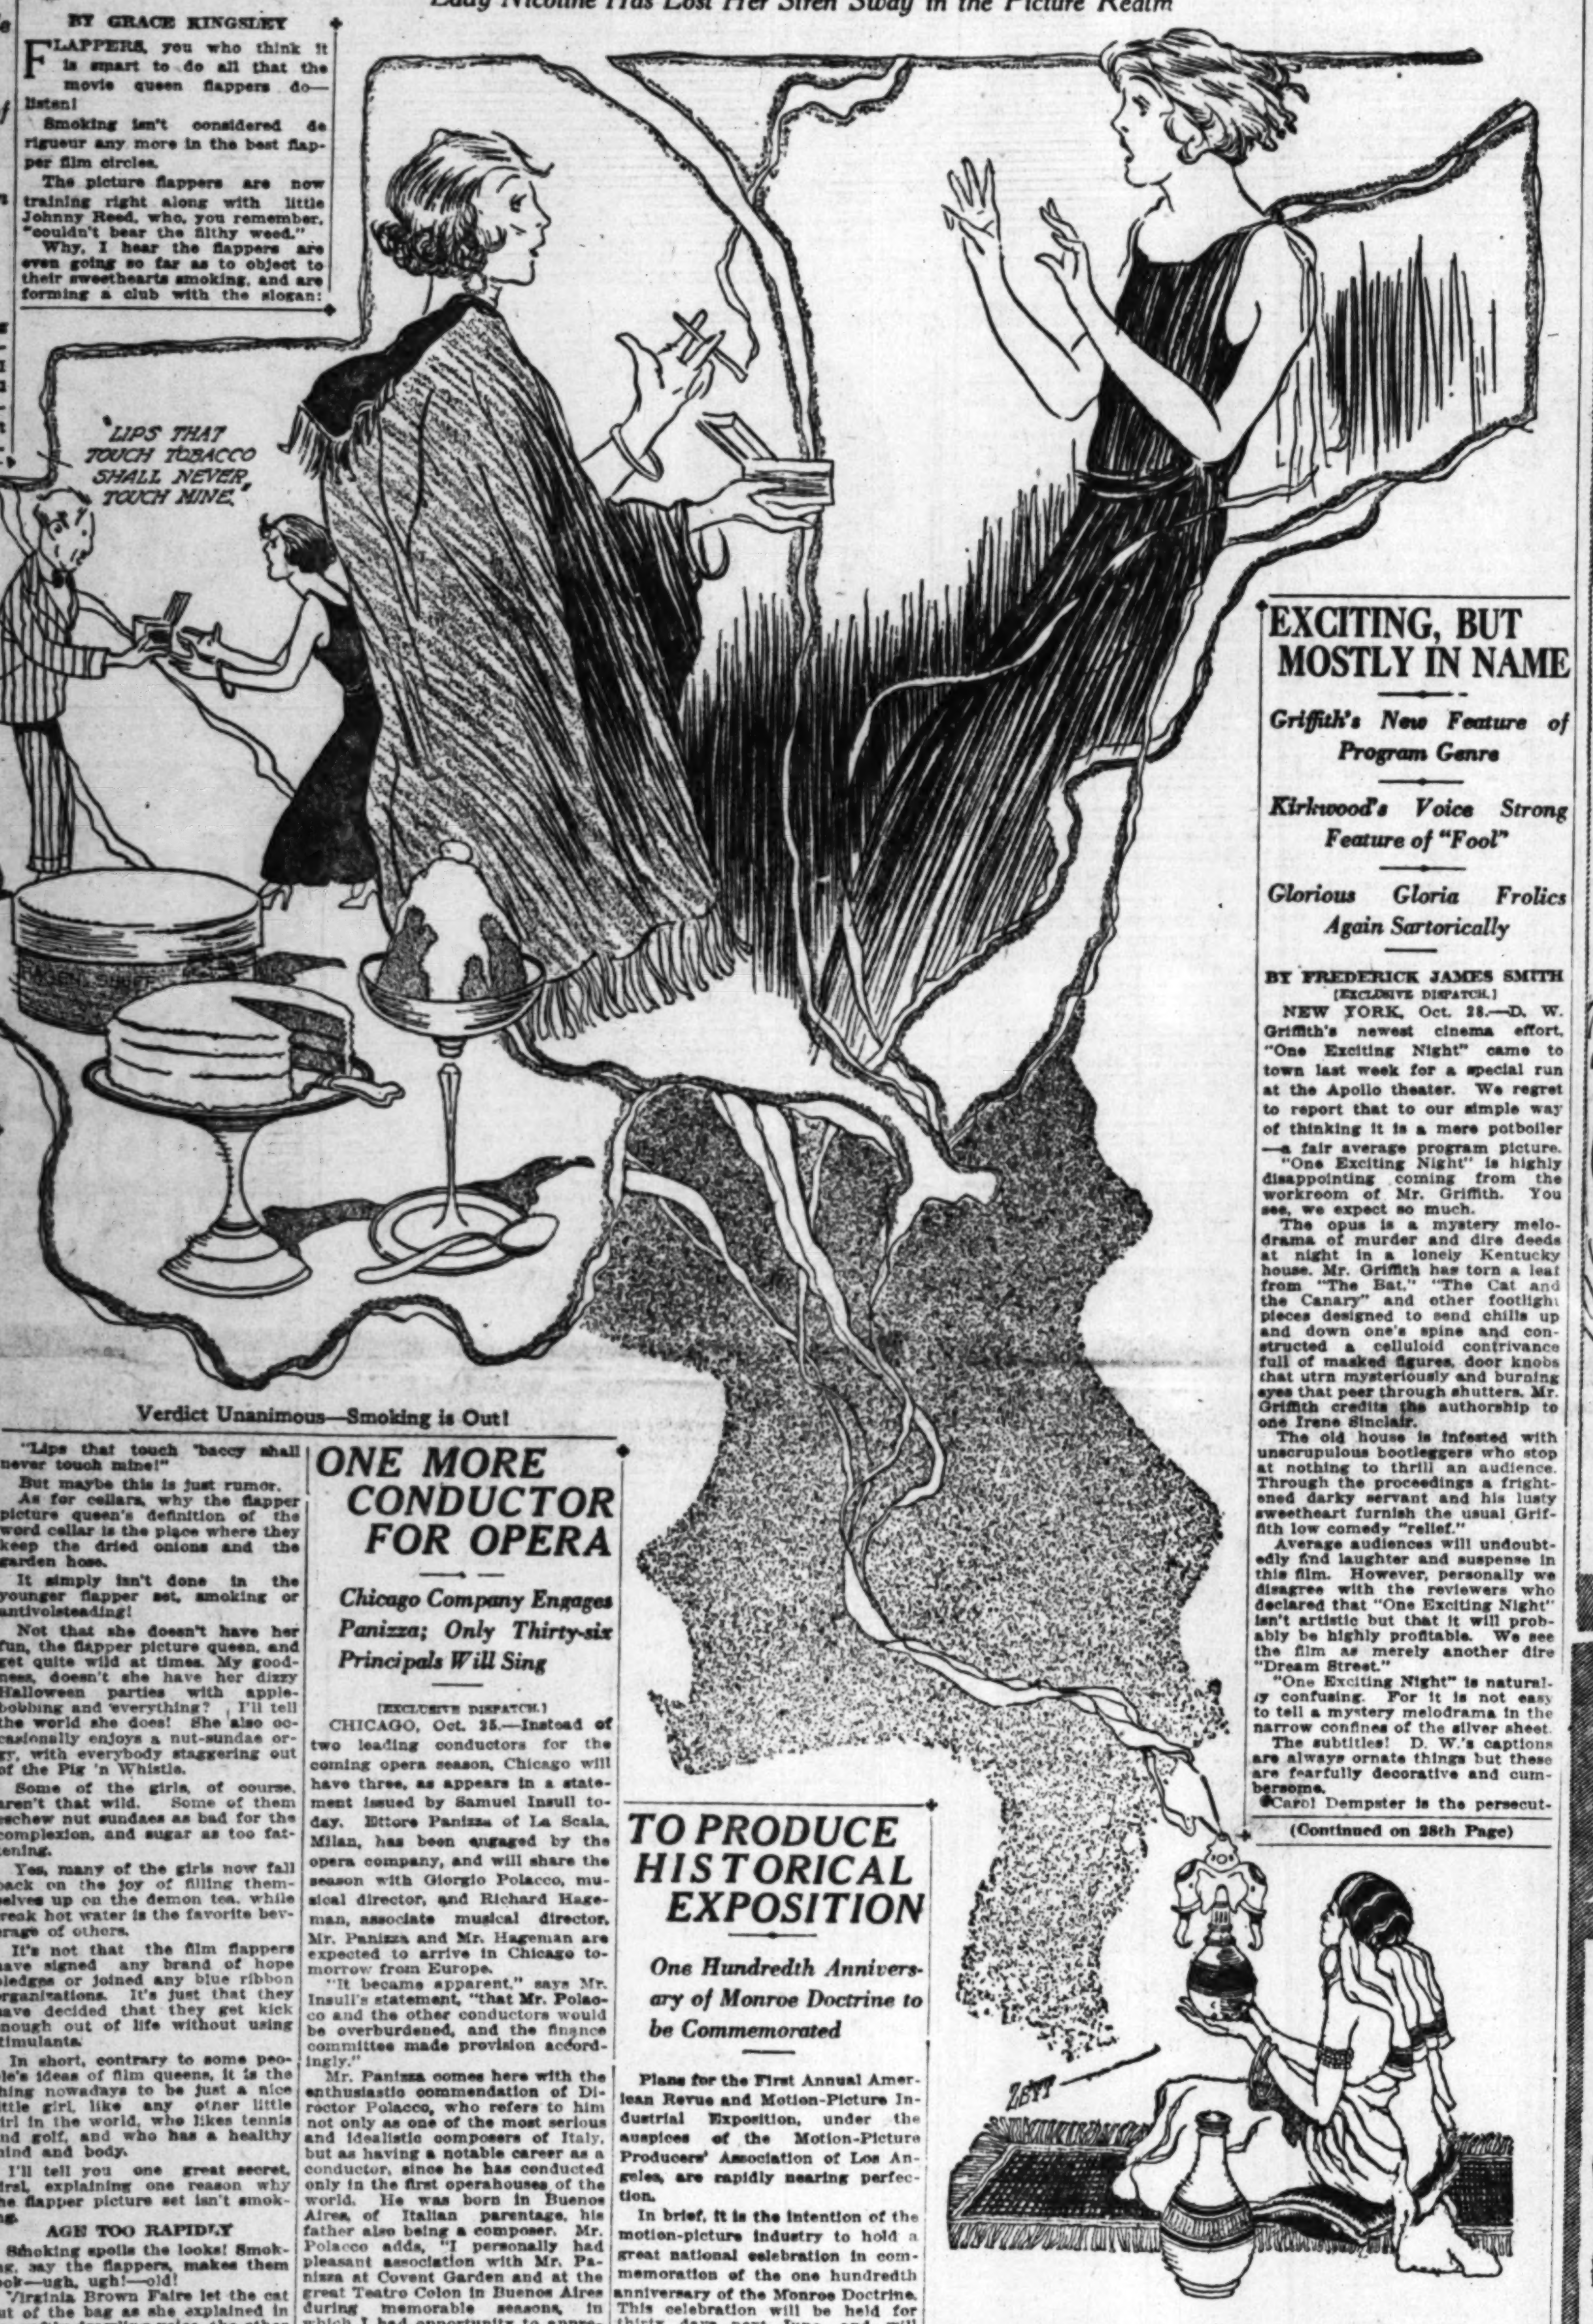
BY GRACE KINGSLEY

FLAPPERS, you who think it is smart to do all that the movie queen flappers do—listen!

Smoking isn't considered de rigueur any more in the best flapper film circles.

The picture flappers are now training right along with little Johnny Reed, who, you remember, "couldn't bear the filthy weed."

Why, I hear the flappers are even going so far as to object to their sweethearts smoking, and are forming a club with the slogan:



"LIPS THAT TOUCH TOBACCO SHALL NEVER TOUCH MINE."
IDEA OF GOOD SUBSTITUTES FOR CIGARETTES.
ZETT

Verdict Unanimous—Smoking is Out!

"Lips that touch 'baccy shall never touch mine!"

But maybe this is just rumor.

As for cellars, why the flapper picture queen's definition of the word cellar is the place where they keep the dried onions and the garden hose.

It simply isn't done in the younger flapper set, smoking or antivolsteading!

Not that she doesn't have her fun, the flapper picture queen, and get quite wild at times. My goodness, doesn't she have her dizzy Halloween parties with apple-bobbing and everything? I'll tell the world she does! She also occasionally enjoys a nut-sundae orgy, with everybody staggering out of the Pig 'n Whistle.

Some of the girls, of course, aren't that wild. Some of them eschew nut sundaes as bad for the complexion, and sugar as too fattening.

Yes, many of the girls now fall back on the joy of filling themselves up on the demon tea, while weak hot water is the favorite beverage of others.

It's not that the film flappers have signed any brand of hope pledges or joined any blue ribbon organizations. It's just that they have decided that they get kick enough out of life without using stimulants.

In short, contrary to some people's ideas of film queens, it is the thing nowadays to be just a nice little girl, like any other little girl in the world, who likes tennis and golf, and who has a healthy mind and body.

I'll tell you one great secret, girls, explaining one reason why the flapper picture set isn't smoking.

AGE TOO RAPIDLY

Smoking spoils the looks! Smoking, say the flappers, makes them look—ugh, ugh!—old!

Virginia Brown Faire let the cat out of the bag as she explained in her softly drawling voice, the other day:

"Smoking spoils the shape of the lips. The cigarette draws down the corners of the lips, giving an expression of age to the mouth and chin. It also stains the teeth, and you know what good teeth mean to the picture actress. She can make up her teeth to a certanl extent, but they don't look the same as her own."

"Smoking is all a matter of taste," said Helen Ferguson. "Personally, Sir Walter Raleigh, or whoever it was that invented smoking, means nothing in my young life. Just once I tried to smoke. It was when I was applying for an engagement to play a vamp in a picture.

"I took a half a dozen matches and a cigarette into the bathroom, and tried to light the thing. I burned the eyelashes off one of my eyes, and got smoke in the other. And it made me sick into the bargain. After all, I didn't get the role. So you can see how I feel about smoking.

"I don't criticise anybody who wants to smoke, though. Some do it gracefully and some do it disgracefully."

Harold Lloyd doesn't smoke. And it is whispered that he doesn't like to see women smoke. It has been reported that Harold is fonder of Mildred than he would be, say, of his sister, though both deny they

ONE MORE CONDUCTOR FOR OPERA

Chicago Company Engages Panizza; Only Thirty-six Principals Will Sing

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Instead of two leading conductors for the coming opera season, Chicago will have three, as appears in a statement issued by Samuel Insull today. Ettore Panizza of La Scala, Milan, has been engaged by the opera company, and will share the season with Giorgio Polacco, musical director, and Richard Hageman, associate musical director. Mr. Panizza and Mr. Hageman are expected to arrive in Chicago tomorrow from Europe.

"It became apparent," says Mr. Insull's statement, "that Mr. Polacco and the other conductors would be overburdened, and the finance committee made provision accordingly."

Mr. Panizza comes here with the enthusiastic commendation of Director Polacco, who refers to him not only as one of the most serious and idealistic composers of Italy, but as having a notable career as a conductor, since he has conducted only in the first operahouses of the world. He was born in Buenos Aires, of Italian parentage, his father also being a composer. Mr. Polacco adds, "I personally had pleasant association with Mr. Panizza at Covent Garden and at the great Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires during memorable seasons, in which I had opportunity to appreciate not only his musicianship, but also his high mentality."

Thirty-six principal singers have been engaged for the season a figure comparing with the fifty-five of last year and the forty-five which was the average during the directorship of Cleofonte Campanini. This reduction, Mr. Insull says, is for the purpose of bringing down to a margin of safety the "dead time," in other words, the number of appearances for which an artist is engaged and which he does not sing. It is a serious expense at all times in an opera company, amounting in one season to $200,000.

Of the thirty-six principals, many have been engaged for short periods and few for the entire season. Mary Garden will sing ten times here, appearing during the first two and the last two weeks of the season. Amelita Galli-Curci is likewise down for ten and Feodor Chaliapin for from fie to seven. Edith Mason, Rosa Raisa, and Ina Bourskaya are among those named for the entire season and will be heard more frequently.

The season will begin November 13 with "Aida" with Miss Raisa and Miss Bourskaya in the leading feminine roles. Miss Garden will appear in "Carmen" on the second night, Miss Mason in "La Boheme" on the evening following and the fourth performance will be "Snieguretchka."

TO PRODUCE HISTORICAL EXPOSITION

One Hundredth Anniversary of Monroe Doctrine to be Commemorated

Plans for the First Annual American Revue and Motion-Picture Industrial Exposition, under the auspices of the Motion-Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles, are rapidly nearing perfection.

In brief, it is the intention of the motion-picture industry to hold a great national celebration in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Monroe Doctrine. This celebration will be held for thirty days next June, and will comprise the historical revue presented in tabloid and melodrama form on the largest stage ever built, and industrial exhibits. The revue is of such magnitude that at least thirty days will be necessary for its production. Among the historical events to be produced will be "The Discovery of America," "The First English Settlement," "The First Continental Congress," "The Founding of the Army and Navy," "The Birth of the American Flag," and "The Declaration of Independence."

The art of music will be emphasized through the entire revue by one of the most complete, instructive and entertaining presentations ever given. It will consist of "The Evolution of Music," going back to the past when music "soothed the savage breast" and following its course down through the ages to the finished symphonies of today.

Practically every motion-picture company in Southern California, as well as nearly every association connected with the industry in any way, is represented on the advisory council of the Motion-Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles, the organization back of the exposition. The plan has been given the indorsement of the Governor of California, the Mayor, Council, Chamber of Commerce, Realty Board and Merchants' and Manufactures' Association of Los Angeles, and the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

EXCITING, BUT MOSTLY IN NAME

Griffith's New Feature of Program Genre

Kirkwood's Voice Strong Feature of "Fool"

Glorious Gloria Frolics Again Sartorically

BY FREDERICK JAMES SMITH
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—D. W. Griffith's newest cinema effort, "One Exciting Night" came to town last week for a special run at the Apollo theater. We regret to report that to our simple way of thinking it is a mere potboiler—a fair average program picture.

"One Exciting Night" is highly disappointing coming from the workroom of Mr. Griffith. You see, we expect so much.

The opus is a mystery melodrama of murder and dire deeds at night in a lonely Kentucky house. Mr. Griffith has torn a leaf from "The Bat," "The Cat and the Canary" and other footlight pieces designed to send chills up and down one's spine and constructed a celluloid contrivance full of masked figures, door knobs that utrn mysteriously and burning eyes that peer through shutters. Mr. Griffith credits the authorship to one Irene Sinclair.

The old house is infested with unscrupulous bootleggers who stop at nothing to thrill an audience. Through the proceedings a frightened darky servant and his lusty sweetheart furnish the usual Griffith low comedy "relief."

Average audiences will undoubtedly find laughter and suspense in this film. However, personally we disagree with the reviewers who declared that "One Exciting Night" isn't artistic but that it will probably be highly profitable. We see the film as merely another dire "Dream Street."

"One Exciting Night" is naturally confusing. For it is not easy to tell a mystery melodrama in the narrow confines of the silver sheet.

The subtitles! D. W.'s captions are always ornate things but these are fearfully decorative and cumbersome.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Significance may well be attached to the presence of Richard Ordynsky in the picture circle. At least, his association should be watched as heralding a new impulse toward artistry, for his achievements in the intellectual drama, as well as in staging of Metropolitan Opera productions, give him a background of distinction.

The rumors are, of course, that Ordynsky is eventually to direct Pola Negri. It would be a logical combination. Mr. Ordynsky is not unacquainted with her talents, because he directed her in a stage production of "Sumurun." He also is especially fitted, of course, to produce film features with a foreign atmosphere, be they modern or ancient. He has, moreover, a tremendous knowledge of suitable themes—especially those of the ultra-exotic type—and would succeed in setting these very brilliantly.

At present Mr. Ordynsky is studying directing. I met him the other day on a Cecil De Mille set, and he at that time expressed his faith in the future of pictures. He feels that the technique and the public taste have grown to the point where artistic results are being appreciated.

What is more, he said that he felt America's future in arts is assured. "The artistic world of Europe is in a worse state now than it was during the war," he declared. "You have in America everything now, or, if you haven't now, you will very soon."

The fact that Mr. Ordynsky is inclined toward the pictorial art in staging does not, I believe, limit him as it has some others in his understanding of drama. He has been identified with the stage for too long a time not to have acquired the dramatic viewpoint.

"WES" HAD TO BE SHOWN

Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced screen star, hails from Missouri when it comes to being told that any breed of canine is, was, or ever will be taller than he is. But it took Director Sam L. Warner to convince the film prodigy that "Props," the Great Dane watch dog at the Warner Brothers' studios in Los Angeles, tops him by a head's length.

The controversy that brought the cry of "show me" from Barry was waged during the filming of a scene for "Rags to Riches," which will be shown at the Loew's State Theater beginning today.

The scene in question was a fight between Barry and a group of tough youngsters. Barry was instructed to "tear in" with gusto into the youngsters, in order to prove to them that he was no mollycoddle. The scene was rehearsed, and finally the filming took place. But the director thought the fight entirely too tame for the screen, and once more instructed the freckled star to stage a real fight in the true sense of the word.

Barry became temperamental and declared he was "fightin' like anything," and that he couldn't be expected to chew the ears off his kid enemies. It thereupon occurred to the director to bring "Props." into the controversy.

"Why 'Props' could show you how to stage a fight," said Director Warner. "And what's more I'll bet you he's got it all over you when it comes to height."

"What'er you mean?" retorted Barry.

"I say 'Props' is taller than you are, and what's more—"

"How much yer wanna bet?"

"I say 'Props' is a head taller than you are," said the director. "If he is you are to fight the kids in the scene as you've never fought in your life. If he isn't you can have anything you want."

This was a big order, and Barry accepted the wager. Props was taken away from the front gate for a few minutes and the freckled star lost his wager. He is said to have been so angered by the loss of the wager (he was going to ask for a pony if he'd won) that he staged one of the greatest fights of his film career.

In the Barry picture are Russell Simpson, Niles Wech, Ruth Renick and Richard Tucker. On the same program is a Jimmy Aubrey comedy, "The Chicken Parade."

Failures Due to Premature Appearances

Royal Dadmun, to be heard locally for the first time next Tuesday evening, in joint recital with Florence Macbeth, belongs to the new regime of American singers, who, recognizing their talent, have not hesitated to prepare for their profession, at the same time making a business of presenting it to the public in the form which the public will approve of.

"There's a lot of truth in the criticism made by foreigners that the chief trouble with young American musicians is that they are in too much of a hurry," he commented recently. "One has only to go to almost any of the two or three score of debuts in New York any winter to see the half-baked article that is being launched on the unsuspecting public.

"But it is not the public that suffers. It is the really fine talent which goes into the musical scrap heap each year just because the owners of it won't wait until they are really prepared for public appearance. Their performances are dismissed in a few indifferent lines in the papers and that is generally the end of them, because the day has passed when an unscrupulous manager can palm off on some music club in the West a singer who has been a failure in the East. One might say that it is easier for such a manager to sell such wares right in New York than in some little town 2000 miles away.

"Except now and then in very rare instances, the artist who is really going to succeed in his profession is always content to begin in a small way and work gradually upward. Granting him the material and qualities necessary to the making of a true artist, there can never be any doubt about his ultimate success.

"On the other hand, our cities are full of really great talents, or what have been great talents, which have failed because either they had been forced too soon or they had attempted to do great things before they were out of their artistic swaddling clothes. Either is a tragedy to the individual and a loss to the public."

SCENARIO WRITERS PLAN BETTER YEAR

CLUB BEGINS THIRD SEASON WITH HOPE OF TAKING IN NEW MEMBERS

The photoplaywrights will take in some members before the fall and winter series of meetings get under way. The members get encouragement from constructive criticism and have the pleasure of hearing some of the successful photoplay writers tell them how how they did it.

This is the third year of the club's existence and from the advance program it promises to be the most interesting. Aspiring screen-writers are made welcome regardless of experience. The officers gather at 805 Brack Shops, Monday evenings, at 7:30.

AN INTERVIEW IN VERSE

With Madge Bellamy

BY HALLETT ABEND

Madge Bellamy to me will always seem
An English maiden of the long ago
For just before I met her in the flesh
I spent an hour seeing "Lorna Doone"
Unreeled in moving shadows on the screen.

Just two of us sat in the silence there
And saw the picture; with wide-eyed delight
Followed the old love story to the end,
Feeling it had been made to live anew,
And what more rigid test can be devised
Than sitting silent through all seven reels,
The theater empty, and no orchestra?
What this release will be, in proper form,
With music well arranged to rouse and sweep
Age-old emotions I can't prophesy,
But I am sure it "makes" Madge Bellamy—
Gives her a place secure, one all her own.

In Life

A frail and wistful little English maid
Clad in the style of James the Second's time;
A young girl buffeted by unkind fate
But not embittered by her sufferings;
Almost a child in years, but with a heart
So woman-wise that she relinquishes
Title and riches and the pomp of life
At England's court to wed the man she loves—
That is the part Miss Bellamy makes live
By her apt acting, and with her soft grace
And brown-eyed beauty makes adorable.

And then I motored way out Pico street
And turned down Crenshaw to the young star's home,
The door swung wide before I'd left my car
Revealing in the portal a young girl
Clad all in black who smiled in welcoming.

She's just eighteen (and looks it in repose)
But when she smiles or speaks or is intent
As listener there's something more mature
Can be detected. Charm of youthfulness
Is never lost, but there's no callowness.
"She's not an empty-headed, pretty thing,"
I told myself; "there's more than beauty here."
But it's her beauty that arrests at first.

Slender and small, she still seems tireless;
Vivacious, but not restless, scattering;
Delicate wrists and ankles, pretty feet,
And tapered hands that are yet firm and strong;
That, briefly, is a sketch of this young star.
Her skin is clear; her eyes so large and brown,
I doubt she'd need mascara for the screen.
And then her hair—a tumbled, waving mass
Of deepest auburn blending into brown,
That rare and lovely shade of natural "red"
No henna can achieve.

This catalogue
Complete, I told her I'd seen "Lorna Doone."
"And did you like it?" she flashed back at me.
It was not praise she sought, but rather flaws
In her own work she wanted pointed out.
I tried to find that "actor's vanity"
So many stars have to a marked degree,
But this young girl preferred to hold her work
A thing apart—something to scan, to weigh,
To see if it were counterfeit or true.

"I do not like 'straight' parts," she volunteered,
"Those parts where I am just a girlish thing
And wear nice clothes; nor do I want to be Always the type I play in 'Lorna Doone,'
Where, blameless, I'm the toy of unkind fate.
I hope some day to have the part I want,
Some play in which by selfishness or whim
I bring an earned disaster to myself
And, gaining wisdom from experience,
Work out my own salvation at the last.
The ending may be happy or be sad—
That doesn't matter if the plot rings true,
And if there's something happens to the soul,
Some transmutation or odd alchemy
Demolishing false standards and and pretense
And leaving only verities at last."

We talked of many things: of stars; of books;
Her mother, and her work, her recent trip
Into the northern woods, and then she asked
What kind of plays and parts would be the best
For her in future. As the talked ranged on
I found she reads with purpose, that she knows
Instinctively the things that are worth while.
Yet she's no "highbrow," and I'll gamble here
Her likes in music range from "Three A.M."
To Chopin's nocturnes and do not scorn jazz.
With sage comments barbed with a sharpened wit
She put absurdities where they belong,
And with a phrase, a gesture or a look
Sorted the trivial or ranged grave and gay
In odd or striking contrast or relief.

In Character

Reluctantly, at last, I took my leave.
When at the curb, I turned, and there she stood
Poised on the threshold still to wave good-by.

"Only eighteen," I thought, "and there she stands
Upon the threshold of a long career.
Marriage or heartbreak—these she will survive,
For joy or sorrow cannot spoil her gifts.
Her future's in the making, and can be
A splendid thing, barring a luckless run
Of tawdry plays or ill-directed parts.
Here's hoping she is given a fair chance—
Gets some director who will see her gifts
And use them to advantage. 'Lorna Doone'
Makes the way clear, creates a following;
But four ill-chosen plays, the hokum sort,
Or poor directing of the outworn style—
A pity, that, for she deserves the best.
Here's hoping!"
And I turned to wave again.

We already know that the pictorial artist has brought much to enhance the prospect of beauty on the screen. Rex Ingram's contributions, for one, cannot be underrated. Penrhyn Stanlaws, too, has a splendid conception of the picturesquely alluring. Maurice Tourneur is another who has brought gorgeous atmospheric effects to the films. All of these men, however, except possibly Mr. Tourneur, have shown themselves lacking in dramatic instinct. This we have missed, despite our joy in viewing the exquisite revelations of their artistic feeling.

Mr. Ordynsky presents himself as a somewhat unusual combination of the dual talents and, though such things do not always follow out according to the rule of 2 plus 2 equals 4, we are warranted in expecting him to contribute, perhaps very valuably, to the higher artistic worth of the picture play.

As pretty a bit of diplomacy as has lately been viewed in the concert auditorium had as its heroine no less a personage than Mme. Margaret Matzenauer. This was last Thursday evening, when she sang with singular success before a large audience at Philharmonic. She was assisted, you will recall, by that ambitious and clever young musician, Elinor Warren, who has been studying with Frank La Forge in he East the past two seasons, and who also is taking some interesting flights into the domain of composition.

Miss Warren was, of course, very warmly greeted by the audience, which included many of her friends, as well as her former teacher, Gertrude Ross. She was the recipient of numerous floral tokens, which were indicative of the esteem in which her talents and her enterprise in carving a musical career for herself are held.

The climax came on the presentation of the song, "The Heart of a Rose," written by Miss Warren. When she finished this Mme. Matzenauer smilingly declined any applause for herself, but indicated by turning toward the composer, who assisted at the piano, that all the honors belonged to the young musician. Then, to give the necessary humanness to her own part in the proceeding, she threw her arms around Miss Warren's neck and kissed her.

Not a few of the members of the audience were so touched by the demonstration of big-heartedness on the part of Matzenauer that their eyes were filled with tears.

There are still many speculations as to just who Harold Lloyd's next leading woman will be. Mildred Davis managed to stay over, of course, for the picture which he has recently completed, but we are definitely assured that that is the last time she will so appear. Meanwhile, we are still rather entertaining a suspicion that the honors will go to Jobyna Ralston, popularly known at the studio as "Job," because of her patience, it is said. She looked very interesting as viewed in a Paul Parrott comedy which showed here during the last week. In fact, she was by far the most interesting happening in the comedy.

The forecast for the stage is gloomy—depressing. Many dark weeks are in prospect at the town's "opryhouse." The road-show business is in the doldrums, and if the spoken word allures you it looks as if the stock theaters would supply the most consistent entertainment.

There are a few bracers, of course, scheduled for the next few weeks, like the Galsworthy play, "The Skin Game," for the serious type, and Mitzi for the lighter. But they say that beyond these little bits of sunlight is visible.

The reason, of course, is that many road companies are being forced to close before ever coming beyond the Mississippi on account of poor business. It is said that there seems very little enthusiasm either for plays in some of the Coast cities. And we cannot altogether doubt that after the recent rather disastrous efforts of Morosco to put his several houses in San Francisco on the map.

One wonders, when acquainted with these facts, whether pictures are again assuming an ascendancy over the stage as an entertainment. This is not impossible, for such a condition prevailed several years ago. On the other hand, the spoken drama is finding evident favor locally, judging by the long runs at several theaters.

Really, I believe, it is all a matter of having the kind of plays that appeal. Recent productions on the Coast have not been noteworthy. "The Sporting Thing to Do," "Mike Angelo" and others were hardly fraught with promise. They did not tend to stimulate interest in the playhouse, but I hardly believe that their rather inferior quality and the consequent reaction indicate the feeling toward the truly entertaining or worth-while type of play.

MUNICIPAL PLAYERS WILL OPEN SEASON

Half a dozen Los Angeles girls who have made good in the dramatic field will be seen in the cast of "The Money Moon," which is to be given Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. at the Gamut Club Auditorium by the Municipal Players, as the opening of their fall season. The leading woman, Miriam Meredith, is the founder and leading spirit of the Mummers' workshop, and now chief librarian at the Ince studio.

Miss Dorothy Thickett, collaborator with Ellen Galpin in dramatizing the English novel, is one of the discoveries of the Municipal Players. She has attained note by her Hans Andersen festivals and pantomimic work with children, having had charge of the dramatic part of the playground camps in the mountains. She is vice-principal of a Santa Barbara school.

Miss Galpin, director and organizer of the players, has achieved distinction both here and abroad for her work in theatrical lines. She has played in Europe, officiated as assistant stage manager at the Majestic, and has until recently been assistant to John Griffith Wray, Ince director.

Miss Louise Phelan's work with the Harlequin players, as well as in Milne's "Belinda," presented at the Friday Morning Club last April, attracted attention. Miss Marjory Capron, a child actress some years ago in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and recently of the Morosco, completes the list together with little Evelyn [illegible] of Eagle Rock.

The technical staff consists of Ellen Galpin, Ernest Arthur, O. K. [illegible]ystead and Harvey Slocomb.

Glimpses from the Play

DIVERSITY ON SILVER SHEET

New offerings on the local screens this week will bring the picturization of a famous Scandinavian stage success to light. It is "Sin Flood" showing at the California, with Helene Chadwick as the star, and was taken from the play "Syndafloden" by the Swedish dramatist Henning Berger. There are several other new attractions that should interest the amusement-seeker. Among these are "The Cowboy and the Lady," with Tom Moore and Mary Miles Minter; "Rags to Riches" in which Wesley Barry adheres to the usual character of his productions; "Lorna Doone" a Tourneur photoplay; "Do and Dare," with Tom Mix, and "Wolf Law," Frank Mayo's latest offering.

Among the holdovers, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" will probably continue to attract the greatest attention, although "What's Wrong With the Women," and Dorothy Gish's "The Country Flapper" will also be contenders for popularity.

"Masquerader" Shows Again

One of the remarkable characteristics in "The Masquerader" the Richard Walton Tully production at the DeLuxe until Thursday, starring Guy Bates Post, is the unusual double exposure photography. Even to audiences that have witnessed a great deal of this trick work in recent films and that have been initiated into its mysteries, the double exposure scenes of "The Masquerader" are a revelation. Of necessity, since the two leading roles of Chilcote and Loder are both played by the star, much of the action transpires between these men. Accordingly there are several sequences in which one of the characters played by Post crosses the other, hands him a cigarette and a light, gives him his clothes—and even pushes him out of the room.

"The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" will be the feature on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Mayo at Superba

"Wolf Law," a story of mystery of early days in the South, that thrilled the readers of one of America's leading magazines, starring Frank Mayo, the "he-man" of the screen, will be the headline attraction on the new Superba bill for the coming week, starting today. Written by Hugh Pendexter. "Wolf Law" presents a sequence of thrilling, mysterious, dramatic and comic incidents that have caused Universal officials to stamp the production as Frank Mayo's crowning achievement. Sylvia Breamer plays the leading feminine role, while others who have prominent parts are Harry Carter, Nick De Ruiz and Fred Kohler. Stuart Paton directed.

Added features on the Superba bill will be Harry Carey, in a condensed dramatic feature, "The Soul Herder," Maud, the educated mule, in a two-reel Century fun fest entitled "The Cabby," and a news reel showing current events of the world.

Frank Mayo,

Who again plays a melo-heroic role in "Wolf Law," showing at the Superba Theater.

Double Bill At Grauman's

Sid Grauman is presenting one of the most enticing double bills in the history of his Million-Dollar Theater next week, when "The Cowboy and the Lady," with Tom Moore and Mary Miles Minter and "Golf" with Larry Semon and Lucille Carlisle will show. Tomorrow at 7:15 and 9.15 p.m. Larry Semon will appear in person.

Taken from the play by Clyde Fitch, "The Cowboy and the Lady," as screened by Paramount, is a romantic and exciting tale of the West.

A faithful wife goes to her ranch in the hope that the open spaces will make a man of her cad husband. But there are other women and trouble follows until later there appears on the scene a real man who unselfishly shoulders the burden of the crime to save the wife.

Supporting Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore is a cast of popular players among whom are Robert Schable, Viora Daniel, Patricia Palmer and Sylvia Ashton.

It would seem that Larry Semon practiced all his difficult shots on the piano, for when "Golf" opens Larry is up on the piano practicing the well-known game. This gets him into trouble with the landlord. The results might have been disastrous had not the owner of the house been smitten with the charms of Larry's sister, a role portrayed by Lucille Carlisle.

Grauman's Symphony orchestra, Bakaleinikoff conducting and Henry Murtagh at the Wurlitzer, will render a musical score.

"Knighthood" Flowers

Possibly no picture of the year has caused more talk than "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which will begin its third week today at Grauman's Rialto.

The novel by Charles Major has furnished entertainment in several forms, first as the most popular book of the season, second, as a stage play, and now as a photoplay.

Grauman's Rialto orchestra, Anton Bradac conducting and Herbert Burland at the Wurlitzer, have arranged the musical score.

"Sin Flood" Starts

At last a picture has been made in which characters are shown in the act of changing. At the California Theater starting today, where "The Sin Flood" is being shown, one of the remarkable impressions made by the photoplay is that before your eyes a group of people have thrown off the mask of every-day activities and show the working of their thoughts. To attain this on the screen as the director, Frank Lloyd, has done, is no mean accomplishment.

A superb cast is headed by Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick, and includes James Kirkwood, William Orlamond, Otto Hoffman, and Will Walling.

"The Sin Flood" was adapted from the original Swedish play by Henning Berger, the foremost living Scandanavian novelist and dramatist. It is different from any picture ever produced. Fred Miller, managing director of the California, says that it is the greatest picture he has shown this year.

Another feature of the California's bill is Elinor's orchestra, featuring, "Tannhauser,s March." A Joe Rock comedy and a Prizma film of "The Moonlight Sonata," completes the offering for the week.

Mix At Miller's

Local followers of Tom Mix will have another treat in "Do and Dare," his latest vehicle which opens at the Miller Theater today.

The new screen play, which is from the pen of Marion Brooks and which was directed by Edward Sedgwick, casts the vigorous hero in three distinct roles—first, as the valorous and peril defying scout of the western plains, who rescues the beautiful daughter of the commandant of a desolate frontier fort from a hostile Indian tribe and then saves the post from the onslaughts of the savages; second as the guileless and passive youth who neither knows of nor seeks adventure in his provincial shell, but who is suddenly fired by the desire for romance when he hears the lurid tales of his famous forbear; and third, as the brave and resolute participant in a South American revolution, whose daring deeds win for him the woman he loves and the command of a nation's military forces.

Those who are familiar with the varied talents of this dynamic actor can easily picture the grace and dash wherewith he conducts himself in the numerous scenes of this photoplay.

The supporting cast includes Claire Adams, whose winsome beauty in the leading feminine role enhances the production 100 per cent, Dulcie Cooper, Hector Sarno, and others. The regular Miller program of many features completes an interesting bill.

Dorothy Still Flapping

Much has been said, much is being said and more will soon be said about the flapper. The flapper is being announced, denounced and defended, but with all the battle raging, the flapper herself seems to be the least concerned member of the family.

The flappers and the ex-flappers turned out en masse last week to see Dorothy Gish in her latest comedy, "The Country Flapper," at the Symphony, and they turned out so strong that the Symphony is holding over the engagement for one week.

According to Dorothy Gish, the flapper is a little bit of all right. She knows what she wants to do and she does it, and if the world does not like it, then the world is perfectly welcome to take a jump at itself.

Based on youth, dealing with youth, with the illusions, the pertness and the joyousness of youth, "The Country Flapper" succeeds in doing what it set forth to do, create laughter.

Joseph Farnham, who wrote the clever subtitles of the production, scores the biggest hit of any, excepting, of course, Dorothy Gish, and Miss Gish had a hand in the writing of the titles. Glenn Hunter as the small-town "soda chauffeur," "rouge ruiner" and "porch petter," handles the principal male role in an admirable manner and makes a serious bid for future recognition.

"Eternal Flame" at Tally's

Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," her latest production adapted by Frances Marion from Honore Balzac's "La Duchesse de Langeais," is the attraction at Tally's Broadway for the week starting today. Gorgeous to behold —yet never to be held—vivid to love, yet never to be won; pure beauty asking only the fealty of one man, but when he wagered on her faith as he would upon a falcon—exotic exile to the intrigue, glamour, scandal of France's gayest courts. For Norma Talmadge the picture is another pillar of unique achievement. Vast scenes, magnificent in investiture of color and crowd, will hold your eye—but ever holding your heart will be glory, romance, drama, the appeal of this woman.

Sherlock Repeats

Thousands of lovers of detective stories are already familiar with the experiences of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous mystery tale, "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Hundreds of them reside right here in this community. To them and to the public at large, as well, it would be of interest to know that the screen version of the ever popular mystifier will be shown for a second week at the Alhambra starting today.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" still stands as the most

STRONG DRAMA BY GALSWORTHY

For it does not need the title to make clear that the theme of play is the conflict between one set of loyalties and another. All the people at the country house have some sort of ideals about honor. All of them feel that the right of a man not to be robbed is really inviolable.

Yet, without knowing they defend their class, their friends, and when they know they defend still more bitterly.

The lawyer is another and different example; he is faced with two conflicts—his friendship for the criminal and his wife; and on the other hand his loyalty to the law—to the idea of justice. He refuses to go on with a case in which his client has pretended to be innocent; he refuses to corrupt the idea of justice by winning an unjust case.

Around and around that case ever conflict is seen in individuals and in groups, and there is really no answer. "A pistol keeps faith" writes the suicide; "We have all been loyal," says a friend; "But sometimes our loyalties conflict—loyalty is not enough."

The last phrase recalls the words of Edith Cavell, "patriotism is not enough," and there is reason to believe that, as was the case in "The Skin Game," the personal tangle is the microcosm of a greater one.

To be noted, also, is the large way in which Galsworthy has worked the racial problem in to the personal and into the human problems. There is, in spite of De Levis faults, a dignity about him, a sense of a wrong which passes private wrongs, and which may be part of the great wrong of existence.

This admirable play is admirably produced. The cast is English —even in the case of De Levis who was played in the original London production by an American.

Not one of the actors is a star; one of them plays three parts, and of those three one produces an entirely new and agreeable stutter.

But there is loyalty to the play which is rare in star-productions, and there is a general level of intelligence extremely pleasant to behold.

I do not feel quite as enthusiastic about the production of the Paul Geraldy play "To Love," already mentioned. Miss Grace George, Robert Warwick and Norman Trevor are the only three actors on the scene; it resolves itself therefore into a series of duologues, for M. Geraldy has avoided big conflicts except in the mind and spirit of his heroine.

To me the play was far more interesting than the production, for nothing persuaded me that the three people were ever in the same room, so much apart and solitary did each one appear. To be sure there were moments—but moments do not make a play. The best thing was the general sense of dignity—of working with materials which were not trashy and cheap.

The elaborateness of the Music Box Revue passes the limits of my space to describe. I note here only that Bobby Clark, of Clark and MacCulough, arrived from burlesque (and from a London success) without the famous lion tamer act he used to do, but with a lot of stuff, including a dance which quite broke up the show. The audience really seemed impassioned.

And Charlotte Greenwood was also there, singing about "Daddy Long Legs" and otherwise cavorting and being engaging and kind to everybody.

It is a long show with many high spots—literally high for whenever Hassard Short cannot think of anything else to do with a character he shoots him up and elevators and tries what eminence can do on the stage.

A serious play and the mistery referred to in the beginning of this report are respectively, "The Fool" and "The Last Warning."

At the very, very end of this week another play by the author of R. U. R. will be produced. As they say in telegrams, "Letter follows."

"FAGS" SCORNED BY FLAPPERS

are engaged. Nevertheless Mildred doesn't smoke

"We have a club you know, among the picture girls," she explained, "with Mary Pickford as president. Mary doesn't smoke, you see.

"One new girl the other evening said to us, 'I suppose you all want to smoke, but personally I don't like it!'

"'Well,' we wemanded, 'do you smell any cigarette smoke around here?'

"She acknowleged she didn't.

"However, I don't criticise anybody who does smoke. I personally never think of it, that's all. There's such a lot of happiness in living, why smoke? Maybe if some day I'm an old, old maid, with just a cat and a parrot, I'll smoke. But not now."

Lois Wilson is another picture star who doesn't indulge in the horrible weed:

"Well, you know, acts aren't considered so much a matter of morals any more," explained Miss Wilson, who is by way of being something of a high-brow. "Acts are either wise or unwise. Seems to me it's a bit unwise to smoke.

"Not that I criticise the girl who does smoke, you know. It is a matter of personal opinion, and personal taste, that's all.

"My opinion of smoking happens to be that I don't like it. Probably if I had ever gotton into the habit of smoking, I'd stand up for it."

Said May McAvoy: "Smoking is a matter of individual choice. I had to smoke for ten minutes in a picture once, and that cured me before I began. So you see I'm not in position to set myself up as a judge. Really though, I do sometimes feel that smoking detracts to a certain extent from feminine charm. And you know it's really a pretty expensive habit for the girl of limited income to indulge."

"Those boys in 'Huckleberry Finn' who all went out one by one to look for a lost knife after smoking wouldn't have anything on me if I tried to smoke!" laughed Aimee Torrianni. "I tried once. It wasn't so good.

"Looked at from a purely personal standpoint, smoking is a total loss. I'd prefer to sail a choppy sea any day to smoking the smallest, most harmless looking cigarette."

Of course, a girl must do something, though. And it seems that you can—eh!—get quite a kick out of a box of candy! Fact! Sugar is a stimulant, you see.

Don't tell it on her please—it might hurt her professional career, but Edith Roberts is rather addicted to the candy habit and Mary Miles Minter just will steal two or three lumps of sugar out of the sugar-bowl if she isn't watched.

"Candy," Edith confessed, "especially chocolates, often makes me feel quite gay. I know it isn't good for me—makes me fat and everything. But it is so hard to give up toasted marshmallows, isn't it?

Carmel Myers doesn't flirt with the filthy weed, either.

"I have trouble enough on my shoulders," said Carmel, "without always having to worry about my favorite cigarettes and whether I have any matches or not."

Another little picture queen who wouldn't think of smoking, my goodness! is Mary Philbin.

"My goodness, why should I smoke?" she demanded with the accent on the "should." So that's that.

My Lady Nicotine has no power over Zasu Pitts, either. Zasu is of the flapper clan, even if she is a mamma.

"My goodness, wouldn't it be a fine thing for me to be blowing cigarette smoke into my baby's eyes!" she cried. "Why, my husband, Tom Gallery, would take the baby away from me! He doesn't smoke, and he'd say, 'Here, I'll feed the baby myself on a bottle!'"

"Why, I just never think of smoking," said Clara Horton, opening her blue eyes very wide.

"And neither do I!" said Colleen Moore.

Which seems to make it unanimous.

"CINEMA-VAUD" SUCCESS

Playing to the biggest audiences since its new management took possession of the Garrick Theater with its recently initiated policy of "Cinema-Vaudeville" at 10-cent admissions, this theater seems to have hit its stride. The first week's programs were enthusiastically received and a number of highly diverting bills have been secured for the coming week.

Today Florence Reed will be seen in a three-reel version of "At Bay," while other short-reel features conclude the entertaining bill.

Every day a new program is the Garrick slogan. Tomorrow Jack London's dramatic story, "White and Yellow," tops the bill, which also includes a Ben Turpin comedy, a Pathe News, a Goldwyn Graphic cartoon, a polite domestic comedy entitled "Caesar's Ghost" and a beautiful scenic.

On Tuesday "The Bashful Suitor," another two-reel drama based of a famous painting, heads the cinema vaudeville.

On Wednesday Irene Castle in the three-reel drama, "The Mark of Cain," is the feature.

On Thursday Universal's dramatic novelty, "The Gypsy Trail," heads the program.

On Friday William Desmond in "The Unfaithful" is the dramatic feature.

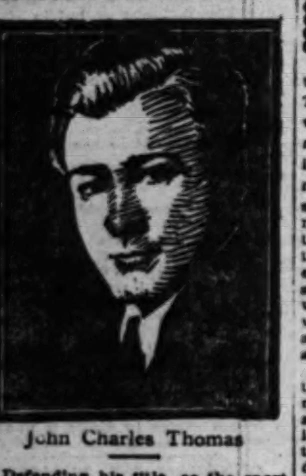
YOUNG BARITONE WILL SING HERE



John Charles Thomas

Defending his title, as the sport writers would say, John McCormack returned to New York two weeks ago and gave a song recital. Being the first appearance of the Irish tenor since his serious illness last spring, it created more than unusual interest, and he gave, according to New York reviews, a convincing demonstration of his complete recovery. It was the same old McCormack voice and art, unimpaired, agreed almost every critic in New York City. He will give several more concerts in America "just to show that he can," according to reports.

On the same day, an American singer, John Charles Thomas, gave a concert in another great music hall before an audience whose enthusiasm equaled that given McCormack. It was John Charles, fresh from one of the most successful foreign concert tours ever staged. Thomas gave three concerts in London, one at Aeolian, one at Queens and the third at Albert Hall, seating 12,000, so great has his English following grown. New York critics found him one of the most satisfying recitalists heard in years. He was hailed as the successor to Bispham, and under the caption "from Broadway to Brahms" one critic said he had bridged at one jump, the gap between a light-opera hero and a consummate concert artist. Thomas had returned from abroad on the same steamer with John McCormack, who heard his London concerts, and predicts a sensational success for this young American artist. Mr. Thomas will be heard in recital here November 11.

STUDENTS ARE ACTIVE

Three entertainments were given last week by advanced students of the Wallis School of Dramatic Art. One was for Rebekah Lodge in Odd Fellows' Hall, Wednesday night. One a vaudeville bill, in the school's theater, Friday evening and the other for the Universalist Society in the church in Hoover street Friday evening. On these programs were: Hortense Prohaska, Lyle Stanton, Donald Wilson, Howard McNear, W. E. Moon, Roy Standard, Oliver Connell, O. C. Warburton, Elizabeth Webb, Kathryn Joy, Leda King, Caroline Tanner, Elvyna Deis, Florence Anderson and Lucy E. Wolcott, musical director.

CHEERS AND BOOS

What "Times" Readers Think About Plays, Pictures and Music, and Their Interpreters

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26.—[To the Theatrical Editor of The Times:] Will you please tell me why so sweet a picture as "Forget-me-not" which I saw this week at Lowe's State Theater should be marred by so brutally painful a scene as that which shows the mother dying in childbirth? It is the second time I have seen something like this on the screen, and each time it has shocked me with sadness and horror. The last time was in a D. W. Griffith picture, in which Lillian Gish tortured her audiences while she portrayed the agony of motherhood.

No woman can see this sort of thing without a shudder. It is a moment that is both so terrible and so sacred that I, for one, cannot look upon any picture that attempts to show it so realistically as did both "Forget-me-not" and the Griffith film.

I am an ardent theatergoer and love to watch that which is beautiful and inspiring on the screen but motherhood, while it is the most beautiful and inspiring thing in the world, cannot seem so in its tragedy. I think that there should be some way to avoid this.

MRS. HENRIETTA BAKER.

Deplores Lack of Opera

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—(To the Theatrical Editor of The Times:) Why is it that a city the size of Los Angeles cannot support an opera company of its own? I was most disappointed in the lack of opera here when I arrived a few months ago. I was told that Los Angeles was a great center of musical culture, and yet I find that not only is there nothing in the way of opera here, but apparently no move being made on the part of the managers to do anything for the cause of opera. It seems to me that this is a deficiency, considering the population of the city, and the great musical public that you are supposed to have here.

I must say that I was very favorably impressed with your Philharmonic Orchestra. I think that Mr. Rothwell is a great conductor, whose talent has never been recognized heretofore. I had opportunity to hear him some years ago in St. Paul and I thought that even then he was more than clever. He has grown tremendously since that time.

If you are able to support such an orchestra it seems more than natural that you should also be able to engage the singers for opera, and that all that is wanting is the right kind of enterprise to establish a company here. Personally, I have always found more delight in opera than in symphonic music. Most people do not take the great interest in strictly musical works as they do when this is combined with something that brings beauty to the eye.

FRANK EGGLESTON.

Wants More of Nature

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—(To the Theatrical Editor of The Times:) It was such a wonderful experience to see Tom Mix's "Just Tony," that I simply can't refrain from writing you about this marvelous picture—marvelous because it tells such a beautiful story of dumb animal life. Dumb is not the word to use, because Tony was more than that. He is one of the most intelligent animals I have ever seen. I think one of the most intelligent actors too.

Animals should have a great chance in pictures. There are so many who would love to see the true story of a dog's wonderful faithfulness. There has never been a picture like that shown except "The Silent Call," which I saw at Miller's a few months ago. I went to see that three times.

But why does not someone do the story of "Beautiful Joe." Every child would go to the theater to see it, and so many of us grown-ups would find it such a relaxation, and something so sweet and gentle, after the many disappointing plays that we see about unhappy home life.

More of nature and natural things is what pictures really need in my humble opinion, and I do hope you will urge the producers to understand how much many of us long from our hearts for this sort of pictures.

AMBASSADOR'S SHOW ATTRACTING CROWDS

Doris Eaton and her associates in "Gorham's Follies," which is attracting smart and numerically large gatherings to the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador, have set a new standard for this type of music-and-girl entertainment, a standard that closely approaches the Follies that carry the Ziegfeld name and the revues of the Parisian music halls.

"Gorham's Follies" offer a varied program of music, dance and fun. Besides Miss Eaton's contribution to the program, the entertainment includes song offerings by Mlle. Marguerite Vogel from the Opera Comique, Paris, and Jean Gedos, from the musical comedy stages of London, while terpsichore is represented by Suzette, a striking danseuse, whose grace and expertness are very unusual. David Murray also dances well, while Anton Yarotski and Ania Karenia, from the Grand Operahouse ballet, Petrograd, offer praise-compelling dance creations.

Patrons find much pleasure in the music provided by A. Lyman and his orchestra for the stage entertainment and for the dancing that precedes and follows the offering. The program is divided in two parts, the first at 10 p.m. and the second an hour later.

PARAMOUNT ACTIVE

With the arrival of two new production units from the West Coast, activities at the Paramount Long Island studio are increasing by leaps and bounds. Four companies are under way with a fifth to be started soon.

George Melford's unit has started "Java Head" this week and Alfred Green has begun work on "Back Home and Broke," starring Thomas Meighan.

Dorothy Dalton has commenced work under the direction of Victor Fleming in a picture that is temporarily titled "Black Fury."

Dance and be Beautiful, is Girl's Advice

"What keeps the men in line at the box office? What makes the women fight for dress bargains? What makes drug clerks so popular? What do we live for?"

All these and more questions were propounded yesterday by Irene D'Annelle, the "Panther Girl," famous exponent of "mind" dancing, who has just been brought here from the East by Victor Hugo Halperin for a series of films.

"Everybody seeks the Grail of Beauty," says this young philosopher-dancer. "Consciously or unconsciously, the search goes on. But if women knew how easy it is to find it, there'd be cobwebs over our divorce court doors.

"The route is via dancing. Dancing with the mind, incidentally accompanied by the body and the feet. 'Dance—and be beautiful!'

"Girls have come to me awkward, ungainly, with impossible postures grown out of habits formed while at work; their faces stolid, inexpressive. By means of rhythmic movements to inspirational music they became transformed from ugly little caterpillars into gorgeous butterflies. They were lifted from the sodden earth to the ethereal charms of the spiritual. And the explanation is very simple.

"To dance correctly is to hold harmonious thoughts. One cannot dance properly and hold any other than sweet, refreshing thoughts. These thoughts are expressed in every turn and twist of the body. They are also, of necessity, expressed on the face. It does not take long for real beauty to shine forth from the face, because habit catches the radiance of expression and fixes it—makes it permanent.

"We all know that we are happiest when we do the things for which we are best fitted. I dance because I feel that to do so is to best express the joys and thoughts that come to me—so that the world may be the gainer. If I but convey a small part of my complete happiness to others I shall feel recompensed."

Victor Hugo Halperin is arranging a number of public exhibitions for Miss D'Annelle's "mind" dancing for the benefit of local charities. These, to be announced shortly, will be watched with bated breath by Los Angeles femininity.

MME. BISHOP RETURNS

Mme. Genevra Johnston Bishop, who recently returned from a four months' visit in the East, where, at the request of President Harding she was the soloist at the Centennial in Marion, O., has reopened her studios in the Music-Arts Studio Building and is arranging her work for the coming season in vocal instruction, and booking engagements for her illustrated "Musical Song" lectures for clubs and recital programs. While East Mme. Bishop appeared before many prominent clubs in Chicago and the State of Michigan, giving the "Oberammergau" and "India, the Land of Mystery" musical lectures with great success. At the Chicago School of Music she was an instructor in voice during her stay. Miss Gladys White, a pupil of Mrs. Bishop, who accompanied her East, took part in many of the programs.

EXCITING, BUT MOSTLY IN NAME

ed heroine and in our opinion is a little softer and more adroit than heretofore. That is, until she tires to depict fright. Then she seems lacking.

Henry Hull, for months the hero of "The Cat and the Canary" seems to fit as easily into his troubled surroundings, but he will never be a celluloid idol.

Porter Strong really has most of the footage as the scared darky and he does his stunt in the usual burnt cork fashion.

A REAL HIT

The real surprise of the picture is one Irma Harrison as his colored sweetheart, a sort of French maid with burnt cork trimmings. Here is a highly personable young woman.

All in all, we can't hand much to "One Exciting Night." Even the photography, save for the gorgeous close-ups of Miss Dempster, isn't up to average.

By the way, we almost forgot the storm climax where trees are uprooted and at least a battery of wind machines must have been employed. It's as huge a hurricane as we ever glimpsed, even more complete than the gale in "The Old Homestead."

The opening night of "One Exciting Night" wasn't quite as thrilling as affair as the usual cinema first showing hereabouts. Maybe it was because Marcus Loew had taken a trainload of stars to the Philadelphia opening of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Among the players at the Griffith opening were Rodolph Valentino and Richard Barthelmess.

KIRKWOOD IN "FOOL"

Los Angeles folks will be highly interested in the fact that James Kirkwood has recovered his voice. Not that he really had lost it but he has been on the screen so long that we had almost forgotten he was once a highly promising footlight player.

Kirkwood has the leading role in Channing Pollock's "The Fool," tried out in California with Richard Bennett in the lead. "The Fool" is one of those very, very thoughtful plays about capital and labor, doing right by one's fellow men and all that sort of thing.

Pollock has evidently studied his Galsworthy, "The Servant in the House," "The Third Floor Back" and "The Miracle Man." These ingredients are all here.

"The Fool" is a visionary young rector who starts out to live consistently like a Christian. He loses his church but ultimately achieves his measure of happiness.

Mr. Pollock doesn't hesitate to utilize a miracle, the curing of a lame child a la "The Miracle Man" and the appearance of a "Stranger" to strengthen the moral courage of the fool.

The play talks and talks but in the main it is rambling and inadroit. Mr. Kirkwood surprised us in the role of the fool, a half aesthetic dreamer. Not as much by his measured performance as by his golden voice. To our way of thinking Mr. Kirkwood comes mighty near being the best reader of lines on our stage. Lowell Sherman is in "The Fool" cast, too.

We caught the second night of "The Fool" and found a distinctly screen audience present. Jack Pickford sat in the second row and among the other film folks were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Grey, accompanied by Carol Dempster. Percy Marmont was there, too.

GLORIOUS GLORIA AGAIN

The only important new film of the past week was Gloria Swanson's "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew." Here again the decorative Gloria suffers dreadfully in the smartest of frocks. She is the innocent divorcee who finds herself as an outcast until she adopts snappy bathing suits.

You can't blame the social bars for collapsing then. Probably not much as a picture, but we are always prejudiced in favor of the de luxe Gloria. Frankly, we think she can do no wrong cinematographically.

KIDDING DOUG

They're telling an interesting story about "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" which opens in New York Monday. The authorship is credited to Elton Thomas. Now Doug's full name is Douglas Elton Thomas Fairbanks. Hence the mysterious Mr. Thomas.

By the way, the night that "Robin Hood" opened in Los Angeles the telephone rang in Doug's room at the Ritz. It was a long distance call from Los Angeles.

"My God, Doug!" exclaimed the voice faintly over the wire.

"What's happened," said Fairbanks sleepily.

"It's Bennie Zeidman," said the voice, "My God, Doug!"

"What's the matter?" yelled Doug.

"The picture; my God, Doug!" exclaimed Bennie.

"What's happened?" demanded Doug at the top of his voice.

"The picture, can't express myself, my God, Doug," went on Zeidman.

And he hung up.

"And he called me up three thousand miles to tell me that," says Doug in telling the story.

Bob Vignola has finished "Adam and Eva." There are reports of friction between Bob and Cosmopolitan. It appears that you need a magnifying glass to find his name on the "When Knighthood Was in Flower" billboard sheets. Vignola is going to make a tour of the world before he starts another picture leaving very shortly. He will be gone five months.

By the way, Allen Dwan's name was left off the "Robin Hood" billboard papers, too. They printed little pasters to put on top, however.

Funny how they forget all about director when the picture is finished, isn't it?

LILLIAN SAILING SOON

Lillian Gish and her company are scheduled to sail for Italy next Thursday. The unit will include director Henry King, Joe Boyle, his assistant, and Roy Overbaugh, his cameraman, besides several players.

James Abbe, the New York photographer who recently visited the coast for Photoplay Magazine, is going along to study direction.

John Robertson has been signed by Inspiration Pictures to direct Dick Barthelmess, who is scheduled to start work on his next picture in a few days.

Alice Brady has gone to Florida to film a South Sea story "The Leopardess." Henry Kolker will direct for Paramount, and Montague Love will head the cast.

Allan Dwan will likely start work soon on "Glimpses of the Moon" for Paramount. Bebe Daniels arrived this week to be in the cast.

Harriet T. Hammond arrived in town last week, having motored across country with her mother and brother.

Robert Sherwood, the motion picture critic of Life and the New York Herald, and Mary Brandon, an actress, are to be married at the Little Church Around the Corner in New York Sunday evening. Doug Fairbanks and Allen Dwan are acting as ushers.

Patrons Are Pleased With "Robin Hood"

Los Angeles theatergoers are delighted with Sid Grauman's introduction of the two shows daily and reserved seats plans at his new Hollywood Egyptian Theater, where Douglas Fairbanks's "Robin Hood" is beginning its third week.

Patrons of the screen capital's film temple have been enthusiastic over both innovations, for the first one permits them to arrive in time for the matinee at 2:15 or the evening performance at 8:15, and see the complete photoplay, with its Nottingham Castle pageant, without having to wait for the beginning of the picture after seeing its ending, as in continuous performance programs.

The second plan, by which seats are sold a week in advance, permits theater parties to be given without fear that seats will not be available. Many hosts and hostesses have made such reservations, and thereby have been able to send out invitations to their guests far enough ahead to insure acceptances.

Grauman has made every possible arrangement to facilitate the purchase of tickets for the Hollywood. Because of the heavy demand for tickets it has been necessary to install a private branch telephone exchange at the theater (Hollywood 2131.) The Fairbanks photodrama of romantic days in medieval England will not be shown at any other Los Angeles theater this year.

PLAYCRAFTERS MEET

The regular weekly meeting of the Playcrafters will take place tomorrow evening, at 8 p.m., in room 206 Tajo Building. At this meeting two original plays will be read. "Who is Guilty," by O. V. Fisher, will be interpreted by Karyl Marker, and "The Throne of Arcady," by Miss R. Randall will be read by the author. Visitors are welcome.

The trackage of the railroads of the United States if joined together would encircle the earth fifteen times.

GOLF CLUBS WORRY HER

Lucille Carlisle, who plays the chief feminine roles in the Larry Semon comedies, has been delving into golf literature and golf nomenclature since Mr. Semon commenced the production of "Golf," his latest contribution to the annals of screen merriment.

Miss Carlisle has come to the conclusion that the person who formerly made use of his unique and peculiar talents in providing nightmarish names for the Pullman cars has found a new outlet for his titular vagaries, and is now hard at work supplying names for the golf clubs that are to be found in almost every city of any worth-while population.

In support of this contention, Miss Carlisle mentions the names of a few of the county's most noted golf clubs, improved cow pastures for the most part, that now are dedicated to the ancient game of the Highland chiefs. Miss Carlisle's list includes: Skokie, Aronimink, Shannopin, Apawamis, Siwanoy; Ranelagh, Metacomet, [illegible] namoisett, Onwentsia, [illegible] wanck and, last, but by no [illegible] least, the good old [illegible] the dentist's delight, "[illegible] dasia!"

LUCIEN HUBBARD ON PRODUCTION STAFF

Lucien Hubbard, one of the foremost scenario writers and editors in motion-pictures, has been engaged as one of a staff of four production advisory editors at Paramount's West Coast studio, according to an announcement issued today by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The other three members of this staff are Ralph Block, Julia Crawford Ivers and Walter Woods.

Mr. Hubbard, will take up his duties at the Lasky studio on the first of November. He has written several original stories and numerous photoplays have been made from his adaptations.

His experience as a newspaper writer and editor has given him a keen insight into human nature and to this experience he gives much of the credit for the success he has made in motion pictures.

Julia Crawford Ivers will take up her work on the staff of production advisory editors after the completion of "The White Flower," the Betty Compson picture now being made in Honolulu, which he is personally directing.

Walter Woods, the third member of the staff of production advisory editors, is now on location in Nevada with the company making "The Covered [illegible] Paramount.

Answers an Age-Old Query in New Play

Ever since Mother Eve imbedded her pearly teeth in the fabled, famous, fatal apple, humanity has pondered from time to time the age-old problem: "What's Wrong With the Women?"

Daniel Carson Goodman, author and playwright, who for two seasons has entered the ranks of author-producers along with a number of others, among whom Avery Hopwood stands prominently, is one of the men who has given the question unusual attention. Indirectly this writer began the depiction of the eternal question in his first Broadway success, "The Barricade," which dealt with the barrier womankind has placed between herself and man in the effort for self-determination. Goodman has continued the writing of plays dealing with the woman question, until one day he hit upon the idea of writing directly a theme around the serious question, "What's Wrong With the Women?"

The author consulted Sam Harris, New York producer, with a view toward a Broadway production of the play, but the spectacular angles of the manuscripts made a stage production almost prohibitive. Goodman then turned to the pictures and wrote the play in scenario form. With the past season of turmoil clamping the producers down to more or less limited production expense no one ventured to spend the money on Goodman's story, and finally the author organized his own company, taking in R. William Neil as director, and financing the project with the aid of a number of New York banks.

In all of his plays Goodman has pointed out that unrest is responsible for whatever chaotic or hectic conditions exist among womankind. In "What's Wrong With the Women" he has founded his drama upon this fact, bringing proof through the ages, from Cleopatra's day down to the modern flapper. Goodman, who is a philosopher as well as an author, claims that since the dawn of humanity, extravagance, hypocrisy and lies have caused the world's troubles. Indirectly he indicts the unbridled pleasureseeker and points him out as a monumental warning to the coming generations.

Before embarking on this production the author sent a letter to practically every publisher in the United States, explaining that his picture was not to be a sordid unkindness toward womankind. As a matter of fact, his production, which is showing at the Mission Theater, may be classified as a sharp, biting and humorous satire upon present-day conditions.

CINEMESE TO PLAY "CHARLEY'S AUNT"

Shining stars of stage and screen will scintillate in the big Elks' show to be given at the Philharmonic Auditorium November 8, 9, 10 and 11, for the benefit of 8000 homeless Los Angeles orphans.

William H. Crane, Herbert Rawlinson, Larry Semon, Kenneth Harlan, Chester Conklin, Lionel Belmore, Ruth Roland, Mabel Van Buren, Fritzi Burnette and Catherine Van Buren will participate in the event, which is to be an elaborate presentation of the famous English play, "Charley's Aunt." Seldom has such a notable group of dramatic talent been assembled for a performance of this kind.

William H. Crane has for forty years been dear to the theater-going public. The part assigned him in this play, that of Sir Francis Chesney, offers him an excellent opportunity to portray one of those roles for which he is so well beloved. Herbert Rawlinson as his son, Jack Chesney, will bring to the stage the charm that has made him a screen idol. Larry Semon and Chester Conklin, popular comedians of the silver sheet, have parts in "Charley's Aunt" that offer situations appropriate to their talents. Ruth Roland plays Ella Delahay, and Mabel Van Buren, another studio star, takes the part of Donna Lucia.

Kenneth Harlan and Lionel Belmore have parts befitting their dramatic ability, and the yet unknown stars to round out the cast are to be selected on the basis of their versatile accomplishments.

Nick Cogley, who portrayed one of the parts in the original cast of "Charley's Aunt," will act as manager of productions. Thus the proper atmosphere, the same quaint English style that made this play an outstanding success of the stage, will be preserved in the local production.

PIANIST IN EUROPE

Eleanor Spencer, pianist, who has been concertizing in Europe the last two seasons, has been engaged by Willem Mengelberg for the Cesar Franck festival, to be given by him and his orchestra, the Amsterdam Concertgebau, at Amsterdam and The Hague, December 7 and 8, in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the composer's birth. Miss Spencer will play the symphonic variations.

KO VERT AT PALM SPRINGS

Freddric Ko Vert, whose fame as a dance producer is second only to his fame as a dance artist, has been asked to stage the dance features for the Indian play to be given at Palm Springs November 5 and 6, under the direction of Garrett Holms.

SEES FUTURE FOR AUTHOR

Woods Believes Writers Can Better Films

Predicts Passing of the Picture Spectacle

Organization of Company is Under Way

Considerable mystery surrounds the affiliation which the new Woods organization is planning as an outlet for its productions. Elmer Harris, now in New York, is expected to sign a contract with a big distributing company within the next ten days. Thompson Buchanan, third member of the new producing triumvirate, is already laying out a schedule of picture making.

There is a current rumor that the new concern will be a subsidiary of United Artists, which, for a long time, is said to have desired a Woods affiliation. Those in the confidence of the new producers, however, state that several other distributing concerns are after the Allied Authors, Inc., as the company will be known, and that there is a strong likelihood that they will not affiliate with the Pickford-Fairbanks-Chaplin combination.

Mr. Woods will retire from the Lasky organization November 11 after more than five years' continuous service. He came to Lasky direct from the Griffith studaio, where he had been general production manager, as well as scenario chief. During his long association with Griffith, he wrote many features, including the film version of "The Birth of a Nation." He also is credited with having written the first continuity of a photoplay, made by Biograph in 1908. He was one of the founders of the Screen Writers' Guild and the Writers' Club, of which he is now serving his second year as president.

"I cannot talk at present about the plans of myself and associates," said Mr. Woods yesterday. "These plans, while quite definite in purpose, are not yet consummated.

"Meanwhile, I shall probably take a little vacation and rest. After working for five years and a half for one big company, I am looking forward to a period of freedom much like a schoolboy anticipates the holiday.

"My relations with Famous Players-Laskey Corporation have been so pleasing that I feel a very keen regret at parting, but just the same there is a kind of joy in finding oneself free from a certain restraint that one is under when connected with a big corporation. For instance, I can now discuss general picture conditions without the danger of having my words misconstrued.

SPECTACLE OUT

"I have an idea that the motion picture is approaching another milestone in its progress—the point where the story rather than the spectacle is to predominate. Coupled with this and very closely allied to it is the matter of more economical production. Pictures are costing too much money to produce for the good of the business, and I believe this evil is about due for elimination, or at least for radical correction.

"I don't mean to say that some very expensive pictures have not warranted the money invested in them; 'Robin Hood' for example, or some of the Griffith pictures and a few others, but unfortunately these justified successes have had a tendency to cause many other producers to imagine that mere lavishness means better pictures. Extravagant display is not art.

"It is just the opposite unless the story actually calls for display. There are numerous productions that have been made in recent years whose only claim to distinction is the money that was spent on them, and these can be very easily identified without naming any names. Their vulgar ostentation is perfectly obvious, in the same manner that we recognize vulgarity in an overdressed woman.

"The only possible remedy for this condition will be found in improved story quality and greater restraint in production cost. To attain this result I believe that the constructive author and writer, the real source of the story, must be brought into closer, more intimate relationship with production, and there must be at the same time better economic control.

"These are problems for organization policy and no two companies can work them out alike, because the personal equation must enter so largely into the matter.

"On the whole, I believe that the desired results, finer story quality and economic control, can be more easily attained in small, compact organizations where the producers actually produce, than is possible in a large organization where overhead is excessive and the producing company must of necessity employ individuals, more or less irresponsible, to do its producing for it."

ever wears an artificial beard while performing; it would be considered sacrilegious. So that brought even discussion of the matter to an end.

America is not to have a chance to film the "Passion Play" with the original Oberammergau actors. It is said that the American who had made the offer now threatens to duplicate the performance with actors of American blood out in California, selecting a location like that of Obermmergau among the Pacific Coast hills, and closely duplicating the native players in make-up.

It is said that during the season the efforts of American producers, none of their agents being of the Christian faith, to induce the peasants to take part in a film version of the piece have been so persistent as to have amounted almost to persecution.

The season just concluded was the most successful in the history of Oberammergau. Three hundred and seventeen thousand people saw the Passion Play and the receipts (in marks) were fabulous in total.

Foreigners were charged high prices in the money of their own land, often, for tickets to the great drama, the thrifty peasantry thus getting a magnificent rake-off in exchange.

Twelve years will elapse before the Passion Play is again presented at Oberammergau, this being in accordance with established custom.

TWO GREAT PLAYS

Two important productions have been among my delightful experiences this week. One occurred in Paris, whence I journeyed to see the premiere performance of that remarkable play, L'Avcoat," which, translated into English, would be "The Barrister," and translated into American would be "The Lawyer."

This play has created great excitement in the French capital and if translation proves to be a possibility will greatly interest Britons and Americans. That matter of translation will be difficult however. It is a problem play and the problem is the query as to whether a lawyer should still continue to endeavor for a client's acquittal after he, himself, has become convinced of that client's guilt.

My knowledge of French is not complete enough to enable me to catch all the finesse of the truly great drama, but I found it thrilling and compelling.

The lawyer is engaged as counsel for a woman charged with murdering her husband. Both the victim and the accused have been his friends. But he has known that in life the murdered man was outrageously unfaithful to the wife.

At first he believes her to be innocent, however, and prepares his case upon that ground. Later, as he works upon it before the crucial moment of the trial, he changes his opinion and decides that his client really is guilty.

He is then torn by two emotions—his desire to live up to the best of his ability as a lawyer, which, he knows, will free his client and his desire to see justice done, which, he now is convinced, would involve her conviction.

And a third element enters, making his situation even more difficult, for he suddenly realizes that he has fallen in love with the accused.

At first he decides to give up the case, but this he is not strong enough to do. He fights it through to the triumphant acquittal of the woman.

After she has bene freed amid general acclaim, he charges her with having committed the crime, and, horrified by the fact that he has freed a guilty woman, asks her if she now is going to her lover.

She answers that in the sense he uses the word she has no lover, although she admits that she killed her husband as he, the husband, was about to murder in cold blood, as they walked through a wood, the man whom she truly loved and still loves.

"Who is the man?" the lawyer demands dramatically, now doubly disturbed by the situation—disturbed by the fact that he has freed a guilty woman and by that that the woman admits loving some one while he has come to love for himself.

"Yourself," the woman answers simply.

It is a great climax.

What follows it? Well, it is amazing that the audiences in Paris tolerate it, but they do.

The couple part with a quick, nerveless hand shake. Death has come between them.

Here in London we have a new play by Louis N. Parker, and he has accomplished the impossible by giving us something fresh and interesting based upon the life of that much dramatized actor of a by-gone day, David Garrick.

In this play most of the biographical facts are violated—but why not? Is it not a play?

Parker builds a drama about Garrick on a legend generally discredited, but at one time connected with the stage career of Sir Charles Wyndham, a great actor of our own day.

He makes Garrick sham drunk in order to disgust a love-sick girl who is pursuing him and then marry her.

The London papers all condemn the historical inaccuracy of the play; the public does not seem to care a rap about that. They think it is good drama, as, indeed, it is, and go to see it, content, apparently, to get their biography out of books and not look to the stage for it.

SAN CARLOS EN ROUTE

OPERA COMPANY STARTS ON TOUR TOWARD COAST

The repertoire of the San Carlo Opera Company's visit to Los Angeles, February 12, for two weeks, is made in a letter from Charles R. Baker, advance manager for the organization. The company has finished a four weeks' engagement in New York, the total of receipts being $115,000, which exceeded previous records in the musical metropolis.

The total on the week which followed in Rochester reached $54,000, Mr. Baker writes. This is one of the largest for a single week in the history of American opera.

After visiting Montreal, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and other cities, the company will start westward.

Announcement of the San Carlo will contain the usual favorites, like "Rigoletto," "Lucia," "Madame Butterfly," "La Boheme" and "Tosca," in addition to "The Jewels of the Madonna" and "La Forza del Destino." The production of "Salome" will not likely be given.

To Sing at Maryland

Doria Fernando, contralto, will appear in a recital at the Hotel Maryland Tuesday evening. She sang here last year with the Scotti Grand Opera Company, doing such roles as Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana," Siebel in "Faust," Amneris in "Aida," and Suzuki in "Butterfly." Her voice is a rich low contralto and her training has been such that her work is even and artistic throughout. While in New York a number of years ago she coached with Mrs. Rothwell, who is much interested in her appearance in Pasadena. She will also sing at the Samarkand in Santa Barbara. Directly after her California concert tour Miss Fernanda expects to go to Europe for a season of singing and coaching. She will have the assistance of Alice Coleman Batchelder in a group of piano solos. Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson will play her accompaniments.

First Popular Concert

The first of the winter season's popular Sunday concerts will be inaugurated at the Philharmonic Auditorium this afternoon by the Philharmonic Orchestra, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor. The soloist for the premiere will be Olga Steeb, pianist. As this noted artist has already appeared twice as a soloist on the symphony series within the past two years, and also replaced Mischa Levitzky last season at one of the Saturday night symphony concerts, where he was incapacitated by an injury to his hand, Miss Steeb requires no introduction to ouh local music patrons. Miss Steeb feels highly complimented in being chosen for this concert, as it is an established rule not to repeat soloists.

Miss Steeb will play the Tschaikowsky piano concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor, op. 23, a concerto that has not as yet been surpassed in pianistic splendor or in popularity by any composer. The composition has always been a great favorite of Miss Steeb's, and one of her foremost artistic triumphs.

For the orchestral program Conductor Rothwell has selected numbers fitting well with the Tschaikowsky composition. The concert will open with the Saint-Saens "Marche Militaire Francaise," from the "Suite Algerienne," also known as "Picturesque Impressions on a Voyage to Algiers." This brilliant march will be followed by "Scenes de Ballet" (Glazounow,) a group of orchestral dances of charming melody. Following the solo will be the Liszt symphonic tone poem, No. 3, "Les Preludes," one of his earliest and best compositions of this style expressing the program closely, preludes to that unknown song of life's destinies.

Artists' Course Opens

Tuesday afternoon Jessie Christian, coloratura soprano, formerly of the Chicago Opera Company, will open the Hollywood High School course. Other artists on this series, which was arranged by Merle Armitage of the Fitzgerald management, are John Charles Thomas, Thurlow Lieurance, composer, and Nyiregyhazi.

Business Men in Art

The new Los Angeles Chamber Music Society has as its sponsors and directors some of the Southland's most prominent men of affairs. The interest of business men in artistic matters is on the increase. Otto H. Kahn, the international banker, has been the principal supporter of the Metropolitan Opera for many years. Harold McCormick made possible the Chicago Grand Opera Company since its inception. Clarence Mackey of New York; Edward Bok of Philadelphia, the Carpenters and Pillsburys of Minneapolis made the Symphony Orchestras possible in their respective cities. W. A. Clark, Jr., has given Los Angeles its symphony orchestra of the first-class. Now comes Allen C. Balch, W. G. Kirckhoff, Ben R. Meyer, Sam T. Clover and others, who are the incorporators, directors and officers of the new society for the furtherance of chamber music in this city. With Mrs. E. A. Bryant and William Strobridge, manager, they will present at the Gamut Club Theater twelve chamber music concerts during the coming season. Unusual combinations of instruments, as well as organizations are promised and the San Francisco Chamber Music Quartet will give the third of the series in January. Other famous organizations are being considered.

Rothwell Conducting

Next Friday at 3 p.m. and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Philharmonic Auditorium, the second of the Philharmonic Orchestra concerts will be given with Walter Henry Rothwell conducting.

The program selected will open with the Tschaikowsky Symphony N. 6, "Pathetique," followed by the first performance in Los Angeles of Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole," the program closing with the overture "Egmont," Beethoven, played for the first time by the Philharmonic Orchestra. As this concert is given in honor of Conductorto Rothwell, there will not be a soloist.

The Sunday and Friday afternoon concerts will start promptly at 3 p.m., the time being changed from 3:15 at the request of patrons of the afternoon performances.

Organist Plans Season

C. Albert Tufts, organist and president of the Musicians' Club, is planning for a busy season, having already been booked to appear at several church recitals and is filling rapidly teaching hours both in piano and organ instruction. Public organ recitals given each year by Mr. Tufts are looked forward to as musical treats.

Singer to Remain

Grace Wood Jess, singer of folk songs of many nations, will remain on the Pacific Coast this season giving her costume recital. Miss Jess is dividing her time between engagements with a few talented pupils.

Pupils in Recital

Mrs. Harriett de Ment Packard presented a pupils' costume recital Thursday evening at the Assembly Hall, Y.W.C.A., in Pasadena. The following pupils appeared on the program, assisted by Miss Esther Tobler and Lois Wall accompanying: Alberta Tackett, Paul Leishman, Ruth Elben Storey, Marguerite Adgers. Alice Fletcher and Marie Roumelia Eva.

Rothwell Song Recital

Singing a very unusual musical program, made up chiefly of modern songs, Mrs. Elizabeth Rothwell will give a concert November 6 at Philharmonic Auditorium. Walter Henry Rothwell, her husband, director of the Philharmonic Orchestra, will assist as accompanist. Many of the selections will be drawn from classic literature, but some of the most significant offerings will be of the very recent schools in music.

Conducts at Theater

Jan Sofer, a musician of attainments, has been selected to lead the orchestra at Grauman's Hollywood Theater. He is conducting the score arranged for "Robin Hood" by Victor Schertzinger.

Makes Appearance

At the Sunday afternoon concert at the Uplifters' clubhouse recently, Miss Clara Shaw Herrick made her first public appearance since coming to Los Angeles from New York to locate permanently. Among the numbers given which were most enthusiastically received were an aria from Massenet's "Herodiade" and Campbell-Tipton's "A Spirit Flower," both given with a warmth of tone, delicatte shading and change of mood, revealing Mrs. Herrick's appreciation of the text.

Steeb Pupils Play

Selma Siegelman and Louise Burton, who are to appear in a two-piano recital at the Gamut Auditorium tomorrow evening, are artist students of Olga Steeb, who has been with them constantly throughout the preparation of their very well selected program. Both girls have been intimate friends since 8 years old; they play well and are just entering their professional work, featuring the two piano numbers of which they have an extended repertoire.

Miriam Meredith,
One of the leading players of the Municipal Theater organization, which will begin producing this week at the Gamut Club Theater.

Myra Belle Vickers

Myra Belle Vickers, vocal teacher, who has been very successful since coming to Los Angeles three years ago, having had pupils appear at many of the most prominent club programs, on theater programs and in recitals, with much success, will open her studio musical evening the latter part of this month. Among her artist pupils are Mabelle Burch, Gladys Blackwell Pickering, Ruth Bressem Payette and Miss Gladys Swarthout of Chicago, who has recently had most flattering comments in several of the Eastern musical journals.

At the Sunday morning concert today, two of Miss Vickers's artist pupils, Miss Mildred Masser, female baritone, and Miss Catherine Snyder, contralto, will be soloists on the program. Another pupil who is appearing before appreciative audience, is Miss Jessie Lucile Gibbs, who is singing "Maid Marian" in the prologue at the Egyptian Theater.

"Slim Ankles" Here

"Slim Ankles" will be the new Hi Jinks musical comedy revue at the Burbank Theater. The show has to do with a group of stranded chorus girls who proceed to liven up a forgotten old village where the natives have never stepped beyond the confines of the region bordered by the country store and the old opry house used by traveling companies. Here a bunch of femininity begins to teach old and young villagers that they are missing a good deal in their lives, and the pupils prove apt.

Bud Harrison as the village boy of all work has a part which should prove just the sort he delights in. George Clark will also be given a role to his liking. Walter Van, producer, Jean Darby, Mae McCrea, George Crump, Dolly Daye, the Burbank trio, Marie Celestine, and others will be given special musical numbers.

The spectacular effects of the new production are to be especially pleasing, while the beauty chorus is to be presented in many new wardrobe creations. Betty Burnett, the eccentric blonde dancer, is also expected to produce a novelty.

Pantages Offers Comedy

The Pantages show for the coming week runs largely to comedy. With Austin Goetz and Fae Duffy contributing their matrimonial oddity, "The Bride and the Broom," Bob Robison and Renee Pierce presenting the equally hilarious farce, "No More Saloons," and the Three Highlanders in a singing and dancing number from the land of heather, there will be ample opportunity for those who wish to exercise their risibilities. Music has its turn with Larry Harkins's Band a lively jazz organization, and the Golden Bird in which Lorraine Evon and her wonder bird occupy the spotlight. Joe Carson and Kitty Kane supply the terpsichorean event, a scenic novelty in melody and rhythm, and the surprise number, a seventh act recruited from the local profession, will be announced tomorrow.

"The Snowshoe Trail" will hold the screen. This is a romance of the far north in which love and heroism battle with the overwhelming forces of nature, and humanity finds its highest and lowest levels.

Post-Anniversary Show

Post-anniversary week at the Orpheum, opening tomorrow afternoon, promises no let-down in the quality of the bill offered, even if the special features of last week are eliminated. A straight show of quality from A to K is offered.

Karyl Norman, "the Creole fashion plate," is one of the big features; Norman has the faculty of wearing women's clothes to perfection and depicting feminine ways and wiles. He has a stunning wardrobe of fashionable attire, kept up to the minute, and with this he gives a regular fashion show. Ivan Bankoff, Russian-educated dancer, brings his newest girl protegee, Beth Cannon, and together they present a series of numbers called "The Dancing Master." Bankoff has the real Russian technique, having been a pupil of the former Imperial school there. The Weaber boys are "Arkansaw Travelers" who make fine music on handsaws. This useful carpenters' tool is generally thought to be quite unmusical but from it they draw sweet melodies with little effort, resulting in the addition of a new instrument to the symphonic class. Elizabeth Kennedy and Milton Berle are two youngsters of talent who are "Broadway Bound." They are excellent, and their lack of age and experience has not proved a handicap in their success at all. "Senator" Ford from Michigan has a line of funny talk to deliver that ought to win him every vote in the house—and does, if the humorous proclivities of the audience are in good working order. Vincent O'Donnell is recalled as Gus Edwards's "Kid McCormack," and the still sings as well as ever while his repertoire is greater than before. Babcock and Dolly are a smart girl and a clever chap, and they have a good line of patter to offer. Smith and Strong, the Indian and cowboy singers, are the only act remaining over, but their worth is ample justification therefor.

"Rear Car" Can't Stop

That old reliable jinx, number thirteen, holds no terrors for Manager Mik- Corper of the Majestic. He has announced that "The Rear Car" will begin its thirteenth week at that theater this afternoon, and that the thirteenth change in the cast of characters since the run began will be made at the same time.

The newcomer among the Majestic players is an old favorite—Franklyn Pangborn. After an absence of several months Pangborn comes back to Yos Rngeles to take the part of Oliver Hanks, and is expected to fit in nicely with the rest of the cast.

"The Champion," next in line for production at the Majestic, is still not on the griddle, but until "The Rear Car" shows some sign of loss of popularity it will remain in the background. The cast for "The Champion" has been completed and the company is well rehearsed in the new comedy, but so far their work has gone for naught.

Another Week for Maude

The nineteenth week of Maude Fulton's play, "The Humming Bird," with the piquant little playwright in the leading role, is at hand.

The star and her supporting company have made new friends and if possible have made a deeper impression on the theater-going public than ever before. The success of the author-star's play has broken all records for the Egan Theater. Her own charm and mannerisms as Toinette has undoubtedly had a great deal to do with the play as a drawing card, although the excellence of the cast has also had much to do with it. Supporting Miss Fulton will be found Robert Ober, Wilfred Lucas, Henry Hall, Grace Travers, Florence Oberle, William T. Rogers Mia Marvin, Curtyne Englar, and Arnold Tamon.

Varied Bill at Hip

Said to be a true reflection of the whirlpool of life, "When Destiny Wills," a story of the timber country, from the story by Robert James Wortham, will be the photoplay attraction at the Hippodrome today. Miss Grace Davison, known as the Cameo Girl, will be seen in the leading role, supported by a cast including Melbourne McDowell, Joseph King and Cora Drew. R. C. Baker is the director of this story. The vaudeville program consists of many entertaining features. Rita Winter's trio presents a novelty song feast, interspersed with comedy, harmony, singing, dancing and whistling. Special scenery and electrical effects will help to enhance the value of this production. Conroy and the Noel Sisters have a distinct novelty in comedy and acrobatic dancing. The Original Apollo Duo, gymnasts, are prominent among the world's foremost athletes. Bert Le Roy and Vesta Gould will entertain with their sidewalk chatter, songs and dances in their latest offering and dances in their latest offering. Mar, in character songs and impersonations, with a wealth of beautiful gowns, will add class and personality to the program. Cy and Flo in "Bits of Everything," a musical comedy offering, with news and comedy photoplays will complete the program.

SCREEN OFFERS SOME NEW ONES

weird and thrilling of Sir Arthur's masterpieces of detective fiction.

In the screen version all of the thrillingly dramatic episodes are developed and interest and suspense are maintained at high tension throughout. The hunting down of the band of criminals who have plotted against the Baskervilles; the death struggle with the massive, flaming hound that spreads terror through the countryside; the death of one of the arch villains on the bog and the many other climaxes place this greatest of all Sherlock Holmes stories in a class by itself.

"Lorna Doone" Showing

Against the background of the Devonshire hills and moors is set one of the world's most loved romances, "Lorna Doone," the picture version of which opened at the Kinema Theater yesterday afternoon.

These famous old hills are visited annually by thousands, who have shuddered over the deeds of the "bloody Doones," and have gloried over the beautiful story of the captive "Lorna." For here it was that the outlaws, under the leadership of the old nobleman, Sir Ensor Doone, terrorized the neighborhood with their raids.

There are many who assert Madge Bellamy, who plays the part of the lovable Lorna, resembles this heroine in many of her facial expressions. But when Miss Bellamy dons the sumptuous court dress, in which she is presented to the King, the resemblance to the painted portrait of the real Lorna becomes startling.

It was some time before Director Maurice Tourneur could find a suitable prototype to the Herculean John Ridd. For the broad-shouldered giant who performs such prodigious feats with his powerful arms is one that could not be represented by some one lacking the necessary stature. John Bowers measured up in stature and chest expansion with the Blackmore hero and brings to the characterization a certain freshness and sincerity for which he has made himself an enviable reputation.

Theodore Henkel, conductor of the Kinema orchestra, has arranged a special musical score which is built about the ballad, "Lorna Doone."

Mission Bill Holds Over

That sparkling dynamo of ever-changing emotion—woman—is revealed in all her strength and weakness in Daniel Carson Goodman's drama, "What's Wrong With the Women?" which continues a second week at the Mission Theater.

It is a big theme upon which this powerfully dramatic subject is founded. Mr. Goodman has gone beyond the little group of interesting families, representing three distinct types of household and womanhood, and tells his theme in a moving canvas of humanity, depicting in bold strokes the eternal battle of the sexes.

Woman, as shown, is essentially good. But the forces of extravagance, folly and evil loosed like Pandora from a box, tear into the homes and destiny imposes a heavy toll.

In "What's Wrong With the Women?" every type of womanhood is seen. And the sort of woman who causes trouble in the home of the good is shown in all of her gay existence.

The cast includes noted players of stage and screen. Wilton Lackaye, Barbara Castleton, Constance Bennett, Rod La Roque Montague Love, Julia Swayne Gordon, Hedda Hopper, and others of note essay the leading roles.

The Mission is also presenting Mack Sennett's latest comedy production, "When Summer Comes," in which Billy Bevan and Mildred June are featured. The Orpheus Four, noted quartet, delights with four daily concerts, while other features surround the bill.

HOLDS RECEPTION

Ethel Walton Wright held a reception and informal entertainment at her studio, 407 Music Arts Studio Building, Friday evening from 8 to 10. She was assisted by Georgie and Jack Pepper, boy violinists of exceptional promise, whose work is attracting considerable attention. They gave two duets of their own composition in addition to several other numbers. Another child entertainer was one of Mrs. Wright's pupils, Catherine Mix, whose pianologues were exceptionally well rendered.

MR. AND MRS. PUBLIC:
It is indeed a rare privilege to present such a master picture production as "LORNA DOONE" to you. We sincerely believe that the year will see few pictures as great as this one. We acclaim it as a masterpiece and feel that no bigger classic has ever been screened in Los Angeles.
After seeing it you'll say: "No wonder you were proud to present it."

WOMAN WRITER OF SEA YARNS

Local Girl Gives Life of Ease for Ship

Sails Through Gales and Storms for Years

Finds Rough Sea Rovers Are Chivalrous

There lives in Hollywood the only acknowledged woman writer of sea stories in America. Magda Leigh came by her talent naturally, as her father, W. J. Henderson is the author of the book, "Elements of Navigation" and was for many years an officer in the New York Naval Militia. As a child, one of Miss Leigh's favorite pastimes was sailing on the old New Hampshire with him to witness drills. Other books by her father are "Afloat With the Flag," "Sea Yarns for Boys" and many short stories which appear in Harpers.

Magda Leigh did not realize how strongly she had inherited her love for the sea until in 1908 a business matter took her on a sea voyage as far as South America. She sailed from New York on the R. S. S. P. Magdalena. At that time she decided to devote her spare time to the writing of sea tales. In the last twelve years she has written twenty stories and two novels which deal with sea life.

Her stories have attracted the attention of such writers as Jack London, Morgan Robertson, James B. Connoly, Edward Noble and other writers of virile tales of the sea. A short while before the death of John Fleming Wilson he wrote her a long letter in which he praised her knowledge of sea life and atmosphere.

WORKS ON SHIPS FOR IDEAL

After traveling a great deal as a deck chair passenger Magda Leigh decided that the only way to know the sea thoroughly was to work on ships as Conrad and Masefield had before her. Few women sail to sea, but Magda Leigh secured work as a stewardess, after first spending nearly three months as one of the only two passengers abread a Grace Line freighter. Her scrap log of this wonderful trip records. "Seas breaking abroad. High winds and head seas. Engines slowed to six knots." Mountains of water towered above as the freighter wollowed in a deep trough of the sea. Instead of this experience frightening her it gave a deeper love of the ocean. As she remarked, she loves ships as 'Most women love children! She lived ashore a short time after her fourteen thousand mile jaunt on the freighter. Determining to get to the heart of things she then signed as a stewardess. Thus the woman who had been reared in luxury went down into life for a literary ideal. The steamer on which she sailed had formerly carried mules, but had been reconditioned in order to carry passengers.

Her first trip as stewardess took her through the chain of West Indian Islands, and was an apparently uneventful trip. Returning however, there were a score of negro women aboard, and it was Miss Leigh's duty to take care of them. Most of the women were ill with fever, and Miss Leigh and the young ship doctor practically lived in the reeking staterooms. Carrying bottles of disinfectant, the young doctor and young woman cared for the West Indian women and nursed them back to health. It was such work as this that brought the woman writer of sea tales in touch with real life as it is lived on the water. She learned to know ships and sea-faring men and to grit her teeth at the elements. And all the time she was filling her note books with the data she had determined to secure.

Magda Leigh has been through many gales. She has spent nights ankle deep in water comforting

'ROUND ABOUT LOS ANGELES

Our last uptown board fence has gone the way of all flesh and fences. It stood in the rear of a lot in the 500 block, South Spring street, now being cleared for the erection of a building for the Stationers' Corporation.

There is a perceptible tidal effect in several wells around Clearwater and Dominguez Junction. The lift of the water as the tide comes in is often as much as eighteen inches. If you want a scientific explanation of the why of it all, ask James W. Reagan, the county flood-control engineer. He knows.

What is the letter most impressed on your mind? It is the first letter of your given name, according to a man who repairs fountain pens. He says that invariably, when he hands the renewed pen to the customer to try, the optimistic one—for you have to be optimistic to use a fountain pen—writes the first letter of his baptismal name, then ends in a scrawl.

Those triangles around town. i.e., at Sunset Boulevard and North Broadway, etc. Eight of them are street property and belong to the Board of Public Works, though cared for by the park department. One of them is a real grown-up park, though it does not look like it, having been deeded to the park department by a subdivider. It is at the intersection of Bellevue and Marion avenues with Holliday street, and is large enough to accommodate two palms and a pot of geraniums.

WHY DO THE JAPS SUCCEED?

Of All Foeigners in Los Angeles They Seem to Make Most Headway; the Picturesque and Charming Jap Quarter

BY MYRTLE GEBHART

WHY DO the Japanese succeed where others—including Americans—fail? There is a constant struggle here among our foreign population when, indeed, many Americans cannot make good livings. Of them all, I have found in studying the foreign quarters of Los Angeles, the Japanese have made the most headway, not alone financially and in accustoming themselves to the new ways, but in becoming American citizens—upon the surface, at least, for one can but surmise what is passing in their inscrutable oriental minds.

Japtown, where the little brown folks from Nippon have planted their roots, spreading the limbs of their fruitful trees all over Los Angeles. Where modes and ideals of their Cherry Blossom Land are giving way noticeably to American ways and American thought.

Salient facts about the Japanese in Los Angeles:

- 11,419 inhabitants.
- 2200 shopkeepers.
- 3000 laborers.
- 3269 houseworkers.
- Average wage, $5 per day.
- 2000 Jap Christians in churches.
- 261 Jap women in home-study circles.
- Several hundred Jap college girls.
- Jap newspaper with 6500 subscribers.

In the murky light of dawn our Japtown is a drab place, a place of ramshackle, weather-beaten buildings. Nestling among them, here and there, are new little homes, brightly painted, obviously housing prosperous families.

Fruit-stands, stores, antique-shops here the loveliest of needlework, the daintiest of embroidered fancies, are sold by the same skillful fingers that made them. Sold for high prices, too, for our Japanese are fast mastering the art of American cupidity and strike a pretty bargain.

A DAINTY MINIATURE

One such shop is presided over by a dainty chrome miniature, her eyes tantalizing black pools splashed into a piquant little face a-gleam with the spirit of warm sunshine; dressed in a flamboyant kimono — which I suspect she wears to give tourists atmospheric delight while she really would prefer American clothes—she is like a marigold flame. And when she talks, slurring her r's musically, you fancy yourself under the cherry trees in Nippon — until, with charming politeness, she lures you into paying twice what the little blue and gold slippers are worth.

There is a boy named Miwa who makes the loveliest antique furniture which he sells at good figures to avid curiosity seekers.

As the sun streams across the roof-tops Japtown awakens, a scurrying, busy mart of trade. Colors like red streaks across a gray sky. Musical voices lilting songs—not of Cherry Blossom Land, but of modern jazz.

AVID FOR BEAUTY

One thing is noticeable about the Japanese homes—their neatness and beauty. More so than any foreign nationality they possess a greater conception of, and reaction to, beauty. Flowers, gaily painted screens and quaint baskets remind them of their homeland, a haunting cry for beauty here in the drabness of our East Side. Almost every home boasts its miniature ivory elephant, a symbol of prosperity, the idea being that all things come to him who taps the pachyderm's back reverently. This I found to be about the only superstition that has endured.

Yes, there is beauty there in dirty Japtown, not the esthetic things with which we associate the term; but a crude beauty an expression of soul. Beauty to the Japanese woman is not something you put up on the wall or mantelpiece and admire; rather it is in her viewpoint, in her general environment. You feel it, yet you cannot always place your finger upon the pulse of it. An idea rather than a concrete thing.

According to the Japanese Consulate, there are 11,419 Japanese here. Approximately 3000 are laborers and 3269 are engaged in other sorts of day work, such as

JACK LONDON'S DREAM IS CRUMBLING AWAY

Sacrificed His Artistic Reputation for Money to Establish Great Estate Which is Going to Pieces

BY JIM TULLY,
Author of "Emmet Lawler" and other stories

Newspaper advertisements recently announced that part of the vast ranch owned by Jack London was for sale. Thus the dream of one of California's two great writers is crumbling in ruins away. It required a fortune yearly to carry on the big enterprise, and when Jack's hand became still, the fortune ceased. Charmian London tried bravely to carry on Jack's dreams, but conditions over which she had no control, made that impossible. The ranch that once hummed with the activity of half a hundred men now gives employment to but three.

Jack once took pride in blooded horses. He owned a Percheron stallion that weighed 2000 pounds, and for which he paid, in his own words, $1 a pound." Now, but a few saddle horses are raised on the ranch. There is a touch of simple grandeur in Charmian London's letter to me regarding the estate. She writes: "Of course, I love the ranch, but I could not go on in the large way. It seemed the biggest book Jack wrote—that upon the worn-out acres here."

In one of the last chapters in "John Barleycorn," Jack London, confused with the futility of things, pauses to wonder who scratched those acres a hundred years before, and who will scratch them a hundred years after he is gone.

AT HOME TO TRAMPS

The ranch was once the Mecca of world rovers. Its great-hearted owner opened the doors of his home to all manner of men. The world's greatest critic could linger there, and also the weariest vagrant.

As Jack had once been a tramp, he was always hospitable to members of the roving brotherhood. No vagrant ever left the ranch without money and grub. The tramps would walk the two miles up the mountain, for the honor of seeing the most brilliant man their strange calling had produced in America. The world-famous writer would chat with them about the ways of the road, just the same as when he, too, had traveled it under the name of Frisco Jack.

Now that he has taken the last freight home, few tramps wander to the ranch in the Valley of the Moon. Charmian London, the Mate-Woman, maintains the same attitude toward them that Jack had, but the lure of seeing the Great Hobo is not there and, being true to their lazy vocation, they do not climb the two steep miles to the mountain home for a feed.

HELPED EX-CONVICTS

Many convicts, released from San Quentin, also found a helper in the splendid rover who had served a term in jail for vagrancy. The gray prison is not over fifty miles away. So Jack easily kept in touch with the men of broken lives. They could work and live at the ranch, or they could stay until they adjusted themselves to the world beyond the prison walls. It mattered not at all to Jack. Sometimes they failed him and threw away the chance he offered. But life and suffering had given Jack a wide tolerance and, like another great jailbird and writer, Maxim Gorky, he helped his less fortunate brothers over and over again.

BETRAYS ART FOR GOLD

The ranch became an obsession with Jack. It even marred his career as a writer, for the brain that could conceive big things in literature felt called upon to write serials for money with which to pay for the ranch — serials, too, that many a lesser man might have written.

Jack London was more than a popular writer. He was a man of great brain power. He ranks with Frank Norris as one of the two writers of real genius and world-wide reputation that California has produced.

Jack London earned money which he could not spend unless he acquired land which he did not need. But property and money did not soothe the big brain that throbbed in his head. And the pity of it all is that men of London's natural ability cannot be developed. They happen. They climb from down among men with hands that are tired from banging on the bloody doors of life.

JEW OR SCANDINAVIAN

H. L. Mencken advanced the theory that Jack London must have been of Jewish descent. I think Mr. Mencken is mistaken in this view. My own idea of London is that he was of Scandinavian origin. His great love for the sea was surely an inherited quality. I have seen many Scandinavians who resembled him. His books even to this day are very popular in Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Jack London has never been popular in France. He leads all American authors in Russia.

He has been called the "amateur philosopher" by our greatest of American critics. But even the dynamic and brilliant Mencken clothed him with wonder. A critic in the New Republic called him a "titanic weakling" in a review of Charmian London's Biography of her husband. The very strength of the phrase is a great compliment. Napoleon was just such a weakling.

PROUD OF FAME

In a preface to one of his last books, Jack took a boyish pride in writing that it was his fortieth book and his fortieth birthday. It would have been far better for Jack's fame, had it been only his twentieth book. Balzac wrote twenty before he would sign his name to one.

Jack was also proud of the fact that he was the best advertised writer in America. But now the tumult and the shouting has subsided and Jack London is beyond the reach of blubs and sycophants forever.

Jack should have known that Harold Bell Wright was a far better advertised writer in America than Thomas Hardy.

WHARF RAT TO PROPRIETOR

London quarreled long and often with the system under which we live. The Socialist dreamer ended by becoming the country gentleman. The young wharf rat later became the promenader of his own yacht. The jute mill laborer became the blase employer of many laborers. A thousand families could have lived on the estate of this man who had known hunger and cold and degradation and the jail.

He appeared on the scene at the very climax of American materialism. He ranted some, and was eventually swallowed up by the thing he hated. He became tired, and having imagination, he worried about the futility of all things human. And to ease the strain he wrote novels for flappers. He wanted to "stretch his soul" on his vast estate. But his desire for money made him cramp it into the vast pocket of a popular novelist.

But much should be forgiven Jack. We all pass through so many phases in our intellectual growth.

DOMESTIC LIFE

Jack London was twice married. Two and a half years after separatin from his first wife, he married Charmian Kittredge. The meeting came about while she was working on the staff of the Overland Monthly, and had gone to talk to him about a book of his which she was to review. She later became his secretary. The union was an ideal one, as far as the happiness of each was concerned. The two were inseparable.

Chairman Kittredge London has

PICTURESQUE JAP COLONY

housecleaning, this number including women; 2200 own or manage their own shops, this figure also including their families who work in the stores with their men folks.

There are stories here of struggle, of sacrifice. Many Japanese women carry on their husbands' businesses when they die or become ill.

There is Mrs. Koga, who keeps a grocery store at 246 East First street. Mrs. Koga would not talk to me at all. "No like newspapers," she said, shaking her head firmly and disappearing into the room back of the store where, I surmised, her little family lives. But from her Japanese pastor I learned that hers has been a hard struggle to establish herself and care for her little ones here in an alien land of whose language she speaks but a few words.

A JAP ARISTROCRAT

There are a number of Japanese aristocrats working in Los Angeles. There's one Count of whom I heard everywhere I went but whose name none would tell me—he is, I gathered, quite some pumpkins in Japtown where, Americanized though they have become in externals, those fundamental conceptions of caste still endure. This man, so they say, was a Count of a province in Japan until the political upheaval a few years ago left him in the present position of so many European nobles, with a title and no lands upon which to hang it. So he came to Los Angeles and prospered to the extent that he nows owns an antique shop and is sort of unofficial Mayor of Japtown.

Early in the morning down around East First and Wilmington and San Pedro, you see the youngsters flocking to the Japanese schools, those living far away being rounded up and driven in busses. They chatter constantly in English, their little brown faces shiny from soap and water, jet hair brushed smoothly, their pink ginghams and red percales starched and clean, almond eyes gleaming with mischief. Most of them carry expensive brown leather lunch-boxes and apparently come from prosperous families.

A trio, two snappy little boys and a girl, were brought by a careworn little mother, the sole support of her small family, the father having died recently.

"Yes, I work hard," she answered me in halting English, seeming surprised at the absurdity of my question. "Why not? Ev'rybody, she work hard. I make my chil'ren good American."

At the three's concerted plea, she fished out from a dilapidated purse two nickels, which were quickly exchanged for chewing gum and lollypops clutched in chubby brown hands.

But few Japs marry whites or other nationalities. They adopt American ways, but, knowing that they are aliens here, they have no ambition to take for themselves those things of other blood which they recognize as beyond their kind; they are content to take what we give and not presume; to make the most of their opportunities and not cry for more. And therein, I think, lies the reason for much of their success.

OLD CUSTOMS ABANDONED

They do not retain their old customs as much as do the Chinese or the European foreigners. Eagerly, childishly, they want to practice the American ways, to adopt our mannerisms. It is as if they desire to cut themselves utterly aloof from all reminders of their homeland.

At the Japanese employment bureau, 114½ North Los Angeles street, I noticed but three men waiting at the long table in the big, bare, white-washed room. Having a moment before passed an American employment bureau on First street—where the sidewalk was jammed with at least 200 of our men and boys, ill-kempt and many querulous, standing in line—I could not but note the contrast in the employment situation.

WHY THEY PROSPER

"About t'ree t'ousand Japanese labor in Los Angeles," said Mr. Suzuki, manager of the bureau. "I have fifty boys on my books, they work by day, clean house. Why they work when American no can get? 'Cause they honest. An' they 'sponsible. American boy, when he get tired, he say, 'Here your darn job, I quit.' But Jap boy, he get other job before he quit an' he say, 'I going to quit, but I stay 'till you get other boy take my place.' People know they can trust and depend. So only few out of work.

"Then, too, American boy only take certain kind of job, must be just so or no take. Jap boy take any kind of work to make living. He get 50 cents hour to clean, make $5 day always, sometimes more. At home, in Japan, he make 50 cents day—maybe. Oh yes, Jap know America good country, that why few go back. Save money? No, not much on the save. Our boys getting too American in ways, spend money for clothes, present for sweetheart, movies, just like American boy. Old ones save, not young ones much. All educated."

JAPANESE CHURCHES

At the various Japanese churches, I found a pervading spirit of Americanization. According to Rev. T. Kaneko, pastor of the Los Angeles Reformed Church (Japanese) at 203 North San Pedro, about 2000 of his local countrymen have become Christians. His congregation numbers eighty-two, with sixty children in his Sunday-school classes. Rev. Kaneko organized his church two and one-half years ago and acts as friend to his tiny flock of brown-skinned Nipponese, assisting them to solve the problems that confront them.

"I want to make my people good American," he told me as we sat in the big assembly-room of his church—which looks much less austere than one of our own places of prayer, being a big room with ordinary furniture, pots of flowers, a mantelpiece and, at the end of the long room, the pulpit where each Sunday he gives them counsel. "I follow American ways. American girl missionary teacher help me."

"GOOD AMERICANS NOW"

He is patently proud of the fact that his people are so fast learning our ways, in which his community efforts play no small part.

"Japanese almost all good American now. Few send money home like in old days—twenty years ago. They have their families here now. Buy homes, like American man."

At the Japanese Union Church, 327½ North San Pedro, English-spoken services are in order. Rev. K. Ogawa, B.D., counsels his flock each Sunday evening upon such subjects as these: "The True Definition of a Man," "The Value of an Empty Purse"—there may be some in the Japanese philosophy, but if so they are fast dropping it for our own beliefs!—"The Power of Sentiment," which is to be the subject for the next talk on November 5, and "The Power of a Resolute Minority," the meaning of which has possibilities—but I won't attempt to draw unfair conclusions. Dedication of his new $60,000 church at 120 North San Pedro was recently celebrated.

Many who deal with the Japanese praise their business honor. An American merchant, who, for fourteen years kept a store in the heart of Japtown once told me that he considered them the most honest of people.

"Even the children," he said "are taught principles of honesty. I often left my store with a crowd of Jap kids about and not one apple or stick of candy was touched. I wouldn't dare turn my back with a bunch of American kids around—they'd clean me out in two seconds flat." This, understand, from an American business man, who spoke only after thorough consideration and purely from his desire to be just.

WOMEN STUDY

There are 261 Japanese women studying with home-teachers supervised by the immigrant educational bureau, and several hundred children are students in the all-Japanese schools and scattered over the city with American children.

At the Hewitt-street school, I found eighty-three Japanese children.

"They are very regular in attendance, more so than any other nationality," said Miss Colestan, principal. "Their mothers seem to be imbued with a desire for their children's Americanization. We teach them in English, of course, which they quickly master. I have found the Japanese children much brighter than any of our foreigners. They bear the unmistakable stamp of better home-conditions—we never have to help them financially, as we are constantly called upon to do with the children of other nationalities."

As we talked a dreamy-eyed Mexican girl entered her office, with vague excuses for not having returned the lunch-money she had borrowed several days before from a teacher.

CAME TO THE PARTY

"That never occurs with the Japanese," said Miss Colestan. "If they ever lack funds, their own relief associations take care of them. The Japanese mothers also evince more response to our efforts in their behalf. We have a home teacher, who goes into their homes, aiding them in their problems, teaching them English by object-lessons in connection with sewing, cooking and housework.

"Frequently we give teas for them here at the school. Our first one was rather disappointing, as only five Japanese and four Chinese women attended, sitting stolidly about until the ice was broken. But when finally they came out of their shells, their child-like fun and appreciation amply repaid us. The difficulty is in getting them to come, as almost all the Japanese women—and many of the children—work, particularly if their men folks have stores. Last year we had a home teacher for the Chinese too, but she had to give up her work, as it met with so little response."

LOSING THE ORIENT

"The Nipponese children are not only becoming Americanized in manner, but they seem to be gradually losing all trend of Oriental thought," said Miss Oliver, who teaches the primary grades and who has been interested in welfare work among the Japanese for twelve years. "They show great enthusiasm for athletics and scarcely wait to get started playing their games. They co-operate better than do children of any other foreign nationality, obediently following the leader with no wrangling. Even in their homes English predominates, except occasionally where there are older people who do not speak it."

The Japanese Boys' Club, which Miss Oliver organized six years ago, boasts twenty-five members who meet three Fridays in each month for games, social parties and lectures.

BASEBALL TEAMS

"We are planning now our Halloween party and a festival to be given on Armistice Day. Our boys, who range in ages from 12 to 18, take up very eagerly the community idea. They have their own baseball and football teams, bring their sisters and mothers to the social meetings—in short, are only too anxious for the self-development which we help them to attain. In dealing with the Japanese our sole work is pointing out the way—they do the rest. They possess a great deal of initiative and coherence to purpose."

A similar idea is carried out the Japanese Club of Girl Reserves, whose motto is: "Ever Loyal and Ever Ready."

The Japanese mothers, the teachers told me, co-operate with them in all matters better than do any other foreigners. Particularly in personal cleanliness and hygiene. When an European immigrant mother is told, in a helpful, kindly way, that her little ones are not quite as clean as they might be, she resents it, often comes to the school with murder in her eye and causes a great rumpus. But when a note goes to a Japanese mother that her little one's hair is not entirely free from unpleasant visitors and that it should be clipped to check their spread, he returns to school next day, not only with his own little head shaved, but all of his brothers' and sisters' and most of the youngsters' in his immediate neighborhood!

THE "BIG SISTER."

At 212 N. San Pedro street is the Japanese Y.W.C.A., where Miss Otani, an educated Japanese girl, assists her countrywomen in their problems, writing letters home for the more illiterate, acting as intermediary between them and the Americans whom they sometimes unwittingly displease; finding employment for them, and generally acting as "big sister," guiding their uncertain steps onto the right paths. There is also a rest room where the wives of Japanese farmers congregate when in the city, and Miss Otani is often called upon to assist them in making purchases at American stores.

A new dormitory for the local Japanese college girls, of whom there are several hundred, is being built at 2616 East Third street. The girls, I have found, are usually better educated than the boys, as they do not go to work as early. After finishing their college courses, they marry progressive Japanese boys or become teachers, starting the budding minds of their own little people on the road to knowledge.

The Japanese Daily News, published at 104 North Los Angeles street, numbers 6500 subscribers, a few of whom live in other parts of the country, some in Japan, but the majority in Los Angeles. The paper is very American in tone, though printed in Japanese symbols, which the editor obligingly translated for me. On the front page, which is the back page of our papers, as they read reversely, beginning at the right of the column and traveling westward—was a picture of Lloyd George and a very comprehensive account of the English political situation. News notes and classified advertisements followed—and there was a page of women's doo-daddles, just as in our papers, fashion and even society columns! Oh, unquestionably, Mrs. Fukushima, late of Nippon but now a ballyhooer for California, is becoming Americanized. In her own country her vote may not be worth a pinhead, but here she is fast recognizing and demanding her place in the community.

ARE THEY LOYAL?

I do not mean to eulogize the Japanese; I am well aware of the race prejudice that exists today in California, and, partly at least, it is founded upon fact which cannot be ignored. In the event of that war of which our statesmen talk in guarded whispers, there is speculation as to whether the Japs here, who are obviously strong, would be a menace to our community. Personally—and remember I am engaged with describing the obvious, with detailing the outward facts, not with searching for the hidden or with surmising possibilities—I do not believe that the Japanese as a whole would make any concerted effort to aid their country.

For one thing, they are more divided, more scattered, than any other foreign nationality here. Less hidebound to tradition than any other, they have become more Americanized—much more than have the Chinese. They are more responsive, more eager to be one of us. They are, upon the surface at least, striving to make themselves good American citizens and to rear their young in our precepts and principles. And they succeed in business where other nationalities, even Americans, fail. Whether we like them and welcome them or not, there is food in their very success for much thought and speculation.

HOW BOBBED HAIR STARTED

idol—and had started a mode."

The transformation—that swirl of marcelled hair which fits so snugly over a coiffure and enhances without mussing it—was especially created for Lillian Russell. On the stage she had worn her famous blonde hair in a huge pompadour. It was a wig.

On the street, however, she wished to duplicate the same effect, and after considerable deliberation Mr. Hepner conceived a series of false locks that could be attached to Miss Russell's regular coiffure and be worn without detection.

A "TRANSFORMATION"

On trying it on, the famous beauty glanced at herself in the mirror.

"What a transformation!" she murmured—and, presto! the thing was named and countless thousands of replicas have since borne the same trade mark.

Hair is a ruse used nowadays by women, it seems, to assist in their fascination of the mere male. But it is not in women alone that this vanity is wholly apparent.

Of course, in the business of making wigs, the quality of vanity has largely to be considered. In 75 per cent of the cases of customers it is the real reason why a wig is ordered.

In the other twenty-five, however, false hair is purchased because of an actual physical need.

THE BALD CLUBMAN

"I know the case of a popular New York clubman," recited Mr. Hepner, "who was as bald as an egg, yet who seemed very proud of it. One night he went to the theater and sat in a draught and developed intense neuralgia, which would attack him every time his head got the least bit cold.

"Finally the malady got so intense that something had to be done. His doctor told him he'd have to cover up his cranial nakedness, and we made him a toupee.

"In cases where there is any hair at all on the head a toupee never will show. Fortunately the man's temples weren't absolutely nude of hair. His friends at the club didn't 'kid' him, because he succeeded in convincing them that he'd taken a marvelous cure-for-baldness and grown a headful of the finest hair in town.

THE ACTOR'S SECRET

"There are any number of well known actors who depend upon a wig or toupee for their popularity, because without it they'd be first cousin to a billiard ball.

"And we also find that various women adopt artificial hair because they want to look younger, prettier and more attractive to their husband.

"With the bobbed-hair style now just going out of vogue any number of well-bred women want transformations, sidepieces, switches. There is considerable baldness, even, among woman. The only reason it isn't apparent, as in men, is because a woman never will permit it to be known. Vanity again.

PARIS HAIR

"Nor is it true that coiffure modes originate in Paris. The average French woman isn't adept at dressing her hair. Unlike her taste in clothes, she isn't traditionally smart as a coiffure creator."

The American woman, according to Hepner, is smarter in this respect than la petite Parisienne.

But the average American woman has taken bad care of her tresses. This is one of the reasons why she has needed so many artificial additions.

She's allowed her hair to split at the ends and fall out.

Also she's overdyed it and injured its quality.

Too often, also, she has curled it inexpertly and impaired both its growth and its texture.

"Unwittingly," he said, "I have on several occasions been an accomplice to criminals in fitting them with wigs, beards and other disguises.

"Some time ago, in New York, I discovered accidentally that I had been instrumental in helping several spiritualistic fakers to filch the public by furnishing them with undetectable wigs.

"And on numerous occasions the police have found a wig on the head of some thug caught and sent to jail."

JACK LONDON CAREER RUINED

written three books, which concern her brilliant husband. They are, namely: "The Log of the Snark," "Our Hawaii," and the most important of the three, "The Book of Jack London." The latter book has been reviewed widely in all English-speaking countries. It has brought high laudation and bitter condemnation.

One contemporary of Jack's went so far as to say that he had been "killed by too much domesticity." Another said that he had been "completely absorbed by his wife." However, my own opinion of the matter is that the long grind of living had made Jack an old man in the late thirties. A disciple of Herbert Spencer, as were Frank Norris and Theodore Dreiser, he floundered in his own intellectuality.

HARD STRUGGLE REWARDED

He was probably one of the three greatest money earners who have ever used the English language as a medium. He turned his brain into a machine and wrote novels hastily to satisfy the demand of the public and not of himself. His literary struggle, bitterly told in Martin Eden was one of the hardest of which there is any record. But the reward was magnificent.

He flashed across the literary firmament, a dazzling speck of great talent that touched the edges of genius. His tramp days and the days before the mast gave a touch of glamour to his always-striking personality. He came at a time when American literature was just beginning to emerge from the heavy respectable hand of lifeless New England mediocrity. He breathed the wild whirl of passion into his work and it thrilled the nation. Like another Byron, he was famous long before he was 30. In fact, there was much of an uncouth Lord Byron in Jack London.

HIS WORKS IMMORTAL

It is quite likely that when the echo of his vivid personality has been lost in the far spaces of time, that three or four of his works will stand the test of the all-consuming years. Among these are sure to be "The Call of the Wild," and that matchless short story, "To Build a Fire." Here the hand of the great artist was at work. He forgot his ranting about Socialism and all the ills of life, as a real artist should.

CHEATS HIMSELF

Jack London is a shining example to all young writers, that a man must write dispassionately if he wishes to endure. By bowing to the popular will, he fell far short of the great writer he might have been. As an example: he served a term in a New York penitentiary. He describes this episode in his tramp book, called "The Road." Jack London had the power and the vision to have made this episode live as startlingly true and alive as Dostievsky's "The House of the Dead." Even though he syndicated this story in a number of magazines, the power that was Jack London's unconsciously bludgeoned through the lines.

A newer group of writers are appearing, who are daring to write of life as they have seen it. Jack London might have been the first broad-shouldered fighter in this group. But the great star gazer had to pay for his ranch. A man who writes truly of tramps may never be a popular favorite in magazines, but he has a chance to shake hands with Maxim Gorky, and say to the great Russian: "I have kept the faith, Great Master."

1000 WORDS A DAY

There never was any question about Jack London's ability. He was merely annihilated by the materialism that swallowed him up. He wrote his thousand words a day, unmindful that a man like Thomas Hardy might write only 100. He ruined "The Sea Wolf" by giving it a trite Ladies' Home Journal ending. He constantly tried to delineate women, and always did he fail. Jack London should have held a long recess with his soul. But a soul cannot hear the bell for recess, while editors jangle money.

"Wolf Larsen" was undoubtedly a great creation, and his brother, Death Larsen, was another. Perhaps they were the echoes of long dead and gone Scandinavians thrumming at the heart strings of Jack London. But everything has passed for Jack. He is now but a handful of ashes that any wind might sweep away. He passed out when he was under 41 years of age. The long sickness for him ended quickly. And so greatly was he loved that none of his friends have ever attempted to give a just picture of him.

LONDON'S HUMANITY

Perhaps the greatest quality in Jack London was his humanity and intense sympathy for souls in pain.

He once made an agreement with an old ship carpenter that the man who survived was to read Bryant's "Thanatopsis" over all that was mortal of the one that had gone. When his old friend died, Jack read the poem. The aged wife trembled before the famous writer in an agony of tears. He placed his arms about her in sincere affection and said: "Please don't thank me. All that I ask in return is that if I go first, you will do as much for me." It hardly seemed likely that Jack would leave before the aged woman. But the Shuffler of the Clouds was weary for the companionship of the dazzling comet called Jack London. And so, he was called home.

And while he slept at the end of the last stormy trail, his Ship of Life at anchor forever, and while telegrams of condolence poured in from all over the civilized world, the aged lady read the poem over the body of the man whose name had traveled over seas and nations. And thus, the strange bargain was kept.

The younger writers who come after London will always have his great success as a beacon light to guide them across the sea of literature on which the hopes and hearts of thousands have been wrecked.

HIS SACRIFICE

Now, when the night comes down, and the shadow of Jack London, my earliest encourager, steals over me, I realize what a fearful price he and all of us paid for the great ranch in the Valley of the Moon. The accumulation of land and money prevented Jack London from keeping step with Rudyard Kipling. It robbed California of a chance of adding the name of a hobo youth to the list of World Writers. And we who follow him are having a harder time to get the truth across because our great leader failed us by writing novels for flappers.

But, Jack, it is hard to face, directly, a many-sided world. If your spirit is roaming anywhere in the vast and empty spaces, may it send us a message in a weak moment that we may have the courage to endure. Adios, Jack. Perhaps nothing matters, in the end.

WAMPAS WILL MEET

The Western Motion Picture Advertisers have moved downtown and hereafter their fortnightly dinners will be held at Brandstatter's Marcel Cafe instead of at the Little Club of Hollywood. The first session of the Wampas will be held at the Marcel tomorrow night. Harold Hurley, associate director of publicity at Universal City, will be chairman of the evening and speeches will be made by Arthur S. Kane, president of the Associated Exhibitors; Harry Chandler, publisher of The Times Chief of Police Louis D. Oaks, Capt. Richard Hilf and William Cutts. All will talk on subjects of vital interest to publicity men.

Violinist Busy

Calmon Luboviski, violinist, who is at present a resident artist of the city, is busily engaged filling concert and recital programs. Among recent engagements filled by Mr. Luboviski, was a program played in Santa Ana, for the Music Teachers' Association, where an ovation was given the artist. At the Uplifters' Club two solos were played at the concert given by the Los Angeles Trio, of which Mr. Luboviski is a member, also on the 19th inst., at the first concert series given this season by the trio. On November 2 he will be the assisting artist on the program with Virginia Goodsell, at the Gamut Club auditorium.

At the close of the program, which was in charge of Mrs. William Pickard, tea was served.

Special guests of the occasion were members of the Monrovia Woman's Club and more than seventy-five accepted the hospitality of the neighboring club.

Joins Federation

El Segundo Civic Improvement Club has the honor of being the latest addition to the ranks of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Though young, the club is quite ambitious, and plans are being laid for child welfare work, municipal betterment and various other forms of social service.

The following officers have been elected: Mrs. Helen K. Brock, president; Mrs. J. A. Gerow, vice-president; Mrs. Effie Dix, recording secretary; Mrs. William C. Adams, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Grace Campbell, federation secretary; Mrs. V. D. McCarthy, treasurer, and Mrs. Florence Haines, parliamentarian.

Athenaeum Club Opening

Professionally Los Angeles has for years been considered a culture center for music, art, literature, drama. But with the opening of the Athenaeum Club, at 401 Music-Art Studios, there will be a definite center for cultured women who desire to keep abreast of the times, and to discuss and to hear discussed cultural subjects, current topics and events.

The requirements for elegibility to the Athenaeum are drastic. They are:

Grammatical speech; comprehensive vocabularies; cultured speaking voices; clear articulation; physical, mental, verbal culture; appreciation of, and the ability to give—intelligent criticism. A unique feature of the club is that candidates are given a two weeks' intensive training in conservational ability and facility by Isabelle M. Hanbury, exponent of culture and originator of the art of cultured speech and voice.

The Highland Park Ebell Club is to have Miss Hanbury's services for the coming club year. In its English section Miss Hanbury is giving her internationally known course of the art of cultured speech and voice.

Downey Club Open Forum

Featuring fun and frolic, mingled with questions of a more serious nature, will be the Open Forum given by the Saturday Afternoon Club of Downey and Board of Trade on next Tuesday evening.

Ghosts, gobilns, black cats and witches will be in evidence the first part of the evening. Later, the more serious-minded will be entertained with talks on civic affairs by prominent speakers. The program will close with readings by Miss Bernice Mayes of Downey, and a group of songs rendered by J. Wallace McKellor of San Francisco and Los Angeles.

After the program, there will be a banquet served in the Methodist Church by the ladies of the Missionary Society. The program committee of the club is planning a series of these open meetings for the year, when civic matters will be handled by able speakers. By this method, it is hoped to promote the spirit of co-operation in the community.

Los Angeles District Federation

A joint conference of chairmen of five departments of Los Angeles district federation work has been called for Thursday, November 2, at 2 p.m., in room 616 Junior Orpheum Building, 815 South Hill street. The five departments are: Political science, Mrs. Helen Mathewson Laughlin, chairman; legislation, Miss Flora Belle Nelson, chairman; community service, Mrs. M. H. Pehr, chairman; education, Miss Ida C. Iverson, chairman; American citizenship, Miss Mary Workman, chairman.

Each club should be represented at these conference meetings and, if possible, the same representative throughout the year. Club chairmen of each of these five departments are urged to attend this conference.

Child Lecturer Here

Mrs. Fanny E. Huey, musician, writer, lecturer and the founder of the American Child Garden, has come to live in Los Angeles. Known among club women by her lectures given at the biennial in San Francisco when the general federation met there ten years ago, Mrs. Huey has been termed in club circles as "The American Montessori-Plus" because she brings music for the children from an exclusive and aristocratic background to an inclusive and democratic relation to life. She has written a book entitled, "Color Music for Children," in which she shows parents how to teach their children the best music of all ages as they enjoy autumnal colors or as they enjoy a brilliantly worded fairy story.

Mrs. Huey was born in Durban, Natal, South Africa, of American foreign missionary parents. She is descended from a long line of ancestors conspicuous for centuries in the fight for freedom, civilization and progress. She is eligible to the Colonial Dames, Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, Society of Founders and Patriots and Daughters of the American Revolution. A friend of hers has said this ancestry is not a back fence for Mrs. Huey to lean on, but an illuminating background for present activities.

Of her work with children and music Mrs. Huey says:

"It is very interesting to note the difference in children regarding the particular point of attraction in a skillfully arranged musical environment. One child will respond eagerly to the mathematical side and will enjoy arranging musical toys in related groups. He will find great pleasure in estimating rythmic values. Another will be charmed with harmony and will amuse himself in picking out tones that sound well together, others, enjoying making melody pictures arranging the tones in outline. Some wish to sing, others to play on toy instruments. Many enjoy the bright and brilliant tones as they enjoy colors and high lights in paintings while still others prefer the still, cool, shadowy tones."

And all of these things are indicative of the lines along which to build not only culture in music, but character in life, said Mrs. Huey, who will begin at once work of this kind in Los Angeles as she has previously conducted in St. Louis and in New York.

D. A. R. Entertains

Mrs. Lyttleton Price and Mrs. O. C. Vogal will entertain the Los Angeles chapter, D.A.R., at the home of Mrs. Price, 552 South Gramercy Place, Wednesday beginning at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The speaker of the afternoon will be Baroness Ottily de Ropp.

New officers of the chapter recently elected are:

Honorary regent, Mrs. Cassius C. Cottle; regent, Mrs. Emmet H. Wilson; vice-regent, Mrs. Alexander Smither; recording secretary, Mrs. George McCoy; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harlan Shoemaker, treasurer and registrar, Mrs. William C. Leonard; genealogist, Mrs. Kate Baierd Rogers and chaplain, Mrs. William S. Bullis.

Dance in New Clubhouse

Instead of the meeting of the West Ebell Club on the 31st inst., there is to be a masquerade dance and card party on that date at 8:30 o'clock, with music, refreshments and attractive prizes for everything. Everyone is cordially invited to come, for a wonderful time is anticipated in the beautiful new clubhouse.

Wife of Coach Speaks

Alumnae Club of the University of Southern California held its regular monthly meeting yesterday at the Kenwood Hotel, Pasadena. The meeting was in the nature of a football luncheon at which Mrs. Eimer Henderson, wife of the Trojan coach, was the principal speaker. Her topic was "Living With a Varsity Coach During Football Season."

Following the luncheon, members and guests adjourned to the new Tournament of Roses Stadium to witness the annual football contest between the University of California and the University of Southern California.

Covina Monday Club

Mrs. Charles E. Paige, president of the Monday Afternoon Club of Covina has proved herself to be an exponent of efficiency and enthusiasm for this club of women which now numbers nearly 400 with new members added each meeting. In her opening address, Monday a week ago, Mrs. Paige set the keynote for the year as enthusiasm which she said makes for warmth, for cordiality, for heartiness. "Enthusiasm moves the world," she said.

Mrs. J. S. Trewhella, vice-president of the Los Angeles federation, on this occasion spoke of the aims and ideals of club women pointing out that club women must be concerned with the problems of the nation and the other countries of the world.

Betty Jane Gilmore, a gifted girl of 9 years, gave solo dances dressed in costumes appropriate to each dance. She was accompanied at the piano by her mother, Mrs. R. C. Gilmore.

Mrs. V. T. Blocker, a young matron of Covina, gave two piano solos: "Rigoletto" (Liszt) and "Berceause" (Chopin.)

Miss Gesiena Brunjes, accompanied by Mrs. Henry Damerel, entertained with two groups of songs; Miss Brunjes is possessed of a contralto voice of rare richness and depth. Her talent augmented by the sympathetic accompaniments of Mrs. Dameral, who is a favorite in musical circles of the valley, afforded pleasure that was exceptional.

The clubhouse was improved during the summer by the addition of a rest-room, entire new stage equipment and other changes and decorations of the auditorium which was well set off by the gorgeous autumn flowers that were used in profusion at the opening meeting of the year.

Big Pine Year Book

Far away from Big Pine, the most remote community where there is a club of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, comes the news of the activities of this little unit of the federation, probably the smallest in the State. The year book is hand made by the members of the program committee and is interesting and individual.

The next program on the 31st inst. will be a literary and musical tea for the benefit of the club at the hotel with Mrs. O. C. Houghton and Mrs. Harvey W. Crook in charge. The regular meeting will be at the home of one of the members, Mrs. Anna Davidson, Friday with "Scotland" the topic of discussion led by Miss M. Fredin. Current events will be discussed. Officers of the club include: President, Mrs. Lucy Houghton; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Nettie Webb.

Whittier Woman's Club

The recently organized music section of the Whittier Woman's Club gave the premiere entertainment at the home of Mrs. Ray Woodard on North Greenleaf avenue, Wednesday afternoon, to a cultured and appreciative audience made up of club members and their guests.

The program committee announces musicales to be given the fourth Wednesday of each month at the homes of the section members, in the club year. The opening entertainment was one of miscellaneous music, vocal and instrumental, the latter consisting of violin and piano numbers. The artists were Mrs. Faye Gooch-Hazzard, violinist; Miss Grace B. Curtiss and Mrs. Samuel Bristol, pianists, and Miss Blanche C. Gould, vocalist. Mrs. Hazzard presented "Chanson-Meditation" (Cottenet.) "To a Wild Rose" (McDowell-Hartman) and "From the Canebrake" (Gardner.) Miss Curtis's piano numbers were "Ruhige Liebe" (Paul Juon,) "Etude in F Major" (Chopin,) "Impromptu in F Sharp" (Chopin.) Mrs. Bristol's piano numbers were "Prelude to Shanewis" (Cadman,) "To a Water Lilly" (McDowell) and "Hungarian Etude" (McDowell.) Miss Gould sang a group of negro spirituals by Burleigh. They were "Deep River," "Hard Trial" and "The Old Ark's a Movin'."

Baldwin Park Woman's Club

An epoch in the history of the Baldwin Park Woman's Club is the opening of the new clubhouse which will take place Wednesday evening, November 1, with a reception at 8 o'clock and the program beginning a half hour later. The completion of the pretty home for the club is an achievement which interests not only those connected with the organization, but the whole town as well. Members of the executive board who are in large measure responsible for the success of the undertaking include: President, Mrs. Edna Goodrich Long and Mrs. Lura Angel Jolly, Mrs. Ida Hogeland, Mrs. Charles Carter and Mrs. J. S. Bacon.

GILMOR BROWN

Busy in Club Circles

Belle Mitchell played opposite Gilmor Brown in Shaw's "Arms and the Man" last week at the Ebell Club, and Thyra Ruhland also took part; Miss Josephine Halderman is president of the Children's Hospital Auxiliary; Cecilia Dell 'Amore is in charge of work for the Matinee Musical Club luncheon; Mary Newkirk Bower will give a song recital before the Ebell Club next week, and Doris June Struble has appeared before five clubs during October in drama sketches and planologues.

Echo Park Mothers' Club

Echo Park Mothers' Club held its monthly meeting Friday, preceded by an informal luncheon. Mrs. Berenice Johnson talked on politics, while Mrs. Florence Schoenman was well appreciated in her talk on "The Spanish Woman." She appeared in a costume which came from Spain more than 100 years ago. Mary E. Kerr of the Edith Lindsay Studios in Hollywood danced.

The Cosmos Club

Cosmos held its second regular meeting, Tuesday afternoon, in the Ebell clubhouse. A new feature was introduced in a current event period lasting fifteen minutes to be given each meeting, by Mrs. Clarence Pease of Pasadena.

Mrs. Nellie B. Van Slingerland, chose "Race Betterment" for the afternoon address.

Songs in four different languages were included in the musical program. Miss Myrtle Carver, soprano, possesses a beautiful coloratura voice and she sang "Il Baccio" by Arditi, in Italian; Massenet's "Elegie" in French and her third number was an interpretation of Valverde's "Clavelitos," in Spanish. "Who'll Buy My Lavender," in English, closed her program. Ruth Thompson was at the piano.

Mrs. Margye Lyon Stadlman assisted by Mr. Binheim, asked the support of the members in assisting the colonization of tubercular convalescents on an 800-acre tract of which Mr. and Mrs. Stadlman are the head.

Tea and cakes were served previous to the social hour.

New Order Founded

Organized last month by Mrs. M. Dearie and Mrs. Florence Morgan the Patriotic Order of America is to hold a Hallowe'en mask dance the 31st inst., in the K. P. Hall, Fifty-fifth and Central avenue. Mr. R. F. Thompson and Mr. Charles Oleson will speak on "True American Principles.' The club is organized for the purpose of social and fraternal work.

Indian Talk by Ida May Adams

The Wednesday Morning Club will hold its regular business meeting for members only at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, November 1. A scene from "Leah Forsaken" will be read by Olive M. Bowen at the afternoon program. Ida May Adams will speak on "Citizenship for the Indian." Mrs. Herman R. Johnson is to be hostess at the luncheon.

Club members and their friends will have an excellent opportunity to acquaint themselves with measures up before the voters in the coming election at a meeting to be held in the clubhouse November 3, at 8 p.m. At this meeting both sides of every issue will be thoroughly discussed by able speakers. Mrs. Frederick Houser is chairman.

Banquet Given by Auxiliary

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Railway Mail Association is a unique club in the fact that its work is so closely connected with the work of the members' husbands, being an auxiliary of the National Association of the Railway Mail.

Monday night, the 23rd inst., a banquet was given by the ladies at the Echo Park clubhouse to entertain W. M. Collins, national president. The clubhouse was decorated with ferns and yellow chrysanthemums, that being the club color. There were about 150 guests. Mrs. George Miller, vocalist, and Mrs. William Z. Lee rendered beautiful music during the evening.

Badger Club

A regular meeting of the Badger Club will be held in the Ebell Clubhouse on November 1 at 2:30 o'clock. The program will consist of vocal selections by Miss Gladys Pickering, and a discussion of the Water and Power Act, chiropractic bill and the Thirtieth Amendment.

Besides taking an active interest in all current topics, the club has made rapid strides toward furnishing a bed in the Orthopedic Hospital.

Antivivisection

Mrs. Rosamond Rae Wright, who, as an officer of the Humane Society and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has been working so diligently in behalf of the antivivisection measure that will appear upon the ballot, has introduced to club audiences during the last fortnight Dr. Walter Hadwen of Gloucester, Eng.

Monday Dr. Hadwen spoke before the Woman's City Club and Wednesday evening, at the home of Mrs. W. I. Clendennin. On Thursday evening at Walker Auditorium Dr. Hadwen spoke again at a mass meeting and November 1 Mrs. Robert Giffor, the philanthropist, will receive in her drawing-room in Pasadena in honor of this evangelist of antivivisection. Mrs. Arthur Bingham of Santa Barbara will hold a similar drawing-room and at the Alexandria ballroom on November 6 Dr. Hadwen will speak again. On that evening Mme. Constance Balfour will sing.

Phone Employees Stage Program

Employees of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company will furnish the program at the meeting of the Business Woman's Civic Club on Monday evening at the Realty Board Building.

Under the heading, "The Big Idea," the entertainment will consist of an introduction by R. L. Sawyer; motion picture, "Our Story;" vocal solo, Genevieve Richards; explanation, Lew Farris; "Number, Please," Dorothy McDonald and coworkers, followed by a clever sketch entitled "Forty Minutes From the Telephone Office," in which the participants are Mrs. Mabel Hornaday, Ruth Moran, Mildred Sun, Mary Harbor and Ira B. Nelson in addition to the persons previously mentioned.

Friends of the club are invited to attend the program. Reservations for the dinner (50 cents,) served at 6 p.m. in the clubrooms, preceding the program, may be secured by phoning 52304.

At the recent recreation meeting, members and guests of the club were charmingly entertained with clever dancing by a group of small girls from the Wallace Studio of Dance Arts, in costume. Wilma Irving excelled in La Artista and two "Little Dutch Kiddies," represented by Florence and Evelyn Hoye, was a captivating number. Jeannette Hirsch, in a "Little Chinese Doll," displayed fine toe dancing and Anitra's dance from "Peer Gynt" was gracefully done by Mamie Vallon.

Meeting at Ambassador Hotel

An invitation is extended all women interested in the vital issues of the day to be present at the Ambassador Theater Friday afternoon, when a meeting will be conducted under the auspices of the Women's Woolwine-for-Governor Nonpartisan Club. Mr. Woolwine will give an address and a Filipino string quartet will play during the afternoon. A social hour will follow.

The committee in charge includes Mmes. Lawrence Albee, Charles Jeffries, W. J. Chichester, Samuel Brown Thomas, Remington Olmstead, Frank Tatum, Harry Lyon and Misses Mary Workman and Marie Mullen.

Arms and the Man

The happy combination of Shavian cleverness, the pleasing Gilmor Brown Players appearing in "Arms and the Man" and a highly appreciative audience made for a successful program for Ebell Club last Monday. Even when the lights would not work, flickering unmercifully over make-up and stage settings and at last failing utterly with the actors forced to read their lines from a black stage, interest did not die. The members sat in their seats until the end when the applause was sincere and generous.

Gilmor Brown as Capt. Bluntschli played with the restraint that the character demanded of the sort with which George Bernard Shaw himself could not cavil. Louka, the servant, was taken by Thyra Ruhland, who was lovely in her boyish slenderness that even her very feminine costume of dull greens and blue in batik could not entirely eliminate. Her boyish, modern walk, like Diane's in "The Sheik," and abruptly spoken lines seemed to suit the part, in spite of the long Bulgarian drapery.

Belle Mitchell, who played the lead opposite Mr. Brown, was lovely as Raina, a semicomedy role which is new to Miss Mitchell as she has until now played straight dramatic parts. Miss Mitchell leaves for New York today, where she will appear in that center of the dramatic world.

Others who appeared were: Mrs. A. H. Palmer as Catherine, Raina's mother; Howard McNear, a Russian officer; Dr. H. F. Boeckman, as Nicolam, a servant; and Maurice Wells, Sergius Saranoff.

The Bulgarian costumes of the women and the resplendent uniforms of the men made the entire stage brilliant with color, which was no small part of the charm.

Ebell Club News

Following the annual custom, Monday, the last Monday in October, will be devoted to the charter day reception. Strolling Spanish minstrels in their typically bright native costume, will sing and strum their guitars as they mingle with the guests.

Attention centers this week on the Shakespeare department and luncheon on Tuesday, the 31st inst. "The Universality of Shakespeare," as illustrated by art, plant lore and music is the general theme for the program. Those who will take part are Mrs. Grantland Seaton Long, Ebell Club president; Mrs. W. B. Scarborough, Mrs. J. F. Salyer, Mrs. Zenobia Keller, and Mrs. Charles D. Burt. Mrs. Herbert True is the curator of this department.

The program for the social science department for Wednesday is particularly interesting. Harold J. Stonier will talk on "Citizens in the Making." Miss Gertrude Comstock will speak on "The Woman Citizen," and the topic of Mrs. A. D. Jack's talk is "Women in Politics." Mr. Stonier is head of the college of commerce of the University of California extension, and Miss Comstock has been connected with the colleges of law and of oratory of the University of Southern California.

Highland Park Ebell

A one-act Indian tragedy, "The Daughter of the Sun," written by Anne Virginia Snowden, will be given by The Laboratory Players with a cast of twenty-seven at the afternoon program of the Highland Park Ebell Club next Tuesday. A reception of new members will follow.

Under Mrs. J. A. Lewis, the club members enjoyed community singing on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Merle Smith was the accompanist. Mrs. William Kirtly Chambers gave a choice program of readings with Mrs. Mildred Sanger House at the piano.

The drama section, through the curator, Mrs. R. W. Snell, was privileged in having two star pupils of Mrs. Florence A. Dobinson, who read John Drinkwater's play "Abraham Lincoln." They were Miss Mary Alpaugh and Miss Helen Sheehan, and were costumed in the period of the '60s.

The rambler section, with Mrs. S. W. Hastings as curator, met for reorganization, and had a picnic lunch on Wednesday at Sycamore Grove. The art section, under the leadership of Mrs. Nell Brooker Mayhew, visited the studio of Hanson Puthoff in Eagle Rock City, on the 18th inst. More than fifty were present to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Puthoff.

First Event of Year

Dominant Club members and friends enjoyed a delightful program tea October 14. It being the first affair of the season, the new officers of the year were introduced. Mrs. Parsons presided with grace.

A brilliant program under the direction of Miss Jennie Winston was presented by Carl Gantvoort, baritone, and Melba French-Barr, soprano. Mr. Gantvoort's songs, were as follows: (a) "Le Danois," by Augusta Holmes, (b) "Do Not Go, My Love," by Richard Hageman, and (c) "The Pauper's Ride," by Sidney Homer. Mr. Gantvoort has a superb voice, as well as stage presence and good enunciation.

Melba French-Barr, a charming young artist, possesses a soprano voice of golden quality. She sang with a true sense of musicianship, (a) "Crying by the Water," by Campbell-Tipton; (b) "Star Gleams" (from Chinese Cycle) by Cadman, and (c) "When Chois Sleeps," by Samuels. As an encore she sang "Cusha Bird" by Gertrude Ross, with the composer at the piano. Carey E. McAffee and Grace Adele Freebey provided the accompaniments.

The Dominant Club has held its meetings in the Ebell clubhouse for the past twelve seasons. Many of the world's greatest artists have appeared before, and have been entertained by this group of active women musicians. Among the membership are composers, pianists and singers of international fame. The officers for the club year are as follows: President Mrs. Gertrude Parsons, vice-president, Mrs. Sidney B. Webb, recording secretary, Miss Gertrude Cohen; financial secretary, Miss Sadie Douglas; treasurer, Madame Isabel Curl Piana; program chairman, Miss Jennie Winston; social chairman, Mrs. Carlotte Comer Wagner and press chairman Miss Grace Adele Freebey.

Guests at Press Club

"We can play no favorites today, so distinguished is everyone of our guests," was the opening announcement of Blanche Harriman Verbeck, president of the Southern California Women's Press Club last Tuesday afternoon on the occasion of the club's first professional program of the year, devoted to the scenario.

Mrs. Edna Sterrett, program chairman, introduced Mr. and Mrs. J. Spencer Kelley. Mr. Kelley sang "Son lés Pieds" and for his second number gave Mrs. Helen Lukens Gaut's "Winds of the Desert," greatly delighting his audience with his splendid rendition of both numbers.

Introduction of other noted guests followed, among whom were Mrs. Gertrude Bonrn, whose Indian name is Zitkala-Sa, Dr. Frank Nagel, Mme. Mareska Aldrich, Sir Frank Popham Young, Mrs. Ida McGlone Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stewart, Mrs. Victor Scherzinger, Mrs. Tully Marshall, formerly Miss Marion Fairfax; Mrs. Marshall S. Anderson, identified with the city's Matinee Musical Club, and Mrs. Long, president of Ebell.

Roy Stewart, noted for his film portrayal of western roles, gave a brief talk on the subject of what

THE UNCONQUERABLE SOUL

In "The Tale of Triona" William J. Locke Presents a Spirited Hero With a Mysterious Past Winning Out Against the Barbed Shafts of Fate

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

THE TALE OF TRIONA. By William J. Locke. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Locke is your true Democrat, though he never parades his democracy. He reveals it, however, time and again in his exuberant romances by taking a nobody for a hero and revealing in this thing of common clay the unconquerable soul. He delights in adventurers, vagabonds, philosophical ne'er-do-wells. And the reason for his delight in his nonstandardized humans is that through them he makes clear the worth of human life when it breaks away from the accepted channel and is beaten and buffeted for its nonconformity.

Each of Mr. Locke's vagabonds is a nonconformist, a free soul in whom the pulse of life is too vibrant for the conventional ways of respectable society. It is some quixotic and wholly unpremeditated act that starts the Locke hero on his lonely way, but it is the spirit behind the act that makes the hero count.

In Alexis Triona we have a gifted and spirited young man emerging from the war in a not quite normal condition. In reality he is of humblest English origin, but his exciting experiences in Russia and elsewhere have developed the exotic strain in his make-up. It is as natural as sunrise for him to accentuate the foreign ways he had picked up, just as it was easy for one of his temperament to embellish his own adventures.

So he appears to Olivia Gale and others as a captivating writer of genius, as different as possible from what one of his sodden English parentage might have been expected to be. His book "Through Blood and Snow," giving the experiences of a member of the Russian secret service during the early years of the war, had made him a celebrity, and this helped to arouse Olivia's interest in him.

But the magic of his personality, his eagerness to live and enjoy, and his intriguing philosophy would alone have made Olivia his captive. What romantic young woman in the early twenties could resist a vivid youth who lays down his notion of life in this wise: "It's the only thing that counts in human progress. The Will-o'-the-Wisp. It leaves 999 men out of 1000 floundering in a bog—but the thousandth man wins through to the Land of Promise. There is only one thing in life to do," he continued, clenching his nervous hands and looking into the distance away from Olivia, "and that is never to lose faith in your ignis fatuus—to compel it to be your guiding star. Once you've missed grip of it, you're lost."

When they were married they went on their honeymoon to "Quien Sabe," the little cottage they found "somewhere on the South Coast" on a "long, thin, sandy promontory sticking out to sea, like an innocent rib of wilderness." But their love idyl was of short duration.

Through a logical series of events, none of which needed to happen, the happiness of these two young people was shattered, and Olivia found herself in an anomalous position, alone, distraught, resentful, but much more faithful in her heart to her love for Triona than she would admit.

That the love which laughs at locksmiths should at least be able to endure the revelation of past peccadillos and even of worse things in one's beloved had not yet become a part of Olivia's philosophy. Because Triona had lied to her, under pressure, and then buttressed one lie with another, she thought everything between them was over. How a new conception of love came to her is the seed of the story, though to most readers it is Triona's and his endurance of the barbed shafts that life directed at him in such abundance that make the fascination of the story.

The background of post-war England is excellently done, though the author's disgust with the new effort to live noisily if not well is ill-concealed. Locke, here, as elsewhere, is a competent novelist, though no one will assert that "The Tale of Triona" is the best of his books.

MAXWELL'S "BEST SELLER"

It is not often that the novel the author himself likes most is the one the reading public prefers. It so happens, however, that of all of his novels, W. B. Maxwell's latest one, "Spinster of This Parish," is his favorite; and its great success in England, where it has been reprinted five times within ten weeks, is particularly gratifying to him. Dodd, Mead & Co. publish "Spinster of This Parish" in America, and the indications are that it will duplicate its English success here, where Mr. Maxwell has a large following.

A Book for Sweet Sixteen

"The Girls' Book of Verse" is an anthology of poetry of all times—including our own—which has special appeal for girls between 12 and 18. It is compiled by Mary G. Davis, a New York librarian, who has had wide experience with girls and their tastes in literature. Dorothy Canfield writes an introduction.

A MEDIUM FOR YOUTH'S SONGS

"Caprice," a Magazine of Poetry, Makes Its Bow in Los Angeles

BY H. THOMPSON RICH

That Los Angeles is the center of a definite, nascent culture is becoming increasingly evident. That there has been a lack of mediums through which those who labor in the field of the "seven arts"—poetry, painting, sculpture, music, dancing, the drama and the photoplay—may find expression has long been recognized.

Feeling keenly the need of such a medium through which California's own singers may find expression and comparison with the singers of other States, David N. Grokowsky and his enthusiastic associates have founded Caprice, a magazine of poetical whimsy which, to quote from an editorial in the premier issue, "will always welcome experiments in verse forms, and will print the works of poets who are not able to obtain an audience because the style they write in is somewhat different from the more accepted forms of verse."

In format, the new magazine presents a pleasing appearance. Its twenty-four pages of good quality of white eggshell paper, size 5½x8½ inches, surmounted by a neat tan jacket of the same proportions, allow it to fit snugly into your coat pocket.

In content, the prevailing order is vers libre or imagism, with here and there a lonely rhyme protesting, still insistent on the older, austerer ways; but even the rhymes are defiant, clangorous, insurgent. Youth sings here his new, fearless songs. If sometimes he is unintelligible, egotistical, ineffectual, at least he is sincere and brave and inventive, and sometimes he rings with his strange, modern tools a high, clear gong of lyrical beauty—as, for instance, the following lines by Oscar Williams, from the current number:

BEING

As dew
That draws cool being
From veins of leaves at dusk,
So frail, so silver-gray, your face,
Beloved.

In contrast to the frost-like, evanescent beauty of those free, fragile lines, below is quoted a section from a sturdy, conventional lyric by the well-known Lew Sarett, entitled "Let Me Flower as I Will:"

God, let my parching roots go deep
Among the cold green springs, and keep
Firm grip upon the mossy edges
Of imperishable granite ledges;
That thus my body may withstand
Vast avalanche of snow and sand,
The trample of the years, the flail
Of whipping wind, the beat of hail. . . .

Several other interesting poems might be quoted, but aside from the space they would take, there would be the difficulty of selecting those to be favored—for the entire issue is made up of experiments, and experiments are always interesting. And there, in the freedom to experiment which Mr. Grokowsky allows his contributors, is the raison d'etre of his magazine. Caprice is for youth, as youth is for caprice—the playground, the laboratory, where dreams may be tried and beauty tested.

Not at all capricious does David N. Grokowsky appear when you talk to him about his magazine. In fact, he is a most earnest young man and has very definite aspirations for California and the Southwest in general.

"I think," he says, "that before we can produce a more worth-while literature, the greatness of thought must be more evenly distributed over the country. Now, people in one city think more than people in another city. The thought of the West does not seem to be on an equal with the thought of the East."

He then goes on to explain in his opinion a venture like Caprice will, by bringing the creative work of all sections here to Los Angeles, awake the native, latent poetical fire of this city; that so many active minds radiating thought and beauty toward us cannot fail to stimulate our minds, and that in this way Los Angeles can become such a cultural center as are New York and Chicago.

"There is a spirit, an emotion in men's hearts, dominated by the intellect," says Grokowsky, "that we need here. It is in New York, in Chicago, perhaps in one or two other American cities, but it has scarcely begun to make its appearance in Los Angeles. Remember, in Rolland's 'Jean Christophe,' how two individuals can be attracted to each other by a common impulse, a sort of hidden mutual understanding? We all have those impulses, those creative reserves, and we can bring them into play and use them for the making of a great Western literature, if we can but be stimulated enough by those who are making great literature elsewhere. And so, in its modest way, I believe that Caprice can help to awaken that sleeping reserve in us, here in the Southwest."

It is felt that distance from other cultural centers should not isolate our minds and emotions when, after all, we are experiencing the same types of emotions as they are, with the same types of minds, hour after hour, day after day. We are all Americans, and one section should produce as great and rich an art as another. All we need is the stimulus, the helping hand, because we are younger and less trained to observe and create, here in the West. As an example, it may be pointed out that Robert Frost's mere residence in the vicinity of the University of Michigan was sufficient to spur on the creative work of many students. The very fact that a great American poet was in their midst heartened them as none of their professors ever could; and the whole State of Michigan has become richer from the experiment.

In just such a way, though perhaps not to such a degree, David N. Grokowsky feels that Caprice is going to hearten and enrich Los Angeles and the Southwest; as the Lyric West, an older and more mature poetry magazine, has been doing for some time, and as he

POETRY FOR LIVING MEN

"Saddle Songs" is a little sheaf of songs written by Henry Herbert Knibbs, dedicated to that most lovable of historians of the range, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, and published in Houghton Mifflin Company. The songs are intended for the blood-brothers of the open spaces who know—

The intimate companionship of saddle, spur and gun,
The joy of leather, smooth and strong, of silver in the sun,
The grip of trout-rod to the hand, the play of jeweled reel,
The stock that fits the shoulder curve—the potency of steel!

Forgetting not the rope and hitch, the steaming pack-horse train,
The sliding shale, the rugged pitch, the thunder of the rain,
Th smell of coffee in the dawn that gilds the far divide;
Sing me a home beyond the stars—but give me trails to ride.

Then, too, there are songs that are different. Songs that fairly whimper with silvery cadences of love and dreams as soft and ethereal as a maiden's blush. Take these lines picked at random from "Flower of the Night":

Flower of the Night, the moonlit shadows fall,
Like lingering kisses on your dreaming eyes;
The slow sea drones along the harbor wall,
A flower upon your breast the low moon lies.

Another note that we find in this little sheaf, a note so dramatic that the very pulses quiver, is this from "The Round Corral":

Swung to the saddle, flicked the blind, then lunge and plunge and rear,
While rope and rowel strove to break blind hate gone mad with fear;
Rope slashed and reddened rowel stung; the outlaw squealed and fell,
And Yardlaw lay, a huddled shape, still, in the round corral.

These lines from "The Renegade" make as fine a figure as we have met in poetry:

From valley trail below the pass he saw the dawn's bright legions mass
And march across the barren land, their lances tipped with fire.

That this is no isolated flight of flaming poetic fancy is shown in practically every little song in the volume. I cannot refrain from quoting this bit from "Old Jim":

Black thunder rolled along the mountain height,
The lightning lashed in whips of burning white
Across the towering pines. Keen biting, cold
The rain, torrential, smote the mountain-hold:
Quick streams danced down the steep, ripped through the trail,
Loosing the tilted rock and hillside shale.

Here is poetry for living men. Poetry that ranges far and wide, from crooning love song to epic flight, flashing alike with passion and with sweetness; glowing anon with the beauty of nature's varying moods and instinct with rhythmic cadence and lovely meter. Poetry that soothes and uplifts like the silvery notes of bells calling men to prayer, a vast relief from what the free-versifiers are producing, most of which is but the jangle and the discord of the jazz.

Robert Frothingham, a distinguished critic, has this to say of Mr. Knibbs's work:

"Just a big bit of genius, this man Knibbs, he 'savvies' the West inside and out, and interprets it as no other writer of verse ever has. What Kipling was to the English soldier, Knibbs is to the mountains, deserts and trails of the far West."

It seems but meet and proper to here say a word about Herbert Henry Knibbs, who is now a citizen of Los Angeles, and who has produced in addition to four books of poetry seven splendid stories of the West. His last novel, "Partners of Chance," shows clearly that he can write a book that is more than a conventional western thriller. All his work is above the average of western stuff, and his circle of readers is daily widening.

Herewith is a brief sketch of the man:

The career of Henry Herbert Knibbs makes a story as full of zest and romance as those novels in which he has so vividly depicted the colorful life of the West. He is a man who "lifted himself by his boot straps" from a life of drudgery and grime to one of beauty and color—a care-free, joyous life of creative work.

Born in Canada, he came to the United States at the age of 21, became a naturalized citizen, and did whatever work he could get. There was a job in an iron foundry, then as a traveling salesman, then a position as private secretary to the traffic manager of a railroad. It was while in the last position that he tried the writing game. He was 35 at the time, and throwing up his job, he went to Cambridge and took a course in English literature and rhetoric at Harvard University. At the end of the course he invested all his worldly wealth in a canoe and camping equipment and left for the Canadian wilderness in order to get atmosphere for his stories. He and his wife were experts with the paddle, good shots and real sportsmen. Life in the open was what they wanted, and what they got. In 1911 they went to California, where they now live, tramping, camping, canoeing, hunting, fishing.

Is it to be wondered that Mr. Knibbs's books so throb with the spirit of the great outdoors, that when one reads his stories and poems of western adventure and romance, the old cattle-raising days, the great plains, the heroes and riders of the West live before our very eyes?

Novels by H. H. Knibbs comprise "Partners of Chance," "The Ridin' Kid From Powder River," "Tang of Life," "Sundown Slim," "Overland Red," "Lost Farm Camp," "Stephen March's way." Poems: "Songs of the Trail," "Riders of the Stars," "Songs of the Outlands," "Saddle Songs."

FREEDOM PAYS

Jeffery E. Jeffery, the English writer and publicist, already known to American readers through his volume of short stories, "Side Issues," and his sociological essay, "Breaking Point," has had a brilliant success in England with his first novel, "Escape." This novel, soon to be published here under the Seltzer imprint, is the story of a woman who tries persistently to free herself from the narrowness of a middle-class existence. As the first step toward liberty, the heroine sets herself to the acquisition of money; with a superefficient partner she starts the London Middle-class Agency, the initials of which, by their resemblance to the Y.M.C.A., facilitate the advertising schemes of the new firm. The idea behind the business which Emily Sinick starts is ingenious; one wonders why some one hasn't tried it in New York. The heroine of "Escape," moreover, is distinguished from other heroines by the fact that she does not go to the dogs because she goes into business.

MOUNTAIN-CLIMBING STUNTS

Harold Bindloss's novels offer wonderful opportunities to the film producer specializing in pictures of physical daring in the wilderness. His new story, "Northwest," contains some remarkable mountain-climbing stunts in the Canadian Rockies. Climbing has been for many years one of Mr. Bindloss's favorite sports, and he has himself performed some distinguished feats both in Canada and in the hills of the north of England, where he now lives.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Whiting Williams, author of "What's On the Worker's Mind?" has a new book out in which he tells of his experiences as a laborer in France and Germany. The title is "Horny Hands and Hampered Elbows." Scribner's publish it.

Doran fiction for the fall includes new novels by May Sinclair, Frank Swinnerton, Hugh Walpole, Robert Hichens and Arnold Bennett.

Alfredo Panzini, whose masterpiece, "Wanted—A Wife" (Io Cerco Moglie,) is soon to appear in an admirable English version by Frederic Taber Cooper, is one of the foremost Italian novelists, and the only one possessed with that subtle humor which is more often associated with the Anglo-Saxon than the Latin mind. The London Times calls this novel an Italian "Kipps." The authorized translation of this book will bear the imprint of Nicholas L. Brown.

Nathaniel Wright Stephenson, who contributed two volumes to "The Chronicles of America," published by the Yale University Press, has a biography of Lincoln scheduled for appearance this fall. It is entitled simply "Lincoln," and is described as "an account of his personal life, especially of its springs of action as revealed and deepened by the ordeal of war." It will be in one volume of 480 pages, with illustrations, notes, bibliography, etc. Bobbs-Merrill are the publishers.

The latest best seller list compiled by the Publishers' Weekly shows Edith Wharton's novel, "The Glimpses of the Moon," as the best selling piece of fiction throughout the country. The figures are based upon the report of booksellers in seventy-three cities of the East, Middle West, South and West. It is notable that the number of stores reporting "The Glimpses of the Moon" as their best selling title declare it is way ahead of that for any other title of the year.

The writings which compose Jane Austen's newly published volume, "Love and Friendship" (Stokes,) belong to her girlhood days at her father's rectory in Hampshire. There were ten in the family, and Jane's older sister, Cassandra, was her special confidante. The sisters were widely read for young ladies of their day and doubtless got much fun out of Jane's burlesques on the sentimental novels they read.

Among important Putnam publications this fall is "Mr. Dickens Goes to the Play," by Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the New York Times. Mr. Woollcott is a Dickens enthusiast, and in this book he tells the story of him as a playwright and actor and particularly as a critic. There are in this volume many entertaining sidelights on a character always interesting, and never more so than in this new role.

In connection with J. K. Huysmans's novel, "Against the Grain" (A Rebours,) Lieber & Lewis, publishers, announce that they have procured an introduction for the book by Havelock Ellis.

"Human Nature in the Bible," by Dr. William Lyon Phelps, is a recent Scribner publication. It takes up the stories of the Old Testament from a literary point of view.

With Margot Asquith writing "My Impressions of America" (Doran,) and G. K. Chesterton issuing his new book, "What I Saw in America" (Dodd) there is little excuse for the citizens of this republic remaining ignorant of how they appear to the critical Briton of the period.

Arthur Davison Ficke's "Sonnets of a Portrait Painter," which went out of print shortly after its original publication in 1914, has been reprinted by Mitchell Kennerley. The new volume contains additional groups of sonnets, making in all 100.

"The Last Harvest" is the appropriate title of John Burroughs's posthumous book which Houghton Mifflin Company published in September. The book, written with Mr. Burroughs's customary fine and simple strength, ends with a few statements on old age and death

.THE EMERGING SUFFRAGETT

A Fascinating Historical Romance Dealing With Period Just Prior to and Up to the Close of the Civil War

BY THOMAS F. FORD

THE COURTLANDTS OF WASHINGTON SQUARE. By Janet A. Fairbanks. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

This is a novel quick with romance and adventure, having for its central figure a gallant young girl who had the courage of her convictions and who did more than one thing that was not considered proper for a person of her time and station.

Ann Byrne came to Washington Square, where the daughter of the brilliant, erratic Irish editor who had been her father did not belong, because Hudson Cortlandt met and wooed and won her scatter-brained mother when that beautiful piece of femininity came to New York on a shopping trip. Like the silly and cowardly creature that she was, Ann's mother failed to inform Cortlandt of the existence of her daughter, preferring to present her later as a "surprise."

As Cortlandt had planned to take his bride to Paris on their honeymoon, he quite naturally resented the suggestion that the child that had been foisted upon him should accompany them on their trip. His elder brother, Hendricks, a staid and dignified bachelor, finally agreed to care for the child until the couple's return. But the great ship Arctic on which they sailed was sunk off the banks and little Ann was left to the care of Hen was—is—and always will be a hazardous experiment, 'twould seem! From the woman's point of view, recognized as such, but who—other than Willa Cather—pauses in his or her intent pursuit of life, liberty and happiness, to send a thought wave of cheer and comfort to the equally as unfortunate experimentee!

—'Twere a strong case made out in his defense by this well-beloved writer. If you are one of life's misunderstoods 'tis certain that her words will be to you as the breath of life—her book a priceless treasure.

—Her story is of a boy who wanted something splendid from life—

—who was not, and could not force himself to be, content with the work-a-day world as he encountered it. Always searching, always arguing, always on the wrong side! Finally he was married in order that he might be practicalized, so to speak.

—How he arose above the seemingly insurmountable circumstances that resulted and found that sought-for "something splendid" makes a delightful and a happy story. Price $2.50.

MAGAZINE OF NEW POETRY

sincerely hopes other magazines of the "seven arts' may come to do.

Associated with Mr. Grokowsky in this venture are: Nahum Yawor, assistant editor, lecturer and critic, a Rusian by birth, inheriting the dreamy, caustic intellect usual in those of his race. John Drury, Chicago representative, former dramatic critic on a Los Angeles newspaper and a poet of rare delicacy; Rex Hunter, New York representative, widely known poet and critic, author of "Stuff O' Dreams," a book of one-act plays, and Jack Cooper, art director, young local artist who assisted in the makeup of Caprice and whose work will be presented in a coming issue.

A ROMANCE OF THE CIVIL WAR

the utter disgust of Ann's aristocratic connections when they discovered that she was determined to join the Sanitary Commission and work in the hospitals of New York.

But purely aside from the romantic and adventurous incidents of the story, there is a rich historical background. If what happened in New York is to be taken as typical, the psychology of the North is presented with great skill. One of the incidents dealt with is the effect produced by the news that Fort Sumter had been fired upon. This was taken by many as a joke, but later, when the fall of Fort Sumter was announced, the whole city was enshrouded in gloom. Later there was a reaction and patriotic fervor reached a high pitch. The author also dramatically describes the draft riots and the recriminations against the free negroes of the North. She also describes the slovenly manner in which the nation prepared for the war.

Mrs. Fairbanks has etched into the picture the towering figure of Lincoln, not as so many writers have attempted to do of late, by emphasizing his ungainliness and broad cracker-barrel humor, but with a dignity and poise that befits this great character. We get a fleeting, but, nevertheless, convincing glimpse of Walt Whitman and his work in the hospitals among the wounded soldiers. William Cullen Bryant, Horace Greeley and the young Prince of Wales (later Edward VII,) who was visiting the United States at that time, also pass in review.

The story runs from the late fifties until just before the close of the Civil War. The scene shifts repeatedly from New York to Washington and for one brief dramatic period to the bloody battlefield of Gettysburg, where Ann has her most startling adventure. It was one that came near wrecking her whole life by forcing her into a marriage with a man for whom she had little love, but a goodly portion of respect. When he revealed his true inwardness, he drove her in desperation to appeal to Peter, who, like the young Lochinvar that he was, came out of the West and bore her away to Chicago as his blushing, but decidedly beflustered bride.

In the development of Ann's character we see the emerging suffragette of later days, with her contempt for the cramped Victorian ideals of the women of social station of her time. It is her own free and bounding spirit of independence which makes her a woman ahead of her period and a lovable character that will be remembered long after the incidents of the book are forgotten.

ABOUT RHODES'S BOOK

Harrison Rhodes's "A Gift Book for My Mother," just published by the Harper's, is a story of a son's devotion to his mother and of a mother's wonderful hold on her son's love. It is a tribute which recalls Barrie's "Margaret Ogilvie."

SEA AUTHOR IS A GIRL

terrified women. She once sailed on a condemned ship from New York to Trinidad, with no wireless and only a quarter of the regular crew. The dynamo had broken, and only oil lamps were left with which to light the ship. The pump would not work, and eventually caused a list, which momentarily threatened to make the ship turn turtle into the foaming water.

For over ten years many strange ports and stranger adventures were the almost daily routine of her life. The scene which she depicts in her story "The Golden Adventure" in which the heroine went swimming against the sharks in the Gulf of Paria, was based on fact. This story appeared in a national weekly. The description of the cold and bleakness of the Strait of Magellan in "South of Fifty-Two" was from memory and not from books.

Makda Leigh feels that she did not really begin to learn the sea until she started working with men who [illegible] on ships.

She has regular seaman's papers which were given her after discharge. They were always marked V. G.

On her last trip from California she came aboard the steamship Creole. Aboard this ship was her former chief officer, John Henski with whom she had been a shipmate ten years before.

Miss Leigh has traveled over a hundred thousand miles on ships. She has never been sea-sick.

Her stories have appeared in many magazines. Seven Seas, the Navy League Publication, used several of them. She has been a contributor to Collier's and other periodicals.

She was at one time the Editor of T. K. K. Topics, which is the house organ of the Japanese steamship Company. She also edited "The Seafarer" for the Seaman's Institution of San Francisco. In her newspaper work she did waterfront notes on the New York American and the Staten Islander. She also worked for some time on the Honolulu Evening Bulletin, during a lull in her sea wandering. Wallace Farrington, now Governor of Hawaii was at that time editor of the later juornal.

The editors of Munsey's Magazine claim that Magda Leigh is among the best contemporary writers of sea stories.

She is now an Associate Editor of the Editor Magazine and The Black Cat. She is also a critic and instructor in The Editor Council, the western branch of which is in Los Angeles.

Jeanette Ritz (Seated) and Gertrude Braun

OPEN house maintained by the Women's Bond and Tax Study League in Cleveland Hall, Walker Auditorium, as its part in the campaign against the $500,000,000 Water and Power Bond Act is attracting a steady stream of callers. Yesterday women on their way to the Friday Morning Club meeting dropped in to ask questions regarding uncertain phases of the operation of the act, and spreading news of the reception being held by the league, brought back with them, at the noon hour, others who wished information.

Women workers in the stores and offices, anxious to know how passage of the act might affect them called during their noon hours to obtain copies of the act and hear it explained. Bringing their lunches with them, they sat about the cozy tables in the league headquarters, listening to a twenty-minute address by Wilbur Curtis.

Later in the day, beginning a little before 2 o'clock, shoppers with a half-hour or so to spare and a need for a few minutes' relaxation, stopped for rest and refreshment.

"It is pleasant, as well as convenient, to be able to get away from the noise and hurly-burly of the streets for a little while," remarked Miss Jeannette Ritz, a dancing instructor, as Miss Gertrude Braun of Glendale poured her second cup of delicious Mocha, "I shall be certain to return tomorrow and bring some of my friends with me."

RECENT DOINGS AMONG WRITERS

on which he was working, at the time of his death. It is interesting to note that this venerable seer did not, as is so common in old age, turn to belief in immortality to minimize the end he knew must be approaching. "Nature is so opulent," he writes, "so indifferent to that we hold most precious; such a spendthrift, evokes such wonders from such simple materials! Why should she conserve souls, when she has the original stuff of myriads of souls? She takes up, and she lays down. Her cycles of change, of life and death, go on forever. She does not lay up stores; she is, and has, all stores, whether she keep or whether she waste. It is all the same to her. There is no outside, no beyond, to her processes and possessions. There is no future for her, only an everlasting present."

Horace Liveright says of Harry Kemp's "Tramping on Life:" With the exception of "Martin Van Buren's Autobiography" and "The Education of Henry Adams," I don't know of any autobiography written by a native American as good as this one of Kemp. You may not take Harry Kemp very seriously. If this is so, his book will amaze you.

"The Shadow Witch," by Gertrude Crownfield, which the Duttons have just published, is a charming fairy story that will delight all young readers, and, because of the sheer beauty of its imagination and style, many of their elders as well. It is a handsome volume, uniform with this author's previous fairy-tale book, "Princess White-Flame," which the Duttons published last year. Anne Merriman Peck has furnished chapter headings, decorations, end-papers and three full-page illustrations from pen and ink drawings that are dainty, graceful, sprightly and in harmony with the text. The fall's juveniles are not likely to bring forward a story book more attractive and entertaining than this for children with imagination and some sense of beauty.

The boys and some of the girls, too, will all be delighted with "The Boys' Book of Physics," which has been written by Charles Ramsey Clarke and Sidney Aylmer Small, and is published by the Duttons.

Here is a book by a mining engineer, A. V. L. Guise, called "Six Years in Bolivia," published by the Duttons, which, aside from being a very entertaining volume, is an eye-opener as to the commercial possibilities to be found in that country. The author, an English mining engineer, who had received his professional training at Columbia and Lehigh universities, went to Bolivia in the employ of an English mining syndicate and during his six years there saw a great variety of many parts of the country, from sea coast to high Andean altitudes, from cities to isolated regions, and enjoyed much incident and adventure. He writes of it all informingly and interestingly.

John O'London's Weekly lists Miss Ellen Glasgow's recent novel, "One Man in His Time," as one of the current English best sellers. This story of the new South, which was published in the United States last spring by Doubleday, Page & Co., is the only American novel included in the English list.

A HUMORIST ABROAD

"The Coasts of Romance" in Crosbie Garstin's book of that title, just published by Stokes, are the coasts of the Mediterranean, which the author visits on his light-hearted travels. Gibraltar, Tangier, Fez, Cadiz, Seville, Toledo and Madrid are among his ports. The spirit of the book has been compared by English reviewers to that of Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad." Mr. Garstin is a prominent contributor to Punch, to whom he is known as "Patlander."

MUMMY HEADS SIZE OF HAND

mains distinct and even the eyebrows and eyelashes seem the same as in life. The hair, more than a foot long, retains its glistening luster, and though coarse, is soft to the touch. The eyes are closed and the eyeballs gone, but the large nostrils, somewhat flattened like the nose of an Ethiopian, are open. Through holes pierced in the lips during the process of preservation, cords have been run to form a pendant effect, some eight inches long, that apparently was considered to have a decorative effect. A tough cord also has been inserted in the crown of the head and was used to hang the martial trophy in the lodge of the victor.

THE PROCESS

From what has been learned of the customs of the Incas, the preservation of the head, after it had been cut off just above the shoulders, was accomplished by taking out the skull and all other bones and the brain. The mouth then was sewed up and hot pebbles were placed in the cavity of the head until it was filled to the necessary degree. Herbs, made into some concoction that remains a secret with the Indians, were used to dress the head and it then was packed away to bake.

How long this took has not been discovered, but apparently it was not a rapid process, for the trophy is so much reduced in size that it would seem much time must have been required to complete the mummification. In life, the head of this Ybarros chief or cacique was about the size that would require a 6⅞ hat of today. This was established by the coronet of feathers he wore in life and which was found with the head he had lost in death.

GUARDED AS GODS

This circlet is woven from reeds or rushes and is adorned with red, white and black plumage that feels like the down of a water fowl. It is in an excellent state of preservation and, with the shrunken head, must have been carefully guarded by the triumphant victor and his descendants, for such trophies are said to have been handed down among the Ybarros with a sanctity like that which attaches to household gods.

The feathered coronet is a very pretty ornament and must have been the pride of its owner. Its plumage has been carefully treated to preserve its vigor and coloring, it would seem, and it likely will prove almost as lasting as the head it once crowned with military glory. There is nothing about either relic to suggest how the Inca received his mortal wound, but it probably was a spear thrust in the body. All that Col. Selig has been able to learn is that he belonged to the Ybarros and was of prominence among them.

Who, his conqueror was or whether he died before Pizarro raided Peru in 1533 cannot be learned.

English Grammar in Spanish

"Novisima Gramatica Simplificada de la Lengua Inglesa" is the title of an English grammar in Spanish for students of the English language which E. P. Dutton & Co. have just added to their list of educational publications. It is by C. J. MacConnell, a teacher of English, Spanish and French in important London schools, and author of several text-books in those languages.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

the star wants in a story. Mr. Stewart expressed himself as believing that the story, not the star, is now the main consideration, and that every producer wants stories with great messages and worthwhile themes. Mr. Stewart said in closing that all actors wished to do a piece of work that would make the public remember them with love after they were "through."

Edward Langley talked in reminiscent vein of his twenty-one years as an art director for the screen. He traced the development of the picture industry from the day of illustrated song slides, to 1886, when the first celluloid film was developed by George Eastman, and on to the present day. The first motion picture was made in California at the University, Gov. Stanford wishing to show his pupils the action of a horse walking.

Mr. Langley is one of the designers of the Robin Hood sets. He stated that co-operaiton is the big factor in the success, and greatness of a picture, and that it is his belief that the films will be the greatest influence for the lifting of civilization in the world. Through pictures the doctrine of "I am my brother's keeper," will eventually be realized.

Next to be introduced was Miss Marion Fairfax, now Mrs. Tully Marshall, who talked on the point of view of the writer toward his scenario. Miss Fairfax began by saying that the scenarist's viewpoint must be universal, comprising that of director, actor, cameraman and audience. She discussed the dangers of censorship, giving an apt definition of the term as "just the other fellow's opinion." Miss Fairfax wrote, directed, titled, cut and produced "The Lying Truth." She is also a dramatist of note, her name having been flashed simultaneously on Broadway at six different playhouses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelley followed with a duet, "Through All Eternity." They then sang "Farewell" and "My Caravan" at the president's request.

Mrs. Gertrude Bonrn talked of the American Indian, whom she called "our own little people." She plead eloquently and convincingly for citizenship, public school privileges and enfranchisement.

Mrs. Verbeck closed the program with words of gratitude to the artists.

A social hour followed, with Mrs. Bertha Lincoln Huestis and Mrs. O. P. Clark at the tea table.

President to Speak

"Neighbors" will be the subject on which Mrs. Henry C. De Nyse will talk next Thursday before the members and guests of the Philanthropy and Civics Club. Mrs. De Nyse is president of the Riverside Woman's Club and the County Federation. There will be no afternoon program, as the club members are devoting two afternoons a week to sewing in order to complete their quota of garments for Christmas distribution.

November 9 is the date of the annual stocking shower. A varied program of music, dancing and dramatic readings will be given. Among the artists who have offered their services are Blanche Harriman Verbeck, Mrs. Winifred Hall and little Geraldine Jacobson, 10-year-old child prodigy. Admission will be one or more pairs of new stockings for a needy child.

Going North.

Bessie Beatty, former Los Angeles newspaper woman, who has just returned from a tour of Russia and the Orient, and who has been journalist, war correspondent, author and editor for three years of McCall's Magazine, will leave the end of the week for a three weeks' stay in San Francisco to fill important lecture engagements. She will return to Los Angeles on November 14 and has been scheduled to speak at the Ebell Club, the Hollywood Woman's Club, the Pasadena Shakespeare Club, Pomona Ebell Club and the Riverside Woman's Club. She will also appear at San Diego and other Southern California cities.

A large meeting has been planned for Los Angeles, when Miss Beatty will have an opportunity of discussing her experiences in Russia and to answer the numerous questions which have been coming to her since her arrival here. While in San Francisco Miss Beatty will be the guest of Mrs. Orlow Black and will lecture in San Jose, sponsored by her friend, Ruth Comfort Mitchell (Mrs. Sanborn Young,) where she will exhibit a three-reel motion picture of Russian scenes, taken by Capt. Varges, which is said to be one of the most remarkable films ever brought to this country.

Numerous Programs

Doris June Struble, one of the cleverest artists who specializes in pianologues and drama sketches, has presented numerous programs this month before clubs in Los Angeles and vicinity, among these being the Hollywood Art Association, on October 2; the South Pasadena Woman's Club, October 4; the P. E. O. Society, on October 9; the program for the benefit of the Children's Hospital, on October 20; the Glendale Tuesday Afternoon Club, on October 24, and will appear at the Pasadena Shakespeare Club Tuesday. Miss Struble has many engagements in this vicinity for the coming two months and will make a short tour of the north after the first of the year.

Joint Soloists

Gertrude Ross, California composer-pianist, and Sol Cohen, violinist, will be the joint soloists for the second event of the Glendale Music Club on Tuesday evening, November 2. These artists will present a program of unusual interest, as Mr. Cohen will play a group of Spanish-California folk songs harmonized by Gertrude Ross, as well as groups of charming solos that he interprets with inimitable charm. Gertrude Ross will give a group of her own solos and a group of numbers by modern composers.

The Glendale Music Club now numbers over 600 members, and, under the efficient presidency of Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, has become one of the leading musical clubs in California, numbering among its members people from all the surrounding cities as far north as Inyo. This year has seen an increase of 100 members. For the program in January, Charles Wakefield Cadman, America's composer-pianist, and Princess Tsianina will be the soloists.

U. of S. C. Woman's Club

Realizing a dream of many years the University of Southern California Woman's Club will lay the corner-stone for the new university women's dormitory and social center.

This building, which will cost present time a building which the women of the institute can make their home, and the center of woman's activities. The new building will have a large dormitory and social hall in the center. In the left wing will be a women's gymnasium and in the right, the home economics department.

This building, which will cost not less than $200,000, will be equipped throughout with only first-class apparatus and fixtures, and will fill a long-left want on the U.S.C. campus.

The project is being financed by the Women's Club of the university, but it will be entirely for the use of the women students. The club is not made up of alumni of the University of Southern California, but any woman interested in seeing the university progress is eligible to membership. The meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of every month, when programs of interest to the wide-awake women of today are held. Mothers of U.S.C. students, especially, are invited to attend the meetings.

The principal means the club is using to raise funds for the new building is the artists' course, which includes five recitals by leading vocalists and instrumentalists of this country, who will be heard exclusively in this city in private recitals in Bovard Auditorium, between December 18 and April 7. The net receipts from the sale of tickets go toward the fund for the erection of the social center, which will be begun shortly on the campus.

To Hear Candidates

W. J. Pearson, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, and H. Clay Needham, prohibition candidate for United States Senator, will speak in regard to their candidacy at the meeting of the Woman's City Club in the Walker Theater tomorrow at 1 p.m.

It is expected there will also be candidates for associate justice of the Supreme Court present.

Initiative measure No. 17, on the November ballot will be discussed by Oscar Lawler in favor and Dr. John R. Haynes opposing. Mrs. E. R. Brainerd will give a talk on the Disabled Veterans of the World War. Nonmembers may obtain tickets at the door.

Municipal Players

"The Money Moon" will be the first play produced by the Municipal Players tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Gamut Club Auditorium, 1044 South Hope street. Ellen Galpin will direct.

Keeps Busy

Among the professional women who yet find time for many other lines of endeavor, is Marjorie Sinclair of Pasadena. Aside from her newspaper work, she is studying pantomime with Mrs. Elgie Lowrey Fischer, singing with Estelle Dreyfus, and is also doing community play work.

Bond Program

Having as honor guest, Carrie Jacobs Bond, beloved in musical circles, the MacDowell Club of Allied Arts held its monthly meeting last Monday evening in the Tajo Building. Mrs. Bond gave a program of her own favorite compositions, into which her charming personality and magnetism were closely interwoven. The Carlo Quartet followed Mrs. Bond on the program, adding greatly to the program.

Matzenauer is Guest

Mme. Matzenauer was honor guest and speaker last Sunday afternoon at the Three Arts Club on West Washington street. She charmed everyone by her own personality as well as her talk.

Mrs. Gilmour Ill

It has been learned that Mrs. Gertrude Gilmore of New York, who started the Pastime Clearinghouse in Los Angeles, has been very ill, and is now slowly regaining her health in Karlsbad, Austria, at the springs there.

Armistice Day Program

Plans are rapidly being completed for the all-day Armistice meeting at Trinity Auditorium November 11, sponsored by L. A. D. Federation—C.F.W.C.—in conjunction with W.C.T.U., P.-T.A. and other organizations having a national peace program.

Los Angeles is so large that this observance of the day will in no way interfere with other celebrations, whether of patriotic or civic nature.

Entirely different from the peace meeting in Hollywood Bowl last year, this program will deal with different phases of international relations in regard to world peace and its problems in an international way.

The program as now arranged will be in seven sections.

The League of Women Voters will present the legal aspect and some plan for outlawry of war.

Dr. E. C. Moore will represent the P.-T.A., touching only the educational aspect of world peace.

The Ministerial Union and Church Federation will be represented by Dr. John C. Shed, mem-

Henry Ford's Own Story

Written in Collaboration with Samuel Crowthers

A Dramatic Narrative, Full of Fight, in Which He Reveals His Amazing Theories of Success

—How I started!
—How I fought prejudice!
—How I clung to my idea!
—How I defied precedent!
—How I ignored experts!
—How I revolutionized financing!
—How I upset traditions!
—How I plan to "carry on"!

Is Mr. Ford All Right—All Wrong—or 50-50?

You may flatly disagree with him. Many will. You may call him a creature of luck. Perhaps he is. You may say his ideas would wreck the average man or business. Maybe they would. You may claim the automobile made Ford more than Ford made the automobile. That, too, is possible. But whether you believe or doubt, you are going to get energized by a multi-millionaire power plant. Whether you own a business, practice a profession or work for wages, you are going to get JOLTS. You are going to read a RIP-SNORTING FIGHTING ARTICLE — see your pet ideas punched in the nose. When it's over, you may be boiling mad or merely amused, but YOU'LL KNOW YOU'VE READ SOMETHING!

This Scoop of Scoops—the Greatest Newspaper Feature in Past 5 Years—Will Appear Weekly in The Los Angeles Times Illustrated Magazine,

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

ber of faculty of Occidental College, who was born in Persia and thoroughly understands Far East conditions, and H. Ellis Reid, manager of the original Pilgrimage Play. These two speakers will use the subject of "Human Liberty and World Peace."

The W.C.T.U. will probably be represented by Rev. Dean Gresham, one of the vice-presidents of California Church State Federation, whose topic will reflect Christian standpoint in world peace.

Mr. Thomas Dockweiler of Social Service Commission, will be asked to present Catholic Churches with the possible subject of the "International Court of Justice"—what it means, what it is and why we are not a part of it.

Rabbi Edgar Magnin and Mr. M. H. Silverberg of American Legion will represent Jewish churches, presenting two phases of peace from Jewish standpoint.

Eastern people criticise California's stand on local international questions, and one purpose of this meeting will be to make clear such questions as are vital to us locally and of world significance.

Los Angeles District Federation announces no speaker as it is hoped that the southern county convention meeting in San Diego, November 14 to 17, will bring Mrs. Fitzgerald, State federation president, to Southern California at that time, and if so, she will be asked to represent the federated clubs.

Monday Programs in November

Mrs. Basil Clarke who was one of Herbert Hoover's efficient helpers in caring for the children of Belgium, and then in America was one of six prominent women speakers in behalf of food conservation will be the speaker for the Armistice Day program for The Ebell Club November 6 with the subject "Women's Place in Permanent Peace." Mrs. William Mabee will sing, patriotic songs and Hugo Kirchhofer will lead in community singing with Mrs. Guy Bush at the piano.

Mrs. Estelle Heartt-Dreyfuss, contralto, will be presented by the club on the 13th in a musicale and there will be an illustrated lecture the 20th, "The California Garden and Its Prototype," by Myron Hunt.

The last Monday of the month, the 27th, John G. Neihardt will give a reading from his own poem, "The Song of Three Friends." Mr. Neihardt won the prize of the Poetry Society for the best poem for 1919 which was "The Song of Three Friends," which together with "The Songs of Hugh Glas" and "The Songs of the Indian Wars" formed a cycle of epics perpetuating the legends of the early days of the pioneers who conquered the land west of the Missouri River during the 19th century. Mr. Neihardt has recently been made poet laureate of Nebraska by the Legislature of that State.

Henry Van Dyke writes of him "John Masefield has well earned honors by his gift of telling stories in verse. I think John Niehardt's as good. Nay, I like it better, because it is about a land and people that I know and love."

Splendid Programs

An announcement of an artist's course has come from the U. S. C. Women's Club, and is of great interest to all. The course, which will consist of five musical and dramatic events, will be given in the Bovard Auditorium at Thirty-fifth street and University avenue. The program is as follows: December 18, Charles Hackett, tenor; February 5, Hulda Lashanska, soprano; February 12, Efrem Zimbalist, violinist; March 9, The Marionettes, players; April 7, The Flonzaley String Quartet.

All of these attractions are of the highest grade. Many of Los Angeles' most prominent women are to act as patronesses. Among these are, Mmes. Joseph F. Sartori, Charles H. Toll, Chester W. Brown, W. A. Moses, Sloan-Orcutt, Charles Seamans, Ralph W. Miller, Mme. Enrique Piana, and many others, including members of the University Club.

To Aid Children

In order to carry on its work the salvage department of the Children's Hospital, at 712 Maple avenue, has sent out a call for more articles to be sold. Miss Ellen R. Churchill, assistant manager, states: "Send us everything! Nothing too good, and very few things are not good enough for us to dispose of. We can sell anything from a fruit jar to an overcoat. There are always plenty of customers, and we ask you to send us all of the things which you no longer need or use."

Aside from the main work of the organization, this department serves as a life-saver for those who can not afford to pay for new clothes, yet need them sorely. One woman has told those in charge that she could not keep her children clothed and in school, if it were not for the salvage department.

Film Director Speaks

"More powerful than any preacher in the world, is the screen," declared Edward M. Langley, technical art director for Douglas Fairbanks, in his optimistic talk on the Motion Picture Industry before the Co-Operative Council for Better Films Tuesday at the first regular meeting of the season.

Mr. Langley has been in the screen world for over twenty-one years and from his experiences he had much of interest to tell of the advance of the motion picture industry from the time of the first motion picture show place which he was instrumental in building in Chicago, and where the leading men received $2 a day, including the time when he and the entire cast were arrested and held in jail overnight for taking a picture on the street, down to the present day when $9,000,000 is invested in plants and the industry is in its greatest "uplife day."

Mr. Langley's theory for film improvement is to eliminate all thought of evil in the making of the play, and if there must be censorship to let it begin in the studio.

In her annual message, Mrs. Fred Kuck, president, outlined plans whereby the members themselves might be of service in improving motion pictures by intelligent criticism and choice of the pictures they may go to see.

Will Hays sent a letter to the council asking suggestions for help along the line he has undertaken.

OIL STOCK SALESMEN—

We have the cleanest and best oil-stock proposition ever offered in California.

We have 55 acres in the NEXT BIG GUSHER field, adjoining Santa Fe Springs, and have contracted to drill 15 wells. Our first well is already down 100 feet and going strong.

Stockholders share in 33 1-3% of all oil. They get all their money back before we get a cent. We also have additional acreage to be drilled on the same basis.

We want a bunch of live-wire salesmen in every city and town in the State.

If you are a go-getter and a producer, line up with us now. Act at once, for this is something big and new and a money maker for every one concerned.

ARTESIA OIL COMPANY,
613 Haas Bldg. Los Angeles.

SALESMEN—

High-class men will find our proposition very profitable; an opportunity for quick promotion. We protect you on all resales. Our 8 per cent LOAN CONTRACT MAKES IT POSSIBLE FOR YOUR CLIENT TO MAKE A HANDSOME PROFIT, SAVE THEIR MONEY AND OWN THEIR OWN HOME. We are the only company under State supervision that is selling Loan Contracts at 4 per cent per annum. Big money. Join our night classes for instruction. Experience not necessary.

REMEDY SUCCESSFUL

One time when Frank Wallace, State entomologist, was a small boy his father assigned him to guard a garden from a marauding band of chickens from a neighbor's coop. Frank did not like the idea of wasting his precious boyish time on unprincipled chickens and set his wits to working.

He bored holes through grains of corn, tied notes to the end of a thread attached to the grains and set the bait. The foolish raiders fell for the trick. Frightened by the fluttering notes a few inches from the end of their bills and the sensation of the threads in their throats, the chickens went flying home and tore around the yard. This attracted the owner and the chickens were caught and notes read. This is what they read:

"I've been over to Wallace's this afternoon."

The next day the same thing occurred, and this is what the notes said that day:

"I scratched out of Wallace's onion bed today."

On the third day the notes read:

"Say, now listen: This is the last day I'm going over to Wallace's and come back alive."

There was no fourth day to the story, except that the owner of the chickens and the father of young Wallace nearly got into a fight.—[Indianapolis News.

Jogging His Memory

It was a thrilling story that McGregor had to tell.

"I had abandoned all hope," he said. "As I sank for the third time, my past life seemed to rise before me in a series of grim, realistic pictures."

A murmur of sympathy rolled from the lips of listening friends, but just as McGregor was preparing to resume, McTavish interrupted him sharply and hopefully:

"And did you happen to notice," he asked, "a picture of me lending you a fiver in the autumn of 1919?" — [Toronto Globe.

REAL NEWS GETS IN CLASSROOM

Columbia University Has Regular Service for Its Students

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The atmosphere of a real live newspaper office now fills the classroom of the School of Journalism, Columbia University. The news services of the Associated Press, United Press and International News are now received there just as they are received in the editorial departments further downtown. This is said to be the first time that any school of journalism has had news service tickers placed in the classroom.

LEADER OF REBELS IS CORNERED

Mexican Federal Troops Have Rubio Cut Off in Hidalgo Mountains

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—The War Department reports that the rebel leader, Rubio, is bottled up in a mountain valley in the State of Hildago without means for escape.

Miguel Aloman was defeated yesterday by Federal troops in the State of Vera Cruz. More than half of his force was killed or captured. After a desperate battle of several hours duration he fled to the hills with the remnant of his followers.

Gen. Ferrer, rebel leader, met Federal troops in Oaxaca today. The result of the battle is unknown. It is reported semiofficially that additional troops are being sent against Gen. Ferrer.

Gen. Hernandez in the State of Hildago is said to have increased his forces lately. He has been holding the mountainous district for several weeks unmolested. A force of Federal troops 800 strong moved against him Wednesday. The War Department expects reports of an engagement hourly.

REPORTS ON TEXAS IRRIGATION PROJECT

DAM ACROSS PECOS RIVER AT RED BLUFF, N. M., MAY BE CONSTRUCTED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RED BLUFF (N. M.) Oct. 28.—Surveys and estimates of the proposed dam across the Pecos River at Red Bluff, a few miles north of the Texas-New Mexico line, have been finished by Vernon L. Sullivan, consulting engineer of the project. In a report to the Pecos Valley Water Users' Association, it is stated that the reservoir would have a capacity of 300,000 acre-feet and the cost of the dam would be $1,894,500. It would afford a water supply sufficient to irrigate approximately 90,000 acres of land, all in Texas.

There already are several privately owned irrigation systems in the valley of the Pecos River in the vicinity of Barstow and Pecos. All of these would receive their water supply from the main canal of the Red Bluff project, it is stated. The Pecos Valley Water Users' Association, which is promoting the enterprise, has not definitely decided upon the manner of financing the work. It may be taken over by the United States Reclamation Service and carried out in the same way that the Elephant Butte project was handled by the government, it is explained.

The fact that the dam and reservoir will be located in New Mexico and the irrigated land in Texas may make it legally impossible for an irrigation district to be created under the law of Texas as a means for financing the project, it is pointed out. R. H. Gray of Buena Vista, Tex., is president, and W. H. Browning of Pecos, Tex., secretary, of the Pecos Valley Water Users' Association.

MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY GETS FINANCIAL GIFT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Oct. 28.—President M. L. Burton of the University of Michigan, today announced a gift of $40,000 to the university by Robert P. Lamonte of Chicago for completion of a huge telescope and its mounting, which will enable Prof. W. J. Hussey, director of the Detroit Observatory, to complete astronomical work he commenced while he was at Lick Observatory in California. He and Prof. Aiken of that station, working independently at first and afterward together, began a chart of the heavens.

The telescope gift of Mr. Lamonte is intended primarily for the completion of the charting of the southern heavens, and it will be taken either to some place in South America or Australia upon its completion.

The telescope, with its twenty-four-inch refractory disk, will be the largest refractor in the United States, and Schott & Sons of Jena, Germany, from whom the disk is being obtained, may add three more inches to the size of the disk if it is found to be possible.

RECORD-BREAKING PRICE

LINDSAY, Oct. 27.—A carload of new grapefruit sold in San Francisco last week for $8.00 per box f.o.b. Lindsay. This is a new high record and is the highest price ever paid in California for a carload of grapefruit. This fruit was grown on the Thompson Orchard Company's grove and was packed by the Mutual Growers' Company. It was sold through the Lindsay-Merryman Exchange.

TROOPS MARCH ON PROVINCE

Peking Government Armies Encircle Fukien

Military Governor Taken to Capital on Warship

Say Sun Adherents Caused Uprising

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

AMOY (China) Oct. 28.—Two armies flying the banners of the Peking government are converging on the Province of Fukien, where the local government recently was upset by a revolution said to have been engineered by a combination of adherents of Sun Yat Sen, deposed President of South China, supporters of Chang Tso-Lin, War Lord of Manchuria, and remnants of the old military clique known as the Anfu club.

One force, 20,000 strong, sent by Chen Chiung-Ming, the man who drove Sun Yat Sen into retirement, has crossed the northwest borders of Fukien and is reported to have reached Lungyenchow. The other half of the pincer movement is furnished by Peking troops from Kangsi province, marching south to unite with the Chen Chiung-Ming forces.

Li Hao Chi, Tuchun or Military Governor of Fukien, who, it is openly charged, attempted to run with the hares and hunt with the hounds, and lost his office in so doing, left for Shanghai yesterday on a gunboat attached to the Peking government squadron commanded by Admiral Sah Chen Ping.

TWO MUST RETIRE

Hsu Shu Cheng, or "little Hsu," avowed militarist, who played a prominent part in the revolution, conferred yesterday with Wong Yung Chuan, personal representative of Sun Yat Sen, and other southern leaders, when it was decided that Hsu and Wang should retire from the limelight in favor of Hsu Tsung Chih, another revolutionary leader, generally known as the "troublemaker of Kwangtung," and the man who led Sun Yat Sen's troops to defeat last spring in their march into Kiangsi province.

It is understood Hsu Tsung Chih in turn will retire when the Assembly of Fukien elects a civil Governor to take the reins of office.

Added to the political and military troubles of Fukien province is a financial problem, created by the recent failure of the Fukien bank, an institution that had the active support of the deposed Tuchun, Li Chao Chow. The bank's treasurer is being held prisoner by the navy pending an investigation and adjustment of its affairs.

JAPANESE TO EVACUATE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, Oct. 28.—Orders have been sent to the Japanese garrison at Tsingtao, Shantung, consisting of 200 men, to prepare to evacuate. Under the terms of the treaty with China, the evacuation must be completed early in November. The Japanese civil administration ends the 31st inst., and officials expect the troops to sail homeward soon afterward. All public property will be turned over to China.

AMERICAN JUDGE HONORED IN CHINA

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 28.—The American Bar Association, Chamber of Commerce, American Association and the University Club gave a joint community banquet in honor of Judge Lobinger of the United States Court for China, on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of his accession to the bench.

The speakers included Maj. Bassett, first United States Attorney here, Dr. Pott, president of St. John's University, Victor Lyman of the Shanghai Municipal Council and Theodore Simmang, representing Northern China.

Judge Lobinger, who recalled his judicial experiences in Nebraska, the Philippines and China, praised President Harding's judicial qualifications and courage and expressed appreciation for the support the bar, press and community had always given him.

Messages from the former President and Premier of China and a cable from President Harding through Secretary Hughes were read.

Soo Chow University conferred the degree of doctor of jurisprudence on Judge Lobinger.

BRITONS GIVE NEW TWIST TO PRUDISH

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A new turn in the prudish mind was uncovered today, when authorities of Blackpool objected to a painting which has won fame and honor at the Royal Academy being hung in the Municipal Art Gallery because it was a picture of a murderess.

The painting by Hon. John Collier is of "Clytemnestra," which shows her emerging from the palace with her lover's assistance after having murdered Agamemnon on his return from Troy.

"I regard it as perfectly absurd that anyone should object to a pictorial representation of the great tragedy," said Mr. Collier. "Blackpool appears to think that because Clytemnestra was a murderess it is bad for the morals of the community to be confronted with her picture. If hers, one of the greatest tragedies in all literature, is not a fit subject for a picture, what is?"

TWINE FIBER EXPORTS FALL FOR YUCATAN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 28.—Figures given out by Federal customs authorities for Progreso, the port of the State of Yucatan, Mexico, show a marked decrease in exports of henequen or binding twine fiber, leading staple of Yucatan. September exportations were 44,143 bales, as against 62,106 bales for the preceding month.

VLADIVOSTOK CHEERS REDS

Chita Communist Army Showered With Flowers by Populace; Allied Military Stores Guarded

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, Oct. 28.—In Vladivostok red flags are flying everywhere. A new government has been formed by Chairman Nitsuechen of the People's Revolution party in the maritime province. He formerly was a municipal guard.

The Chita army, a well-disciplined organization, is guarding the immense stores of arms left by the Allies. The Far Eastern Republican Red army came with a vanguard of cavalry, followed by infantry and artillery.

The people met the invaders by waving red flags at them and showering them with flowers.

A supporter of the deposed Merkulov government, who arrived in Kobe, declared that Gen. Dieterichs, defeated primoria commander, had established a base on Possiet Bay which was considered impregnable, but that if the general were driven from there, he intended to retire to Kamchatka.

EVACUATION ENDED

The Japanese papers congratulate their government on completing the evacuation of Siberia. They advocate the establishment of good relations with Chita. The report that such negotiations already are impending is denied by the Foreign Office.

While the behavior of the Chita troops in Vladivostok has been unobjectionable, so far as is known here, the only source of news has been from Japanese ships in the Siberian harbor. Special dispatches from Korea report that the Reds have been looting and burning the homes of the Whites around Possiet Bay.

RAILWAY MENACED

With the Japanese evacuation of Siberia, the international control of the Chinese Eastern Railway automatically ends. It is expected that the powers concerned will issue shortly a proclamation to that effect. The future of the railway is of the greatest concern to Japan, as the power controlling it can exert a heavy influence on Japanese interests in Manchuria and Northern Korea. Therefore the negotiations which Adolph Joffe, representative of the Moscow soviet, is carrying on with the Peking government, is being watched closely in Japan.

Japan has diplomats attached to the consulate in Vladivostok empowered to negotiate with the Chita government when it shows an inclination to resume conversations.

GOSSIP IN WASHINGTON

Daily Comings and Goings of Great and Near Great in National Capital

BY THE OBSERVER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

(Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The old saw, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," should be revised to read: "All work and no play makes sick Senators." Two of the Senate's hardest workers—Senator Curtis of Kansas and Senator Sheppard of Texas—are paying the price of unremitting toil with illness.

The Kansan's duties as Republican whip keeps him in the Senate chamber at all times during sessions, watching every move of the Democrats and rounding up Republican Senators for votes. After finishing with morning committee meetings and a full day on the floor, Senator Curtis must attend to his official and personal correspondence, which is particularly heavy. Senator Curtis loathes a drone, but his diligence has resulted in an upset digestive system. Senator Sheppard is one of the "grinds" on the Democratic side of the aisle. A few years ago he held a perfect record on responding to roll calls and he has missed few votes since his Senatorial career began. Despite a fondness for golf, which Senator Curtis lacks, Senator Sheppard has not sought fresh air and exercise often enough to ward off an incipient case of nervous breakdown.

To the surprise of the recipients, mail arriving in Washington from the secretariat of the League of Nations in Geneva bears French instead of Swiss stamps. Inquiry reveals the reason—French postage is so much cheaper than Swiss that the "societe des nations" is putting itself to the trouble of shipping pouches of its mail for foreign lands to its Paris office on the Rue Vernet to be forwarded from there. And thus the Swiss postoffice loses a very good customer. The postage in Switzerland is 8 cents against our 5 cents for foreign letters and 4 cents against our 2 cents for interior letters, excepting those inside a 10-kilometer limit. Much to the annoyance of the Swiss government instead of increasing receipts the new rates have caused a big deficit.

The most abused in the ranks of organized labor are the postal employees who get less money for overtime than they do when working the regular daily shift. As the result of an investigation, ordered by P. M.-Gen. Works, it has been disclosed that postal employees actually receive on an average of 16 cents less an hour when they are forced to work overtime. The Postmaster-General has set about to correct the practice and will ask Congress for an amendment to the law responsible for the odd situation. Under existing law, the rate of the regular pay for postal employees is computed on the basis of 306 days of eight hours each. Thus a postal clerk getting $1800 a year would receive 73.53 cents an hour. Overtime, however, is figured on the basis of 365 days which entitles the overtime worker to only 61.64 cents an hour.

Jules J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, and dean of the Washington diplomatic corps, will arrive in the Capital next week, primed with instructions from his government for dealing with the ship liquor question as far as it relates to French vessels entering American ports. Ambassador Jusserand left France where he has been for several months on leave, before Judge Hand of New York handed down his decision, so the expected protest of France of any attempt to deprive French seamen of their wine ration will not materialize. The Ambassador however is expected to take up with Secretary Hughes other phases of the Daugherty liquor ruling which might affect the welfare of French shipping.

EUROPEANS TO SETTLE IN MEXICO

Jewish Society Seeks to Establish Colony for War Sufferers and Refugees

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, (Mex.) Oct. 28. Several thousand Jews from European countries are to be colonized in Mexico, if the negotiations which M. S. Gondelberg of Rotterdam, Holland, has under way with the Mexican Government are successfully accomplished. It is stated that Gondelberg represents a Jewish society which plans to provide new homes in this country for members of their race who have suffered reverses as a result of the war. While the government authorities here have taken no official action on the application for permission to establish the proposed colonies, it is expected that it will be granted.

Alexis Panliev, a Russian, has also applied to the Mexican government for permission to bring 4000 of his countrymen to this country and locate them upon agricultural lands in the State of Chiapas. It is stated that there is some opposition in government circles to the proposed colonization of Russians for the reason that it feared that they would bring with them Bolshevist ideas and spread them among the native people of Mexico. Panliev says that the Russians who are seeking to emigrate to Mexico will bring enough money with them to buy their own farm equipment and to establish themselves comfortably in their new homes. He denies that they are infected with communism.

DENY INDIAN RIOTING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) Oct. 14.—Reports that Yaqui Indians have turned incendiaries and burned several railroad bridges in Sonora along the Southern Pacific de Mexico line have been denied by an American passenger arriving from Culiacan. Engine trouble was given as the cause for several hours, delay in the arrival of the morning train.

INSPECT YUMA COTTON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Oct. 28.—Horace Dunbar, soil and plant expert of Los Angeles, is making an investigation of the cotton and alfalfa crop conditions on the Yuma project. Mr. Dunbar's survey was arranged by several prominent local business men.

American Will Lay Out Parks in Mexico City

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—City planning along modern lines is to be done here by George E. Kessler known as a landscape artist. He of St. Louis, Mo., who is widely has arrived here for the purpose of making a study of civic conditions in some of the newer suburbs where the opportunity is offered for laying out parks and establishing beauty spots. It is stated that this work will be done on a large scale and that later on the municipal authorities of Mexico City may extend the beautifying improvements to the many small parks and plazas in the city itself. The most beautiful park in Mexico is that of Chapultepec which surrounds the castle of that name where the presidents of the republic make their home a part of the year. Mr. Kessler will inspect this park and make suggestions for its further beautification, it is announced.

NEW WATER ROUTE TO ASIA MINOR FOUND

GERMAN STEAMER NAVIGATES CANAL; AVOIDS HOSTILE BALKANS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAMBURG, Oct. 28.—A small German steamship has completed the voyage from Hamburg to the Caspian Sea by way of the Volga and the Small Marinski Canal connecting the river with the Gulf of Finland as far as Petrograd.

The voyage means to Germany the discovery of a new route to Asia Minor, avoiding the hostile Balkans and possibly realization of the dream of German hegemony in the Near East.

The utility of the new waterway depended largely upon the canal's navigableness which is now proved possible.

RECORD POTATOE CROP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 14.—Pima county's potato crop smashed all records this year, according to a report issued by A. B. Ballantyne, acting director of the State university's extension service. Thirty-one farmers of Pima county grew 508,216 pounds of spuds in 1922, the report states. A larger acreage is expected to be planted to potatoes next year.

ROYAL MATCH TO END QUARRELS?

Marriage May Again Unite King's Household

Prince of Wales on Outs With Lascelles

Went About Too Much With Lady Mulholland

BY SIDNEY THATCHER

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

(Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The engagement just announced of General Lord Cavan to Lady Joan Mulholland is the most interesting of the season and the subject of much gossip in London society.

Lady Joan, Lady-in-waiting to Princess Mary, is the widow of one war hero, the niece of another, Lord Byng, and is now about to marry a third—the Earl of Cavan having won fame in Flanders, Picardy and Italy during the great war for his courage and skill in command successively of a division, corps and whole army. He is a childless widower fifty-seven years old last week. Lady Joan is thirty-four years old.

But society has another reason for its interest in the match besides its romantic background and the prominence of the couple. It is the general talk in London that the wedding is likely to patch up personal differences in court circles involving the Queen, the Prince of Wales, Princess Mary and Lord Lascelles, which the gossip of the last few months has kept very much alive. The reports have been persistent and consistent and a study of the social engagements of the younger people connected with it seems at least partial substantiation.

Forgetting for the moment the delicacy with which such subjects are discussed in England, they never appear in public print but only in the form of most vague hints—the unvarnished story heard in court circles is this:

STORY OF "BREAK"

The Prince of Wales has been a great admirer of Lady Joan Mulholland, which displeased the Queen for a time. Princess Mary and Lady Joan are the closest of friends. Lack of cordiality between the Prince of Wales and Lord Lascelles, Mary's husband, has been marked. Lord Cavan is a great friend of Lascelles, while the Prince of Wales, who saw his first war service under Lord Cavan, formed a great friendship for his chief. With the elimination of Lady Joan Mulholland as an unmarried factor with the attachment existing between the Prince and Cavan, it is hoped by society that the Queen's attitude will be altered and that the Prince of Wales and Lord Lascelles ultimately will be more cordial through the efforts of Lord Cavan.

Lady Joan Mulholland is the daughter of the late Fifth Earl of Strafford and in 1913 married the Hon. A. S. Mulholland, son of Lord Dunleath. He was killed in action late in the following year and in 1915 Lady Joan's daughter, Daphne Norah, was born.

As Lady-in-waiting to Princess Mary, she, the Princess and the Prince of Wales spent much time together. When the Prince took his first flight over London he was accompanied by Lady Joan. Being merely the daughter of an Earl and five years the Prince's senior, stories of their attachment displeased the Queen, but that never interfered with Mary's admiration for her lady-in-waiting and they often have tea alone now. The Prince, who has a marked affection for his sister, does not see her much now; probably not as much as he desires; so gossips are hoping the wedding will help things all around.

MASTER OF HOUNDS

Lord Cavan, though short and thin, goes by the army nickname of "Fatty" all because his family name is Lambart and his fellow-officers haven't forgotten that famous fat man Daniel Lambart. Though his title is Irish, Lord Cavan has no estate there. He is keen on wireless, plays a good game of tennis and likes to hunt with the Hertfordshire hounds of which he is master. Lady Joan has been often seen following that pack.

Both Lady Joan and Lord Cavan have American connections. Lady Joan is a niece of Cora, Countess of Strafford, who was Mrs. Cora Smith Colgate of New York and who married the fourth Earl of Strafford in 1898. Lord Cavan also had an American aunt and his brother and present heir is married to Adelaide Randolph, stepdaughter of William C. Whitney, once Secretary of the American Navy. Lord Cavan has been a frequent visitor to the United States since he served on the staff of the late Lord Derby when the latter was Governor-General of Canada. His last sojourn here was as military adviser to the British delegation at the recent Arms Conference in Washington. He is now in command of the great British training camp at Aldershot.

MEXICAN FOOD CROP BELIEVED ADEQUATE

LARGE YIELD OF BEANS IN REPUBLIC ASSURE NO FAMINE CONDITION

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTEREY (Mexico) Oct. 28. Reports made to the Department of Agriculture of Mexico show that the total production of beans this year is approximately 500,000,000 pounds, or about thirty-five pounds for each inhabitant of the country. The big yield is regarded as an assurance that there will be no famine condition in any part of the republic for the next twelve months, as beans have from time immemorial been the principal food of the native masses of people.

The chile pepper crop is also large, which is an added assurance that the food requirements of the Indian population will be satisfied. Although the corn crop is only about 10,00,000 pounds, it will go a long ways toward supplementing the regular bean and chile pepper diet of the people, it is explained.

Added to these food products are about 40,000,000 pounds of rice and about 150,000,000 pounds of wheat. Taken altogether the domestic supply of foodstuffs for the next twelve months is sufficient for the country's needs, it is asserted.

JAPAN INVADED BY CAFETERIA

Doughnuts Feature Edibles at Nipponese Help Yourself Cafe

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The American doughnut and cafeteria have invaded Japan.

H. Hoshi, head of the Hoshi Pharmaceutical Company, Ltd., of Tokio, a Columbia graduate, at the Hotel Pennsylvania said he had introduced both, with marked success, together with the ice cream soda fountain.

His cafeteria was the first in the islands. Through native, American trained, chefs, he said, his help yourself cafe carried open challenge to the world for its doughnuts, apple pie and coffee. Only in Seattle had he found coffee approaching his.

PRESERVES BRAINS OF STARVED

Chicago Scientist Makes Trip to Russia for Material for Study

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Traveling thousands of miles, crossing the Atlantic and penetrating the heart of soviet Russia and undergoing all kinds of privations and hardships, Dr. George B. Hassin, a nerve specialist, returned today with the brain of a man who died of starvation.

Coming by express he has the brains of six men who died of typhus. In the United States, where sanitary conditions have been developed to a high degree, there is no typhus. Neither is there actual starvation. Typhoid fever is common, but typhus, which is a brain disease, is practically unknown here. Typhoid is an intestinal affliction, but the germ of typhus, which has not yet been discovered, is supposed to be carried by insects.

Dr. Hassin secured the brain of a man who fell dead of starvation in a street in Petrograd. He paid the staggering sum of $5,000,000 rubles for it, but translated into terms of American money this amounts to about $10. Dr. Hassin says many persons die of hunger in Russia, but there are no proper means of preserving the brains of these victims for study. He did not intrust his specimen to the express service, but carried it all the way home. He says conditions are slightly improved in Moscow and Kiev, but they are terrible in Odessa and the Volga region.

INVESTIGATE REPORTS OF DEATH CRIES

Ohio Officials to Question Girl Said to Have Heard Sounds of Murder

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Oct. 28.—Sheriff Ostrander and deputy sheriffs of Lake county tonight announced they are going to question a young woman living near the woods where the mutilated body of Mrs. Hazel Burns was found late Wednesday buried in a shallow grave, regarding a report that the woman had heard screams from the direction of the woods early Wednesday morning. Another neighbor, who gave the information to the Sheriff, said the girl had told of being awakened by shrieks of terror.

Cleveland detectives at the same time announced a search for the diary of Mrs. Burns, reported to contain passages which would give a clue to the motive for the crime. Lake county authorities were also searching the scene of the murder for a shovel and gun which are thought to have been used in the murder.

Search is also being made by Lake county authorities for $2700 which Burns claims he hid in his Cleveland home and which was not found in a search by authorities, and for diamonds which Mrs. Burns was said to have worn. Authorities now incline to the belief that possibly Mrs. Burns might have had the money and diamonds in her possession Wednesday and may have been the victim of highwaymen.

HELP EX-SERVICE MEN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 28.—Eight associations of ex-service men and women, representing the allied association of ex-service organizations, have been granted exclusive grandstand concession rights for the State Fair here this year. Maj. E. S. Linton has been appointed superintendent of concessions.

WOLF ONLY POLICE DOG

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, Oct. 28.—The giant wolf of Grand county which has been reported as raiding fishermen's camps and stealing meat from ranchers is not a wolf but a thoroughbred German police dog said to be the property of Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps of Denver. The dog had been farmed out on a ranch near Parshall for training purposes and heard the call of the wild.

CHILD CRUSHED BY AUTO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 28.—Mildred Groscha, aged 11, was killed when a motor car, the driver of which said he was attempting to avoid striking several children playing on the street, upset and crushed her beneath it. It was the 109th motor car fatality in St. Louis county this year.

CONTRIBUTIONS ARE ANNOUNCED

Republicans Show Receipts of $720,738

Democrats Announce Gifts of $80,512 to Party

Brother of Secretary Mellon Contributed $25,000

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright, 1922, Public Ledger.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Reports of the Republican National Committee and the Senatorial and Congressional committee of the same party filed with the clerk of the House today show receipts amounting in all to $720,738.07. The disbursements were $644,838.84.

Contributions in excess of $100 with many running to $1000 and over, furnished by far the largest part of the campaign funds. The receipts of the Republican National Committee were $431,444.43, as against $80,512.50, shown by the Democratic committee in the report filed yesterday.

The Republican National Committee spent $420,821.47 as against $79,806.77 spent by the Democratic committee. According to the other two reports, the Republican National Senatorial Committee received contributions in the amount of $136,069.47 and spent $103,693.12, while the Republican Congressional Committee received $163,224.17 and spent $120,514.85.

TIME UP TODAY

By tomorrow night the last of the reports on expenses preliminary to the general election must be filed in accordance with the Corrupt Practice Act. The Democratic Senatorial Committee, the Anti-Saloon League and the Association Against Prohibition are expected to make reports at that time.

A fourth statement filed by the Republican organization covered the expenses of the speakers' bureau, which amounted to $11,257. All of the $17,000 received by the bureau was taken out of the funds of the other committees.

The largest individual contributor to the national committee was R. B. Mellon of Pittsburg, a brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, who gave $25,000.

CABINET CONTRIBUTES

While President Harding was not mentioned among the contributors several members of his cabinet as well as others in responsible positions in the government gave considerable funds. Secretary Hoover contributed $5000 to the national committee; Postmaster-General Work $1000.

Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation, gave $2500 to the Senatorial committee and $1250 to the national committee. Charles B. Warren, ambassador to Japan contributed $1000 to the national committee while Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair gave $500, Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger $250 and Solicitor-General Beck $300. Another contributor who has frequently been mentioned for a position was R. B. Creager of Brownsville, Tex., one of the President's close friends.

ROCKEFELLERS ON LIST

Both of the Rockefellers contributed liberally. John D. Rockefeller gave $15,000 to the national committee and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., $10,000. To the Senatorial committee they each gave an additional $750.

Other leading contributors were William Wrigley, Jr., of Chicago, who gave $10,000 to the national committee and $5000 to the Senatorial committee; David Baird, Camden, N. J., $10,000; Dr. S. G. Kennedy, Tulsa, Okla., $10,000; George Eastman, Rochester, N. Y., $7950; F. B. Patterson, Dayton, O., $7500; Dorothy Patterson Juda, Dayton, O., $8875; Julius Fleishmann, New York, $5000. The number of those contributing $1000 and over ran a little more than 100.

BEVERIDGE PICKED TO BE ELECTED

Friends Say He Will Defeat Former Governor by Thirty Thousand

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—Albert J. Beveridge is now picked by most of the Indiana political experts to be returned an easy winner for the United States Senatorship, one week from next Tuesday. Average of the obtainable forecasts from men who ought to know what is going on places the Beveridge majority over former Gov. Samuel M. Ralston, at a shade better than 30,000.

The inner councils of the Beveridge campaign will listen to nothing short of 100,000 to the good for "Bev," as he is now hailed by Hoosierdom—and hope for a lead that will be sufficiently spectacular and impressive to convey to the nation generally the impression that Indiana agrees with Mr. Beveridge that he is foreordained to the Republican Presidential nomination within the next six years.

"I do not know 100 Republicans in the entire State who worked for the renomination of Harry New, who will fail to vote for Beveridge," is the testimony of one of Senator New's trusted lieutenants.

OIL GEOLOGISTS MEET

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, Oct. 28.—Speakers from all over the country who are authorities on oil geology will address the Denver convention of the American Congress of Petroleum Geologists which opens at the Albany Hotel next Thursday for three days.

ALLEN LOSES AGAIN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—Champion Ralph Greenleaf of the pocket billiard game, last night increased his lead over Benny Allen in their exhibition game at the Hudson Recreation Academy and now has the lead by the count of 316 to 124, with only one more block to play.

WOBBLIES GRIP MARINE UNION

Harbor Police Find Lurid Manifesto on Suspect

New Organization Steeped in Radicalism, is Belief

Arrested Man Charged With Criminal Syndicalism

Definite information that the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union, new title of the revamped International Longshoremen's Union on the Pacific Coast, is an active division of the I.W.W., was secured yesterday by the Los Angeles Harbor police. An inflammatory circular on the Portland stevedore strike, which radicals are instructed to "destroy if arrested," was found early yesterday in possession of Ronald Christie, 20 years old, arrested by Sergt. E. E. Baldwin on a charge of having violated the Criminal Syndicalism Act.

"This is an I.W.W. strike! One for all, and all for one!" declared the placard, which was signed, "Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510 of the I.W.W."

DENIED "RED" TENDENCIES

Following the break-up of the I.L.A. several months ago in which the 15,000 members were absorbed by the M.T.W.I.U., the leaders of the movement strongly denied that the organization was in any way connected with the radical element. The finding of the circular yesterday was the first concrete evidence secured by the authorities that the organization of the M.T.W.I.U. was the first move in preparation for a widespread radical movement in Pacific Coast shipping circles.

The "red" placard appeals to the I.W.W. and longshoremen of the Pacific Coast to stand by the strikers. "Longshoremen, Don't Scab! Sailors, Don't Handle Cargo in Portland! and Firemen! Don't Make Steam!" are some of the blatant captions.

OUT ON STRIKE

The circular charges the steamship operators and stevedoring companies with discrimination against the dock workers by a "fink hall" system and ends with the boast that 98 per cent of the waterfront workers in Portland are out on strike.

Christie, in whose possession the placard was found, is said by the police to have been in the vanguard of "Reds" who are moving south after being driven out of Portland. He walked into the Los Angeles Harbor police station and asked for lodging.

Upon being asked where he was from, Christie replied that he was "from the north" and that he had left his I.W.W. card "up there." Upon being searched, however, the Red membership booklet was found hidden in his right stocking.

Idaho Busy in Annual Torpedo Target Practice

While other dreadnaughts of the Pacific Fleet took their usual week-end holiday yesterday, the U.S.S. Idaho was busy in her annual torpedo target practice, going through difficult maneuvers off San Clemente, assisted by the destroyers Woodbury and Young and the F5-L seaplane No. 5. The Idaho has just returned from annual overhaul at Puget Sound and she has yet to complete her fall gunnery program. Unofficial reports of yesterday's exercises indicate that she will again be at the top this season in gunnery competition.

Early yesterday morning the eight R-type submarines of Division 9, under convoy of the tender Ortolan, left Santa Cruz for their home base under command of Lieut.-Commander Frederick C. Sherman. It will be the last cruise of the undersea fighters before they go to Panama with the Pacific Fleet in January, it was said yesterday.

The giant Navy tanker Cuyama arrived from San Diego early this morning on her way to Mare Island for overhaul. The Cuyama, with the tanker Kanawha, will accompany the fleet to Panama, it has been indicated, to supply the dreadnaughts and destroyers with fuel while at maneuvers.

Happy Crowd of Southland Folk Arrive Home

A happy crowd of Southern California tourists arrived from Honolulu yesterday morning on the liner City of Los Angeles, flagship of the Los Angeles Steamship Company. Capt. Hans Poulsen brought his ship in at daylight and five minutes after she was berthed at her terminal gangs of longshoremen were at work discharging her cargo of pineapples, sugar and other products from the Island Empire.

Next Saturday at noon the City of Los Angeles will sail for Honolulu on her third voyage, approximately 100 first-cabin passengers already being booked for the voyage.

Another notable arrival in shipping circles at the port yesterday was the Coast liner Harvard, bringing 400 members of the University of California Alumni Association south for the California-U.S.C. football game yesterday. Last night the former California students returned to San Francisco on the Harvard, which departed at 9 p.m., on a special sailing.

PORT NOTES

Bringing passengers and a 2400-ton cargo from Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, the Swayne & Hoyt liner West Notus arrived at Los Angeles Harbor late yesterday. Included in her varied cargo were several hundred tons of dried [illegible], dried blood for fertilizer, nuts and a large shipment of Brazilian coffee. The West Notus, commanded by Capt. K. A. Ahlin, is known as the cleanest ship on the Pacific.

The annual migration of Canadian tourists to Southern California will begin soon and this year is expected to be the heaviest movement of travelers from the Dominion in history, Hugh Brittain, assistant general passenger agent of the Admiral Line, announced yesterday.

Mr. Brittain announced that arrangements have been made to absorb the $2.50 transportation charge from Victoria to Seattle. This will permit Canadian tourists to book passage on the H. F. Alexander at Seattle for Los Angeles without any additional cost.

The 21,000-ton Cunard Line steamer Laconia will make Los Angeles Harbor a port of call on her globe-encircling cruise and is due here December 6, according to advices from the East. The monster craft has been chartered for the 32,000-mile trip by the American Express Company and will leave New York for this port on November 16.

The Laconia is one of the largest liners built since the war and the largest ship yet announced for a cruise around the world. If she calls here she will be the first Cunard liner to make this port. The vessel is 600 feet long and is equipped with passenger elevators in the first and second cabins and has accommodations for 2500 passengers in all three classes. For the world cruise the number of passengers has been limited to 500. Many passengers for the trip have been booked from Los Angeles, San Francisco and other Coast cities.

On her first trip under the house flag of the Pacific Mail, the steamer Corinto left New York for this port on the 26th inst., it was announced last night by Clay Hutchinson, general freight and passenger agent for the Pacific Mail in Southern California. The Corinto is a famous ship, being launched in Germany in 1903 as the North German Lloyd liner Admiral Von Tirpitz. She was later the American and Norwegian steamer Gov. Forbes and Caldas. On this trip she is bringing around a good-sized list of passengers and heavy cargo, Mr. Hutchinson announces.

The Corinto will go into the Panama service of the company with the steamers San Juan, Cuba and Newport, being in command of Capt. Tom Oakes, formerly skipper of the Pacific Mail steamer Point Bonita. She is similar in lines and construction to the liner Newport, being of about 3700 tons capacity.

OREGON BEATS IDAHO IN EXCITING BATTLE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 28.—Despite a thrilling aerial attack by the University of Idaho eleven, which caught the Oregon defense off its guard in the last five minutes of the game here, Shy Huntington's Eugene team won the exciting battle, 3 to 0. The only score came in the first period when Chapman, quarter, booted a place kick from the Gem Staters' 25-yard line. The threat to score made by Mathews' men in the last quarter ended when Chapman intercepted a pass in the lemon-yellow's 30-yard line.

FRY GROWING UP

Word has been received from Leigh Garnsey, manager of the Rainbow Angling Club saying that the 100,000 Silver Side Salmon, which were transported from Washington to the club's hatchery are growing rapidly. The fish have attained a size of five inches in six months. This gives promise of great fishing for club members next year.

News of Ships and Sailings at Pacific Ports

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TACOMA, Oct. 28.—The steamship Hokkai Maru, which has been loading lumber at the St. Paul mill and was due to sail today, will not get away until Wednesday.

After loading lumber at the Baker dock, the Sudbury of the American-Hawaiian Line sailed this afternoon for New Orleans. The American shifted to the St. Paul mill to load lumber.

The Northland of the Nelson Line is due at the Baker dock Monday from San Francisco with freight for Tacoma.

The Ruth Alexander sailed for San Francisco early this morning after leaving freight at the Commercial dock. The Admiral Schley is due Monday from Callao.

PORTLAND, Oct. 28.—Congestion on the municipal wharf which is proving a serious problem of late was the subject of a conference between agents of seven steamship lines with dock officials here today. Plans were discussed for stowing the freight in such a way as to accommodate larger quantities in a given space than has been done heretofore. With the gradual improvement in the longshoremen's strike situation it was expected that the congestion would be considerably relieved in the near future, according to the conferees.

The British steamer Benarty was today reported to be en route here to load a full cargo of wheat. The name of the charter was not given.

With a full cargo of wheat for Dublin, the motorship Buenos Aires departed today. Kerr, Gifford & Co. were the shippers.

The Japanese steamer Taibu Maru is expected here Monday to load a full cargo of lumber for Yokohama and Kobe.

The Matson liner Makena, now en route here from San Francisco, will load a full cargo of lumber for Honolulu.

The steamers Wahkeena, Wapama and Willamette all departed today from St. Helens with lumber cargoes for California.

ASTORIA, Oct. 28.—Carrying freight from Portland, Astoria and other ports on the river, the Japanese steamer Hankow Maru departed last night for Yokohama.

After taking on general freight at Portland and 15,000 cases of salmon at Astoria, the steamer Paul Luckenbach sailed last night for New York and Boston.

The Hammond Lumber Company's steam schooner Halco sailed this morning for Los Angeles with 1,100,000 feet of lumber.

The Japanese steamer Yoiin Maru arrived last night from Kobe and, after being fumigated here, goes to Portland.

Bringing freight, the steam schooner Annette Rolph arrived today and went to Portland.

The French steamer Iowa, the British steamer Nebraska from Puget Sound, and the American steamer Robin Adair from San Francisco are due en route to Portland.

SEATTLE, Oct. 28.—A new passenger and freight service from Puget Sound to the east coast of South America recently announced by the Shipping Board, is scheduled to start December 11, with the steamship President Hayes, A. B. Kinney of A. M. Gillespie, Inc., Northwest representatives of Swayne & Hoyt, operators of the service, said today.

Enforcement of prohibition on Shipping Board vessels makes it necessary to put forth more energetic and intelligent efforts to obtain passenger traffic, in the opinion of R. Stanley Dollar, president of the Admiral Oriental Line, who went as far as Victoria on the steamship President McKinley, which departed from here today for the Orient. In spite of failure of Americans generally to patronize their ships in the past, he said the vessels in the trans-Pacific passenger traffic had made good returns. He declared that the Shipping Board and the Admiral Oriental Line would co-operate thoroughly in interesting the American public in traveling in American ships.

The steamship Jefferson, which arrived here in tow of the steamship Medon, is to receive a new tail shaft to replace one broken a week ago in Dixon Entrance, near the boundary line between Canada and Alaska. The Jefferson will resume her Alaska run on a fourteen-day schedule November 1, it was announced.

Only 1 blk. from WESTERN AVE. and just NORTH of BEVERLY BLVD. Lot 50x145; lot undoubtedly worth $6500 and would be cheap at $6000, as the lot is UNRESTRICTED. Just think, you are paying only $1850 for a 7-rm. bungalow, 3 bedrms. and located right in the very heart of the BEST DISTRICT. Close to stores, schools, churches, best car line, etc. The house was built when materials were cheap, result, a well and solidly built house. Hardwood floors throughout. YES, IT NEEDS A LITTLE PAINT AND WALLS NEED NEW PAPER. Buyer would also have to BUILD A GARAGE. PLENTY of room for DRIVE, etc. $500 spent on freshening up this property would give you a home worth $10,000, and it would sell for that amount on RESALE. Property mortgaged now for $2750. Balance MUST BE CASH. However, we can REFINANCE the property for a small cost, on a basis of $3500 CASH PAYMENT. If you want a genuine bargain and MEAN BUSINESS, then investigate. Call or see MR. McCARTY (Exclusive Agent) with J. B. ALTHOUSE CO., 315 S. Western. Wil. 4473.

PROFITABLE, SAFE—SURE.

Investment in a good vineyard planted right and in the right spot—that's the kind of a vineyard we offer you in 10-acre units or more. Our lands are at Delano, among the without any question of doubt. Old-time vineyardists, who are amazed at the marvelous production at Delano, will corroborate this statement, and most enthusiastically, too.

Before you decide upon purchasing a vineyard, INVESTIGATE THOROUGHLY. Get all the information you can. Talk to everybody interested. Ask leading bankers and vineyardists to help you. See the various vineyards. Compare them with the vineyards at Delano.

You will find, we are confident, after a most searching investigation, that THESE VINEYARDS OFFER YOU AN INCOMPARABLE INVESTMENT — one yielding you 25% AND MORE.

Safe—Sure—Profitable.

See us or write for detailed information and for our extremely liberal "Crop Payment Plan." The earlier you act, the sooner you profit.

SIGNAL HILL
LAND OWNER'S ROYALTY FOR SALE.

Royalty is a splendid investment if you buy real, genuine Royalty from the land owner, which you can record at the Hall of Records as a deed to an interest in the mineral rights of the land. Not subdivided or multiplied land units, but royalty, which entitles you to a stated amount of the gross production of oil and gas produced from the land, payable to you EVERY THIRTY DAYS from the pipe line receipts, free of any charge or expense whatsoever.

On this basis I offer 2½ per cent royalty which pays you 2½ barrels out of each 100 barrels produced from a good lease now being developed by reliable operator. The well is now standing cemented, will be drilled in in ten days. Are you interested? Action required. Address Box 836, TIMES BRANCH, Long Beach.

BETTER GET IN ON THIS!

In order to raise enough cash to drill a few wells on this property for myself, I am compelled to sell the drilling rights on a few of these acres at only $400 per acre. Shallow ground surrounded by hundreds of producing wells and reserved years ago by an expert oil man who is known to every prominent operator in California and who is now drilling a well of his own on this same section. Property shows shales, oil sands, oil seepage and sets pretty among several monster fields and near the new oil excitement going on here now. Better lay away an acre or two. It may clean up big for you as development goes on here. If interested I'll show you this real gem of the oil fields. Address B, box 109, TIMES BRANCH.

$4000 UNDER COST.
An investigation of this advertisement will prove that this is absolutely as represented. Owner has just traded for the property and can afford to sell for $4000 less than it cost him, and as he needs money will make this sacrifice. Now listen: The property consists of a 10-year lease on a court in E. 2nd st., and the furniture alone is worth the price of the lease. There are eight singles and eight doubles, all most elegantly furnished with new overstuffed furniture, also four new pianos, including one player, and the price for all is but $12,500, on terms. The income is $1260 per mo. But quick action is absolutely necessary at the above price. See me early tomorrow morning. L. C. CONRAD, with J. CLYDE LINDSEY, 18 American ave.

REGISTRATION IS MOUNTING

All motor car registration records for the United States will be broken by California this year, according to a report just issued by the Auto Club of Southern California. There are approximately 837,000 autos registered in the State at the present time, the majority of which are in the southern and central counties. On January 1, the State of New York had registered only 812,031. The increase of cars registered this year in California over the registration of last year and the year preceding is about 30 per cent, which is greater than that ever achieved by any State in America.

STAGE SET FOR PRICE ADVANCES

Tire Manufacturers Pray for Day When the Upward Trend Will Begin

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON, (O.) Oct. 28. — The stage for the long expected advance in automobile tire prices is set but at the present time there is not the slightest indication before the public that the prices will advance and the men closest to the largest manufacturers fail to find any intimation even privately that the advance will take place.

If during the next month the larger companies move their prices upward it will be a surprise to those most closely identified with the industry in every commercial way.

Advancing prices have been discussed during the whole year. Scarcely a day passes in the rubber center but what some manufacturer decries the low prices of automobile tires which now obtain and the inability on the part of the manufacturer to make a fair profit. But the remarks of the manufacturer generally fall on sympathetic but shrinking ears. Every manufacturer here wishes frankly that prices would go up and make profits possible but everyone is fearful that if advances are made by himself he will be caught "in the cold."

CRUDE RUBBER UP

Crude rubber has advanced to more than 23 cents a pound from its low figure of 13 cents. This means an actual increase in cost of production of the average tire to more than 50 cents alone. The increased cost on larger tires is greater, in some instances as much as $.75 and $1. The advance in tubes is even proportionally greater because of the fact that tubes are almost exclusively rubber.

Months ago it was stated that when the price of crude advanced it would be the occasion for an advance in the price of tires. Now crude has advanced and other materials have likewise advanced, to-

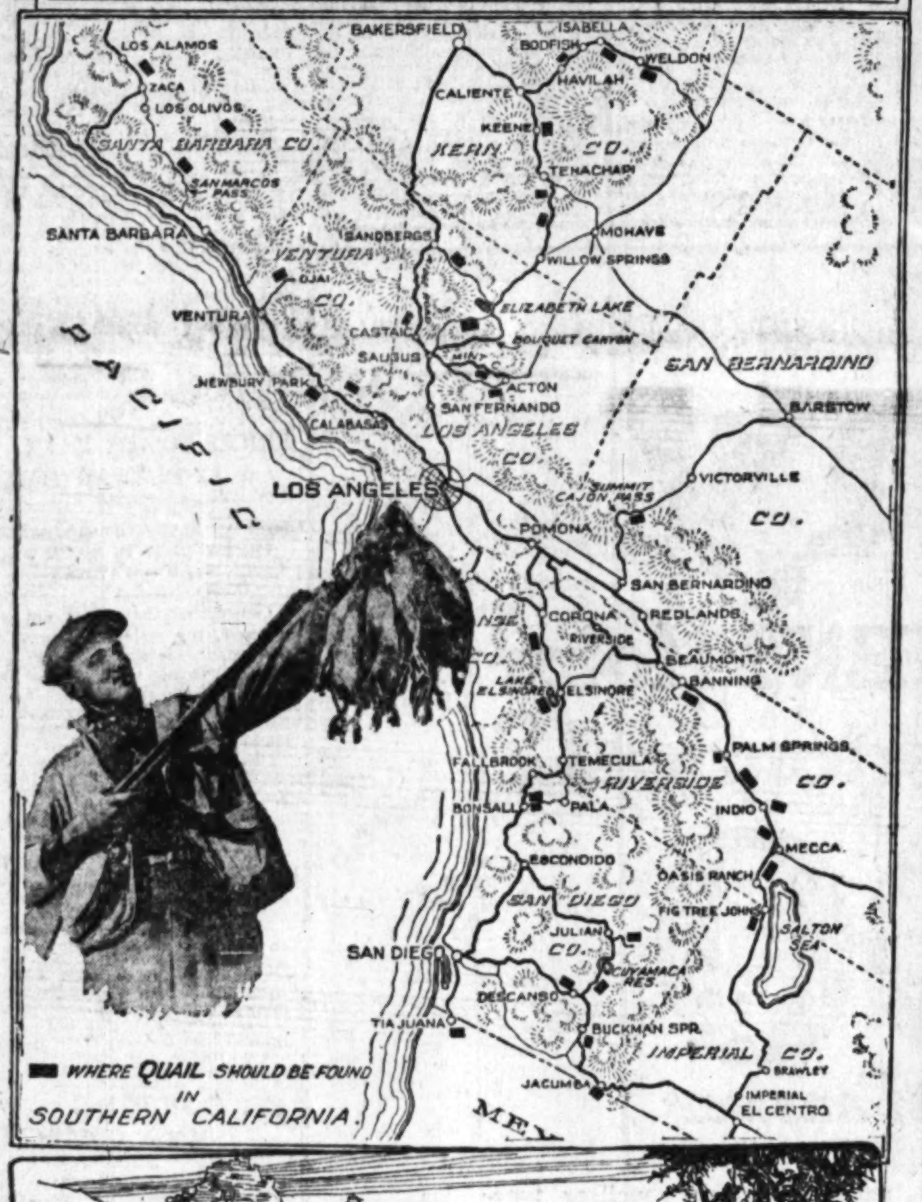
Get Your Blunderbuss Ready for the Quail Quest



Thousands of Scattergunners Will Take the Field Next Wednesday

The quail season opens November 1 for a two and one-half months' stay in Southern California. For the benefit of the galloping nimrods the Auto Club has had its scouts in the field for the past two weeks, seeking the heavy centers of quail population, and the result of their research is embodied in the map submitted herewith. The solid black rectangles show the locations where the sporty birds can be found. The hunting scenes pictured above are relics of olden days and reflect the dreams and aspirations of hunters going out this year. Bill Wheeler is the gentleman who caged the mess in the top photo.

NEW SIGNS WILL DOT HIGHWAYS

Auto Club Engaged in Most Extensive Road Posting Campaign Ever Tried

Motorists of this part of the State, and transcontinental visitors, are going to find the roads all dolled up with thousands of new signposts for the winter touring season.

The signposting department of the Automobile Club of Southern California is engaging in the most important road-marking activities of its career at the present time.

Important work is now under way on the signing of the road from Soccorro to El Paso, in Texas, and the re-signing of the Bankhead highway from El Paso into California by way of San Diego. These new signs will aid materially in bringing hundreds of touring parties to the Coast from the Southern States as far east as Florida.

Practically all new signs have been placed on 2000 miles of the National Old Trails Highway (Santa Fe Trail) leading westward from Kansas City. This work has just been completed, as well as the re-signing of the Lincoln Highway by the Southern California club. About 40 per cent of the signs have been replaced on this route. The work of replacement has been made necessary by the vandalism of motorists in "shooting-up" the metal markers along the road.

A complete signing of the Owens Valley route and the Midland Trail is now under way as far as Bishop and Keeler, Ballarat and with new signs from Ballarat to Randsburg, Barstow, Silver Lake, Needles, Parker, Cadiz and Stoddard Well into Victorville.

On the Tehachepi route the motorists of Southern and Central California are assured of brand new signposts in the immediate future, as the Auto Club trucks are now working in that district, also re-signing the Antelope Valley, Arbin, Weed Patch and Cummings districts.

Actual loss of life has been recorded in some instances on account of the defacing of road signs by travelers who take potshots at the signposts along the highways, thus allowing motorists to get lost, according to Auto Club officials. Every effort will be made this winter by the organization to check this ruthless destruction of valuable markers, particularly in the desert districts, where every sign may mean a human life.

Club officials have decided that the best results in protecting the signs can be achieved through a direct appeal to all motoring travelers for the personal co-operation of them in stopping all vandalism when observed and reporting such observations to the nearest club office.

BAD WEATHER FAILS TO HALT DRIVE-AWAY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 28. — Despite unfavorable weather the Hudson Motor Car Company started a long drive-away for Chicago and Illinois points this week. Practically all of them were enclosed coaches assuring the dealers of a comfortable drive. The drivers, eleven salesmen or dealers, were headed by J. R. Histed, president of the Hudson Motor Car Company of Illinois.

"It must be considered remarkable," said Mr. Histed, "that the call for automobiles continues. There is a continuing demand despite the fact that production records have ben shattered. The country is prosperous and the automobile is more and more a necessary tool of transportation and business. Next year should be a wonderful period."

PACKARD TO PASS SOME DIVIDENDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 28.—Action of the directors of the Packard Motor Car Company in authorizing payment of a 2½ per cent extra dividend in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent in cash on the common stock this week, is regarded as a significant indication of the return of normalcy of automotive financial conditions. Both dividends are payable simultaneously on the 31st inst. to stockholders of record at the close of business the 25th inst. The directors' announcement marks the resumption of dividend disbursement on the Packard company's common stock and will mean payments aggregating about $594,205.

SEPTEMBER BREAKS OAKLAND RECORDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Oct. 28. — September was the biggest month of the year in production and sales of the Oakland Motor Car Company, according to C. J. Nephier, general sales manager, who predicted an even greater output in October, due to introduction of the new closed models, the sedan and five-passenger coupe. Both the two-passenger coupe and the sport model are oversold, Mr. Nephier said. The production schedule for next year is considerably above that of 1922, he said, and assures employment of the full working force throughout the winter months. Of the schedule outlined for 1923 a larger per cent than ever before will be closed cars, present plans calling for 30 per cent inclosed models.

SOME GUARANTEE

"The Oakland is the only motor car that carries a guarantee of 15,000 miles against oil pumping," Says H. C. McVey, manager of the Los Angeles Oakland company.

FOUR HUGE TENTS TO HOUSE CAR EXHIBITS

First Automotive Display Here in Two Years Promises to be Greatest in Southern History

A week from next Saturday Los Angeles will do homage to an industry that has done more to shorten the distances between city and country and speed up business of every kind than any other. And yet this industry is the youngest of them all, with less than thirty years since its earliest beginning, and only about a score of years of real activity. Today, considering its importance in our daily life and the amount of money invested, this industry probably leads the world.

The Motor Car Dealers' Association of Los Angeles announces the staging of their tenth annual automobile show, beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday, November 11, and closing Sunday night, November 19. This show promises to give the people of Los Angeles and Southern California a better insight into the developments of the world's greatest industry than any previous show. In former years each manufacturer has striven to outdo his rival in radical model changes. This year the body changes where any have been made, will be slight, but improvements and additions have been made just the same and the 1923 cars prove, if proof were needed, that the industry is now producing automobiles more nearly perfect than ever before and with fewer changes in design and construction.

THE VERY LATEST

Not only will the visitor at the coming show have an opportunity of seeing the 1923 models, probably complete in all body types, but he will also see the latest in equipment, finish and upholstery; the latest in open and inclosed car-body types, and, in at least one case, a new car which will have its initial showing at the local show.

Nearly 300 passenger car models and chassis will be displayed by the various exhibitors, in addition to the trucks and accessory exhibits. The exhibit booths have been ingeniously arranged within the walls of a series of huge tents, now being erected at the big circus lot on Washington, between Grand avenue and Hill street. The tents will be floored and will be arranged to provide fully for the comfort and convenience of the tens of thousands who are interested in motor cars and kindred subjects. The main entrance will be from the Grand-avenue side, the aisles leading the visitor to the right through the maze of color and interest to final exit after having seen the entire show, near the place of entrance.

The decorative scheme has been designed by the J. D. Martin studios and scores of artists and technicians are now engaged in paint-

Quail Season to Bust Open on Wednesday

Quail shooting in the Southern counties of California this year promises to be a very lively sport. The season opens at daylight next Wednesday — November 1 — and hundreds of motoring parties are planning to be ready at that time for the big hunts.

Where to go to find quail is a question to be handled in detail this week at Auto Club headquarters by Ceph Salisbury, who is now in charge of the cub outing bureau. He can give motorists all the latest dope as he yesterday completed an inspection trip throughout the southern part of the State.

Most optimistic reports on quail limits come from Ventura, San Diego and San Luis Obispo counties. According to the Ventura dope, quail are plentiful in that district and will be found almost anywhere in the foothills. The back-country of San Diego county will provide an excellent number of limits this year.

In San Luis Obispo county quail are reported all over the eastern section of the district and in the general farming section. Dogs are needed in Kern county this year. The birds are scattered in the valleys but they will run strong in the oil field district and in the foothills and mountains.

In the Bishop district there are more quail now than there have been in three or four years. Ranchers in this section will often give permission for hunting if it is requested—but be sure to ask for it, advises the club. After the first there days the quail will take to the sage brush and a dog will be needed. The quail outlook is unusually good all through the Owens River Valley.

FIFTY STARS PER DAY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LANSING, (Mich.) Oct. 28. — Production of Star cars at the Durant plant in Lansing has reached 50 a day, according to H. M. Alger, vice-president of the Durant Motor Company of Michigan. It is expected that within another week this production will be doubled. Only touring cars are being built at this time but sedan bodies are to be added this month and the full line of open and closed jobs will be installed at the Lansing plant before the end of November.

SPEEDWAY HEAD OFF TO EUROPE

After a Line on Foreign Racing Cars

Wants to Entice Some to Indianapolis

Will Visit All the Leading Factories

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—Carl G. Fisher, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Company, announces that T. E. Myers, secretary and general manager of the Hoosier track, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on the 24th inst. The Indianapolis Motor Speedway Company is sending Mr. Myers to Europe to get a line on the prospect for European factory entries in the eleventh annual international 500-mile sweepstakes, on May 30, for 122 cubic inch cars.

European factories have raced the 122 cubic inch class this year in the French Grand Prix and the new Monza Speedway, at Milan, Italy. On the latter course, which is Europe's first attempt to duplicate the Indianapolis course, the Europeans have also had success with the ninety-one cubic inch class. These classes in European terms are known as the two and one and one and one-half litre divisions, being based on the cubic inch piston displacement of the engine.

Due to the number of European factories racing the small classes, Mr. Myers expects to have a greater number of European entries than ever before in the eleventh annual 500-mile event. On arriving in Europe he will be met by W. F. Bradley of Paris, the European representative of the Indianapolis Speedway, who will accompany him on his visits to the European factories. Mr. Myers plans to visit factories in England, France, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Italy and also to inspect the famous cement bowl at Brooklands and the new Monza track at Milan.

The Italians have permitted the German race teams to compete in their events and the Indianapolis Speedway has decided to accept entries from Germany and Austria for the coming race.

REAL BEARINGS

Bronze-backed bearings are used in the Oakland 6-44 motor, and the Oakland is the only medium-priced car to use them," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland company.

Lovely Mitzi Hajos Is a Versatile Star

Dainty Elf Uses Her Packard Car as a Dressing-room on Quick Jumps

That is to say, she dabs on some of those feminine whatnots known to the experts on make-up by certain scientific names while en route from hotel to theater. Mitzi, as the star in "Lady Billy," comes to the Mason the week of November 6.

REO'S RECORDS BUZZED AROUND

Still echoing from one end of the local automobile row to the other are the recent record-breaking achievements of Reo, one from Jackson, Amador county, the scene of the recent mine disaster, to Los Angeles, and the round trip record between this city and Phoenix, Ariz., shattered in amazing time by Charley Bigelow of this city on a road engineering trip. "Speed under difficulties evidently has much to do with influencing automobile owners as to the dependability of a car," declared Byron C. Foy, branch manager here of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, "judging from the number of people who have called here to learn more details of these two record-breaking cars."

USES HER CAR AS A DRESSING-ROOM

MUSICAL COMEDY STAR SAVES TIME BY UTILITARIAN USE OF AUTO

Mitzi Hajos, the diminutive musical comedy star of "Lady Billy," coming to the Mason Operahouse next week, uses a Packard automobile for a dressing room. She saves considerable time in "making up" for her many strenuous parts while en route to the theater.

The traveling dressing room has proven a great success, says Mitzi. She has estimated that it takes at least a half hour to get from her hotel to the theater and this time which was formerly wasted is now used to advantage in her preparation for the stage.

"Every minute is valuable," says the elfish star. "When I arrive at the theater I find there are so many persons waiting to see me and so many little things to do that by having my face ready for my first appearance is a great saving and relief. Who says the automobile is not a great boon to mankind?"

PRICES LOWER THAN IN PREWAR TIMES

THIS, IN SPITE OF THE MANY IMPROVEMENTS MADE ON VARIOUS CARS

Considering the values put into them, the prices of several of the standard motor cars are materially lower today than at any other time in the history of the automobile, says J. S. Woollacott, assistant general manager for Harold L. Arnold, Hudson and Essex distributor. That the public appreciates this fact, he adds, is reflected in the tremendous sales of automobiles this year.

"Today, two years after his downward trend started, many automobile manufacturers are quoting prices which, when improvements made in the last five years are considered, are actually lower than purewar leves.

"The latest price reduction both on Hudson and Essex cars, made September 22, is the third substantial one put in effect by the Hudson Motor Car Company within twelve months. In that period prices of Hudson cars have been reduced from $170 to $370, dependent on model, and prices of Essex cars from $150 to $250.

BUICK FIGHTING MANY OBSTACLES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FLINT, (Mich.) Oct. 28.—With Buick producing more than 700 cars a day, transportation plants at Flint are presenting new and interesting phases of activity. In reaching its peak output of all time Buick is having to fight railroad embargoes and car shortage. These obstacles have affected both incoming materials and outgoing automobiles. Motor trucks are being employed in uncommonly long cross-country runs. One recent shipment came into the plant by truck all the way from Bristol, Ct. The truck traveled 502 miles to deliver a load of brass for radiator cores so that production would not be held up. Favorable weather for driveaways has expedited Buick deliveries, materially.

NEW SALES DIRECTOR IN CHALMERS LINE-UP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 28.—Arthur E. Baker, vice-president of the Chalmers Motor Car Company, announces the appointment of Earl B. Wilson, as director of sales of the Chalmers organization. Mr. Wilson entered the motor car industry as a member of the Buick Motor Car Company staff where he served both as a retail and wholesale executive. In 1915 he was made sales manager of Buick's Chicago branch. Later he was appointed director of sales of the Buick, with headquarters at Flint. After leaving the Buick organization and until the present time, he served in a sales managerial capacity for the Willys corporation.

The General Tire and Rubber Company, following announcement of its new balance sheet for the first three quarters of a year showing great improvement in cash and surplus position has announced that contracts have been let for the buildings which will make possible the doubling of the capacity of the plant.

Three wings are to be added to the plant, which together with the increased equipment placed in the present buildings will give the "leader of the independents" a capacity of more than 4000 tires daily. This is the first announcement of expansion in any of the rubber companies in the Akron district since early in 1920. The company reports that during October one of the so-called worst months in the business, orders piled up far beyond the ability of the company to fill them. The new plant capacity will be available in sixty days according to the contracts which have been signed.

During the past week several important changes in personnel have been made in the smaller companies here.

W. A. Johnston, who founded the Rubber Products Company in 1906 and has since been its president, has resigned and has been replaced by C. C. Schutz, long identified with the company. The reasons for the change are not well understood in the rubber industry although it is believed that Johnston will devote more of his time to his varied interests.

Distribution of King Eight is Announced

Southern California will shortly have representation of the King Eight motor car of a permanent nature, according to an announcement made just before leaving for San Francisco by Max Arnold, well known automobile man and California distributor for "America's First Eight."

Arnold left Los Angeles Wednesday night after making a complete survey of business and automobile distribution throughout the southern half of the State. He commented enthusiastically over the possibilities for future development and expansion of the entire industry as well as his own products, stating that "business in California and particularly here never was in better shape than it is at the present time."

Arnold received the appointment as King distributor for the State in preference to a number of other prospective distributors some time ago, but has spent a great deal of his time in allotting dealerships in northern California and attending to his own business connections in San Francisco, regretting that King motor cars have had no representation as yet in this territory.

He was recently appointed northern California distributor for the Templar line as well, and spent some time in conference here with Leland S. Foulke, Southern California Templar distributor, over general business conditions.

SHOWROOMS ARE SCENE OF SEETHING ACTIVITY

FITE CORPORATION REPORTS MUCH INTEREST IN THE NEW MODELS

The showrooms of the Robert P. Fite Corporation, which occupies the Chevrolet Block, have been the scene of much activity during the past week—the occasion being the display of the recently-arrived 1923 models of the Chevrolet, according to information given out by W. H. Curtis, general manager of the corporation.

"From Saturday," said Mr. Curtis, "the opening day for the new superior Chevrolet, up to the present, our plant has been literally packed with purchasers, prospective purchasers, and well wishers of the new car.

"The feature of the car that received the most expressions of enthusiasm was the new body design. The long, smooth lines of the slightly higher hood seemed to please all who looked the model over."

HEAT UNWELCOME

Gas energy, according to Byron C. Foy, manager of the local branch of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, exists in three forms—light, heat and power. In a gas lamp we want light. In a gas engine we want power. In neither case do we want heat. One of the most remarkable achievements of the new Reo six motors, as well as the fours used in the famous Speed Wagon, according to Foy, is the absence of heat by the correct application of carburetion and cooling, a combination of both.

SILVER CLOUDS LINE THE SKY

Toledo organization is the latest of several of the chief factories to indorse the flat rate of charges for specific operations. As Mr. Willys points out "very few of us would have our houses repaired or repainted or our furniture upholstered without an estimate from the carpenter or the painter. The flat rate system applies the same reasoning to motor car repairs."

W. C Durant announced this week that the contract has been let for the construction of another factory in Flint, containing 516,000 square feet of floor space, for the manufacture of the new Star car. This was Flint's first intimation that it had been selected as the site for another of the Durant enterprises. Recently Mr. Durant began the construction there of a plant for the manufacture of the Flint car, which is to be the product of the new Flint Motor Company, a subsidiary of Durant Motors, Inc. Mr. Durant says that the present Star plants at Lansing, Elizabeth N. J., and Long Island, are inadequate to supply the demand for the Star. When the new Star and Flint plants are completed next May, the two will employ 8000 men.

The next eighteen months of the motor car industry were divided into three periods by Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company of Cleveland, in his address this week to the Purchasing Agents' Association of Detroit. He declared that the regular semiannual survey of the motor car industry made by his company has already partially answered the query concerning how many dealers will survive a period of keen competition.

In outlining his three periods Mr. Jordan has put as first the time of easy business for all manufacturers who have already organized their inclosed body production; the second period the time of keen competition with price reductions on closed cars, due to the efforts of the manufacturers to attain closed car output, and third, the period of rapidly rising labor costs, and labor difficulties due to an approaching secondary inflation brought about by the disinclination of labor to accept wages that are offered.

"If any man would like to find out what dealers will survive in the industry," said Mr. Jordan, "it is only necessary for him to discover those who have actually been able to handle what is rapidly becoming a time-payment business. Eighty per cent of the cars sold at retail are sold on a time basis and practically every sale involves a trade. This means a close connection between the banker and the dealer. Whenever the connection has been established the dealer will survive if he is a good business man. Where it has not been established he will fail."

Reo Motor Car Company has a new building nearing completion which will house its maintenance division consisting of plumbers, electrecians, carpenters, masons and repair men. These maintenance departments have been scattered about the plant in various places. By the first of the year the whole division will be housed under one roof.

One of the very largest boatload shipments to leave a Detroit automobile plant arrived in Duluth this week when the steamer North Star carried 214 Buicks. The shipment was in charge of W. R. Stephens, sales manager of the Pence Automobile Company of Minneapolis, and was composed entirely of closed models. It was the fourth boatload of Buicks that has been delivered at Duluth during the past five weeks.

At Duluth the boat was met by Buick dealers of the Minneapolis territory, the cars were apportioned and driven to destination. Before the end of the week they will be in the hands of owners. Mr. Stephens said, every one already being sold.

IN OPTIMISTIC MOOD

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 28.—That the immediate future holds great promise for manufacturer and dealer is the confident prediction voiced by H. R. Doering, vice-president and sales manager of Rauch and Lang, manufacturers of R. and L. electrics at Chicopee Falls, who spent some time in Detroit this week. Mr. Doering is on a tour of the country and declared everywhere he had been he had seen unmistakable signs of improved business conditions that necessarily will be reflected in the automotive industry.

PASTEBOARDS GO ON SALE

With reservations for tickets pouring into the offices of the Los Angeles Speedway Association and the points designated as ticket offices in several sections of the city by A. M. Young, secretary-manager of the association, for the 250-mile Thanksgiving Day classic race meet on the Beverly Hills bowl, several additional entries were announced as being added to the already long list for the race by Young yesterday.

According to his statement, it begins to look as if the limit placed on the entries by the contest board of the American Automobile Association, governing all championship events, of twenty cars, will not be sufficient to accommodate the drivers who have signified their intention of entering, and it is indicated as well that the crowd to witness the event will break all attendance records that the local track has ever known.

News that some of the speed kings, preparing their mounts for the event, have turned out for several practice spins on the local track, brought flocks of interested spectators to the site, but many of them found that the trips were made in vain, for no set practice hours have been announced because of the uncertainty of work on the cars.

It is known that, despite the fact that the entry list has not yet been made public, a majority of the drivers entered are working here in Los Angeles on their cars, and appearance of the cars in several places has created no end of interest among the many thousands of automobile owners who are necessarily racing fans.

Young announced yesterday that tickets were obtainable at the offices of the association, at H. H. Dyas headquarters, and at the Los Angeles branches of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Reports from these points indicate that the demand for tickets is widespread, and a corps of clerks is being kept busy making reservations for those who make their demand for seats early.

RATTLES ARE SIGN OF CAR'S OLD AGE

"Keep out the rattles! They are a sign of old age in a motor car."

That is the advice of F. W. Shryer, superintendent of service for Harold L. Arnold, Hudson and Essex distributor, who directs particular attention to spring shackles, for the reason that side wear at these points is one of the potent factors leading to lumber-wagon rattles that offend the ear of the car owner.

"The exclusive feature of Essex spring shackle arrangement gives results that never fail to please owners," he explained. "They have hardened and ground surfaces which, when kept properly lubricated, provide a long and satisfactory service. When wear makes an adjustment necessary it is effected by the mere turning of a nut."

Rickenbacker 6
A CAR WORTHY OF ITS NAME

Why Two Flywheels Instead Of One?

FLYWHEEL—"a heavy wheel whose weight resists sudden changes in speed, thus securing uniform motion." Look it up in the dictionary yourself.

Does one flywheel secure uniform motion or vibrationless power? NO. That's why Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker de signed this master motor with TWO flywheels. One at each end of the crankshaft.

Two flywheels hold the crankshaft down into the bearings and prevent "whipping" or vibration of the shaft at high speed. Two flywheels— that's why Rickenbacker Six has NO period of vibration.

A supreme achievement in motor design. In all America no car like this. Rickenbacker has led the way—others will follow.

"If you'll try it, you'll buy it."

Studebaker

VETERANS make amazing demonstration of reliability—

On Monday and Tuesday of last week nine veteran Studebaker BIG-SIX cars competed in an economy reliability contest to Big Bear Valley and return. The nine cars have a combined grand total of more than 1,000,000 miles, equal to more than 1000 round trips to San Francisco or forty trips around the earth.

The route of the run was by way of Mill Creek Canyon and the steep Clark grade to Big Bear Valley. The cars returned over the Rim of the World road by way of Lake Arrowhead and Watermen Canyon.

Seven of the cars finished with a perfect score for the 239 miles of travel, ninety miles of which are over mountain roads with steep grades that twist around hair-pin turns over paths that are rutted and pitted deep with chuck holes.

These old veterans of the roads were borrowed from owners and entered in competition by Studebaker dealers of Southern California. The oldest one has a record of more than 350,000 miles. Its regular service is hauling a ton load of newspapers twice a day to Santa Barbara and intermediate points. On Sundays it drags a trailer with another ton load. Its partner in service has gone more than 250,000. Both made perfect scores.

Three of the cars were taken directly out of rent service for the trip. Another did months of hard work on the deserts for the Sheriff's office of San Bernardino county. Every one has an interesting history of hard work, continuous operation over periods of from two to three years and most gratifying records of economy.

The winner of the contest has traveled 95,000 miles. It made a perfect score and averaged 18.5 miles per gallon of fuel. All of the cars made each of the five controls on time at a better speed than the average driver maintains on highway or mountain roads. Just two suffered penalties. One stopped nine minutes to clean a gasoline line, while the other spent twelve minutes repairing a brake connection that was torn loose.

On each car rode an observer appointed from a competing car and the contest was refereed by George Stephenson, Western technical representative of the A.A.A.

No more convincing demonstration of Studebaker reliability could be asked. These old veterans added to the reputation of Studebaker which has grown steadily for seventy years. This reputation was gained through skilled workmanship, the careful selection of the best steels and materials, a continuous development of engineering design and a consistent offering of high intrinsic value at fair prices.

When you have driven a Studebaker Satisfying Six and felt the abundance of reserve power, sensed the comfort of its travel, learned the simplicity and ease of its handling and gained an appreciation of the sturdiness of its light weight construction you will understand how these old cars could accomplish such amazing results and breed the confidence that inspired the contest. You will then know the reason why Studebaker owners are so intensely enthusiastic over the performance of their Satisfying Sixes.

We invite you to take a Studebaker ride. We will send a car to your door. Telephone us what time will suit your convenience.

ALPINE CLUB A SUCCESS

Many Easterners Join in Annual Camp in Canadian Rockies, But None from Los Angeles

BY ETHEL C. McDONALD

The annual camp of the Alpine Club of Canada, held at Palliser Pass, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, this summer, has made history in this region for the year 1922. The site chosen was forty-five miles from Banff, the headquarters of this mountaineering club, in practically a new region and quite unknown to the general public.

The outlying camp at North Kananaskis Pass, eight miles distant from the main camp, was in a district even more remote than the one in which the main camp was held, and, until this summer few parties had been in, and only those who had taken their own guide and pack train.

NOTEWORTHY FEATS

What the club accomplished this summer, is on a par with its previous record, which has from the beginning done feats worthy of note, feats that have called the whole world's attention to the club, and its work is recognized everywhere. This was particularly true of the club's standing at the Alpine Congress of the Allied Nations, held at Monaco in May 1920, when the Alpine Club of Canada came second only to France in its exhibits. This is a fact—considering the club was only founded in 1906—to be justly proud of; a fact also for commendation to its director and founder, Arthur O. Wheeler, and his coworker, S. H. Mitchell, secretary-treasurer.

The route to camp was via the the Banff-Mt. Assiniboine walking or riding tour camps, Eau Claire Fishing Camp and Trail Centre, from where this now well known route was left for the last lap of the three-day trip; fourteen miles to Palliser Pass. The organization and efficiency with which the Palliser Pass camp and the Kananaskis camp were run was absolutely incredible. Pack trains left Trail Centre (the transportation and mail center for Palliser Pass and Assiniboine daily, and from the main Alpine Club camp to Kananaskis Pass as often as parties wished to leave.

The Alpine pack train left Trail Centre for Banff, and from Mt. Assininboine to Banff, four times a week; covering a mileage over a hundred miles. This transportation system facilitated traveling in this district more than others, where the trains run only twice a week.

These camps of the walking and riding tour which were used enroute are permanent camps of the Banff-Mt. Assiniboine Tour, which Mr. Wh[illegible]r inaugurated under the aus[illegible] of the Alpine Club of Canada in 1920. These camps are comfortable and the management and meals excellent. Heretofore only members of the Alpine Club of Canada could penetrate into the heart of these great hills, unless parties took their own guide and pack-train. Comparatively few, however, left the beaten routes on acount of the heavy expenses incurred and often lack of comfort. Mr. Wheeler opened this tour that the general public might has an easy access, at a moderate cost into these hills—hills still in their virgin beauty, many miles from a railway and civilization.

MOVE FROM LOS ANGELES

This annual camp of the Club is well known to many Americans, and the members come as far east as New York, Philadelphia and Boston year after year. So far we have had no one in camp from Los Angeles, though possibly if people in this city knew more of this mountaineering club and the lure and charm of the Canadian Rockies there would no doubt be a few who would avail themselves of a holiday such as this club affords. There are members in San Francisco, but nature lovers in Los Angeles have yet to penetrate into the heart of these great hills with members of the club.

There were about one hundred in camp this summer, less than usual on acount of it taking three days to get in and three days to get out, but, it seems a pity so few take advantage of an outing such as the Alpine Club affords, that those involved in heavy professional, scientific or literary work throughtout the year do not set apart some time out of the twelve months to rest and play in these great hills of Canada; thereby gaining added strength mentally and physically from these primeval regions.

Motor of Wills Sounds Like That on Plane

One of the "outdoor sports" of Marysville, the home of C. H. Wills & Co., is watching visitors to the town suddenly prick up their ears, stop in the middle of the street, and excitedly scan the skies for airplanes. Usually the newcomers' curiosity prompts them to ask some resident where the planes are, to which the customary retort is: "That's not a bombing squadron you hear, it's the Wills Sainte Claire factory."

The explanation is simple. The unmuffled exhaust of the eight-cylinder Wills Sainte Claire motor running at high speed sounds the same as an airplane motor. In the motor-testing department at the factory, the exhaust from all the motors is led into a long pipe and is carried up above the roof of the plant so that the fumes of the gas will pass off harmlessly into the air. As a consequence, when a number of motors are being tested at high speed, the noise of the exhaust coming from so high in the air sounds almost exactly like a squadron of planes.

But the similarity of the Wills Sainte Claire motor to an aeronautical engine is not confined to the sound. Thoroughly satisfied that this overhead cam construction was the ideal one for his eight-cylinder motor, Mr. C. Harold Wills set himself to the task of eliminating the traditional objection — the noise. His solution of the problem—the automatic camshaft brake or equalizer by which he silenced the chattering camshaft, combined with the noiseless front-end gear construction—is one of the most ingenious features of the Wills Sainte Claire motor.

This is where members of the Alpine Club, an organization to which the lovers of nature and the thronging mountains are eligible, held its annual encampment this year.

Minor Changes in New Duesie Improve Looks

Wide and favorable comment has passed along automobile row and among scores of motorists who have seen the new models of Duesenberg straight eight-cylinder passenger cars, announced last week by A. J. Shafer of the Southern California distributing organization of Shafer-Harrison-Cleveland, Inc., and placed on display.

Several changes that were brought about by trends in motoring design, lending much to the appearance and appointments, as well as the performance of the car, can be found on careful inspection, while no radical changes have been made in any detail of construction.

"Duesenberg policy does not permit of radical changes," according to a declaration of Shafer. "Rather, it has been the idea of the factory to produce a car to meet as many requirements of exacting motorists as it is humanly possible to do, and the result, their latest models, has been entirely satisfactory to us.

"Only minor changes that nevertheless add to the transportation value of the cars, were effected, the chassis, developed on the speedway in hundreds of gruelling tests at the highest possible speeds, remaining practically the same. One of the most important mechanical changes was the raising of pressure on the already powerful four-wheel hydraulic brakes, at the same time making their action more smooth in taking hold. Duesenberg's achievement in this is looked upon as one of the greatest advancements in the history of motordom."

Tame Those Demons in Your Springs!

Those demons of spring recoil! At every bump and rut they are doing their fiendish utmost to destroy your riding comfort and shorten the life of your car.

Tame these demons with Watson STABILATORS.

Where other devices only partly succeed Watson STABILATORS completely control spring recoil in every instance. After every bump, large or small, they instantaneously take hold and meet the particular recoil energy stored in the springs with a corresponding resistance that forces a gentle return of the springs to normal.

Your comfort is safeguarded. Wrenching side-sway of the car and chattering of wheels is prevented.

Inside the STABILATOR is a brake, automatically set with each spring compression to give the exact amount of recoil control needed. No other device can give the same results.

Come to our salesrooms and see for yourself how STABILATORS work. Try a set on your car for 15 days. If you are not entirely satisfied they will be taken off and your money refunded.

Watson STABILATORS require no lubrication — will not squeak or rattle—will last as long as the car itself.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

You Wouldn't Pay $800 to $1000 for Such Things

Yet That is Exactly What You May Do, if You Don't Know the Facts

Everything that goes into or on a motor car costs money. The buyer must pay for it.

So when you consider the two types of closed cars that sell under $2000 think of what you are buying.

If you use a closed car to impress by its luxury appearance, then get the most you can for your money in the way of dome lights, vanity cases, clocks and such fittings.

But if you have first regard for car performance, look to the chassis. All reliability and low cost of operation begins there.

What Hudson Gives

The Hudson Coach is mounted on the famous Super-Six chassis. More than 120,000 owners know its reliability. And now with the new improved Super-Six motor, there is found a smoothness and motoring charm that thrills.

The $1625 you pay for the Hudson Coach goes for qualities that are essential to genuine utility. Closed bodies mounted on cars comparable to the Super-Six in performance and enduring reliability cost $800 to $1000 more than the Hudson Coach.

Confirm this by comparing open car prices.

The difference between open and closed car prices, for the most part, represents what you pay for fancy body fittings.

The Coach Endures

The Hudson Coach provides every closed car comfort. It is sturdy, long lasting, and good to look at. You will be proud of it.

But your greatest gratification will come from the performance of the car. In the Super-Six no one ever need give way when real motor performance is concerned.

CLEVELAND AUTOMOBILE COMPANY CLEVELAND

CELEBRATES A BIRTHDAY

Autocar Company of Pennsylvania Has a History Reaching Back Twenty-five Years

The Autocar Company of Ardmore, Pa., manufacturer of the Autocar motor truck, completed its twenty-fifth year on October 21. The Autocar Company is one of the few surviving pioneers. Both the company and its product have been tested in all ways through many years, in good times and bad, in peace, war and reconstruction.

Louis S. Clarke, founder of the Autocar Company and at present one of its vice-presidents, first became interested in motor vehicles in Pittsburg in September 1890. His attention was first centered on an electric vehicle but about 1895 he turned toward the gasoline engine. In 1897 Mr. Clarke combined his interests with those of William Morgan, who had been carrying on similar experimental work in Pittsburg and that combination of interests marked the real beginning of the Autocar Company. The Autocar Company was incorporated under its present name in 1899 and early in the next year moved from Pittsburg to the present location in Ardmore, Pa.

TWO DECADES AGO

When the Automobile Club of America organized the first endurance run from New York to Buffalo in 1901, the Autocar Company entered two of its Type VI cars. There was so much trouble with chains breaking on the sprocket wheel during that first endurance run that Mr. Clarke decided that chains must be eliminated before the automobile could be adequately developed for general use. As soon as he returned to Ardmore, he started designing a shaft-driven car which, only two and one-half months later, was completed and driven by him to the Automobile Show in New York.

That was the first shaft-driven car built in America and the first of its kind ever exhibited here. It created great comment.

Work on Autocar commercial trucks was begun seriously in 1907. The first commercial car was sold in 1908 and remained continuously in service for three years until it was traded by its owner for a type 21UF Autocar. The type 21UF Autocar is still in production at the Autocar plant and is still in great demand. It and the type 21UG are both equipped with the distinctive Autocar two-cylinder motor. Four different four-cylinder models, ranging from two to six tons capacity, now complete the Autocar line.

Autocar truck owners in many States have found, after such new laws went into effect, that they were able to continue normal operations with their Autocar trucks because of the correct load balance, whereas the owners of some other trucks had been obliged to reduce their loadings considerably.

ON EXHIBITION

In connection with the distinct Autocar design, it is fair to point out that the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., recently selected the four-cylinder Autocar trucks for permanent exhibition in their transportation section. Two small size working models of four-cylinder Autocar trucks were made by the Autocar Company and presented to the Smithsonian Institute, where they are now on exhibition, and the card which the institution has attached to one of them reads "Automobile truck 1921" illustrating the latest development of transportation."

In addition to its manufacturing headquarters at Ardmore, the Autocar Company now maintains and operates thirty-six direct factory branches covering the entire country. The Autocar factory branch at Newark, N. J., operates a reconditioning and warehousing department which has in active use a floor space of more than 77,000 square feet and which is necessary to take care of the requirements of Autocar users in the New York metropolitan area. Each of the Autocar branches is a permanent center of expert, personal service, built and maintained by the Autocar Company to make immediately available to Autocar users that ideal of helpful, practical service for which the Autocar Company is widely known.

FOUR TENTS TO HOUSE EXHIBIT

ing the big decorative panels and festoons which will turn the bare tents into a blaze of color and delightful array.

DIFFERENT THEMES

Each of the four big tents will be representative of some particular subject. One will be called the California tent. Using the California poppy and the mission bell as the predominating influence to typify the Golden State, overhead festoons and hanging decorative borders will carry out the general effect.

A second tent will be called the "See America First Tent." Here the playgrounds of motoring America will be represented in a series of panels, reproducing our national parks in a highly colored poster effect, while the sidewalls, hangings and festoons will be designed to carry out the same idea.

In a third tent the futuristic theme will be carried out, with the elements of earth and fire as the basic idea.

The fourth tent will be named the "Transportation Tent," the posters, panels, festoons and hangings being designed to carry out this theme in full.

Through all the tents there will be a decorative banner effect, between panels, which will be emblematic of the automotive industry, while the same plan will be carried out with the panels connecting the various tents.

OPENING HOURS

The hour of opening, aside from the first day, will be 10 a.m., with a definite closing hour of 10:45 p.m., except on Sundays, November 12 and 19, when the doors will open at 2 p.m. and close at 10:45 p.m. W warning bugle call will sound at 10:30 each night to notify exhibitors and visitors that the doors will close fifteen minutes later.

Free programs will be issued to visitors by the show committee, giving musical program, list of exhibitors and their location in alphabetical order. No advertising of any kind will appear on these programs and they will be the only program issued in connection with the show.

The show committee of the Dealers' Association, which has been working hard on the details of the event for the past two months, is entitled to great credit for the success of their endeavors. They have devoted their time without stint to plans for the show and its success will be largely due to their efforts and to those of Secretary Burt Roberts of the association, who is serving in the capacity of manager in charge of the entire show. The committee consists of the following prominent Los Angeles automobile men: Harry A. Lord, chairman; Byron C. Foy, George W. Franklin, F. G. Whipple and James C. McGill.

SPEED EFFECTIVE

Automobiles have played an effective part in the apprehension of criminals and checking crime waves, according to J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, Paige and Jewett factory branch here. The latest move of the officials heard of in this regard is the employing of cars to stop depredations of banks bandits and whisky runners by the provincial police of Saskatchewan. Development of high powered, high speed cars such as the famous Paige 6-66 enables the officers to fight the bandits "fire with fire" and give them an even break in the pursuit.

Different, but the Same Principle

Similarity Between the Dumb-bell and the Rickenbacker Flywheel

Here we have little 5-year-old Mildred Cox demonstrating the principle of the Rickenbacker famous two-flywheel design with a dumb-bell most too big for a petite motorist.

OIL IS NO GOOD IF IT IS TOO OLD

AGED LUBRICANT JUST LIKE A ROTTEN APPLE IN THE TRANSMISSION

More transmissions and differentials are ruined by being full of oil than by being empty, is the contention of D. R. McBryde, proprietor of the McBryde lubricating service, here.

"The fact of the matter is," says McBryde, "a car's transmission and differential are very seldom allowed to get empty. They may occasionally approach emptiness, but before they do the owner puts in some more lubricant. And having done that he believes he has done his duty by the car, when in reality he has made a very serious mistake.

"A great many people—you would really be surprised at the number—think that the crank case is the only place that needs draining. It is just as important to drain the transmission and differential at regular intervals. No matter how good the oil or grease the body will, in time, wear out of it. And when it does it is as useless as none as far as preventing wear is concerned.

"The object of any lubricant is to form a film over the wearing surfaces of the car's mechanism that prevents them from coming in actual contact and producing friction. The film is not sufficient to do this when the oil is once worn out. And no amount of new oil added to the transmission or differential will help the situation. The worn-out lubricant will spoil the replenishing supply just as surely as a rotten apple will spoil the whole barrelful. That is where the mistake comes in merely keeping the transmission and differential filled.

GOOD ADVICE

"If you would be looked upon as a nice steerer in city driving," says O. R. Fuller, president of the White Auto Company, distributors of the Stephens salient six. "Avoid sharp turns to either side, move into, and away from, the curb in a gradual, slow line; tell the driver behind you all you can by left-arm signals; keep to the extreme right when contemplating a right turn and swing into the main line of traffic to the center of the street before making a left turn, so that in either case you will not have to pass directly in front of another car."

Daniels Finds the Northwest in Fine Shape

Bruce Daniels, Pacific Coast representative for the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, Inc., arrived in Los Angeles a few days ago after a business tour lasting several weeks through the Pacific Northwest and the northern counties of California. Mr. Daniels, who is probably one of the best-known factory men on the Coast, reports business conditions in the Northwest in exceptionally good shape and the prospects, as reported by automobile men on the ground, are for a wonderfully successful business year in motor-car trade circles.

"The entry of Charles M. Schwab into the automotive industry through his control of the Stutz company has done more than almost anything else could do to prove to banking and financial interests throughout the United States and the world the tremendous importance of motor-car building and merchandising, and its close interconnection with every other line of endeavor," said Daniels.

"We will have four models on hand for the show and I believe each one of them will prove a surprise to those who see them in the show. The line to be shown includes a "speedway roadster," a touring model, sport model and coupe, and each one of them lives up fully to the reputation that Stutz has won through its years on the race tracks and in the hands of owners."

SOFT HAMMER

A section of bronze bushing stock makes an admirable bronze hammer, which is useful for work about the sheet metal parts of the body and fenders. By threading a steel bar, running on a nut and then placing another nut on the outside the head of the hammer is firmly retained.

Rickenbacker Flywheel Like the Dumb-bell

What have dumb-bells got to do with automobiles? Rather a superfluous question in regard to any car but the Rickenbacker six, according to Harry A. Sperl, sales manager for the Leon T. Shettler Co., Rickenbacker distributors.

In the case of the Rickenbacker, the construction of a dumb-bell is a simple illustration of the two-flywheel design of the Rickenbacker motor. As with the dumb-bell, with it equal weight at each end the Rickenbacker motor is balanced by two fly-wheels, one at each end of the crankshaft. Sperl points out that in each case perfect balance results.

The object of the two-flywheel design is to eliminate vibration. According to Sperl, two flywheels have completely eliminated vibration in the Rickenbacker. He says this feature of the car's performance has never failed to be a revelation to everyone who has ridden in a Rickenbacker car.

Sperl says that the two-flywheel principle of design as incorporated in the Rickenbacker has excited no end of popular interest, principally because of the fact that this car is the only one on the market with this unique feature.

STILL HOLDS RECORD

"No car has yet equalled the Oakland's speed record to San Diego and Brawley nor has it made a better gasoline economy run than the Oakland's nonstop high gear test to San Francisco," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland company. "Los Angeles to San Diego in 2 hours and 52 minutes is a record that will stand for some time."

HARTFORD TIRES DROP! AGAIN

NEVER before in the history of the tire business has the motorist been given the opportunity to buy a high-grade, standard make of tire at such unheard-of prices. The exceptional non-skid feature of the Hartford Cord Tire practically eliminates chains in wet weather.

Each Hartford Cord Tire carries Nelson & Price's personal guarantee of service and satisfaction.

Its known value inspires confidence in Cadillac Owners

THE supreme confidence which Cadillac owners place in their cars is a logical outgrowth of a number of definite factors.

In the first place, Cadillac dependability has been demonstrated for more than 20 years. This dependability embraces a degree of constant, unimpaired performance which has placed Cadillac in a distinct and separate class.

Secondly, Cadillac owners realize further that in every new model this Cadillac dependability finds an even fuller expression. Type 61 represents the highest attainment Cadillac has thus far achieved.

Lastly is the fact that the American public by an overwhelming majority has conceded leadership to Cadillac. More type 61 cars have been sold this year than all other cars combined selling at the Cadillac price or higher.

Reo Smashes thru

Breaks Salt Lake to Los Angeles time record

853 MILES IN 26 HRS. 15 MIN.

HERE is the story of how the motor car is doing its part in the development of that great Inland Empire of the Rocky Mountain region.

The profile of the route followed, as shown above, tells a graphic story of mountain grades, both up and down, together with heights and sharp turns that call for good driving and a well-balanced car.

The Reo made this 853 miles without once faltering—not even a tire giving way, although the cut and battered treads tell an eloquent story of sharp rocks and deep chuck-holes.

WITH the completion of the surfaced highway from Salt Lake City to St. George, Utah, a distance of 318 miles, there is to be established a fast passenger and fruit express automobile service between these two points. An extension of the mail service by motor car on fast schedule from St. George to Las Vegas, Nevada, is also contemplated.

A stock model, fully equipped, Reo Six touring car was sent out from Salt Lake last week by the Reo Motor Car Company of California to check this route under mail schedule conditions that will be competitive with the routes by rail. It will be possible, on this schedule, to deliver mail at St. George 9 hours out from Salt Lake, and to Las Vegas in 15 hours, a distance of 474 miles from the starting point.

The success of the Reo in conquering the hardships of mountain roads under construction and repair, as far as Las Vegas, warranted the continuance of the test run on to Los Angeles, a total distance of 853 miles, on a fast touring schedule, but within the legal speed limits.

On checking the time on arrival here it was found that the time consumed for the long and heart-breaking run had beaten the previous record for a motor car between Salt Lake and Los Angeles by an even six minutes, the total lapsed time being 26 hours 15 minutes for the 853 miles.

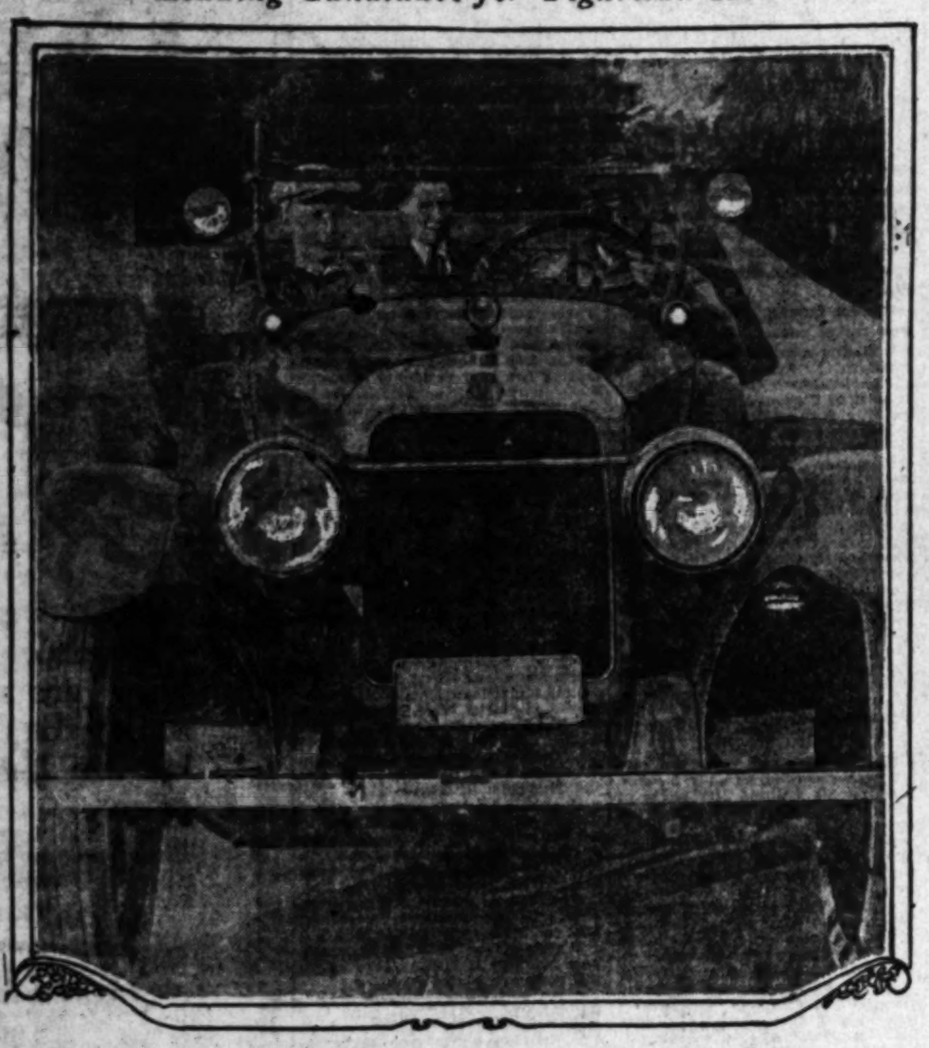
A Leading Candidate for Tightwad Honors



Earl Makes Run to San Francisco and Back on Twenty-four Gallons of Gasoline

The 918 miles were covered in 32 hours and 55 minutes, and the average mileage was 38.29 miles to the gallon of gas, De Luxe being the fluid used. Left to right, the boys in the car are Nicholson, McPherson and MacKennon.

MAKES STINGY GAS MARK

The Earl motor car, out on an economy and reliability run of its own, last week negotiated the round trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco, via the inland route, a total distance of 918 miles by accurate measurements furnished by the Automobile Club of Southern California, on twenty-four gallons of gasoline, an average of 38.29 miles to the gallon. Establishing its economy from another standpoint, the car used only one-half pint of water.

The car, a stock touring, sent out by the H. J. Wurzburger Company, local distributors, with Roger MacKinnon and H. L. Nicholson of the Wurzburger organization, alternating at the wheel, is declared to have made the entire trip in high gear and with engine running during every bit of travel.

In an affidavit signed and sworn to by Harry MacPherson, local newspaper man, who officiated as observer during the run, it is stated that the actual running time of the car on the round trip was thirty-two hours, fifty-five minutes, an average speed being maintained of 27.88 miles per hour. The fuel used was De Luxe gasoline, a local product recently put on the market here.

Leaving the Wurzburger salesrooms at 1:45 in the afternoon, the Earl hit the highway to Bakersfield, climbing every grade of the stiff Ridge Route in high gear. From Bakersfield the trail led on up the valley through Fresno to Sunol, and from there to Niles via the Niles Canyon road, on to Milpitas, and from there north through Palo Alto and up the peninsula to San Francisco. They arrived at the Field Motor Company, Northern California Earl distributors, corner of Golden Gate and Van Ness avenues, at 6:30 the following morning, having driven steadily all night.

After taking on some eats and hot coffee, the economy hikers left San Francisco at 8:45 and beat it back over the same route to Los Angeles, arriving at their starting point at 2 o'clock the next morning.

The latest achievement of the Earl calls to mind the 1922 Yosemite economy run, when this car made an average of thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline, beating all of the fifteen other contestants in point of fuel economy, weight of car considered.

AIR-COOLED CAR HAS DISTINCTION OF OWN

IS THE ONLY MOTOR BUILT WITH SOME UNUSUAL FEATURES

The Franklin is the only motor car built with a seven-bearing, case-hardened crankshaft having two fly-wheels. One other car has two fly-wheels, a couple have seven bearings, but the Franklin is the only automobile boasting this combination, which, in the opinion of prominent automotive authorities, reduces vibration to the absolute limit of present-day motor car engineering.

Case-hardening the crankshaft is an expensive process and the Franklin factory spent fully $200,000 developing this feature along. A large truck company also produces case-hardened crankshafts for its products, and this company and the Franklin factory are alone in their respective fields in this phase of automotive engineering advancement.

Duralumin connecting rods are also an innovation in the Franklin. Tests demonstrated the superiority of this new metal over steel, and the noteworthy performance of the new series 10 Franklins is in a great measure due to the use of these lighter, stronger connecting rods.

ANGELENOS AHEAD IN THE MATTER OF TOPS

"Nowhere in the United States do motorists take more pride in their machines than in Los Angeles. Auto tops play an important part in the appearance of any machine, said C. C. Eichenhofer, proprietor of the Atlas Auto works, 1238 South Hope street, "and so it follows that Angelenos are just a little ahead of motorists in other parts of the country when it comes to top beauty. We have found that Los Angeles motorists generally want the very latest design in top styles, the best material and the finest workmanship. To be the owner of a beautiful machine with a smart-looking top seems to be the goal of all who dwell in Los Angeles."

HAPPY INDICATIONS FROM MANY POINTS

FACTORIES ALL REPORT THAT SHIFTS ARE WORKING DAY AND NIGHT

Prosperity is the keynote of the entire automobile industry. Reports from the factory centers, from every section of the country and particularly up and down the Pacific Coast, indicate that the automobile industry is passing through one of the most expansive periods in its whole existence.

J. A. Bennel, general manager of the newly formed Haynes organization here, the Los Angeles Haynes Company, distributors for this territory, declares that the Haynes Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind., is participating largely in this overflow of business, and that telegraphic reports received here state that the factory is working both night and day, affording employment to the whole town of Kokomo, in turning out automobiles to meet increased demands.

Such great business has not been the case in the automobile industry since the rush days of the war, declared Bennel. The factory chiefs themselves are astounded with the way that orders for more and more automobiles are pouring into the plant every day, and for the next sixty to ninety days, at least, there are enough orders on hand to keep the capacity force working twenty-four hours a day turning out cars.

OAKLAND MAN HERE FOR TWO-WEEK STAY

C. E. Borland, special representative for the Oakland Motor Car Company, is in Southern California for a two weeks' stay and is getting an eyeful of what California really is through a personally-conducted tour by H. E. Franklin, sales manager for the California Oakland Motor Company.

According to Borland, the Pacific Coast business in motor cars has always been good, and now that the farmer in Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado is getting his crops off his handts at a profit, business in that territory is again becoming normal.

INCREASES SILENCE

"The Stearns Six retains all the silent power of the 4-cylinder model but has increased it to such an extent that the most rapid acceleration is now possible," says Lynn C. Buxton.

You've Seen in Months

Have you noticed that we have had little to say about the "Four?" There was a reason for it—and a good one. We couldn't obtain enough cars to fill the demand from Southern California motorists.

The big Nash Four factory at Milwaukee has now been practically doubled in size, however, and we can expect shipments in much larger quantities in the future.

There is a reason for this tremendous demand for the Nash Four. It lies in its unusual sturdiness. There is a greater factor of safety in it than in any other car in its price class. More than forty per cent of the parts in a Nash Four are interchangeable with those used in the powerful Nash Six—And yet it has wonderful power for its weight.

New Substance to Take the Knock Out

General Motors Discovers Tetra Ethyl Lead

High - Compression Engines Future Possibility

Every motorist is told in forceful terms each day that the gasoline he is using is none too good. We say it is low-grade. Such gasoline in present engines causes excessive knocking, rapid carbonization, crankcase dilution and a lot of other troubles. But we soon shall be rid of all of this and, what is more, the industry will shortly begin the consideration of really high-compression engines, regardless of the nature of the fuel sold. All of this is new development, at least new to the motorist, although the big men in the automobile field have been trying to overcome the defects of fuel for many years.

For the present a substance has been developed which takes the knock out of engines—not a bearing knock or a wrist pin knock, but the troublesome pinking due to the bad fuel. This knocking slows you down on a grade and makes you retard the spark every so often. The General Motors research department is responsible for finding a substance called tetra ethyl lead (alcohol lead) which, when mixed with gasoline in the proportions of one cubic centimeter to the gallon, stops the knocking. Of course, violent overheating or incandescent carbon will continue to cause knocking, but if enough of the new substance is used, even knocking under those conditions is reduced.

But there is more to the new substance than the mere removal of the knocking in present engines. These engines run at 60, 65 or 70 pounds compression pressure, with a maximum compression ratio of, say, 4½ to 1. The industry wants to use compression ratios of 7 and 7½ to 1, corresponding to 100 to 120 pounds compression. That will mean economy in fuel, more power, less crankcase dilution. But we canont increase compression without causing excessive knocking, due to the high heat and pressure.

This knocking, by the way, is usually caused by a spark knock, but is actually a violent detonation caused by the breaking down of the fuel into one or more compounds that do not merely explode but detonate. It is the force and sound of the detonation that you hear when you are pulling up a hill. The knocking may go away on retarded spark, because then the explosion mixture is fired at lower pressure and it is the high pressure or heat that causes the knocking.

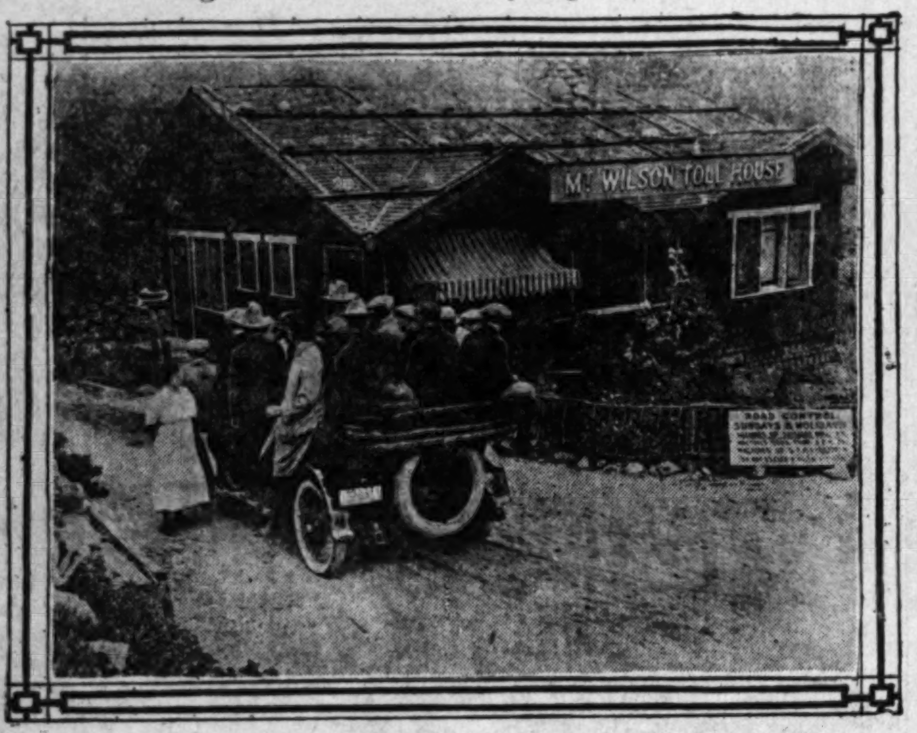
For many years the industry knew that we could not have high-compression engines or remove the knock in present ones without altering the nature of the fuel. All sorts of compounds were tried and some of them were highly successful in their work, but they cost too much. The new substance, a liquid, resulted after testing hundreds of different compounds. Made of alcohol and lead, it is certain that we shall have control over the main ingredients, for our lead mines are plentiful and alcohol is produced anywhere in any desired quantity. The writer had the pleasure of using some tetra ethyl lead and can say that it is quite efficient when the right amount is used.

But the important thing to the motorist is that he may get some of this substance. This he cannot do at the present time, but very shortly the vendors of gasoline will sell the fuel already "doped," as it is the intention of the producers of the compound to sell it to the refiners for mixing at the plant where the gasoline is made. Then it is planned to get wider and wider distribution on this doped fuel so that in time nothing but this antiknock fuel will be available.

When that happy day comes, and I should wildly guess it to be ten years from now, we will already be driving high-compression engines, for these will not be marketed until the antiknock fuel can be had anywhere. While the cost of the fuel will be for the present some 2 cents a gallon more than ordinary fuel, the saving in gasoline and the increase in power will alone make for extreme economy.

The engineer, however, when he is certain of being able to market high-compression engines, will at once turn his energies to the development of a different sort of vehicle—a new conception of a light car. The high-compression will permit of high speed, high output engines per unit of displacement and these engines will be light in weight and will go in lighter weight chassis perhaps made out of duralumin, or some other aluminum alloy—especially so if Ford should succeed in smashing the aluminum trust by getting hold of the resources at Muscle Shoals.

Moving a Ton and a Half Up Mt. Wilson



Maxwell Pulls Another One of Those Heavy Luggage Stunts

This time twenty-three passengers occupied the spare strap-hangers' coigns of vantage on the Maxwell as it chugged up the steep grade and around the hairpin turns of Mt. Wilson. Maxwell enthusiasts of Pasadena are responsible for the latest test to which the sturdy little car was put.

A RECORD LOAD TRIP

Maxwell Carries Twenty-three Passengers up the Steep Mt. Wilson Toll House Grade

Almost duplicating the recent amazing performance of a Maxwell touring car in carrying a record load of twenty-four passengers up the short but steep rise of Quintero street without hesitation, a Maxwell touring car, a duplicate of the car used in the local test, was sent out from the headquarters of Union Motors, Inc., Southern California Maxwell distributors, and driven up the steep Mt. Wilson toll-house grade with twenty-three men, weighing a total of 3240 pounds.

Mount Wilson, with its 101 hairpin turns over a distance of nine miles and a half, has an average gradient of 10 per cent, but could not stop the sturdy little car with its record-breaking load, establishing an almost unheard-of record on the famous hill.

The car was driven by E. H. Steniger, sales manager of the Grace Motor Company, Maxwell dealers in Pasadena, who had never before driven over the road and did not practice for the stunt in any preliminaries. It was absolutely stock throughout, carrying top and windshield, and the stunt was one of the most strenuous ever attempted by a car.

Practically the entire trip was made in low gear, Steniger finding little opportunity to make any speed on the run, which consumed one hour and fifty minutes. He shifted to second gear for a short distance, only to shift into low again, and despite the terrific heat generated on a long low-gear run under the difficulties presented, the trip was made without trouble of any kind. The car was stopped once when a truck, which had preceded it on the narrow road, blocked the way.

The Maxwell was followed up the grade by a second car carrying Pasadena and Los Angeles newspaper men and photographers, who acted as observers on the stunt. While the weather at the foot of the hill threatened rain, a little more than half way up the party came above a sea of white, fleecy clouds and into almost torrid weather that threatened disaster for cooling systems.

The descent was made with the same load with little difficulty on the part of the Maxwell, and the car paraded the streets of Pasadena with its load and huge banners describing the feat it had just concluded.

NEW SALES MANAGER AT MISSION PLANT

GOGLE JOINS DORT FAMILY: IS FAMILIAR CHARACTER TO AUTO ROW FANS

The Mission Motor Company has a new salesmanager in the person of W. W. Gogle, but it is only in his new connection that Gogle is new because his is one of the familiar faces along Motor Row and his friends are warming up their hands on his shoulders.

"Our new salesmanager has his goods cut out for him," says F. A. Petrie, president of the Mission Motor Company, "and we feel we have the right man now to put the goods together. Big things are right around the corner from us now and the public can look for the name Dort emblazoned on the highest peaks.

"Before coming with us, Gogle was in busines for himself and earned a reputation as an organization builder as well as setting several records in sales events. He is thoroughly familiar with the moderate priced motor car field and his wide acquaintance here in Southern California should be of inestimable value to him as well as to the Mission Motor Company.

TRANSMISSION BANDS SAVED BY ANIMAL OIL

COMPOUND MAKES IT NEXT TO IMPOSSIBLE TO BURN OUT BANDS

"It's a tedious job to replace a set of transmission and brake bands in a Ford car—a good two or three hour job, and a costly one, too," said A. A. Derry, manager of the Los Angeles Motor Supply House, Inc., Veedol distributors.

"True, there's no established life for a band, but you'll agree that the band that lasts the longest is the band which does not burn up through frcition by coming in contact with the drum.

"Here's another economy at your command with Veedol Fordol.

"The affinity of the animal oil for heat in the Veedol Fordol compound makes it next to impossible for the bands to come in actual contact with the drums, hence, the bands will not burn out.

"One concern operating a large fleet of Ford cars made the statement that since using Veedol Fordol in their fleet, the run on Ford transmission and brake bands has fallen off at least 50 per cent."

VETERAN SALESMAN SIGNED BY H. LORD

Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, Velie and Jordan distributors, has succeeded in filling what he characterizes as the last gap in an otherwise perfect sales organization with the acquisition of Jack Taylor, veteran wholesale automobile man, well-known throughout the State. Taylor has spent several years in the San Francisco district, specializing on wholesale work among dealers in high-grade cars. He will be joint manager of the Lord Motor Car Company's wholesale department here, working in conjunction with Walter Lord.

TEN PER CENT INCREASE

Travel Figures Show a Gain of 8993 Visitors to Yosemite National Park Over Previous Year

During the year ending Sept. 30, 1922, travel to Yosemite National Park for the first time passed the 100,000 mark when 100,506 people visited the park. This represents a gain of 8993 over the previous year, or nearly 10 per cent. The gain is represented largely in increased train travel as, on account of an unusually late spring with consequent delay in opening of roads, automobile travel was late in getting started. Considering this unfavorable condition, it is all the more remarkable that automobile travel showed even the small increase of 636 cars recorded.

Besides having broken all previous travel records for the year, new high records were also established in the number of people in the park at one time, and in the number of visitors for any one day. On July 3 there were 11,962 people in the park, as compared with the previous year's record of approximately 9000 on June 20. In fact, the number of people in the park at any one time during the summer travel season was greater than at the corresponding time in any previous year. From early May to early September there were never less than 2500; from early June to the middle of July, or even a little later, the number never fell below 9500; and for a week in the latter part of June and the fore part of July the number was in excess of 11,000 at all times; the peak being reached on July 3 when, as before stated, it reachd nearly 12,000.

BIGGEST DAY

The largest day's travel on record was recorded on July 2 when 2263 people entered the park, of which 1943 came in 560 private automobiles. The best previous record was made on July 3, 1921, when 1694 people registered, of which 1490 came in 401 private cars.

Of the total number of people entering the park during the year 36,004 registered for camp sites in the free camping grounds in Yosemite Valley. The number actually utilizing the public camp grounds was probably considerably in excess of this number, as, during the peak of the season undoubtedly hundreds of campers failed to register. A complete record would undoubtedly have shown the number to have been in the neighborhood of 40,000 people. On July 3, 7152 campers were occupying sites in the public camp grounds, approximately 2500 more than recorded at one time in any previous year.

It is of interest to note that the average number of persons carried per automobile, was more in 1921 than in 1922, the average being 3403 for the former whereas for the latter year it was 3306. This is the lowest average per car since automobiles were admitted to the park in 1913.

More than ever does this year's travel indicate an increasing general appreciation of the national parks, not only within the United States, but almost the world over. During the year residents of every State in the Union, the District of Columbia, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Philippine Islands, visited the park. That the rest of the world was pretty well represented is proven by the fact that visitors from twenty-nine foreign countries, including eight of England's possessions, were registered as follows:

Argentine Republic, Australia, Austria, Belgium, British Columbia, Brazil, Canada, China, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, England, France, Germany, Holland, India, Japan, Java, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Palestine, Panama, Peru, Scotland, South Africa, Sweden, Switzerland and Uruguay.

One hundred and forty-one makes of automobiles were represented, the Ford, as usual, leading with 2871; the Buick second with 1830; the Dodge third with 1673; the Studebaker fourth with 1408; and the Chevrolet fifth with 1172.

It should be here remarked that the travel year is taken as ending on September 30 for report purposes only, and for uniformity in all of the national parks. Yosemite is open the year around and may be reached by motor or train from May 1 to November or December, and by train only during the remainder of the year, when the high mountain roads leading to the park are closed by snow.

WESLEY BROWN BACK WITH REO

Wesley Brown, well known through his connection with the automobile industry in Southern California, has returned to Los Angeles with the truck and speed wagon department of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, after an absence of practically six months.

Brown has been in San Francisco, working with the Northern California division of the company, which is under the management of P. L. Emerson. He was brought back to Los Angeles, where he has made many friends in the trucking industry, by Byron C. Foy, vice-

BUSINESS COUPE

The approach of winter emphasizes the all-year usefulness of the car.

Wind and sleet beat in vain against the weather-stripped doors and windows. A floor radiator keeps the interior as warm as a room. The windows are readily adjusted for ventilation.

Underlying these seasonal comforts, is the satisfaction owners feel in the car's exceptional sturdiness.

The body proper is a hand-welded steel unit. It is now generally known that this novel construction has made possible Dodge Brothers enamel finish (instead of paint) which is baked at high temperature on the surface of the steel.

The trimness and grace of the body lines are enhanced by a non-rumble fabric top and rear quarters fashioned in the present attractive mode.

Genuine Spanish blue leather upholstery, wide snug-fitting doors and roomy luggage quarters heighten the impression you instantly get of the car's distinctive fitness for service, either business or social.

'he gas' breaks Records

To San Francisco and return---non-stop--- as the ordinary man would drive---with 38.29 miles per gallon of gasoline averaged. This is the feat of the Earl stock car in its record run last week. The run was made in high gear all the way, under newspaper observers. The astonishing average of 38.29 miles per gallon on De Luxe Gasoline was obtained. Independent Stations only handle this superior "He" Gasoline.

Grand-daddy Studebakers in Reliability Run

Big Bear Contest Proves to Be Huge Success

The nine veterans at the top have a combined mileage total of more than 1,000,000 miles. The youngest has passed the 62,000-mile post and the oldest is credited with more than 350,000 miles. At the bottom we have a couple of Big Sixes that are the real Methuselahs of the family. The one on the right has a record of 350,000 miles while the one on the left has dashed off 350,000 miles.

VETERANS TRIUMPH SIGNALLY IN RELIABILITY RUN TO BIG BEAR

Last Monday morning at 9 o'clock nine veterans of the highways checked out for an economy-reliability run to Big Bear Valley by way of the Mill Creek road and return through Lake Arrowhead and Waterman Canyon. Each of the cars was a Studebaker big six, that had passed the 50,000-mile mark, some of them so far past that the speedometer required six figures to record the mileage.

Gathered from different points in Southern California by Studebaker dealers the cars represented more than 1,000,000 miles of travel. One that was entered by the Paul G. Hoffman Company had done more than 350,000 miles of hard service for the Massey Truck Company delivering city papers to outside towns. Its regular daily work is to make two-round trips to Santa Barbara delivering morning papers at night and evening papers in the afternoon. It made a perfect score for reliability as did its partner from the same company. The second Massey Studebaker veteran is credited with 150,000 miles of service and was taken directly off the job to make the run. It ran a close second to a car entered by the Glenn Thomas Company.

WIN SWEEPSTAKES

Studebaker representatives of Long Beach, which won the sweepstakes trophy, a large silver cup donated by the Lake Arrowhead Company for the best combined score for reliability and economy. After 95,000 miles of taxicab work the sweepstakes winner traveled the 239-mile round trip, ninety miles of which is mountain work on dirt roads, and averaged 18.5 miles per gallon.

The Whittier Garage Company had an entry loaned by Pipher Bros. from their stock of used cars which had traveled well around the 150,000-mile mark and been in the hands of five or six different owners. It used little fuel but was penalized nine points for stopping to remove dirt from the gasoline line. The only other car that failed to make a perfect score was a car loaned by R. W. Bramble, a Los Angeles mortician, for entry by the Bowles Motor Car Company of Santa Ana. Bramble did part of the driving and had the misfortune to knock loose a brake connection which penalized the car twenty points for road-side repairs.

Two other owners went along as pilots of the cars that they loaned for entry by dealers of Bishop and Glendale. Roy Stewart took one of the Studebaker big sixes of of his rent service for the two days and made a perfect score for W. L. Smith, Inyo county dealer, while E. W. Browne o fthe Hollywood Mission Garage drove one of his rent cars for the Packer Company of Glendale. Browne had his wife and two boys along while he piloted the car through the hills with 1000 points for reliability. These two rent cars were taken off the stand the day before and spared for a few hours to get oiled, greased and the brakes adjusted for the long grind through the San Bernardino mountains.

The San Bernardino agency sent another veteran with 150,000 miles credited to it as their entry. A. D. Pyatt had a perfectly clean spot on his score card where the space was left to register the penalties. Harry D. Riley's entry from Anaheim fared just as well with C. D. Henderson at the wheel and made third place for economy.

STAY AT LOWE'S

The run was made to Big Bear Valley the first day, stopping overnight at Lowe's Camp. Tuesday morning the cars checked out between :30 and 9 a.m. for the run over the Rim of the World Road to Lake Arrowhead. Lunch was had at the clubhouse, the party being the guests of the Lake Arrowhead Company. Two fires on the mountain in the neighborhood of Lake Arrowhead disturbed the party for a time as it was reported that the Waterman Canyon Road and the City Creek Road were both closed by fire.

A report just before time to leave said that it was possible to get down the Waterman Canyon. Four hours and fifteen minutes after leaving Lake Arrowhead the cars began to arrive at the store of Paul G. Hoffman Company at one minute intervals; the big six carrying L. G. Thompson, manager of the run, and George Stephenson, technical representative of the A.A.A., who acted as referee, having arrived some minutes earlier reaching the edge of the business section one hour and thirty-five minutes after leaving Lake Arrowhead clubhouse on the north shore.

STANDARDIZING ITS EQUIPMENT

KEYSTONE IRON AND STEEL COMPANY AT WORK ON VENDORS FOR GAS STATIONS

The Keystone Iron and Steel Works has added another visible device for use of gasoline service stations to its line. It is the Keystone visible oil vendor, which displays the various grades of lubricating oil carried by the service stations and has a pneumatic control for dispensing them.

"We are standardizing on equipment for gasoline service stations," says D. H. Greenwood, sales manager for the Keystone Iron and Steel Works, "because we realize that both the consumer of oils and gasoline and the seller want quick and accurate service. It saves time for the motorist and makes more money for the seller.

"The Keystone visible gasoline vendor has won the approval of the motoring public wherever they have been installed and the oil vendor is a fitting complement to it. It is similar to the gasoline vender in design and finish and makes a neat appearance when placed in close proximity to the gasoline vendor."

SILENCING TRICKS

"There are many little tricks to silencing squeaky bodies," says Robert Thompson, of the Robert Thompson Company, builders of custom tops and bodies. "We know most of them, and the remedies are usually quickly and easily applied."

The Gliding Greyhound

Smoothness, Silence and Velvety Acceleration

By John Eliot

A MAN said to me once:—

"Say, John,—which is that Econo-Mist,—a Kangaroo or a Greyhound?"

"I don't get you," says I. "Explanation it!"

"Well,—the Kangaroo JUMPS off from Scratch, and the Greyhound GLIDES off," said he.

"Same kind of difference as between the 'Jimtown Junction Local' and the 'California Limited.'

"The Jimtown Local train pulls out of the Station with a Snort,—a Spinning of Driving Wheels, a Grinding of Rails, a stream of Sparks and,—

—Sudden "Get-away."

"It starts with a Jump, and seats all passengers automatically.

"It Burns up the Rolling Stock,—Wears out the Road-bed,—Makes a Grand-stand Beginning and then,—settles down to its regular 15 Miles per hour Schedule.

"But,—the California Limited of L. A. or the 20th Century Limited of N. Y. are entirely different performers.

"YOU see, John,—the ABLEST Locomotive Engineers in America are promoted to drive the FASTEST and COSTLIEST Trains.

"And these Ablest Engineers KNOW the HIGH-COST of 'Sudden Get-away.'

"They know that Smoothness, Silence, and GRADUAL Acceleration are the hall-marks of EXPERT driving.

"They know that the momentary Burst of Speed in the 'Sudden Get-away' is not only ruinous to Driving Wheels and Road-bed, but marks the AMATEUR in Train Operation.

"They know, too, that the '20th Century,'—the 'California Limited,'—or the 'Broadway Limited,' Trains have no USE for Amateur Drivers.

"Well,—what I want to know from you, John,—is this:

"Which breed of Carburetor is that there 'ECONO-MIST' you are talking about in the papers?

"Hattie Hop-Off"

Sudden "Get-away"

"IS IT a Kangaroo or is it a Greyhound?

"Does it deliver the 'Sudden Get-away' of the Jimtown Local Trains,—regardless of Expense,

"Or,—

"Does it deliver the smoothly Graduated Acceleration of the 'California Limited?'

"Will it Burn up my Tires, Grind up my Clutch,—maybe Strip the Gears of my Transmission, or Yank the Teeth out of my Differential,—in 'Sudden Get-away,'—Kangaroo fashion?

"Or,—

"Can it qualify as a Greyhound, by BEATING the Kangaroo in the first block of Travel, while Accelerating so Smoothly, and with such graduated rapidity that neither my Tires, Clutch, Differential or Guests experience any Strain, or are Conscious of any attempt on My part to Astonish the Natives?"

"So said the Man to me—John Eliot!

And here's where I reply PUBLICLY to him, and to all Whom it may Concern—

The Luxury Carburetor which Pays for Itself

THE Econo-Mist is NOT a "Kangaroo" Carburetor. It is a cross between a Greyhound and a Bear.

It starts the Car Smoothly, Silently, Gradually, and Powerfully, just like the "California Limited."

Its Velvety acceleration reaches Maximum Speed long before the "Sudden Get-away" Carburetor has choked with its own Gasoline and slowed down because of that.

In a short City block it will out-distance any "Kangaroo" Carburetor, though it will NOT "Jump" from Standstill.

Because of its wonderful Multiple-Pore (or Multiple-Jet) Distributor, it feeds the Gasoline GRADUALLY,—uncovering its 10 to 20 Jets in sequence, ADDING ONLY ONE JET AT A TIME, until the full quota required is delivered in a steadily accelerating Power-Stream that closely approximates Steam.

This velvety "building-up" of Power not only results in a delightful Luxury-of-Motion, but in the following:

—GREAT ECONOMY ON TIRES AND REPAIRS as well as Great Economy on GASOLINE.

No other Carburetor equals the "Econo-Mist" average in Miles-per-Gallon of Gasoline.

The Selling-System under which each "Econo-Mist" Carburetor must Pay-for-Itself out of Gasoline it Saves, is EVIDENCE of that.

BUT,—for every Dollar it Saves to Car-Owners on GASOLINE it will save, probably, TWO Dollars on Repairs, Tires and Depreciation.

Bring your Car around to the Proving Station of the Motor Economists, at 3000 S. Main St. and see.

First Test out the Miles-per-Gallon your own Carburetor delivers, on the Certified Proving Ground there.

Then Test out the Miles-per-Gallon, and Smoothness of Operation, of your Car under selfsame conditions, with an "ECONO-MIST" Self-Paying Carburetor.

When the Test proves to YOUR Satisfaction an increase of 22% to 150%,—with such Luxury-of-Motion as your Car never before delivered,—you may then KEEP the Econo-Mist Carburetor, on the following terms of Self-Payment:

Pay us the first Month's proven Gasoline-Saving down,—sign our Pay-as-it-Saves-its-Cost Contract, and,—drive away.

Under this Contract you pay each Month only the Saving demonstrated by the Proving Station Test, until the Econo-Mist Carburetor has thus PAID FOR ITSELF without a penny of Ultimate Cost to you.

Bring your Car around to Proving Station of Motor Economists, Inc., 3000 S. Main St.

More Miles PER CAR

by RAY McNAMARA~

(Keep Your Name Out of the Monday Morning "Lists")

If every operator of a motor car would consider his position seriously he would realize that his responsibilities are as great or perhaps even greater than those of the locomotive engineer.

In the case of the locomotive engineer, he travels on a steel right-of-way, that has a warning posted at every cross road warning the pedestrian and vehicular traffic to "Stop, Look and Listen" for their safety. For his own safety and that of the passengers whose lives are in his hands, he is guided mostly by the automatic block signals which he follows carefully with a trained eye. If the locomotive engineer paid no more attention to danger signals than some motorists do, the railroads would not be safe to travel; collision in this case means a terrible loss of life and property. In the case of the operator of a motor car, it is quite different. Every intersecting street, every grade crossing, every pedestrian that does not have his or her eye trained on the approaching motor car and every child at play on the curb, lawn or side walk are danger signals to the motorists. Therefore, proceed extra cautiously under such conditions.

COURTESY PAYS

If pedestrians are crossing the street ahead of you, particularly aged people, cripples and women with children or baby carriages, do not make them run for their lives to escape danger, remember the rights of pedestrians are paramount, also that they are traveling at two or three miles per hour while the motor car moves ordinarily from eight to ten times faster, which means that the pedestrain will move only ten feet while the motor car advances one hundred feet. Anybody with good common sense will show a little courtesy in emergencies like these. While those that do not have it, should remember that it is compulsory to slow down.

The Monday morning papers or those following holidays in some of our large cities look more like a special edition published by the coroner. You will read accounts of how "This or that person" ran in front of a motor car; driver released after making a statement. More often it reads, "Motor car runs down pedestrian. Driver held pending investigation." Now a great many of these accidents happen within the legal speed limit, are unavoidable in a sense and in a great many cases, the pedestrians are at fault. However, in nearly every case they can be avoided by reducing speed and practicing courtesy at all times.

Every driver should practice judging distance and remember that the motor car travels ten times faster than the person on foot, also remember that every pedestrian does not drive a car and is not acquainted with these facts and very often walks or runs directly into the path of the motor car unaware of this danger.

I believe that every motorist is conscientious and wants to avoid danger to others as well as himself, but it seems to me that the majority of drivers do not acquire a very keen sense of danger until they have figured in one or more accidents of a serious nature, then it is too late. By practicing courtesy to pedestrians and fellow-motourists, that you meet on the streets and highways—that same kind of courtesy that you practice in your business, home or at public gatherings—I believe will reduce your chance of causing injury to your fellow-citizens to the absolute minimum.

NEW LIBERTY MOTOR IS A MASTERPIECE

Power in untold quantities has been developed in the automobile industry. Power for every need, and more than the average motorist would ever use under any circumstances. Given traction, there is nothing short of a 65 per cent grade that the modern motor car will not pull itself safely over.

The newest motor developed by the Liberty Motor Car Company of Detroit, Mich., and incorporated in the construction of the new Liberty six, is a fine example of the great strides made in modern gasoline engineering, according to L. A. Hannan, general sales manager for the Thomason Motor Car Company, Liberty six distributors for Southern California. Because of its development of 53 full horsepower, not a little comment has been aroused among those to whom the new car has been demonstrated in action, making several remarkable hill climbs under extreme difficulties and returning to the city's paved streets with a flexibility in traffic that automobile men declare is a motoring achievement of the first order.

DURANT BREAKS TWO RECORDS IN NEVADA

Within twenty-four hours the Durant automobile broke two records in State of Nevada. The first record was broken when Bud Bodell driving a Durant four, drove from Reno to Lovelock, a distance of ninety-eight and one half miles, in the remarkable time of two hours and fifty-six minutes.

The following day Captain Al G. Wadell driving a Durant six stock touring car clipped fifteen minutes off the Lovelock-Winnemucca record over the Victory Highway making seventy-seven miles in two hours flat. Wadell started from the Pershing Hotel at Lovelock where he was checked out, and was officially checked in at the Lovelock Hotel at Winnemucca. W. M. David, of the Nevada Highway Association, checked the time of the Durant six.

OLD-TIMERS GIVE HIM A BIG THRILL

Don Lee Gets a Kick Out of the Exploits of a One-Lung Cadillac in the East

If there is one thing which gives Don Lee a thrill it is to hear of an exploit of a one-cylinder Cadillac, the older the car the greater the thrill. It is most natural then that the California distributor for the Cadillac would be very much interested in the recent run of a twenty-year-old Cadillac from Detroit to New York.

The old timer carried a message from Mayor Couzens of Detroit to Mayor Hylan of New York and the trip was part of the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the Cadillac Motor Car Company which was made a big event in the East.

The distance travelled was 783 miles and the lunger chugged all the way on its own power. It was met at the larger cities along the road by the Cadillac agents who staged a reception at many of the towns. The route lead to Toledo and Cleveland and then swung to the southern route via Jamestown, Olean, Hornell, Elmira, Binghamton and Middletown. It was necessary to cross the Catskills and there were any number of stiff pulls. One of the big features in one of the Pennsylvania towns was a turnout of old-time rigs as a reception to the Cadillac.

Don Lee has a twenty-year old one-cylinder car of his own which he occasionally sends out for a jaunt about town. Sixteen years ago Lee won fame by driving a one-cylinder Cadillac on a non-stop motor run from Los Angeles to San Francisco and return. The run required two nights and two days and there was no sleeping in all that time. There were no boulevards in those days and the boys were a bit weary when they arrived at the old Golden Gate avenue place.

DURANT AND PACKARD HAVE REDLANDS HOME

UP-TO-DATE ESTABLISHMENT IS OPENED BY SPOOR AND YERXA

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Oct. 28.—The big event of the week in the automobile row here was the opening of the new home of the Durant and Packard distributors here, Spoor and Yerxa. The garage was built for them by E. M. Cope, leading merchant and banker of this city, and embodies as no other building in the city all the requirements for an up-to-date establishment.

Spoor and Yerxa have been most successful in the sale of the Durant automobile since they took the district of San Bernardino county and have placed many carloads of the machines. They opened their big home and main office here during the week and last week opened a big new building in San Bernardino where the Durant forces will be placed.

The front part of the new building is given over to display rooms and offices. It is of design in brick with an interior of rich colors and the offices entirely modern and up to date. The entire back of the building, the garage proper, has been leased to the J. M. C. Garage Company of Jolly, Miller and Cheyney, all well-known automobile men of the city. Three sides of this big room are almost solid with windows and the work benches are placed under them, also the accessories and parts racks. The center of the building is given over to storage and to the washing department.

OAKLAND FACTORY SIMPLY SWAMPED

NEW 1923 SERIES CAUSES A RUSH FOR CARS THAT IS UNPRECEDENTED

Since the announcement of the 1923 series Oakland motor car the factory at Pontiac has been so flooded with orders that the volume of production reached the highest peak of the year and the prospect, according to latest reports, is that each succeeding month of the year will show a big increase in production and receipt of orders.

"The production of the closed models, the new sedan and the entirely new five-passenger coupe, which were first shown at New York last week, will be well under way before November 1, and this will add to the already big volume of production on the standard touring models and roadsters. The generous reception accorded the sport model has made it necessary to increase production on it and the new two-passenger business coupe is lined up for a greatly increased schedule," says Reeve Gartzmann, president of the California Oakland Motor Company.

"The demand for Oaklands in Los Angeles has exceeded our predictions and the Los Angeles Oakland Company is booking orders ahead on all models except the five-passenger touring. We placed extra heavy preorders on this model and have been able to get quantity delivery of them."

BUILDERS TRY TO PLEASE THE TASTE

Many things go to make up the automobile that must ultimately satisfy the purchaser, and to this end manufacturers spend years of time in building a product, making additions and subtractions as time proves them valuable or worthless as time goes on. Each year, surveys conducted by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce other bodies interested in the welfare of the trade, show the trend of public desire, and the builders try to conform as closely as possible to those desires.

Close adherence to this is the law of the Liberty Motor Car Company's plant, according to L. A. Hannan, general sales manager of the Thomason Motor Car Company, Southern California Liberty six distributors, and the all-around satisfaction gained from the performance and appointments of the Liberty six have been the cause of great comment, he declares.

Olds Brougham Exhibit Will be Real Feature

One of the features of interest to the motoring public at the Los Angeles automobile show which opens at Praeger Park one week from next Saturday will be the showing for the first time on the coast of the 1923 Oldsmobile Brougham, a new closed car which has just been added to the Oldsmobile line.

The announcement that this new closed car would make its first appearance at the coming Los Angeles automobile show was announced yesterday by L. V. Starr, manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors here.

"The new model has already left the factory and is being rushed west for the show," said Starr yesterday. "From the reports that we have heard of this car it is certain to be one of the sensations of the big exhibit. In addition to the new closed models we will also show a complete line of Oldsmobile closed and open cars.

"The Oldsmobile officials believe that they have accomplished what automotive engineers have been trying to do for several years, that is, produce a high-grade closed car at a low price. They assert that this car is built entirely on standard closed-car principles, with metal sides and tops, finished and appointed after the best closed-car practice.

PIERCE ARROW SALES ON UPWARD CURVE

SEPTEMBER SALES SHOW THE GREATEST INCREASE IN SEVEN YEARS

Fall sales of Pierce-Arrow passenger cars are continuing their upward curve, according to an announcement made by Myron E. Forbes, vice-president of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company. Total sales made during the month of September were the greatest made in any September since 1915, showing a 150 per cent increase over the total of a year ago.

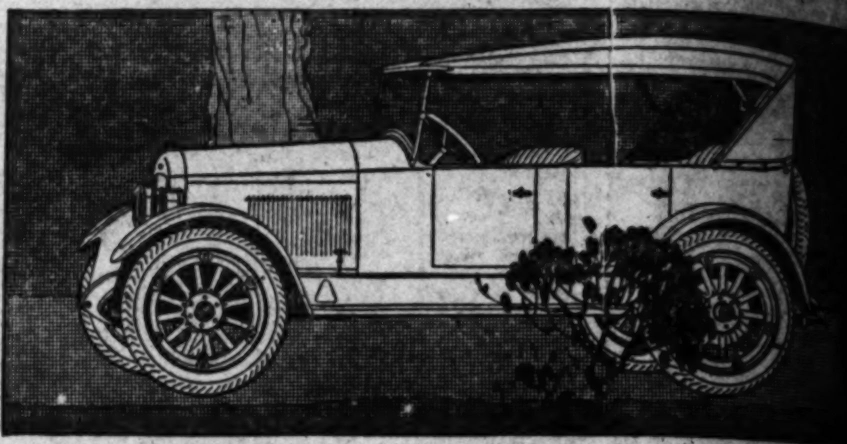
Indicative of the increase in volume of business is the fact that September orders showed an increase of 10 per cent over the previous month, which was the biggest August in the history of the Pierce-Arrow Company.

The company's big plant at Buffalo, N. Y., is running on a full-time production schedule to keep pace with the accelerated demand for Pierce-Arrow cars.

PRICE DECREASED

A substantial decrease in the price of Hartford cord tires was announced Wednesday by Frank T. Price, president of Nelson & Price, Inc., distributors of Hartford tires, and it was further stated that his firm has just received five carloads of Hartford tires.

NOW IT COSTS $1195



A Sturdy Six at the Price of a Light Six

At its new low price the Jewett Six is still further removed from the possibility of legitimate comparison or competition.

This Paige-built six-cylinder, 50 horse-power automobile was introduced to the public less than a year ago as a new standard of value. On that basis it made good with a success of amazing proportions, for here at last at the price of a so-called "light" six was a six of genuinely sturdy construction. Every part unit was found to be more than to the demand of any speed, condition of the road.

The car that unquestionably lished a standard of unpreced value has now been reduced to delivered here. There is ju way to understand what this means. You must examine Jewett, ride in it, and then c it with any other five-passenger

The complete Paige-Jewett lines of six-cylinder passenger cars offer a selection of thirteen models priced from $1195 to $3760. The complete line of Paige trucks meets every haulage need. They are sold and serviced by Paige dealers everywhere.

I have a 1917 Na the engine is a six-cylinder tal the car has been run miles and I have always had with cylinder No. 6 pump I have always laid the to poor lubrication. I for used medium, but now I am heavy eastern oil, Ventura. doing so the engine has run I have changed the rubber without results. Will you tell whether I am using the right and make some suggestions as to make the engine run

J. S. J.

The fact that only cylinder is giving trouble, indicate that the oil had to do with it. Without you will find by careful ex calipering and other that your trouble is strictly ical. Special rings. (there few truly excellent rings on market for this purpose) will overcome your trouble that the cylinder is straight and unscored. An which has run 21,000 miles probably be greatly improved grinding and having new weight pistons fitted to all of cylinders. This may be con expensive, but the saving in oil and upkeep will well the investment. The oil question. Ventura, is not an product, but is made of California crude, here in south. It is an excellent oil well adapted to a very wide of gas engine lubrication.

What change was made in 1922 Ford to make it save oil? car that I know of has driven to date about 2000 and used about a quart of oil.

J. M. B.

One sometimes asks selves "How long! Oh, how shall such ignorance, in the of an automobile, be per to go on without punish" Oil must be drained from crankcase of a new car at the of about 500 miles, and from time on every 750 to 1000 The nonvolatile portion of gasoline passes the pistons and the crankcase oil; in many this gasoline residue passes to such an extent, es where the driver uses the considerably or runs with mixture, that at the end of period there is a greater of oil in the crankcase there was to start with. This 75 per cent of its lubricat and the engine is being destroyed; probably this is enough.

If a Ford tends to into the cylinders do you the use of a heavier stop the pumping? is the best way to stop

NEW CHEVROLETS ARRIVE

Distressing Time Ended for Dealers Who Advertised Before Cars Came in

A week of temper-testing stress for the Los Angeles Chevrolet dealers has ended with the announcement that the new 1923 "superior" Chevrolets have finally arrived.

Unavoidable delays in shipment caused the first announcement of the new models to beat the cars to Los Angeles, and as a result the dealers have been sorely beset with thousands of Chevrolet fans bubbling over with curiosity to get a glimpse of the sensationally improved cars.

Telephone calls, eager visitors, and even letters have been pouring into the various Chevrolet salesrooms for the last ten days, the dealers report, until they had reached the point where they were almost ready to hang out the "Back in a minute" sign.

The newest thing out in the Chevrolet line is the four-passenger sedanette, a coach type closed car, which replaces the larger coupe. It is a semisport model with Fisher body, full stream-line design, cord tires all around, trunk and nickel trimmed and guarded trunk rack. The gasoline tank is in the rear and the vacuum tank that feeds the motor is under the hood, which is larger and supported by a radiator that is nearly five inches higher and also narrower.

So improved in appearance design and construction is this latest arrival that it is hardly recognizable as the popular Chevrolet unless attention is called to the name-plate.

All five models, roadster, touring car utility coupe, sedan and sedanette are effected by the sweeping improvements, the outstanding features of which are, heavier frame, longer wheel-base, longer springs, gas tank in rear, crowned and paneled fenders, drum-type headlights with legal lenses, storm curtain opening with doors on all open models, cord tire equipment on all closed models, bigger wheel hubs to give greater strength gear shift mechanism moved forward six inches, with lever bent to avoid striking instrument board when shifting, same peppy valve-in-head motor, windshield wiper on closed cars, also dash light and sun visor.

grease from working out through Ford axle housing and brake drum?

If glycerine is mixed with oil what effect does it have on the oil? K. H. P., Alhambra.

A: If a Ford tends to pump oil past the piston rings, under no circumstances ever put heavier oil into the crank case. Oil cannot stop up the leaks but will give lots of trouble. The proper thing to do is to ascertain if the pistons and cylinders are worn, if they are by all means have the cylinders reamed or ground and fit new rings and pistons. If the rings only are bad replace them with Ford rings.

If grease works out of the axle-housing around the brake drums there are three probable causes: The rear wheel bearings are worn, the axle shaft is bent or sprung or the felt washers are worn out.

Glycerine is an animal fat and carbonizes badly, it also forms glyceric acid when heated and mixed with oxygen; this is very destructive to machinery. It is far better to buy well-known and tested products rather than to experiment with untried products.

Gotham Favors White Trucks on the Street

Municipalities are rapidly falling into line with the march of the motor truck, if New York is to be considered any criterion. Gotham's city government now has 380 White heavy-duty trucks to bear the burden of the heavy work. A contract for 138 five-ton White trucks was recently awarded by the City of New York to the White Company of Cleveland as an addition to a previous order of 212 heavy-duty trucks filled some time ago.

This gives the White Company the distinction of receiving the two largest orders ever placed by a city, and also gives New York the largest fleet of standardized heavy-duty trucks known to be operation. One of the requirements in the specifications was that the bidder produce verified records showing at least 100 heavy-duty trucks that had covered more than 75,000 miles.

All but eight of the new fleet are to be equipped with power dump bodies especially designed for the use of the street-cleaning department. In order to facilitate this work a method has been devised for attaching snow plows to the front of the trucks, thus enabling the whole fleet to be turned out in snow battalion formation when necessary.

PREDICTS PASSING OF THE OPEN CAR

What is conceded to have been the greatest closed car show ever staged anywhere has just recently come to a close in the Grand Central Palace in New York City with officers and directors convinced that inevitable evolution based on continued comfort demand marks the early doom of the open models.

Harry W. Gaston, president of the Lexington Motor Company, who was vice-chairman of the closed car bow, predicts, as a result of his study of this phase of motor car show, predicts, as a result of thusiastic attention aroused by this special exposition, that 80 per cent of all cars manufactured will be closed models within the next five years.

Oakland Hangs Up Additional Economy Proof

Increasing the weight of the new Oakland cars in order to reinforce those parts that necessitated strengthening has not in any way decreased the remarkable economy of the car.

"Owners are reporting to us that they are averaging better than twenty miles to a gallon of gasoline, and in many instances owners are getting twenty-five miles to a gallon," says H. C. McVey, manager of the Los Angeles Oakland Company.

"Last week one of the new Oaklands was driven from Los Angeles to El Cajon, in San Diego county, mostly over dirt roads and mountain grades, and from there over into the Cuyamaca Lake district, and further on up into the Laguna Mountains. In all, the car traveled 513 miles and the gasoline consumption was but twenty-two gallons.

"This is, indeed, a real economy test as the road winds up and down the mountains and more than two-thirds of the route was over dusty dirt roads where the pulling was tough.

"On this same trip the Oakland used no lubricating oil. At least the guage showed the crank case apparently as full as when the car left Los Angeles, when it arrived back in the city."

REMOVABLE CUSHIONS MAKE QUITE A NOISE

UNIQUE FEATURE ON OVERLAND CARS IS RECEIVED ENTHUSIASTICALLY

The latest thing noted in motor car equipment along the local row is removable upholstery, which can be lifted out in sections for repair or replacement, or to shove the dents out of the body panels after a bump in the traffic. This unique feature seems to be exclusive with the Overland touring car.

The Willys-Knight and Overland dealers called attention to this exceptionally convenient feature of their light car in pointing to the remarkable scope of general utility that it covers.

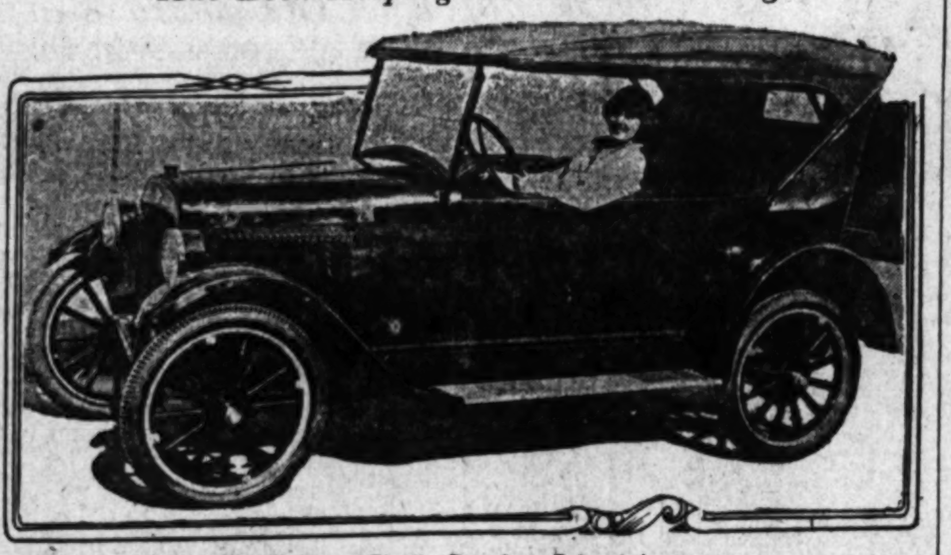
For the small rancher it is a great asset for without in anyway hurting the interior cushioning of his car he can lift out the back, sides and cushion of his tonneau and load it up with produce or anything else he wishes to transport to or from his little empire.

Then for pleasure purposes he merely replaces the sections of upholstery and presto the little car stands ready for a comfortable outing with fresh linings to support the passengers on their way. It is also exceptionally suited to the needs of the city man be he small merchant, artisan or office man.

CHEAP INSURANCE

The cheapest engine insurance in the world is clean oil in the motor, according to W. F. Seel of the Lexington-Los Angeles Company, distributors of the Ansted-motored Minute-Man six. Oil should be changed every 1000 miles at the most and the motor thoroughly flushed by running the motor with kerosene filling the crankcase. One quart of clean oil added to four quarts of dirty oil makes five quarts of dirty oil.

Has Been Keeping the Dealers Itching



Superior Chevrolet Finally Puts in a Belated Appearance

MOON DEALER BACK IN THE SOUTHLAND

WISDOM FINDS BUSINESS IN A HEALTHY CONDITION ALL OVER THE STATE

After a two weeks' trip through the northern part of the State, P. W. Wisdom, western representative of the Moon Motor Car Company, has returned to Los Angeles, his permanent headquarters.

"As in the southern part of the State, our business has increased in a remarkable degree," he states. "Dealers are delivering cars as fast as they receive them. Very naturally the new 6-40, at its remarkably low price is a strong favorite. Even at this late date, the factory is behind on orders on this particular model.

"One has only to travel over the State to appreciate how fast Los Angeles and all of Southern California is growing in a business way. It is by no means difficult to make comparisons. You not only see the difference—but you feel it. Prognostications made by railroad officials that tourist travel to Southern California this winter will break all records, are in accord with reports that I have received from the factory. Many Moon owners are going to ship their cars here this fall or immediately after the Christmas holidays."

PHAETON TYPE IS SEASON SENSATION

SO SAYS BYRON FOY, SPEAKING OF CONSTRUCTIVE STEPS IN INDUSTRY

Changes in the 1923 models of automobiles mark some of the most constructive steps in the automobile industry.

"Particularly the announcement of the sport phaeton type of open car has created one of the greatest sensations that the industry has even known," declares Byron C. Foy, vice-president and manager of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, local factory branch distributing Reo passenger cars and Speed Wagons. "Indicated by our own experience, the sport phaeton is destined for the greatest future that any type of open car has yet been accorded by the motoring public.

"In the sport touring car, the public recognizes that touring quality they have long waited for. Reo engineers and designers, in building the new Reo phaeton, have incorporated every possible convenience and an answer for every motoring need in the construction. Since it was first placed on display, it has been a constant source of attention from practically everyone who has visited our salesrooms."

NEW PRINCIPLE IS BIG SUCCESS

WATSON STABILATORS PROVE THEIR WORTH TO MOTORISTS

In spite of the tenacity with which the older generation clings to old ways of doing things, the new ways are better and are not only rapidly replacing the old, but are proving their right to use by the efficiency with which they discharge their duties. Such is the contention of H. R. Leonard, vice-president of the Watson Stabilator Company.

"A huge recent improvement," he continued, "the newest and best way of insuring automobile comfort, is the Watson stabilator. Constructed on a different principle from older devices that have been produced to check spring recoil, it acts as a simple brake on the rebound of the springs, checking the upward movement of the springs in exact proportion to the amount of spring compression, and thus effectively keeping the shock of road blows from passing on to car and passengers.

COVERS ON SPARES WILL SAVE TIRES

SUNLIGHT IS ONE OF RUBBER'S ENEMIES, SAYS MAX SHIFFNER

In a general discussion of tires, yesterday, Max Schiffner of the Commercial Tire Company gave out some new hints as to their care:

"Most every motorist," he said, "is impressed with the need of keeping his tires properly inflated. Tire manufacturers and automobile experts have for some time laid especial stress on the vital part played by correct air pressure in the life of a tire. The point cannot be too greatly emphasized.

"The wise car owner will also provide covers—or remember to use the ones he has—for his spare tires. Sunlight is a notorious enemy of rubber, as is unnecessary exposure to inclement weather."

EASY STARTING

The best and easiest way to start the motor in a car, according to the Los Angeles Chevrolet Dealers' Association, is to retard the spark, push the clutch pedal to the floor and then step on the starter button. This eliminates loading the battery with the extra and useless turning over of the transmission gears. If the motor has been standing long, however, it is well to choke it a bit, and turn it over a few times with the switch off before giving it the firing spark.

SOME TALL JUMPING

A recent review of registration and production statistics gives rise to the prophecy that the motor truck industry will jump into the billion-dollar class before the end of the year, says C. H. Wondries, salesmanager of the truck division of the White Auto Company, distributors in this territory of the White truck. Not counting supplies and accessories it is estimated that the production value alone will reach $250,000,000.

When thousands of satisfied owners agree that C. Harold Wills has "kept the faith," they are speaking volumes for the car that he has designed and built.

For Mr. Wills promised a car of unusual quality—a car that would express perfection of swift, easy, effortless travel—a car of beauty, character and dependability—and now from thousands of experienced users comes the unanimous testimony that the Wills Sainte Claire has "kept the faith."

If you ask why the Wills Sainte Claire is giving to its owners an absolutely new experience in motoring, we can invite you to raise the hood—examine the eight cylinders and the V-shape motor of the twin-four type, note the sixty degree angle at which the cylinders are set—the overhead valve and cams, and the many other features most of which are exclusive.

Then step into the car—the Sedan if you please—note its beauty and luxury, the completeness of its appointments, its roominess and comfort. Sit in the driver's seat. Throw in the clutch—then you will know what owners mean when they talk about a new thrill in motoring—a new experience that is exclusively and typically Wills Sainte Claire. The new enclosed models are now on display. We cordially invite you to see and ride in this wonderful car.

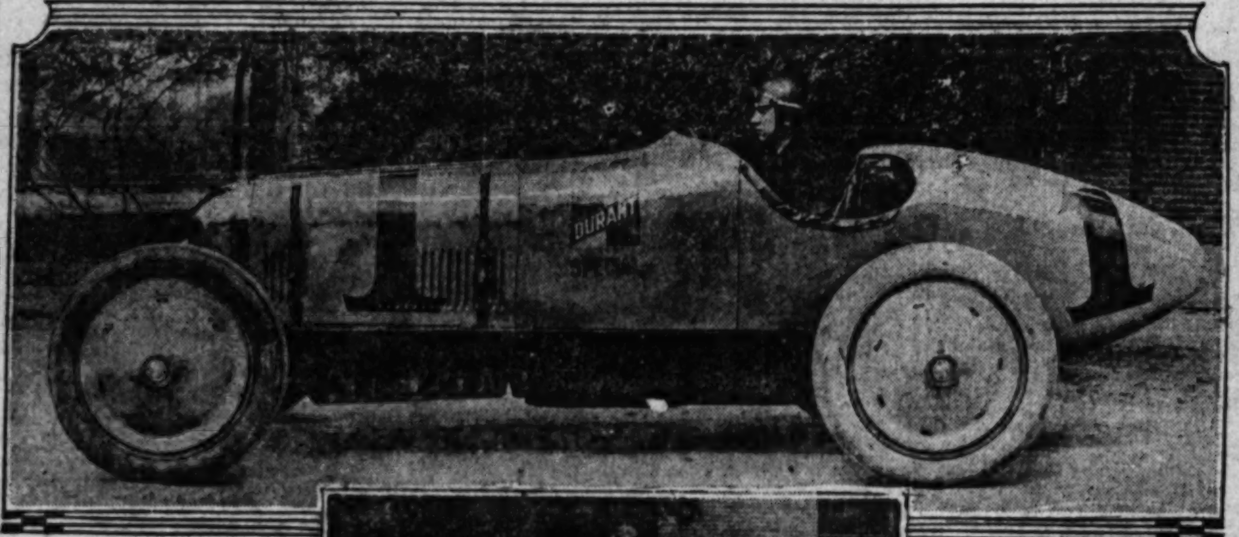
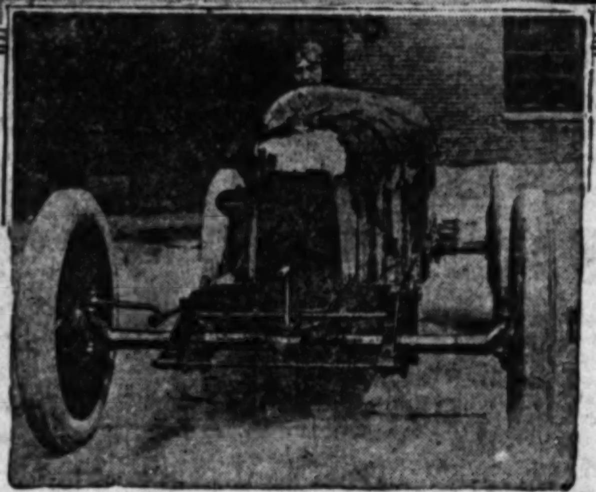
The Newest Thing in the Speed Racing Game





Jimmy Murphy's Sleek-Looking Chariot

With this Miller-powered motor, just turned out by the Miller manufacturing plant, the Irish go-fast champion turned a lap on the Beverly Hills tureen at the rate of 123.62 miles per hour. The car will receive its baptism of fire in the race at Cotati on Sunday. Murphy's car is the first of the five jobs which are to race under Cliff Durant's colors to be turned out.

ACCESSORY EXHIBIT TO BE A LARGE ONE

Plans for the automobile show are taking rapid formation. Southern California motorists will be given as complete a showing of things automotive as it is possible for the members of the trade to gather, both in the vehicular and accessory lines, and no one is better equipped to gather material for an automobile show than those people.

Many will find their way to the accessory tents, because of the fact that the life of the motorist is not complete without all the accessories that genius has devised for comfort, both mental and physical, and conveniences that are needed in everyday life. So declared C. A. Roeschm, head of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, distributors of the Alemite products, and who will have a complete showing of all the products distributed in this State on display in a prominent position.

Bob Williams Tells of Big Valley Season

The phenomenal sucess experienced during the year 1922 by resorts in the Yosemite Valley was told upon his arrival by W. H. "Bob" Williams, who has just completed his first year as assistant manager of one the valley camps, and who was in Los Angeles for a few days last week.

A total of 100,506 persons visited Yosemite National Park this year, the first time that a season's attendance has ever passed over the hundred thousand mark, and Camp Curry, which yearly gains fame with the famous gorge itself, received no small share of the tourist business that accompanied the overflow of visitors.

Williams declared that improvements and additions to the camp are coming along in fine shape, and predicts that the touring season of 1923 will find Curry ready to accommodate any number of guests who are certain to swell a greater attendance roll than that of this year.

MURPHY "STEPS ON IT"

A fighting little Irishman proved to a few interested onlookers one day last week just how real the first unit of the Durant racing team is, and proved just how much the Los Angeles and Southern Californian racing fans may expect when the five cars being rushed to completion at Harry Miller's plant here face the starting flag on the Beverly Hills bowl Thanksgiving Day.

The simple statement that five matches, held by as many of the "rail-birds" simultaneously caught Jimmy Murphy traveling around the mile and a quarter lap at Beverly in 36 2-5 seconds, needs elaboration.

Understand that the car was on its first trial, and made that speed after turning but a few laps when the motor was not really "warmed up" and in addition, the brakes were dragging slightly, and the carburetor was not given a second adjustment. That the car would go out and turn up a speed of 123.62 miles per hour is just an indication of what the rest of the boys will have to travel to beat "Cliff" Durant's five-car team.

Murphy's car appears on the official entry list as No. 1. The other Durant specials will bear the numerals of 4, 5, 6 and 7. These four cars have not yet been completed, although two of them have already passed through the paint shop.

Murphy's steel mount created an impression long to be remembered as it streaked over the boards and riding high into the banked turns at the marvellous speed developed in its first tests. The canary yellow color, with the red numerals and the red running gear and wheels, and a streak of nickel-plated metal here and there, set the car off in a way that makes it easy to follow, and moreover in a way that makes the speed almost unbelieveable. The first remark after the first fast lap was caught by the watches was that it "didn't look like he was traveling better than 40 (seconds) flat" and as he flashed by the pits a second time, if it had not been for the fact that more than one watch was clocking the trials, he looked even slower.

Both Harry Miller and Reeves B. Dutton, the latter being in active management of the Durant team, declared that they hoped to develop in the Durant cars the fastest automobiles that the 183 cubic inch class has known and while Murphy's is not the fastest time that has yet been caught, work on the cars is expected to bring the time down even faster. Both Jimmy and Ernie Olson, his mechanic, are putting in night and day work on the new car, and other work on the rest of the team is progressing in like manner.

Stays Within the Law and Sets Records

Just how far shall automobile enthusitsts go in breaking highway laws to demonstrate what their pet cars have underneath their hoods? Edict has recently been sent out by the State highway authorities to the effect that such runs are not to be tolerated in the future. But, according to Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, Velie distributors, the stamina of a motor car can be demonstrated beyond all cavil without even bending the highway laws, if careful planning of the stunt run is done with the definite purpose of avoiding a clash with the laws.

Lord points to the many Velie records, each of which has been wholly successful in showing the car's worth, and none of which has busted any regulation on the State law books.

"Spectacular motor-car tests are splendid, provided they do not endanger lives on the public highways," said Lord. "In all of the years we have put Velie cars through strenuous tests we have yet to find it necessary to break any laws or endanger human life.

"The Velie holds two cups for being the first car into Yosemite over the winter snows. It made what is perhaps the most spectacular of all motor-car runs in climbing down into the Grand Canyon to the Colorado River and back up again, and the present model Velie made a new world's touring-car record on the strenuous run up Mt. Wilson, yet in all these spectacular feats the public highways were never turned into speedways, no laws were broken, no lives endangered."

CHEAP CURRENT AT SOME HOURS

"It is a fact not generally known that electric power can be purchased at bargain prices," says Hadley Outland, sales director for J. Jerome Canavan, distributor of Walker electric trucks for the Pacific Coast.

This does not mean that the remarkable economy of Walker truck operation is obtained only through the use of "off-peak current," as a saving of 40 to 50 per cent can be effected over the old style method of gasoline truck delivery even when the electric truck is charged with current purchased at normal rates, but the additional saving is frequently made use of by inserting the charging plug of the Walker electric during the hours when the power companies are anxious to sell their surplus current at what may be justly termed "a bargain price."

USED-CAR SALE IS GOING OVER

GUARANTEE BACK OF APPERSON RENEWED CARS CAUSES SALES

The motoring public has come to look upon guaranteed rebuilt and renewed automobiles much in the same manner as they do new and factory-guaranteed cars. That is the consensus of opinion among automobile men throughout the country, who have found that by backing the cars they sell and selling the service idea together with confidence in the merchandise they turn over, the confidence is returned to them manyfold.

According to Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the local Apperson factory branch, the Apperson Motor Car Company, this has been one of the greatest factors in the success of the used-car sale announced two weeks ago by the local company. Since that time, Hanshue declares, the sales organization has turned out an average of a car a day, and because of its success, it will be continued for another week.

"A used-car sale for our organization is cause for a celebration," Hanshue states. "The present sale is the first event of its kind that we have had for over twenty-one months, and because of this fact much confidence is placed in the merchandise by prospective buyers who have inspected the cars."

PICTURE MAN ASKS CAR DUPLICATION

MEXICAN PRODUCER ASKS FOR AUBURN BEAUTY SIX OF SPECIAL DESIGN

B. J. Torres, the owner and general manager of the Torres Film Company, the largest motion picture studio in the City of Mexico, saw a photograph of the special double-tone leather mohair top, with the body painted in brown and tan, of an Auburn Beauty Six, created by W. J. Burt of the W. J. Burt Motor Car Company, local Auburn distributors, and liked it so well that he asked the Auburn dealer in the City of Mexico to have it duplicated.

The dealer there immediately wired the factory to have Mr. Burt express this model to him so he could copy it for this motion picture producer. Mr. Torres uses the Auburn Beauty Six exclusively in his productions for the reason that, as he was distributor of the Auburn Beauty Six in the City of Mexico for a number of years, he knows from the closest observation that the Auburn Beauty Six is especially suited to rough road usage, stiff mountain grades and hot desert sands that are constantly encountered while his cinema artists are "out on location."

LIBERTY SI

Power—Plus

Power is manifest in the new Liberty Six Triple-Head motor upon even a casual observation — all the power you'll ever need. Six cylinders, 3⅛ by 5 inches (bore and stroke), develop a full 53 horsepower.

You don't have to take our statement for this — actual demonstration will back up everything we claim. Power is seemingly effortless.

The Triple-Head motor is just another of the many features of the new Liberty Six. Prices have been reduced to a point where we offer greater value in the Liberty than in any other car in its class.

PRE-EMINENT IN MOTOR WORLD

The Stearns-Knight Has a Good History

Sleeve-Valve Principle is a Big Success

Vibration at Any Speed is Done Away With

The pre-eminent motor cars of today are those built by the pioneers of the industry—organizations that, by reason of concentration of effort, have endured and prospered through the years. The F. B. Stearns Company has been a notable exponent of the policy of concentration.

The first Stearns car, built twenty-five yeas ago, was, like all other cars of its time, an experiment—but not for long, says Lynn C. Buxton, Southern California distributor.

"The first Stearns motor was a good motor. Aside from minor improvements no radical changes were made for several years. In 1909 the F. B. Stearns Company conducted very thorough and exhaustive tests of the sleeve-valve type of engine, the invention of C. Y. Knight. These experiments proved conclusively that the sleeve-valve principle is the greatest advancement ever made in gasoline engine construction.

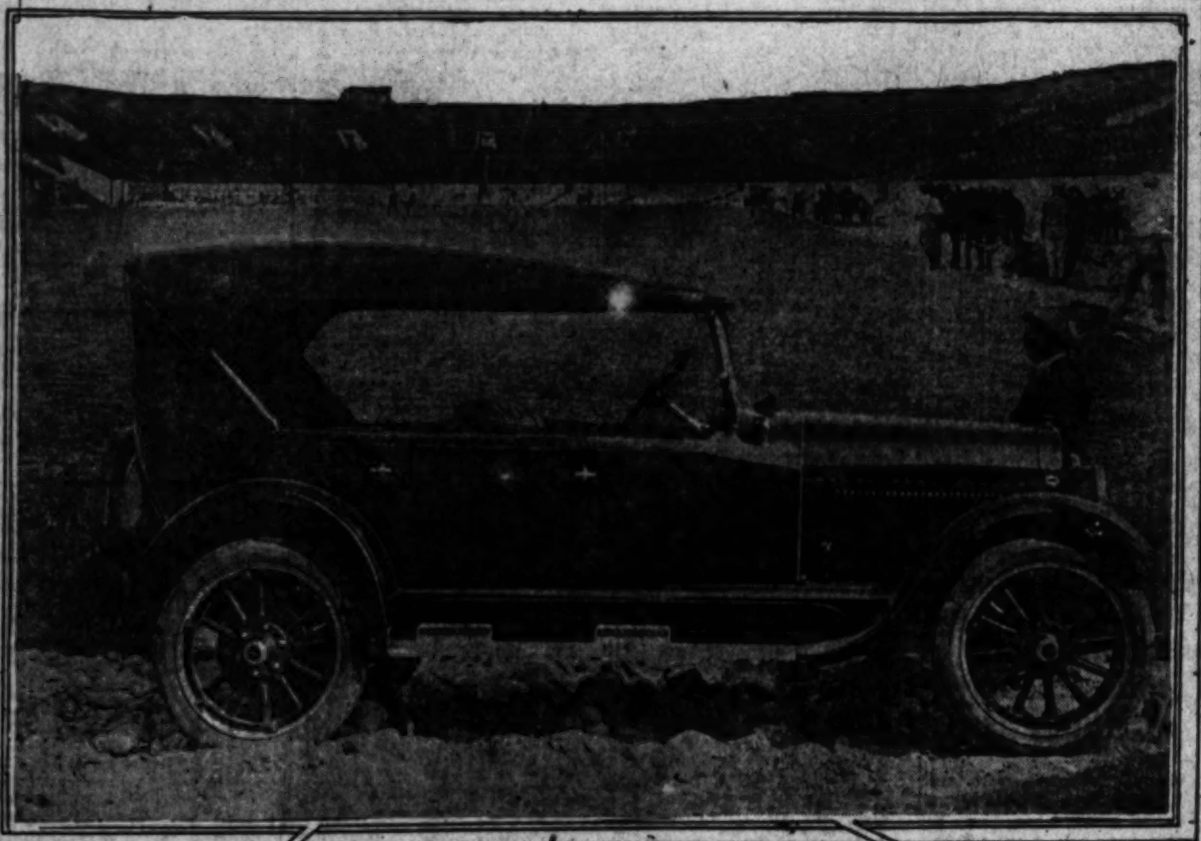
"Therefore, in 1911, the F. B. Stearns Company realized that there are certain advantages in 6-cylinder construction, and that many buyers prefer this type regardless. Therefore, the management of the F. B. Stearns Company began many months ago to experiment with a 6-cylinder engine equipped with sleeve valves. When the first engine was tested it was discovered that for some peculiar reason it developed no vibration at any speed.

"Believing this unheard-of-features to be merely a coincidence, another 6-cylinder Stearns-Knight engine was built and tested, and likewise found to possess this seemingly impossible quality. Since then, hundreds of these remarkable motors have been built and tested on the block and in actual road service, and none has developed the slightest trace of periodic vibration."

SAME DESIGN

"All the lamps on the new Sport Model are identical in design and vary only in size," says H. E. Franklin, of the California Oakland Motor company.

Where Golden Bear and Trojan Clashed Yesterday



New Football Stadium in Brookside Park is an Affair of Large and Elastic Proportions

The giant inclosure which is to be the scene of the annual East vs. West pigskin games was formally dedicated by the titanic clash between California and U.S.C. Arrangement was made to seat 46,000 persons for this game, but the stadium will be enlarged to accommodate 61,000 persons for the New Year's Day contest. A six-cylinder 1923 Buick touring car was sent out from the Howard Automobile Company to route the way to the field, and was photographed inside the stadium. George Stanley stands beside the car.

WATER CREATES GRIEF

While it is entirely necessary to keep fire away from gasoline tanks, lines and carburetors as well, it is a good plan to keep that opposite of fire, in other words, water, away from them also. J. A. Bennel, general manager of the Los Angeles Haynes branch, spends much of his time telling Haynes owners that while the effects are not nearly as disastrous, water in the gasoline will cause much grief and a steady application of language hardly approved by the Bible when the engine starts to miss, and finally quits altogether, until the water is cleaned out.

New Stadium to Care for Pigskin Bugs

Pasadena's new football stadium, built for the Tournament of Roses Association to replace the one dismantled at the corner of California and Wilson streets, was dedicated for use yesterday with a game between the Blue and Gold warriors of California and the Cardinal and Gold athletes of the University of Southern California.

The new stadium is located in Brookside park in the Arroyo Seco and is the result of three years of planning on top of seven and one-half months of work. It was ready to seat 46,000 persons for the California-U. S. C. struggle, but will be enlarged by January, when the annual East versus West conflict is staged, to a seating capacity of 61,000.

The cost up to January will be $300,000, but the ultimate cost will be larger as the plans call for the replacing of all wooden seats with concrete, section by section, and the seating capacity can be further enlarged to accommodate 80,000 persons.

Inasmuch as most of the travel to the football games to be held in the new stadium will be by automobile, a scout car, George Stanley driving, was sent out from the Howard Automobile Company, to map the route of travel.

The car, a 1923 6-45 model, pursued its way out North Broadway to Pasadena Avenue, branching off at Avenue 64, past the Annandale Country Club and over the Colorado street bridge, from which a view of the stadium may be had. Turning left after the bridge was crossed a junction with Seco street was effected, from where it is a stone's throw to the park and adequate parking space for over 10,000 machines.

ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY

The building of a vibrationless motor was discovered accidently by the F. B. Stearns Company, according to Lynn C. Buxton, local distributor.

THE MOTOR ARAB

The roving gypsy is being rapidly supplanted to a large extent by a new economic character, the motor Arab, according to members of the Los Angeles Chevrolet Dealers' Association. He is more prosperous than the road-running nondescript, and almost invariably plys a trade, aided by a light small car, particularly adapted to his mode of existence due to its economy of first cost and upkeep.

IT ALL DEPENDS

Q.: Kindly let me know whether a rebored motor block is as good as a new one and what advantages either one would have over the other. P. P.

A.: I will say that a properly refinished block is sometimes better than a new one for very often the new blocks are not accurately finished and therefore, a refinished block might be better. All depends on how the bore is refinished.

AMONG THE FANS

Cleveland was selected as the place to hold the sixth American tourney, which will be staged in 1924.

The following officers were elected to serve until that time: President, E. H. Green of Hannibal, Mo.; secretary, J. G. Finlay of Newark, N. J.; treasurer, E. J. Phelan of Lynn, Mass.; vice-presidents, Willis G. Hill of Lawrence, Mass., John Dougherty of Los Angeles, Charles G. Mercer of Syracuse, N. Y., Morris Steinberg of Detroit, Mich., Frank G. Farmer of Wichita, Kan., and Preston Ketchum of Milwaukee, Wis.

CHAMPIONSHIP TO ASA LONG

Asa Long, the 18-year-old wizard from Toledo, O., won the checker championship of the United States by defeating A. Jordan in the finals. Jordan took second place in the last four tourneys, but seems to lack the punch to win the championship.

FIFTH AMERICAN TOURNEY

At time of going to press, I have not received a complete report of the tourney, so can only give what I have been able to make out of a few newspaper clippings I have received. The first day's play was given last week, so this report will start with the second day's play. In the play-off of the two ties from first day, Townsend beat Newcomb 1 to 0 and 7 draws. Levine and Scott went 14 games, 3 to 3 and 8 draws, as each was penalized ½ point.

*—Defaulted.

The second round eliminated Roberts, C. Taylor, W. Gould, McClellan, Durgin, Crumb, Nelson and Upton.

THIRD ROUND

All I could learn of this round was that A. Jordan beat L. M. Lewis, and that Farmer, Ostrander, Ross, Davis, M. Gould, Scott, Jelly and Thomas suffered their second defeat. Asa Long and V. C. Townsend played 23 draws and the committee called their sitting off with ½ point each.

FOURTH ROUND

Wins.	Name—	Draws.	Name—	Wins.
1	V. C. Townsend	1	J. J. Earley	0

2	V. C. Townsend	1	C. Booth	0
1	J. Duffy	2	Ray Gould	1
0	W. G. Hill	1	S. Weslow	2
1	Asa Long	13	G. M. Tanner	0
2	A. Jordan	1	H. B. Reynolds	0
2	L. Ginsberg	2	E. C. Waterhouse	1

S. Levine drew a bye.

This round disposed of Booth, Hill and Reynolds.

SIXTH ROUND

Jordan defeated Waterhouse, 1 to 0 and 3 draws; Asa Long beat Weslow, 1 to 0 and 7 draws; Ginsberg, 1; Duffy, 0, and 3 draws; Townsend, 2; R. Gould, 0; draws, 0.

SEVENTH ROUND

Jordan beat Townsend, 1 to 0 and 3 draws, winning the White side of the Single Corner. Asa Long disposed of J. Duffy by the same score, 1 to 0 and 3 draws.

Ginsberg had a bye.

This left the championship to be decided between Jordan, Long and Ginsberg. So far neither Jordan or Long had lost a game. Jordan had won 10 and 16 draws, while Long had won 7 and 45 draws.

In the eighth round Long and Ginsberg played to see who would have the honor of playing Jordan for the championship. The playing of Long is remarkable, as he is still in his teens, and in another two or three years he will have to be reckoned with for the world championship honors.

First, second and third places will go to Jordan, Long and Ginsberg; Townsend and Duffy played for fourth and fifth prizes; S. Weslow came sixth; Waterhouse and R. Gould played for seventh and eighth; Tanner took care of ninth prize; Reynolds and Hill played for tenth and eleventh prizes; C. Booth won twelfth place, while Levine took care of thirteenth.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 1277

A few nights ago Arthur Jensen and Joe Reyburn happened to call at my home the same evening. This is one of the games they played:

Black—Reyburn. White—Jensen.

11-15	27-24	11-28	30-23	1-17
24-20	7-10	18-11	13-10	6-10

29-25	6 15	15-10	3- 7
10-14	20-16	9-13	10- 3

a—28-24 is regular, but the text is often taken.
b—Reyburn said this move was questionable, but, from his after play, he had evidently been over it before.
c—23-19 looks like it might cause Black some trouble, but the text looked strong at the time.
d—From here to the end the play is both critical and interesting.
e—13-16 is no better.

VARIATION 1

In the Fourth American Tourney, J. F. Horr, against the editor, varied with:

3- 8	7-23	6- 9g	10-19	18 27
26 22	31-26	28-24	23-16	23- 6
9-13	8-11	16-20	12-19	1-10
23-19f	26-19	30-26	32 16	Drawn
11-16	11-16	20-27	2- 7
20-11	27-23	19-15	16-23

f—This is probably a loss. 23-24 would have run the game into published play, but that may have been what Mr. Horr wanted.
g—This allows a draw. 4-8 looks like a win. Against 4-8 I intended to play 28-24, then if 16-20, 30-26 same as in the play above, but it loses by: 22 27, 19-15, 10-19, 23-16, 12-19, 23-16, 8-12, 16-11, 2-7, etc. Black wins.

WHAT should concern you more than the electrical system on your car or truck? Upon this equipment, you must depend for the power to start your engine, for the spark that keeps it going, for the lights that enable you to drive at night. Even more, you must depend upon it actually to produce the electricity which it uses to perform these vital functions. Reason enough, surely, for you to make quality in electrical equipment an important consideration in your choice of either an automobile or motor truck.

Gardner Pilot Spends Only Thirty Dollars

And Has a Swell Time With His Friends

Demonstrating the independence that comes with the ownership of a dependable car, William Ring of Denver has just driven his light four Gardner to Los Angeles in six days at a total cost of $32.65.

His record of the journey, filed with the McGill Motor Company, local Gardner distributors, is one good reason, in the opinion of William G. Fisher why the railroads rave sometimes.

Ring left Denver on a Monday morning, and arrived here the next Saturday evening. Before he started he changed the oil, in his motor and bought only 3½ quarts on the 1500-mile trip.

Loaded with the baggage of his party Ring's car weighed 3679 pounds. He bought ninety gallons of gasoline on the way and one pound of differential grease. He had one puncture and used twelve quarts of water in the radiator.

He says the entire party slept in hotels every night and stopped at cafes and lunch rooms for their meals, during which time they also paid storage for the housing of the car.

Six days' travel by motor car, a delightful tour through the western country, at an average daily cost of $5.45, that is the history of Mr. Ring's trip to Los Angeles.

He says they ran into about 500 miles of bad roads all together, none of which stalled the Gardner, despite its extra weight, although several other cars of all classes were stalled. They encountered rain and hail storms, wash-outs and cloud-bursts, but Ring says the Gardner never faltered.

Reaction From Cheap Battery is Under Way

Slowly the reaction from the cheap special battery, built down to a price rather than up to standard of service, is being manifested according to Eugene Clark, 4th and Olive, local dealer in Gill batteries.

"Many motorists lately have purchased Gill batteries and stated that they are through with cheap batteries forever," says Clark. "Only a few days ago a motorist came in and stated that his battery had gone dead after it had been in service only a few months. It was one of those cheap, nameless, irresponsible batteries. Upon opening it we found the plates all shot. He admitted that he had allowed some battery doctors with a wonderful recharging compound to give it a dose when it was all in.

"This mystery liquid completely wrecked the plates, which were none too good in the first place, and he admitted that he had been stung twice, first in the purchase of a poor battery that sold for a low price, and second in the rapid recharging preparation.

'From now on this motorist advised me he is going to purchase only high grade batteries, and he started by buying a Gill which is built without separators. This construction eliminates 95 per cent of the causes of battery troubles and more motorists are beginning to realize this day by day."

PRACTICALLY EVERY PART IS MANUFACTURED IN THE EASTERN PLANT

Few people realize what minute and painstaking details enter into the manufacture of a high quality automobile, says Don P. Smith, general manager of the W. P. Herbert Company, distributors of the Cleveland six and Chandler cars.

"The story of the building of the Cleveland six would almost make a best seller in itself if properly popularized. The Cleveland is not an assembled car which has one part bought here and another somewhere else. It is practically all actually manufactured right in the Cleveland six plant which, incidentally, is one of the most modern in the country. It has a production capacity of 180 cars a day on a single shift, which can be increased to 250 cars per day when a double shift is used.

"The Cleveland motor, the transmission, rear axle and the gears are manufactured, cut and heat treated complete in the Cleveland factory. The bodies, made by Fisher, are trimmed and painted in the factory and the tops and curtains, and all the nickelin work, are done there. The Cleveland valve-in-head six-cylinder motor has three and one-sixteenth bore and four and one-half inch stroke and develops forty-five horsepower, actually delivered to the rear wheels, which takes the car up all hills with no laboring."

UNABLE TO FIND ANY WEAK POINTS

LEXINGTON DISTRIBUTOR IS MORE THAN PLEASED WITH THE NEW MOTORS

"We thought the new Lexington had everything; but we were wrong," said W. F. Seel of the Lexington-Los Angeles Company, distributors of the Ansted-motored Minute Man Six. "After a careful check-up of all the points, extras, equipment and everything that goes to make up a fine car we find just one thing lacking, and that is 'a weak point.'

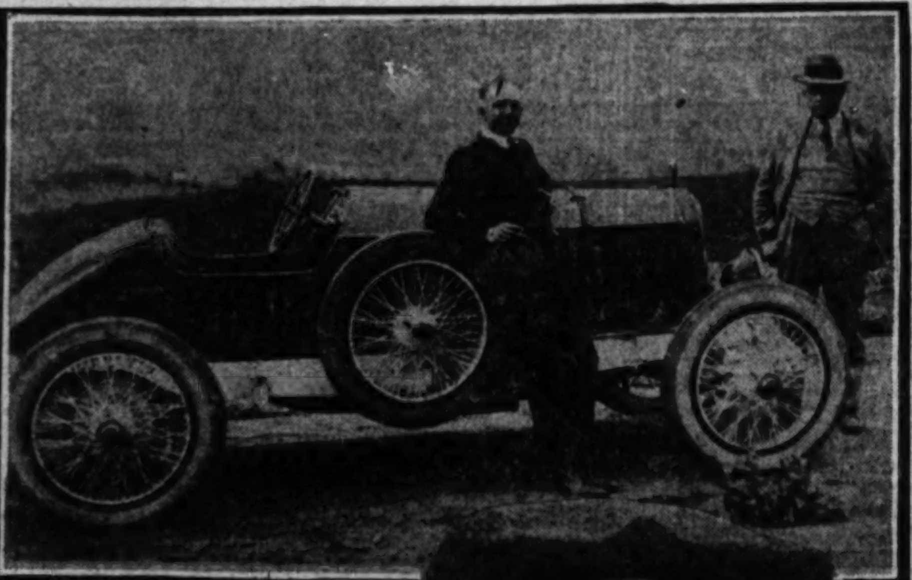
"The Lexington never did have any weak point that we could find, but evidently Lexington engineers were taking no chances when they sought to improve this year's model, for in order to make assurance doubly sure they added the double triangular center cross-member in the frame, a piece of shaped and fitted finely tempered steel that makes chassis twists impossible.

"A ride in the Lexington will convince the most skeptical of this perfect rigidity obtained in a way that does not detract in the slightest degree from the lithe resilience of this jaunty aristocrat of the boulevard."

CAR OUTPUT WILL EXCEED ESTIMATES

Latest automotive statistics indicate a 1922 production and sale in the United States of over 1,800,000 cars. This is in excess of even the most optimistic estimate made earlier in the year. In spite of the scrapping of 1,100,000 cars during the year, there will be a clear gain to the industry of over 600,000 cars. On this basis, replacement markets alone for the next five years will require more automobiles than were built during the past five years.

Holder of the New Palomar Mountain Record



The Paige 6-66 Which Set Some Flashy Speed Figures

The Paige special pictured here broke one record on Palomar and set a new one. On Friday, October 13, the west grade was made in high gear, and on Saturday, October 14, the speed record was broken, the new time of 28m. 44⅖s. being established. J. M. Sterling, general manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, pictured below, drove both trips.

NEW PALOMAR RECORD

Paige 6-66 Cuts Over One Minute From Running Time up Famous Mountain

The motor-car dealers of San Diego are very proud of their famous Palomar Mountain and the real test of power and skill in driving which it offers to car and pilot. During the last few months several cars have negotiated this steep mountain road, with its more than twelve miles of climbing and something over 200 turns, many of them of the real "hairpin" variety.

Last week J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, and an experienced speed pilot himself, visited San Diego at the request of F. B. Naylor, the San Diego Paige and Jewett dealer. Sterling drove the Paige 6-66 special which won fame by winning the Pike's Peak climb two years ago, and his only object in visiting the city down the coast was to conquer the famous Palomar Mountain grade in high gear.

Despite the fact that the day was Friday and the thirteenth of the month Sterling drove out to the famous mountain, and, without a single preliminary trip to "spy" out the way—for he had never before been over the road—he faced the steep climb and made the trip in approximately thirty-one minutes. The gears had been locked in high by Walter Foulcke of San Diego, who rode with Sterling as observer, and twice it was necessary to almost come to a dead stop, once because of pulling up behind a horse and buggy on the grade and again because of running into a freak fog that made caution necessary in driving around the sharp turns.

Perfectly satisfied with his feat and tired out by the nerve strain of the drive, which is a most difficult one, Sterling returned to San Diego for the night. Almost before he was up in the morning, Naylor called him on the telephone and asked him to try for the time record up the mountain, then held by another car.

Sterling is a game guy, and consented. Syd Cox, a San Diego newspaperman, was taken along as timer and observer, riding in the Paige with Sterling. Watches were checked, and the stop watches, in addition to that carried by Cox, were snapped as the car started up the grade, and again by other observers as it finished at the top. When the time was checked up it was found that the previous mark of twenty-nine minutes fifty-nine seconds had been broken by more than a minute, the new record being twenty-eight minutes forty-four two-fifths seconds, and yet Sterling says the Paige still had something left.

This Paige 6-66 with which these two remarkable records were made is equipped with standard Paige 6-66 engine and standard equipment except for the gear ratio, which has been changed from the Paige standard of 4.55 to 1 to 5 to 1, and the wheel base, which is 104 on this special car instead of 131, as is standard. The fact that this car has been driven many times at speeds in excess of sixty miles an hour is real evidence of the remarkable power developed by this 6-66 power plant.

PISTON RING FUNCTIONING

The average motorist is not familiar with the function of the piston ring, and it may therefore be well to explain that in gasoline engines, with the pistons moving up and down at a terrific rate of speed, it is necessary to have them surrounded by some kind of metal packing, properly lubricated to eliminate friction, and at the same time to fit the ring grooves tight enough to hold what is called compression on the up stroke of the piston before it reaches the firing point.

Most cars when manufactured are equipped with a one-piece ring, which works very satisfactorily for a certain number of miles, owing to the fact that the rings fit the ring grooves properly and the cylinders are as round as it is humanly possible to make them.

Sooner or later the engine will start to misfire, smoke, lose power and foul the spark plugs and it is all due to those little pieces of iron called piston rings. They have worn the cylinders out-of-round and have worn the ring grooves on either side of the ring, thereby allowing the oil which is used for lubricating the rings only, to work itself around in back of the ring and up into the combustion chamber, causing all of these troubles.

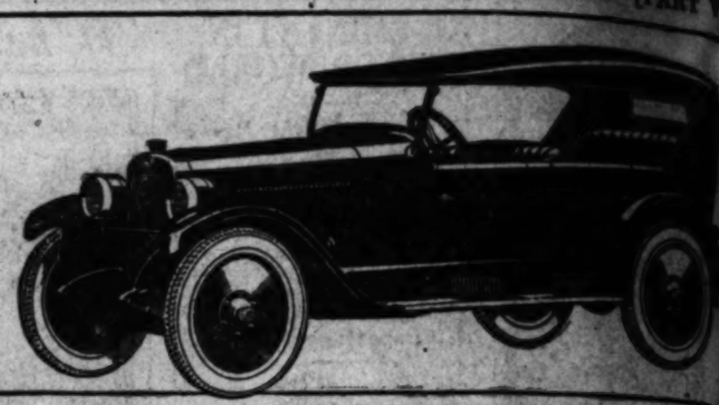
Heretofore, in this case, it has been necessary to have the cylinders rebored or reground and new pistons and rings fitted, but, according to F. L. Carley of 852 South Figueroa street, Coast representative for Panyard piston rings, reboring or regrinding is absolutely unnecessary, regardless of how much out-of-round the cylinders may be, or how much the ring grooves are worn, because the Panyard piston ring goes out-of-round and completely fills the ring groove, thereby not allowing any oil or compression to pass the ring.

WATT MORELAND BUYS A WILLS ST. CLAIRE

When Watt Moreland, president of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, drives from the Los Angeles factory to San Francisco and return he wastes no time on the road. One day is his limit and often he leaves one city in the afternoon and arrives at the other end in the early morning and is right on the job without the loss of a single day. Of course for such minute schedule trips he must have a car that will meet his requirements. Last week he purchased from the Western Motors Company a Wills Sainte Claire roadster.

HAMMERING HELPS

Constant hammering into the public's mind the value of lubrication has done some remarkable things, according to C. A. Roesch, head of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, for practically everyone who spends a little time in "high pressuring" his or her car makes great inroads on upkeep expense. Not a little of this, he says, is due to the system of lubrication advances by automotive engineers in the employ of the Alemite system manufacturers.



Chalmers Six Admired Everywhere

The Chalmers Six owner enjoys the peculiar satisfaction that only comes when a possession is admired by everyone.

Back of the graceful lines and outstanding beauty of the Chalmers Six is a finer performance due to its advanced development of the six-cylinder engine.

You, too, will appreciate how fine a car it is, if you will request us to demonstrate its superiorities.

OH, A POCKET BOOK- JUST FULL OF MONEY- LOOK AT IT- THE PERSON MUST HAVE BEEN DEAF TO DROP ALL OF THAT MONEY AND NOT HEAR IT-
IT MUST HAVE SOUNDED LIKE DUMPING A LOAD OF COAL- LOOK HOW MUCH THERE IS - $$30^{85}$ AND A RAILROAD TICKET TOO- I COULD RIDE ON THE TRAIN IF I WANTED TO- AND HERE'S HER CARD WITH HER ADDRESS-
I'LL TAKE IT TO HER AND SHE'LL GIVE ME A BIG REWARD AND PAPA WILL HAVE TO GIVE ME JUST DOUBLE WHAT SHE GIVES ME- AND THEN I'LL HAVE ALMOST ENOUGH TO GET MY PONY AND CART-
DRUGS
WHEN SHE SEES HOW HONEST I AM I'LL BET SHE'LL ASK ME INTO THE HOUSE AND TELL ME WHAT A GOOD BOY I AM- MAYBE SHE'LL GIVE ME SOME CAKE AND PIE- MAYBE SHE'S GOT SOME ICE CREAM TOO-
GEE- ISN'T THIS A WONDERFUL PLACE? SHE'S RICH- I'LL BET SHE'LL GIVE ME ALL OF THIS- SHE WON'T EVEN TAKE THE POCKET BOOK - I CAN GIVE THAT TO MAMA FOR A PRESENT-
WHEN I GET HOME AND SHOW ALL OF THIS MONEY TO PAPA AND TELL HIM I FOUND A RICH LADY'S POCKET BOOK AND TOOK IT TO HER HOME AND SHE SAID-" YOU HONEST LITTLE BOY! YOU CAN KEEP IT ALL"- AND PAPA HAS TO GIVE ME TWICE THAT MUCH- WHEW! WON'T THAT BE A LOT OF MONEY?
LADY- I FOUND YOUR POCKETBOOK AND THERE WAS SOME OF THE MONEY LYING ON THE SIDEWALK- I PICKED IT ALL UP AND BROUGHT IT ALL OF THE WAY FROM MAIN AND SIXTH STREET TO YOU-
WELL ISN'T THAT WONDERFUL- JUST A GOOD HONEST LITTLE BOY- I'M GOING TO REWARD YOU TOO-
HERE IS A NICE BRIGHT SHINY COIN FOR YOU- AND ALWAYS REMEMBER, LITTLE BOY, AS YOU GO THROUGH LIFE THAT HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY- THEY NEVER BUILD JAILS FOR HONEST PEOPLE-
STINGY OLD THING! GAVE ME A PENNY AFTER ALL THAT WALK- OVER A MILE- I'LL GET SCOLDED WHEN I GET HOME TOO FOR BEING AWAY SO LONG- MAYBE MY DADDY WILL WHIP ME TOO-
BOO! HOO! HOO! HOO!!! I FOUND A LADY'S POCKET BOOK AND IT WAS JUST FULL OF MONEY AND I CARRIED IT ALL THE WAY TO HER HOUSE, OVER A MILE- THERE WAS OVER $$30^{00}$ IN IT TOO AND SHE ONLY GAVE ME A PENNY- I WISH I HAD KEPT IT ALL NOW-
NOW CHESTER- IS THAT NICE?
TO BE HONEST IS ITS OWN REWARD - WHY SHOULD YOU EXPECT ANYTHING FROM THIS LADY? SHE LOST HER POCKET BOOK AND YOU FOUND IT- IT WASN'T YOUR MONEY- IT WAS YOUR DUTY TO RETURN IT- YOU SHOULD BE HAPPY KNOWING THAT YOU DID AN HONEST ACT- MONEY THAT YOU DON'T HONESTLY EARN WILL NEVER BRING YOU HAPPINESS- WELL- GIVE ME THE PENNY AND I'LL GIVE YOU THREE CENTS-
SO THAT'S THE PENNY IS IT? THAT'S A FIVE DOLLAR GOLD PIECE- WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THAT CHESTER? THAT MEANS I'VE GOT TO GIVE YOU $$10^{00}$ - THAT MAKES $$15^{00}$ SUBTRACT THAT FROM $$39^{35}$ AND YOU ONLY NEED $$24^{35}$ MORE TO BUY THAT PONY AND CART- NOW SAY IT DOESN'T PAY TO BE HONEST-

The ONLY CHILD

BY W. E. HILL

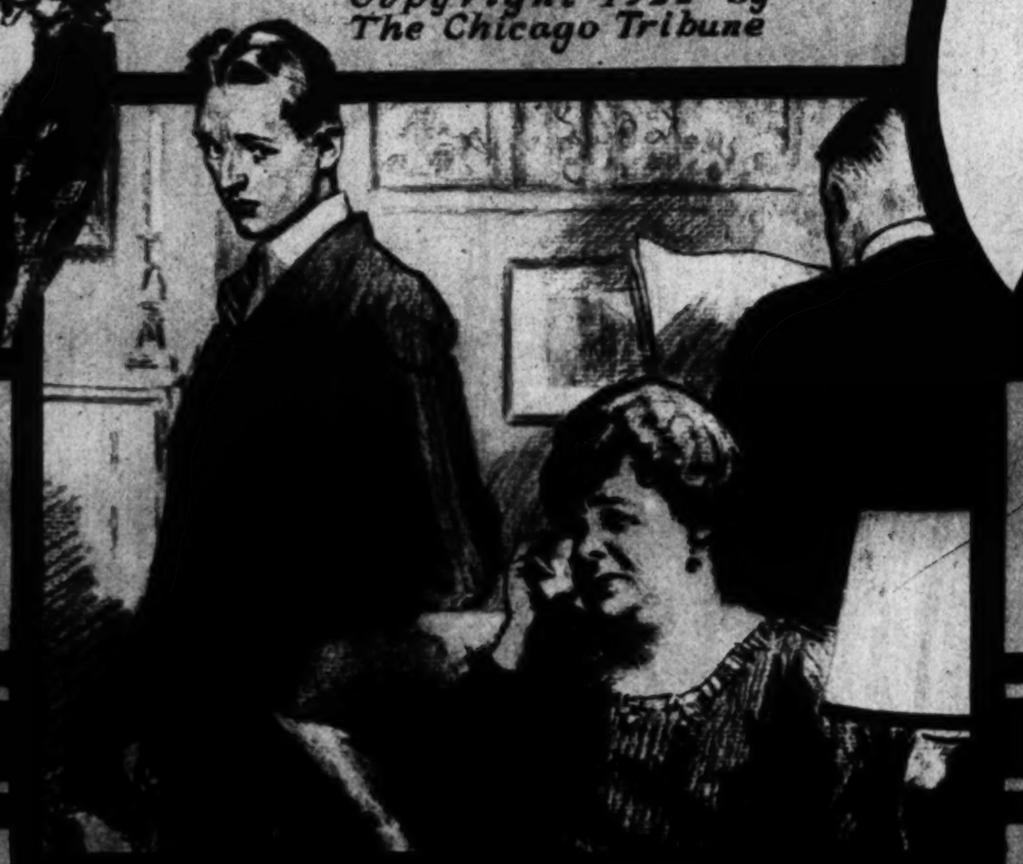
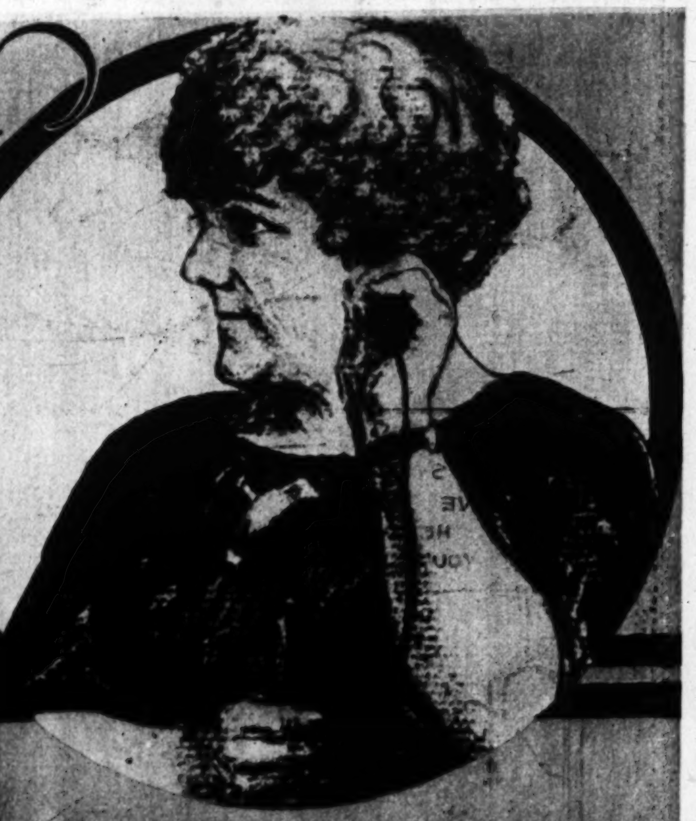
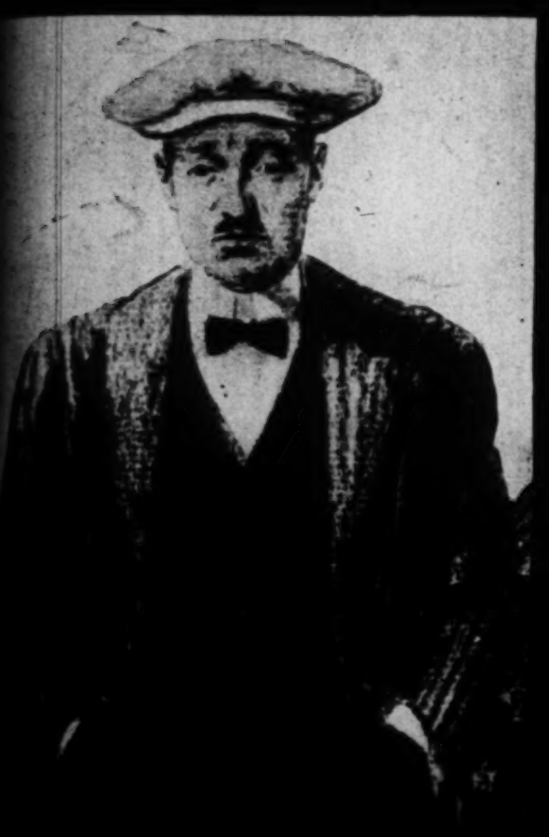
rther is doing so well in the insurance line," announces a proud mama of an only child. "They say in the office they uldn't get along without him!" Pretty soon proud mama [illegible] will have a great deal to say about the great success of [illegible], her one and only, in the wholesale lumber business.

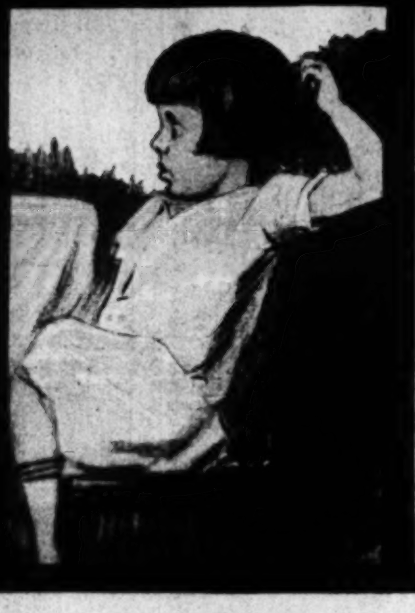




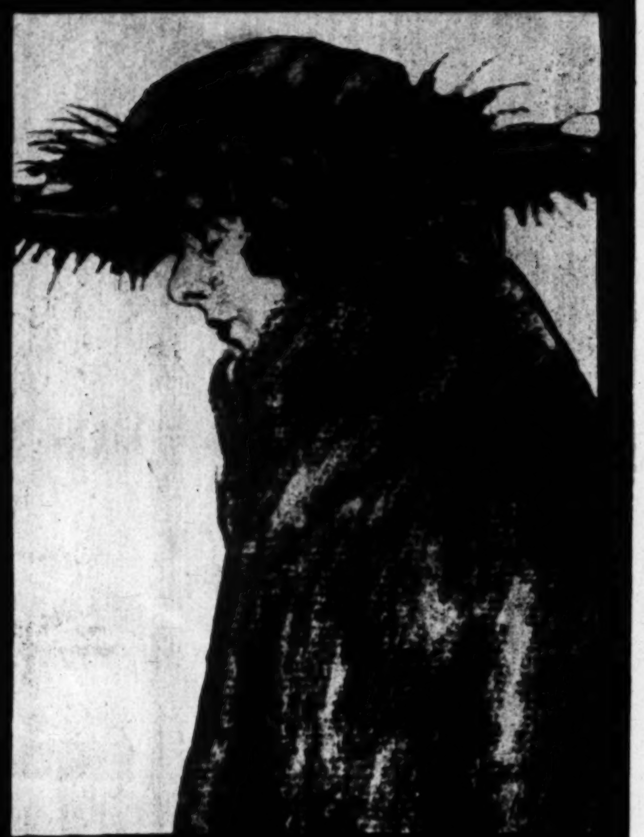
"I really can't tell you when he'll be home." The jealousy motif. The mother of an only son taking a telephone message from "that woman."

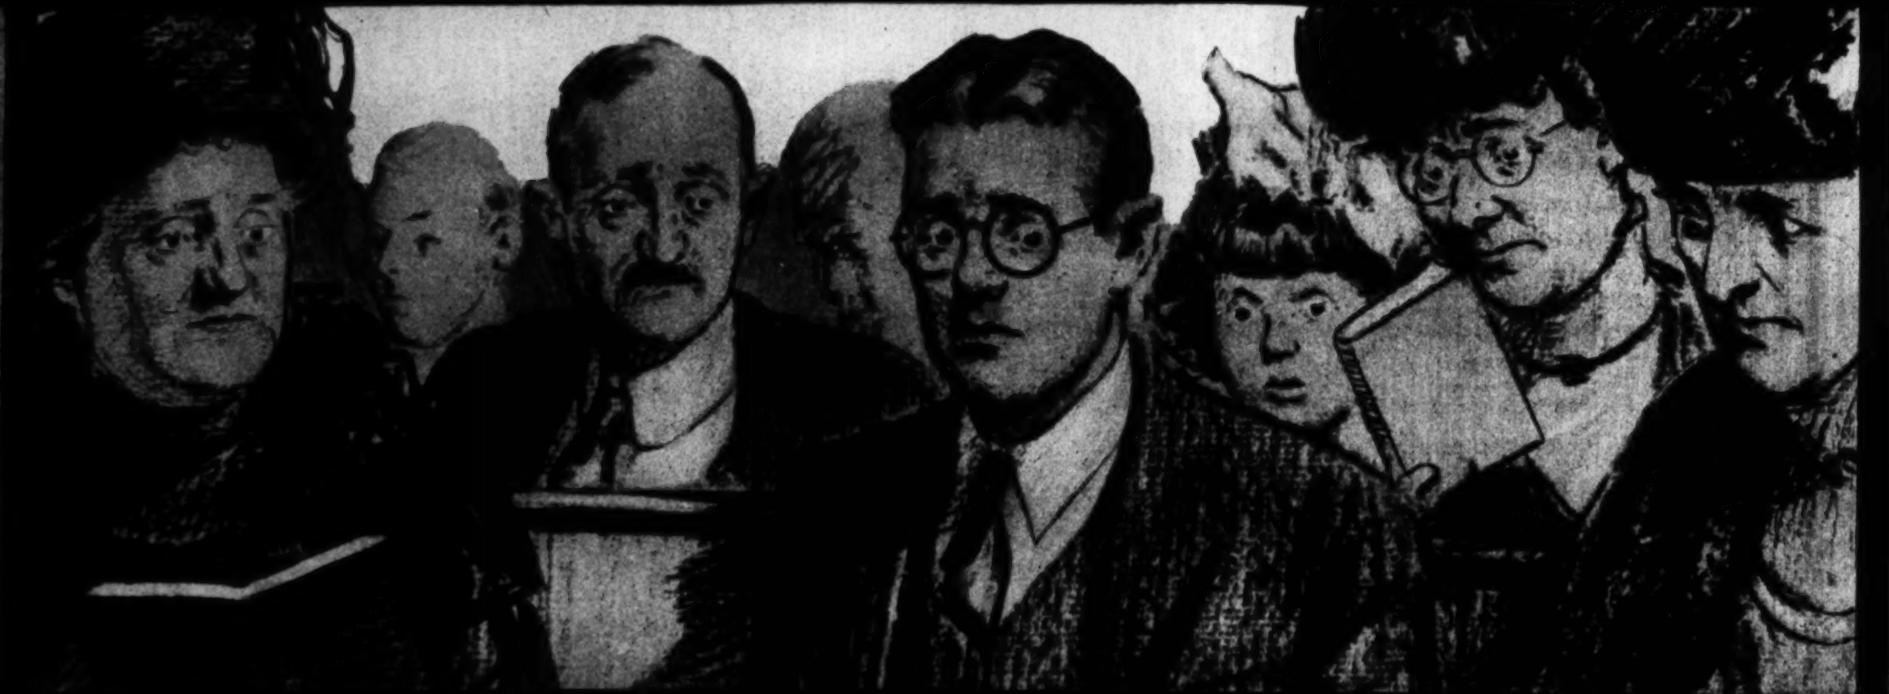


An argument with the older generation on the subject of religion, or morals, or love, or on anything much, is risky business for an only child. It generally leads nowhere, and right out of a clear sky one lands all at sixes and sevens with papa and mama. John William has been talking about religion—religion in the broader sense, mind you, and it isn't at all what mama learned when she was a girl. Mama has waxed tearful and is accusing John William of not loving his parents any more. Papa is standing pat on the outskirts. In another minute John William, being tenderhearted, will begin to retract and will lose any ground he may have thought he had gained.

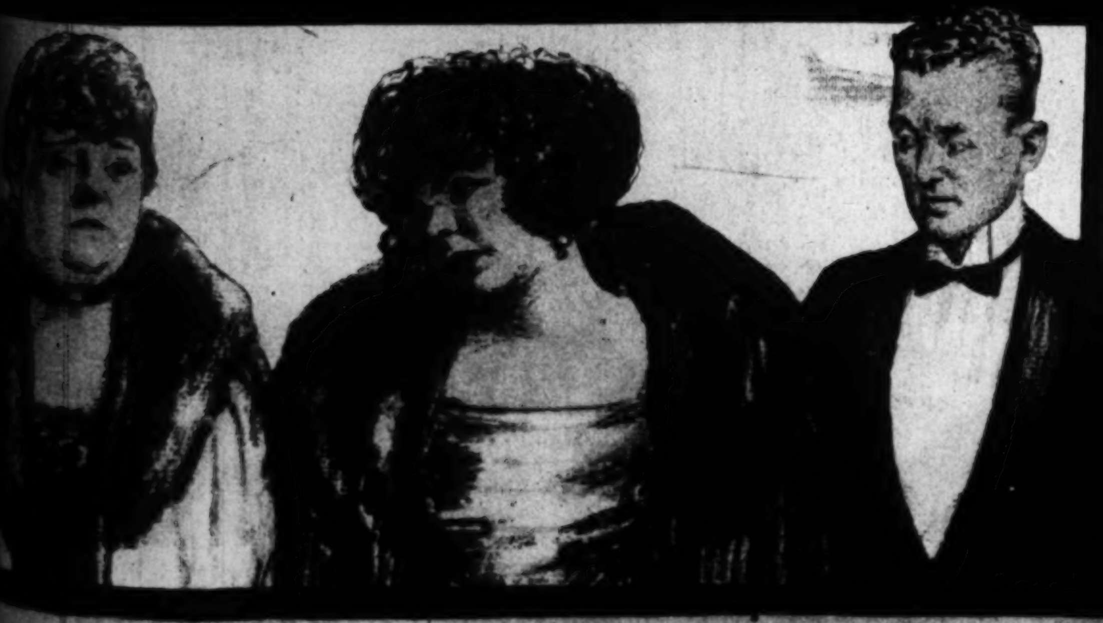


"Now, mother, I thought you told daddy he wasn't to talk business at the dinner table!" Somebody's spoiled [illegible] child voicing a few well-aimed shafts.

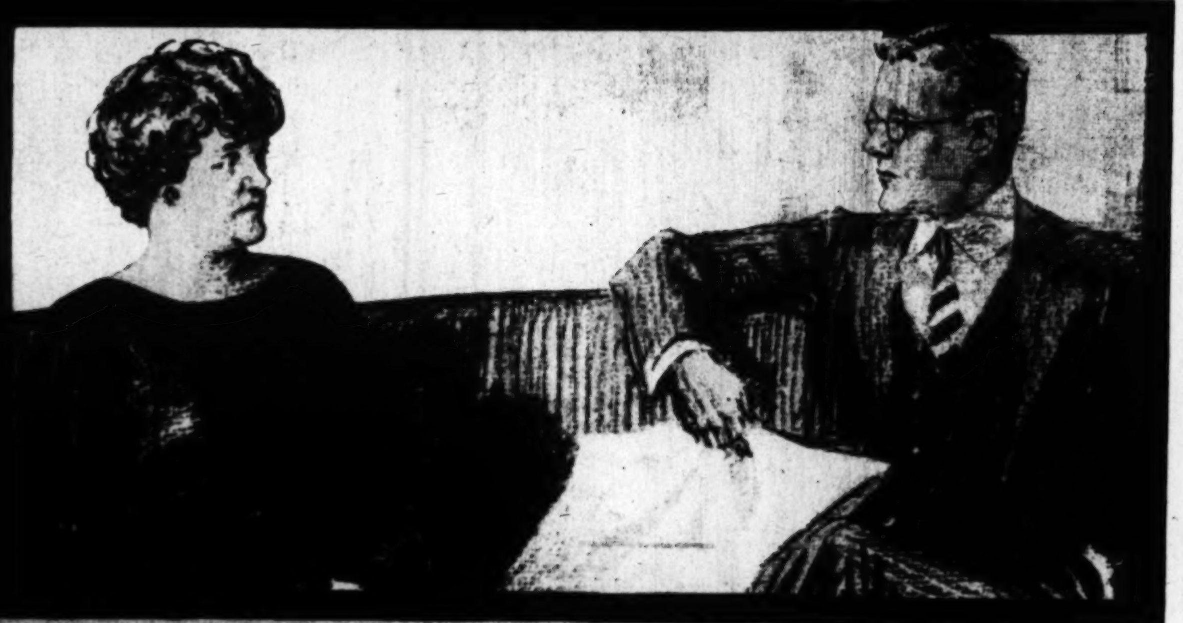




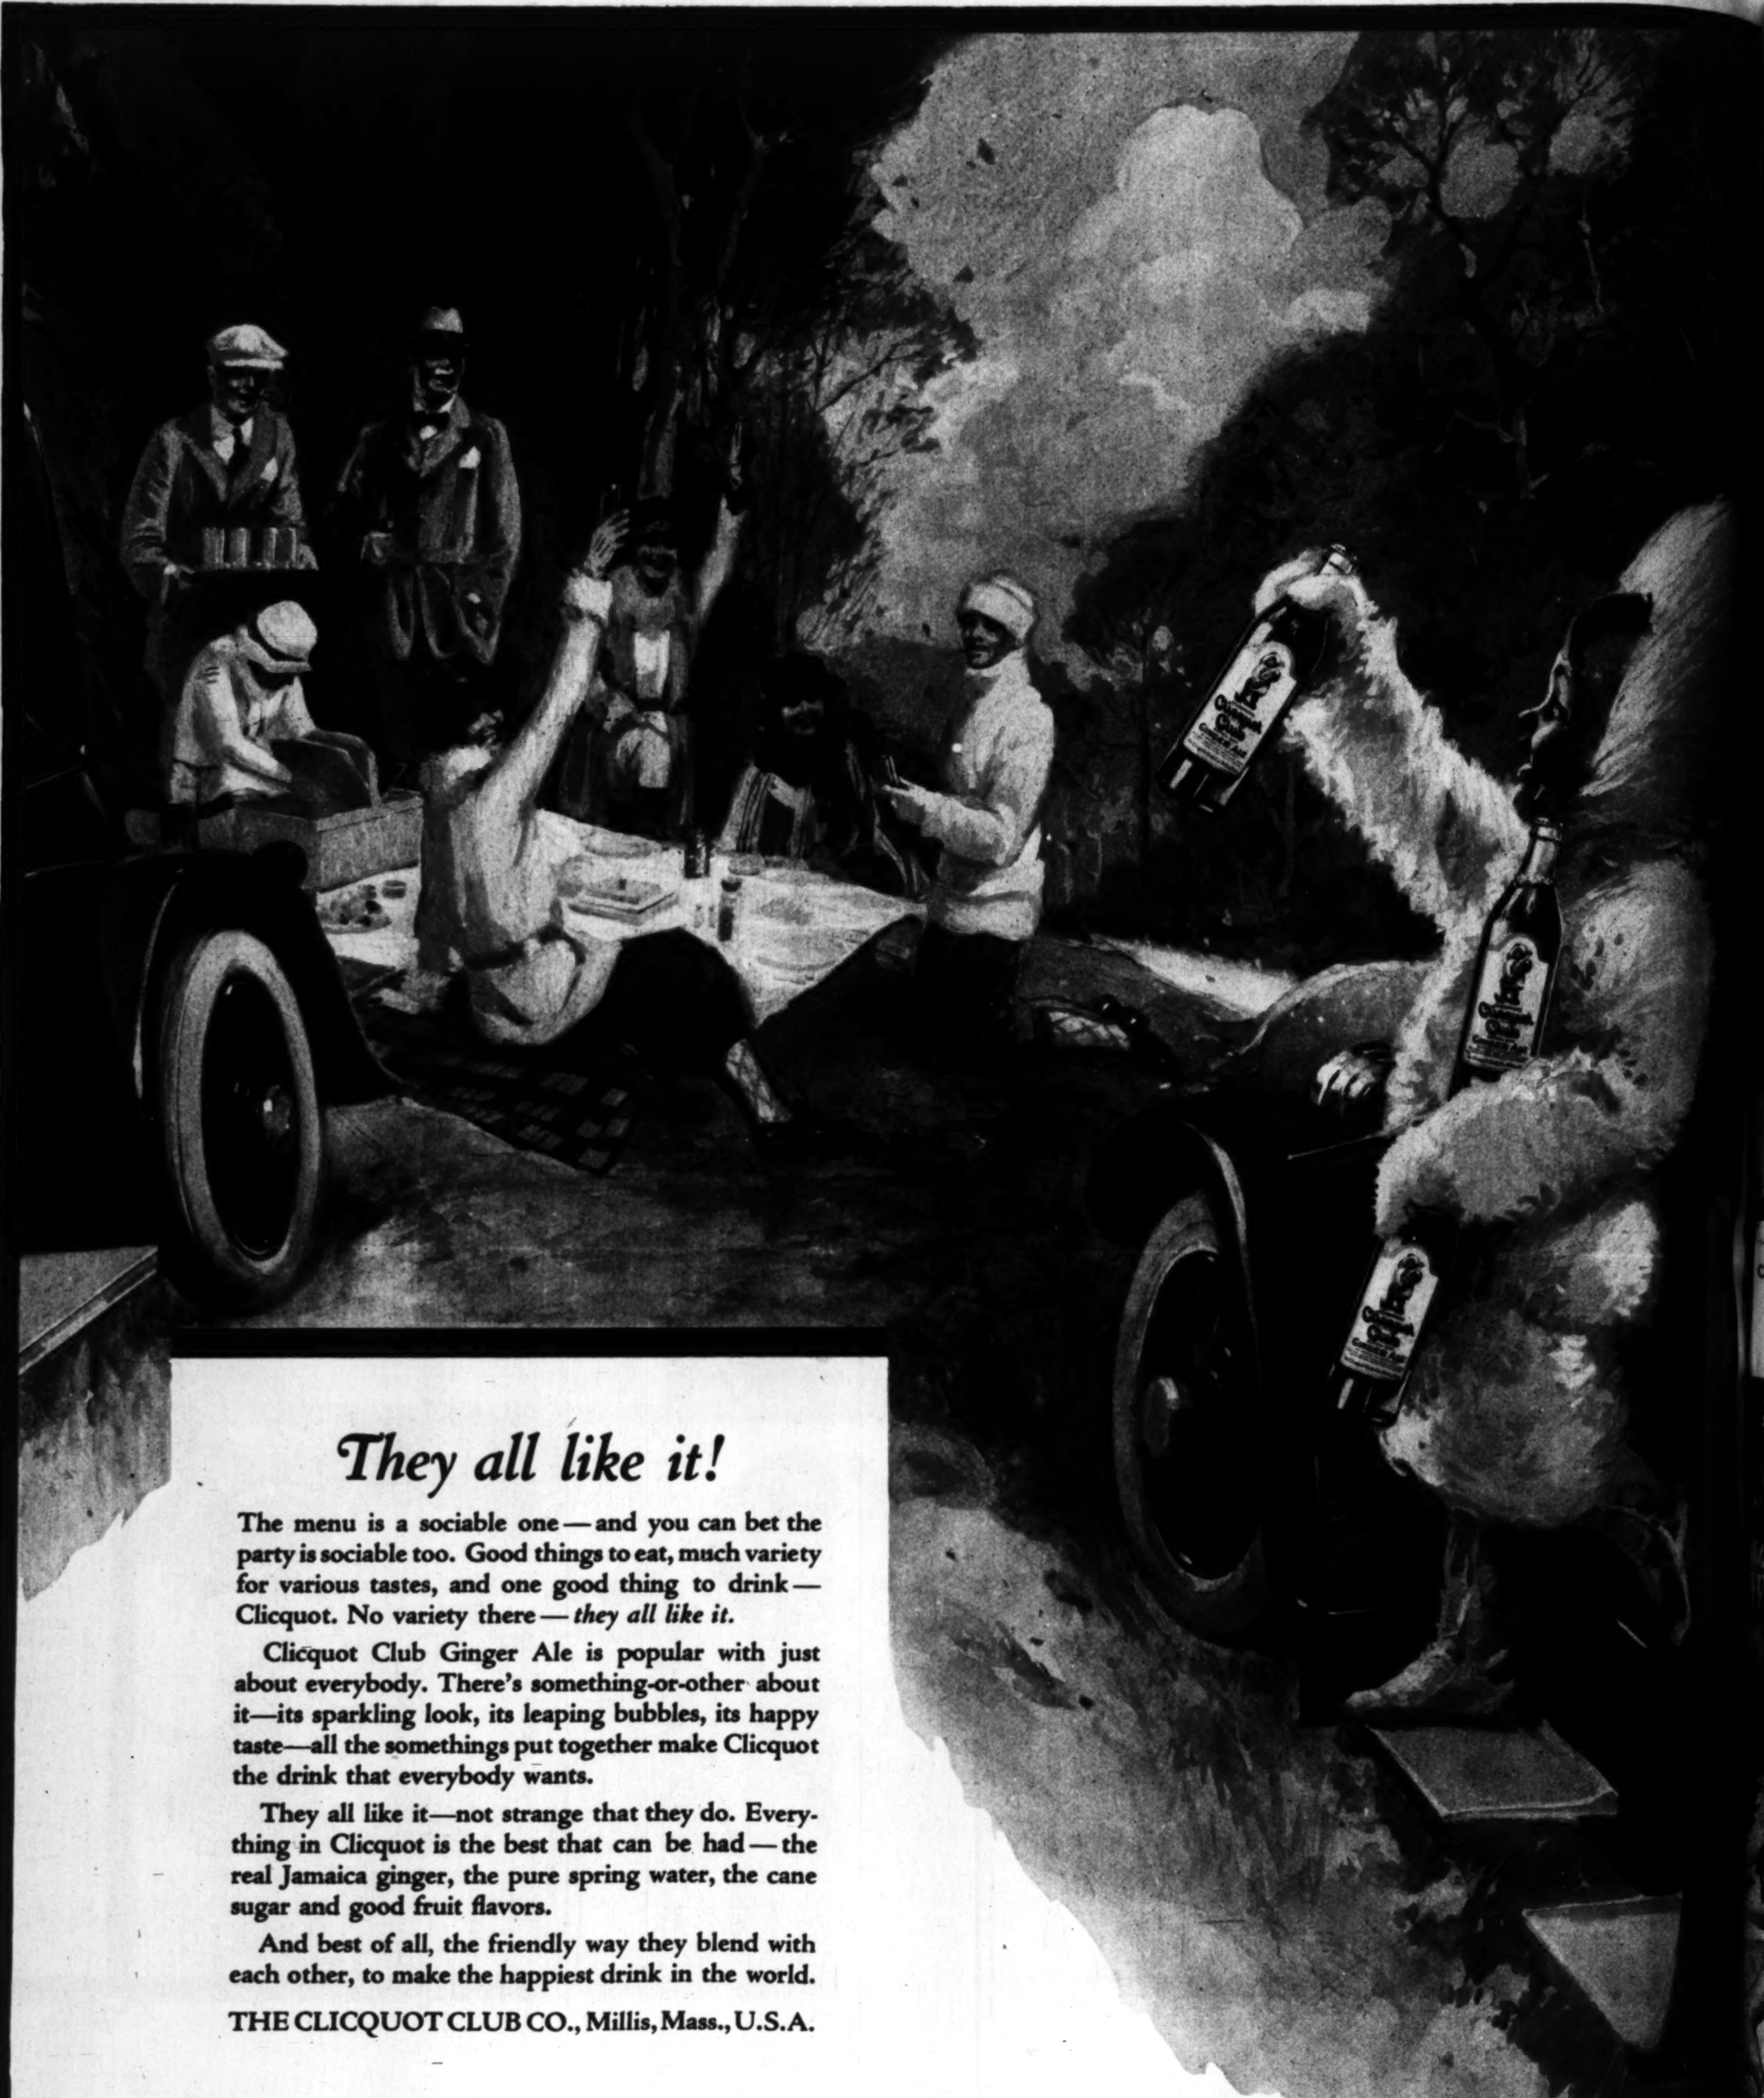
When the only child of a power in the world of finance is a lovely, lovely daughter, all the loving care and gorgeous trappings that are usually spread over a whole family of offsprings go on Clara. And then Clara goes and elopes with the chauffeur!



The only daughter and the loving mama. Everybody says, "They are more like sisters than mother and daughter." This is fine for everybody except the only daughter's husband. (Mama, it is rumored, even went on the honeymoon.)



When the pampered offspring of perfectly respectable parents develops into a young intellectual there's trouble generally. You'd think so if you could listen in on Archie Butts and his mother. Mrs. Butts can't see why Archie is forever wanting to go out of an evening. Her argument is, that when she was young she loved nothing better than to sit at home with her father and mother. Archie, the young rascal, is explaining to Mama Butts all the ins and outs of the Oedipus complex, which is something Mrs. Butts never ran up against in all her reading of Louisa M. Alcott and the Bessie Bradford series.



They all like it!

The menu is a sociable one—and you can bet the party is sociable too. Good things to eat, much variety for various tastes, and one good thing to drink—Clicquot. No variety there—they all like it.

Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is popular with just about everybody. There's something-or-other about it—its sparkling look, its leaping bubbles, its happy taste—all the somethings put together make Clicquot the drink that everybody wants.

They all like it—not strange that they do. Everything in Clicquot is the best that can be had—the real Jamaica ginger, the pure spring water, the cane sugar and good fruit flavors.

And best of all, the friendly way they blend with each other, to make the happiest drink in the world.

There is constant danger in an oily skin

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth and supple.

But too much oil actually tends to promote an unhealthy condition. A skin that is too oily is constantly liable to infection from dust and dirt.

You can correct an oily skin by using each night the following simple treatment:

FIRST cleanse your skin by washing in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and lukewarm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the face slightly damp.

Then, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands.

Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse first with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better.

If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks.

STANLEY
IT WILL NOT BREAK

"IT WILL NOT BREAK"

They tried for nearly half a century —

EVER since Sir James Dewar invented the first fragile vacuum flask in 1873, scientists have been trying to construct a vacuum bottle that will not break.

Now, at last, this has been accomplished.

The Stanley Vacuum Bottle is made entirely of steel, welded together in a single unbreakable unit. It will not break.

The Stanley does away with the disappointment of having the ice-cold or steaming hot drink spoiled just when you are counting on it most. It ends the constant necessity for careful handling—the inconvenience and expense of buying new glass "fillers."

You can take your Stanley where you know the hard knocks will be unavoidable—hunting and fishing trips—camping—automobile trips over rough roads—everywhere.

A lining of blue Amalite, a mineral coating fused into the steel itself, keeps the Stanley Bottle always sanitary and will not rust or tarnish.

Pint, quart, and two-quart sizes. The Stanley Lunch Kit is equipped with the pint bottle. For keeping solid foods hot or cold, use the Stanley Food Jar, also unbreakable. Every Stanley product—Bottle, Food Jar, Jug—is fully guaranteed.

The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

By L. Frank Baum

Old Mombi Indulges in Witchcraft.

THEY soon discovered that the Saw-Horse limped, for his new leg was a trifle too long. So they were obliged to halt while the Tin Woodman chopped it down with his ax, after which the wooden steed paced along more comfortably. But the Saw-Horse was not entirely satisfied, even yet.

"It was a shame that I broke my other leg!" it growled.

"On the contrary," airily remarked the Woggle-Bug, who was walking alongside, "you should consider the accident most fortunate. For a horse is never of much use until he has been broken."

"I beg your pardon," said Tip, rather provoked, for he felt a warm interest in both the Saw-Horse and his man Jack; "but permit me to say that your joke is a poor one, and as old as it is poor."

"Still, it is a joke," declared the Woggle-Bug, firmly, "and a joke derived from a play upon words is considered among educated people to be eminently proper."

"What does that mean?" enquired Pumpkinhead, stupidly.

"It means, my dear friend," explained the Woggle-Bug, "that our language contains many words having a double meaning; and that to pronounce a joke that allows both meanings of a certain word, proves the joker a person of culture and refinement, who has, moreover, a thorough command of the language."

"I don't believe that," said Tip, plainly; "anybody can make a pun."

"Not so," rejoiced the Woggle-Bug, stiffly. "It requires education of a high order. Are you educated, young sir?"

"Not especially," admitted Tip.

"Then you cannot judge the matter. I myself am Thoroughly Educated, and I say that puns display genius. For instance, were I to ride upon this Saw-Horse, he would not only be an animal—he would become an equipage. For he would then be a horse-and-buggy."

At this the Scarecrow gave a gasp and the Tin Woodman stopped short and looked reproachfully at the Woggle-Bug. At the same time the Saw-Horse loudly snorted his derision; and even the Pumpkinhead put up his hand to hide the smile which, because it was carved upon his face, he could not change to a frown.

But the Woggle-Bug strutted along as if he had made some brilliant remark, and the Scarecrow was obliged to say:

"I have heard, my dear friend, that a person can become overeducated; and although I have a high respect for brains, no matter how they may be arranged or classified, I begin to suspect that yours are slightly tangled. In any event, I must beg you to restrain your superior education while in our society."

"We are not very particular," added the Tin Woodman; "and we are exceedingly kind-hearted. But if your superior culture gets leaky again—" He did not complete the sentence, but he twirled his gleaming ax so carelessly that the Woggle-Bug looked frightened, and shrank away to a safe distance.

The others marched on in silence, and the Highly-Magnified one, after a period of deep thought, said in a humble voice:

"I will endeavor to restrain myself."

How to Make a Real Football Game

Use soft wood for the entire job. Lay out half-inch squares on a piece of wood one-quarter inch thick and outline the body, arms and legs of the man, as shown above. Cut these carefully. If more than one toy is to be made, patterns for these parts should be made from thin cardboard. The base pieces and goal posts may be made as shown in the drawing, care being taken to fit all parts together neatly and firmly, so that there will be no wobbling.

In assembling and placing the man, brad his two arms and his left leg to his body. This left leg is then fitted into the baseboard with a good snug fit. The right leg is fastened in place with a small screw to allow free movement, as it is the leg that kicks.

Adjust the support for the football so that the foot of the right leg, when it swings forward, will come in contact with the football in such a manner as to drive it forward to the best advantage. The football may be made of either soft wood or cork. The power of the kick comes from a rubber band fastened, as shown above.

With this toy a regular game may be played. Complete rules for playing the game and for painting the toy are given in the diagram.

"The Biggest Hit"

"This football game," says Mr. Solar, "made the biggest hit of any toy made in my manual training classes last term. Even the older high school boys would come in and try their luck at making the man kick the ball over the goal."

SONG IS SUNG ALL OVER WORLD

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Camp Fire Girls Sing Melody of Joy and Out-of-Doors

Camp Fire girls, who are scattered over all parts of the world and have a membership of 150,000, sing this song among many others:

1.

There are Camp Fire maidens from every land,
Oh, it gives you joy in your heart
To know you are a part of such a happy band,
Oh, it gives you joy in your heart.

CHORUS

Get your grip, get your grip,
Get your grip; oh, girls,
And bid the stuffy city adieu;
Take a trip, take a trip,
Take a trip; oh, girls,
Camp fire's waiting for you.

2.

From early dawn till close of day
Oh, it gives you joy in your heart.
We are learning and doing things the Camp Fire way.
Oh, it gives you joy in your heart.

3.

To think of this great wide beautiful world,
Oh, it gives you joy in your heart.
Give service and heres to Camp Fire girls,
It'll truly give you joy in your heart.

LAUDER WINS A BET

That braw, braw Scotsman, Harry Lauder—he of the purling accent, stocky build and canny wit—is back in America with three new songs, a wad of philosophy packed comfortably away in his long-stemmed pipe and a firm conviction that the world is not going to be inveigled into another war.

He won a bet on the way over, which added considerably to his good cheer. It was with his old friend, Sir Thomas Lipton, and the stakes were fourpence halfpenny to ninepence that the Mauretania, bearing the comedian, would beat the Baltic, which brought the yachtsman over. It did, although Sir Harry lost a precious sixpence when he went down to the boiler-room to urge the firemen to speed up. He was so pleased when the Mauretania reached port first that he gave the firemen £5 for a library.

"I'm feelin' fine an' dandy," Sir Harry volunteered, as he lighted his pipe in his suite at the Hotel Ambassador yesterday and prepared for the usual grilling.

"An' you needna be tellin' me it's ma last trip, for it's the first o' eighteen yet tae come. In fac', if I feel as well as I dae noo, I don't see any prospect o' ever stopping'.—(New York Tribune.

ESCAPED FROM A SHARK

The distinction of having had his head in a shark's mouth and got it out again belongs to "Treacle," a native of Thursday Island, to the north of Australia. He is described in "The Cruise of the Dream-Ship," by Ralph Stock, who says that his head looks as if it had been half cut off. The author tried to get him to give an account of the adventure, but all "Treacle" would say was: "Me push; 'im leave go." He takes an extraordinary pride in his escape, and in return for sixpence will show visitors the shark's teeth that are still embedded in his skull, and for the same sum he allows himself to be photographed! He speaks English in an extraordinary way. For instance, he calls a gramophone "Bokkus belong noise," and a saw is "Pull um come, pullum go, brother belong tomahawk." An envelop is "Trousers belong letter."

IT'S A POOR RULE, ETC.

"Johnny," said his mother, "you should not eat so much between meals. It will take away your appetite at meal time."

"Don't see why it should," replied Johnny. "My eating at meal times never takes away my appetite for eating 'tween meals."—[Boston Transcript.

THE WONDERFUL STORY OF OZ

"That is all we can expect," returned the Scarecrow, pleasantly; and good nature being thus happily restored to the party, they proceeded upon their way.

When they again stopped to allow Tip to rest—the boy being the only one that seemed to tire—the Tin Woodman noticed many small, round holes in the grassy meadow.

"This must be a village of the Field Mice," he said to the Scarecrow. "I wonder if my old friend, the Queen of the Mice, is in this neighborhood."

"If she is, she may be of great service to us," answered the Scarecrow, who was impressed by a sudden thought. "See if you can call her, my dear Nick."

So the Tin Woodman blew a shrill note upon a silver whistle that hung around his neck, and presently a tiny gray mouse popped from a near-by hole and advanced fearlessly toward them. For the Tin Woodman had once saved her life, and the Queen of the Field Mice knew he was to be trusted.

"Good day, Your Majesty," said Nick, politely addressing the mouse; "I trust you are enjoying good health?"

"Thank you, I am quite well," answered the Queen, demurely, as she sat up and displayed the tiny golden crown upon her head. "Can I do anything to assist my old friends?"

"You can, indeed," replied the Scarecrow, eagerly. "Let me, I intreat you, take a dozen of your subjects with me to the Emerald City."

"Will they be injured in any way?" asked the Queen, doubtfully.

"I think not," replied the Scarecrow. "I will carry them hidden in the straw which stuffs my body, and when I give them the signal by unbuttoning my jacket, they have only to rush out and scamper home again as fast as they can. By doing this they will assist me to regain my throne, which the Army of Revolt has taken from me."

"In that case," said the Queen, "I will not refuse your request. Whenever you are ready I will call twelve of my most intelligent subjects."

"I am ready now," returned the Scarecrow. Then he lay flat upon the ground and unbuttoned his jacket, displaying the mass of straw with which he was stuffed.

The Queen uttered a little piping call, and in an instant a dozen pretty field mice had emerged from their holes and stood before their ruler, awaiting her orders.

What the Queen said to them none of our travelers could understand, for it was in the mouse language; but the field mice obeyed without hesitation, running one after the other to the Scarecrow and hiding themselves in the straw of his breast.

When all of the twelve mice had thus concealed themselves, the Scarecrow buttoned his packet securely and then arose and thanked the Queen for her kindness.

"One thing more you might do to serve us," suggested the Tin Woodman; "and that is to run ahead and show us the way to the Emerald City. For some enemy is evidently trying to prevent us from reaching it."

"I will do that gladly," returned the Queen. "Are you ready?"

The Tin Woodman looked at Tip.

"I'm rested," said the boy. "Let us start."

Then they resumed their journey, the little gray Queen of the Field Mice running swiftly ahead and then pausing until the travelers drew near, when away she would dart again.

Without this unerring guide the Scarecrow and his comrades might never have gained the Emerald City; for many were the obstacles thrown in their way by the arts of old Mombi. Yet not one of the obstacles really existed—all were cleverly contrived deceptions. For when they came to the banks of the rushing river that threatened to bar their way the little Queen kept steadily on, passing through the seeming flood in safety; and our travelers followed her without encountering a single drop of water.

Again, a high wall of granite towered high above their heads and opposed their advance. But the gray Field Mouse walked straight through it, and the others did the same, the wall melting into mist as they passed it.

Afterward, when they had stopped for a moment to allow Tip to rest, they saw forty roads branching off from their feet in forty different directions; and soon these forty roads began whirling around like a mighty wheel, first in one direction and then in the other, completely bewildering their vision.

But the Queen called for them to follow her and darted off in a straight line; and when they had gone a few paces the whirling pathways vanished and were seen no more.

Mombi's last trick was most fearful of all. She sent a sheet of crackling flame rushing over the meadow to consume them; and for the first time the Scarecrow became afraid and turned to fly.

"If that fire reaches me I will be gone in no time!" said he, trembling until his straw rattled. "It's the most dangerous thing I ever encountered."

"I'm off, too!" cried the Saw-Horse, turning and prancing with agitation; "for my wood is so dry it would burn like kindlings."

"Is fire dangerous to pumkins?" asked Jack, fearfully.

"You'll be baked like a tart—and so will I!" answered the Woggle-Bug, getting down on all fours so he could run the faster.

But the Tin Woodman, having no fear of fire, averted the stampede by a few sensible words.

"Look at the Field Mouse!" he shouted. "The fire does not burn her in the least. In fact, it is no fire at all, but only a deception."

Indeed, to watch the little Queen march calmly through the advancing flames restored courage to every member of the party, and they followed her without being even scorched.

"This is surely a most extraordinary adventure," said the Woggle-Bug, who was greatly amazed; "for it upsets all the Natural Laws that I

GAMES to PLAY

BANDIT BLIND

Two players are counted out to be Bandits. Each Bandit should have a Den—a square or circle marked off a little distance away. All the players excepting the two Bandits are blindfolded and come out singing a song to show that they think they are safe from the Bandits. The following lines may be sung to the air of "Columbia," the players joining hands in a circle and dancing around as they sing:

Come out, for the sun high has risen;
Come out in the open and play;
The robbers are all locked in prison;
No Bandit can catch us today.

Meantime the Bandits have hid themselves in opposite directions. When one of the blindfolded players comes near either of the Bandits the concealed robber jumps out and catches (tags) the player and bears him off to his Den.

Then the Bandits hide again, the circle is re-formed and the blindfolded players sing, to the same air:

Look out, for new danger's arisen!
Look out, though all blinded we play;
Two Bandits, escaped from their prison,
Have caught our two comrades today.

The circle forms again after the capture of other players and the same song is sung, varying it only with the capture of "four" or "six comrades," etc., as the game goes on. When the Bandits have caught all but two of the players, the two remaining uncaptured become Bandits for the next game.

SPUD BALL

Like many other modern games, Spud Ball combines some of the best features of older pastimes. In some respects it resembles Ball Tag, but in other ways it is like Call Ball. Its variations take the form of differences in the manner of scoring and in the matter of penalties.

One player stands in the center holding a soft ball or a bean bag or oat sack; the other players group themselves about him. Without warning or signal of any sort the center player drops the ball, at the same time calling out the name of one of the players. All the other players scatter immediately, running away in every direction to avoid being tagged by the ball. The player whose name had been called picks up the ball as quickly as he can and tries to hit one of the runners with it. He is not permitted to run after them, but must stand still and throw the ball at one of the fleeing players. If he misses he picks up the ball where it has fallen and throws it again from that point, the other players standing still until he has picked it up, when they run as before. If he hits a player that player must pick up the ball and try to tag another player with it, and so on.

A miss is called a "spud" and scores one against the player who has failed to make a hit. If three spuds are scored against him he is obliged to stand with his back to the other players, twenty feet away, while each in turn hits him with the ball.

Foragers

This is a Manx variation of the old Scotch game "Wadds and Wears," described in an earlier article of this series. The players are divided into two equal groups, the Isle-Men and the Water-Men. The factions stand with a space of twenty feet or more between the two lines. Midway of this large central space, a boundary line is drawn to define sea and land. The sea is the space in front of the water-men and the land is the territory facing the isle-men. The boundary line between the two is called the coast.

Each player deposits a pledge such as a cap, a pencil, a piece of chalk, etc., straight in front of him, but at a distance of six feet or a yard from the "coast." These pledges are called "wadds." The object of the game is to carry the wadds from sea to land or from land to sea. The water-men and isle-men approach the coast to try to capture the wadds of their opponents, and at the same time to keep guard on their own possessions.

Anyone crossing the coast who is caught by an opponent before touching a wadd is made prisoner, and cannot be freed unless one of his own party can rescue him without being tagged. If any player is caught while carrying off a wadd, it is taken from him, but he cannot be detained as a prisoner. If he can cross the coast with a captured wadd, he cannot be pursued. The game ends when one party has captured all the wadds of the opposing faction.

Cuckoo Concert

One player stands in the center; the others join hands around him in a dancing circle. The following verses are sung, the other players (P) asking the questions, and the center player (C) answering, thus:

P. Hello, Robin Fowler! What have you in your nest today?

C. Wild ducklings, blackbirds, crows and a cuckoo from the forest.

P. What says the duckling?
C. Quack, quack, quack!

P. What says the blackbird?
C. (whistles.)

P. What does the crow say?
C. Caw, caw, caw!

P. What says the cuckoo, the cuckoo from the forest? C. Cuckoo, cuckoo, cuckoo!

When the center player gives the calls, the other players imitate the sounds. The second verse runs:

P. Hello, Reuben Farmer, what lead you with your rope today?
C. Red cattle, pigs and lambs, and a long-eared gray old donkey.

P. What says the red cow? C. Moo, moo, moo!

P. What says the fat pig. C. Wee, wee, wee!

P. What says the white lamb?
C. Ma, ma, ma!

P. What says the donkey, the long-eared gray old donkey? C. Hee-haw, hee-haw, hee-haw!

Additional verses may be devised, but the last should begin: "Hello, Granny Silver! What have you in your box today?" the center player answering, "Chickens, geese and hens, and a long-spurred little rooster." The calls are "peep-peep!" "gak-gak!" "cluck-cluck" and "cock-a-doodle-doo!" Finally all march off in single file singing "Cuckoo-cuckoo, cock-a-doodle-doo!"

How Insects Walk on Water

We have all seen that narrow-bodied, long-legged bug that seems to skate over the surface of the water. It is interesting to know how it walks. When moving it slides on its front and hind legs pushing with the middle pair. Only the middle and hind legs touch the water when the insect is at rest. The feet dent but do not break the surface which acts as an elastic film. Dry and not easily wet objects will bend this film quite a bit before breaking it. The water bug we speak of has feet which are covered with a velvety pile not easily wet. The insect's weight is so little in proportion to the surface covered that he does not break through.

This feat may be likened to an interesting experiment. Take a small needle, oiled by rubbing it on your hair, and very carefully (by loops of thread or otherwise) lay it in a horizontal position on the surface of water in a tumbler or other small receptacle. It will be noted that the metal bears down on the surface of the water without breaking it. A needle that is not oily will not float.

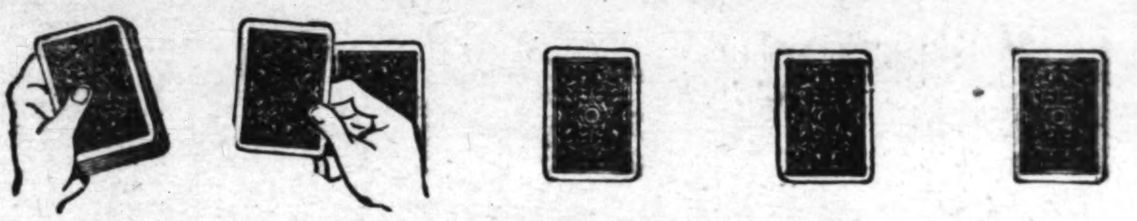
FOUR HEAPS AS FIRST SHOWN

FIG. 2



DEAL IN FOUR HEAPS

FOUR HEAPS AS LAST SHOWN

MENTAL DIVINATION

The performer deals six cards into four heaps of four cards each. He fans one heap (as shown by "A" in Figure 1) and shows it to an onlooker, asking him to remember any one of the four cards. The heap is then laid on the table face down. The second heap is shown to a second spectator, who remembers one of the cards. A third person notes a card from the third heap, and a fourth person one from the fourth heap. Each heap, in turn, is laid face down upon the first heap, as it lies on the table.

The performer picks up the sixteen cards and deals them into four heaps of four cards each, as illustrated in Figure 2. He deals from left to right, as shown in the drawing.

Picking up the first heap, he fans it, and shows it to each spectator in turn, asking them all if they see their card. If no one responds the heap is laid aside. But if any one says that his card is among those shown the performer immediately turns the cards faces down and draws one of the cards from the fan. He lays that card face down in front of the person who said he saw his card.

The second, third and fourth heaps are shown in the same way. If two persons see their cards in one heap, two cards are withdrawn after the cards have been turned face down. When each spectator has a card in front of him the performer tells them to turn up their cards. When the cards are turned over each spectator is surprised to see the very card he selected in his mind.

The trick is simplicity itself, and is learned without difficulty. Note how the cards are arranged in Figure 1. (Any sixteen cards may be used; the ones shown in the diagrams were taken at random.) Heaps "A," "B," "C" and "D" are shown it is laid face down, so that a pile of sixteen cards is made. Now when the cards are dealt out into four heaps, one by one, as shown in Figure 2, the arrangement will be the same as shown in Figure 3.

In Figure 3, one card of each of the original heaps is represented in each heap. And they are in the order "A," "B," "C" and "D." When the performer shows the first heap to the spectators, he knows that if the man who looked at the original heap "A" sees his card, it will be the first card back of the fan, namely, the nine of diamonds.

If the second man sees his card, it will be the king of clubs, card "B." If the third man sees his, it will be card "C," the three of diamonds. If the last man sees his card, it will be card "D," the six of diamonds.

Let us suppose, for example, that the man who looked at heap "A" (in Figure 1) chose the seven of hearts; the man who looked at heap "B" chose the three of spades and the man who looked at "C" picked out the eight of clubs, and the last man, who selected a card from heap "D," took the six of diamonds.

When the first heap is shown as in Figure 3, the man who looked at "D" recognized his card, the six of diamonds. The performer immediately knows it must be card "D" in the heap, so that when he turns that heap face down he picks out the six of diamonds and places it in front of the fourth spectator.

The three of spades is recognized by the man who looked at "B," when the performer shows the second heap. So the performer merely lays aside card "B," when he turns down the heap. When the third heap is shown, no cards are recognized. When the last heap is exhibited, of course, the men who looked at "A" and "C" both see their cards, and the performer lays aside cards "A" and "C" when he turns down the heap.

Everything is then ready for the grand climax.

heard Professor Nowitall teach in the schoolhouse."

"Of course it does," said the Scarecrow, wisely. "All magic is unnatural, and for that reason is to be feared and avoided. But I see before us the gates of the Emerald City, so I imagine we have now overcome all the magical obstacles that seemed to oppose us."

Indeed, the walls of the City were plainly visible, and the Queen of the Field Mice, who had guided them so faithfully, came near to bid them good-by.

"We are very grateful to Your Majesty for your kind assistance," said the Tin Woodman, bowing before the pretty creature.

"I am always pleased to be of service to my friends," answered the Queen, and in a flash she had darted away upon her journey home.

Next Week—"The Prisoners of the Queen" in which the travelers enter the Emerald City, but are taken prisoner by General Jinjur, who plans to kill them all but Tip (whom she will return to Old Mombi). But our heroes are pretty clever set, aren't they? And it isn't likely that a girl-queen can keep them long in capture, is it? Next week's instalment will tell wheather or not they seize the throne, in spite of the girl army. It's a thrilling chapter!

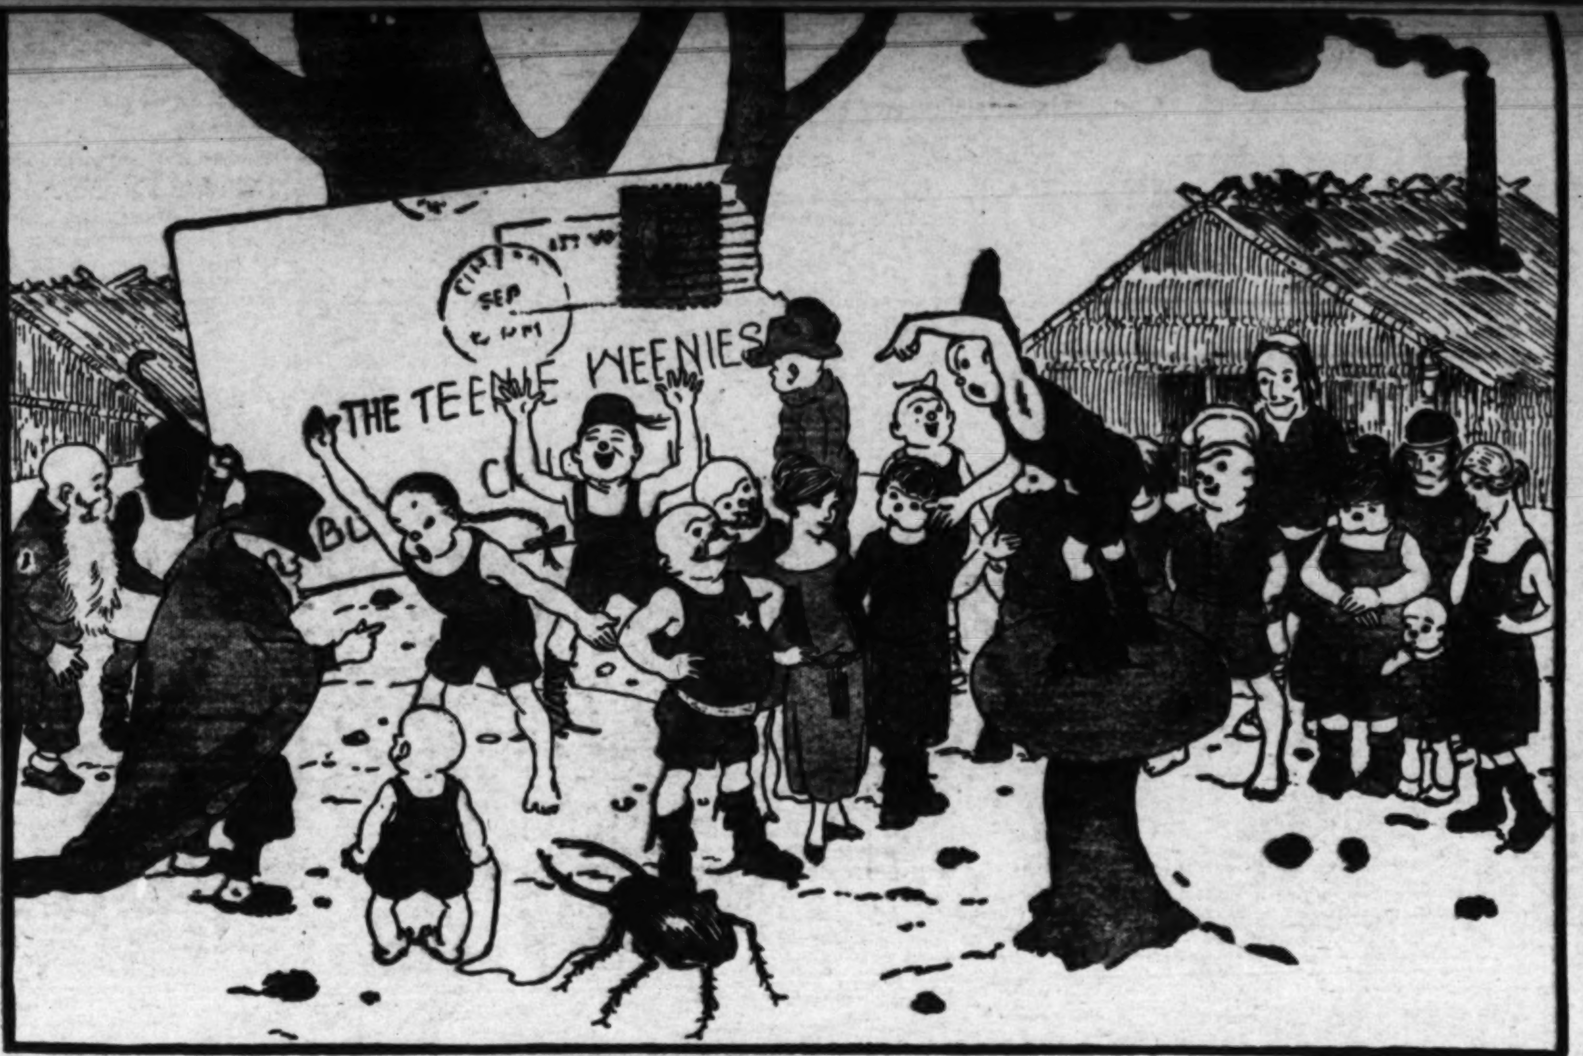
SONG IS SUNG ALL OVER WORLD
One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Camp Fire Girls Sing Melody of Joy and Out-of-Doors



THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE DUNCE MAKES A SPEECH · BY Wm. DONAHEY.

DEAR Teenie Weenies: I read all about how your houses and clothes and furniture burned up. I am sorry for you. I am specially sorry for the Lady of Fashion and the General and the Dunce and the Twins and the Old Soldier. Now that you haven't any home I suppose you will be looking for a home. I have a doll's house. You can come and live in it. It is a big doll's house. It has lectic lights. It has an upstairs and a downstairs. There is lots of room for all of you. Please come. I have a little lectic stove. I will cook your food on it, for I am a good cook. I will sow and my Aunt will sow. My Aunt is a good sower and we will make you all clothes. Please write me a letter and tell me when you come. Be sure and write me so I can get the doll's house ready. Don't come until next week for the lectic lights don't light. My brother will fix them next week. Please answer. Your loving friend,

JEAN.

The Teenie Weenies received this letter one morning, and you can well believe they were much excited and pleased.

"What a dear little girl!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion when the letter had been read.

"Let's go," cried the Dunce, turning a handspring in his excitement.

"Sure! Come on. Let's go," cried several of the Teenie Weenies.

"Ah, fiddlesticks!" cried Grandpa. "We can't go and live with big folks. They'd be comin' around lookin' and starin' at us like as if we were in a sideshow. We'd have to do just as they wanted us to do and we wouldn't have any more independence than an all-day sucker."

"What's him indeplendence?" asked the Chinaman.

"Why, independence means freedom," said Grandpa. "We'd have to ask permission every time we wanted to sneeze."

"Me no sneeze vely often," argued the Chinaman, who rather wanted to go and live in the little house.

"Ye yellow tomcat!" bellowed Grandpa, waving his cane over his head in his rage. "You haven't got any more spine than a jelly fish!"

"Allie same me no jelly fish!" cried the Chinaman, waving his arms excitedly. "Me Chinamans and me ploud of it, too."

"Ladies and gents!" shouted the Dunce, who had climbed to the top of a big mushroom. "Jimminie Christmas! Think what a great chance this is to be warm and com-com-comfortable this winter. Think, ladies and gents, what this means! Nothin' to do but sleep and eat chocolate drops and cookies and ice cream and everything. No work, just fun and play and sitting around the electric stove."

"Hooray!" shouted several of the Teenie Weenies, who had gathered around the Dunce.

"Ladies and gents," continued the Dunce, "it's goin' to be a cold winter, and think how we'll shiver when the cold and snow blows through the cracks of our straw shanties, with nothin' to keep us warm but thimble stoves. We have hardly enough clothes to keep us warm and nothing but rags to cover our feet. Say, jimminie fishhooks, let's go and live with this kind-hearted little girl."

When the Dunce had finished his speech he jumped off the mushroom and the General stepped out in front of the circle of Teenie Weenies.

"Friends," he said, "there is much truth in what the Dunce has said. We are going to have a mighty hard winter. We may be cold many times and there may be times when we will go hungry. We are poor and the opportunity of living in the doll's house this winter seems mighty good; but, friends, there is another side, and I think you ought to consider it. As you know, it is quite dangerous for such little folks as we are to live with big people. If a book should fall on one of us there would be nothing left but a Teenie Weenie grease spot. We would be of much interest to big folks and at all hours we would be stared at. We would have to do just as the little girl and her friends wanted us to do, for we would be living in her house and we would have to do as she asked, no matter whether we wanted to or not."

Shall we go and live with the little girl or not?	YES ...... NO ....

This is a sample of the ballots which the Teenie Weenies used. It has been enlarged thirty-five times.

"That's right. That's right," cried Grandpa.

"Now, friends," said the General, "you have heard both sides of this question and I want you to think the matter over. Some of you want to go and others don't. Think it over carefully and this evening we will vote on the matter."

While the Teenie Weenies discussed the question the Old Soldier, the General and Paddy Pin made arrangements for the election. They printed tiny ballots, which were handed to each of the little people.

When the Teenie Weenies had marked their ballots as to whether they wanted to go and live with the little girl or not they dropped them through the worm hole of an empty hickory nut.

It was quite dark when the voting was over, and, as the Teenie Weenies had no lamps and only a few candles, it was decided to wait and count the votes in the morning. When the nut was cracked next morning—horror of horrors!—a worm inside had eaten all the votes!

HOW TO COLOR THE TEENIE WEENIES

Oh, look, the Lady of Fashion is all dressed up in a blue gown, with a sort of bead effect. Also note the Dunce on top of the mushroom, with sacking for leggings and a red one-piece suit and cap. The mushroom is grayish white, and the grass houses—but you already have been drawing grass houses for a week past. Right up front you will see the Lower Twin's beetle. It is black as its disposition. The letter is white and the lettering on it is in black. The stamp is red, with the faintest of lettering. Now don't forget to paint in the sky and the trunk of the tree. As for the rest of the picture, the Teenies are dressed in rags and tatters, so use all the colors you wish.

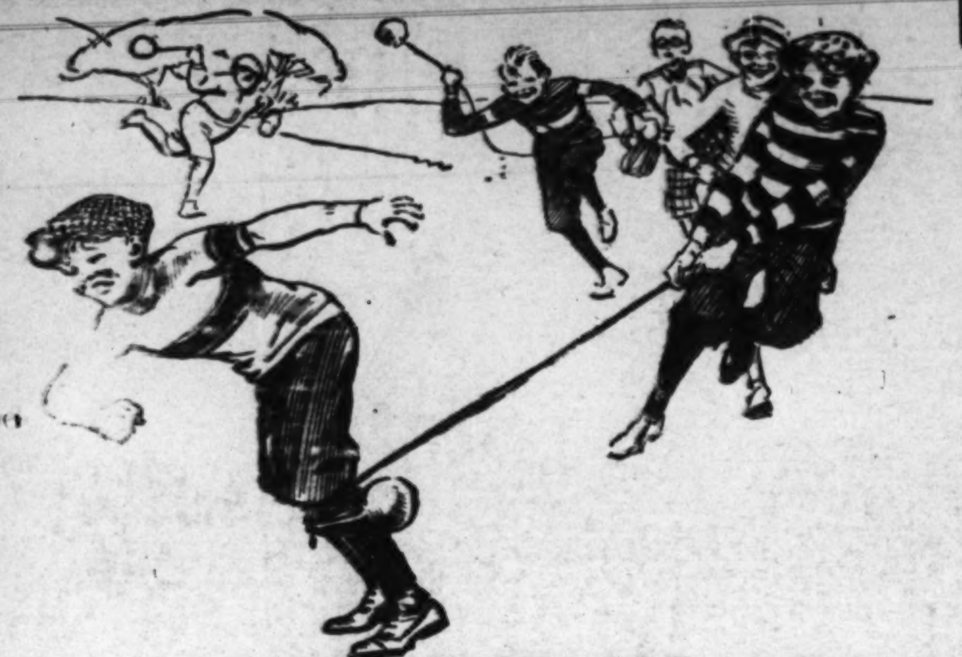
Real Fun for Every One



South American Boys "Hunt the Ostrich"

[Play experts from all over North America send in their newest ideas to The Fun Maker. Regular readers of The Fun Maker will learn about all sorts of games and stunts just as soon as they are invented.]

On the wide pampas, or plains of Argentina, the South American boys play a rough-and-tumble game which they call "Hunting the Ostrich." M. C. Rankin of Brookline, Mass., has watched them play it and has told the Fun Maker how it is done.

The boys got the idea for this game by watching the hunters, or gauchos as they are called, capture real ostriches which run wild on the pampas.

HUNTERS MAKE "BOLAS"

Several boys are needed for the game. One of the fastest runners is chosen for the ostrich, and the rest are hunters. Each hunter arms himself with a bola, which is a long thong, with a light ball fastened on the end.

The ostrich flees wildly, waving his arms as if they were wings, sometimes crouching down, and mimicking the peculiar calls of the giant bird itself. The hunters give him a good head start. Then the chase begins. The bird uses all his skill to avoid the hunters, hiding behind bushes, doubling back on his track, and rushing madly in one direction and then another. Whenever the hunters get near enough, they throw their bolas. Sooner or later, one of these hits the ostrich, the thong winds around his legs, and he falls, just as the bird does in a real hunt.

EATING THE OSTRICH

When the ostrich is caught, the hunters gather around, pretend to cut off his head, and get him ready for eating. As ostriches often swallow coins and other valuables, the boys act as though they find a treasure and begin to squabble over it. In the midst of the commotion, the dead ostrich suddenly comes to life, jumps up, and becomes a hunter. The other boys are prepared for this, and rush to get out of his way. The boy whom he touches first takes his place as ostrich, and the game starts all over again.

It's a quick moving game that keeps every boy on the lookout.

Boys in all parts of the globe have their own special games. If you have heard of one that hasn't yet come into this country, write it up and send it to the Fun Maker.

[Next week the Fun Maker will describe some games played on stilts.]

LITTLE TALKS ON MUSIC

Dezzelle Cross, University Lecturer, Continues Story of the Wagner Opera, "Lohengrin".

The knight of mystery stood in front of the great crowd, which listened breathlessly to every word.

"Grieved am I," he said, "that my bride has broken her promise. I must tell my name. Could she have waited but one year she could have had me always with her and her lost brother would have been returned to her.

"My home is on Montsalvat, far away in distant lands. On the side of this mountain is a beautiful shrine. Long years ago angels carried from Heaven an immortal cup, and placed it in this shrine. Above it is ever a circle of light. Whoever sees this cup is made pure of heart. The champion knights who guard it fight only for the right and cannot be defeated by anyone. But when they defend earthly creatures no one must know their names; for if known to man they must depart and flee. Once every year a dove descends from Heaven to bring courage to these faithful knights who guard the cup known as the Holy Grail.

"The Grail sent me to defend the innocent Elsa. My father is Parsifal, who reigns on Montsalvat. I am a knight of the Holy Grail, and Lohengrin is my name."

The swan was seen approaching in the distance. Lohengrin gave his sword, his horn and his ring to Elsa to give to her brother, Gottfried. After bidding Elsa and her people a sad farewell he stepped aboard the boat. Ortrud shouted in triumph.

"It was I who wound the golden band about the swan's neck. It is Gottfried, Elsa's brother. My magic art is supreme."

But she spoke too soon. From the clouds above a beautiful white dove floated down. Lohengrin loosed the chains from the swan. The swan disappeared beneath the water. In its place there arose a fair-haired boy in shining armor, whom Lohengrin lifted to the bank. It was Gottfried. He rushed into the arms of his sister. The dove mysteriously drew the boat up the river and far away to Montsalvat. Elsa, heartbroken, fainted and fell to the ground. She had her brother a sin, but Lohengrin was gone forever.

LONG-HAIRED BEAUTY WINS

If Miss Dorothy Hughes, aged 16, of 516 East Twenty-second street, Brooklyn, had bobbed her hair she probably would not have been picked yesterday as "Queen of New York Beaches" in the prize contest at the Brighton Beach Baths. But while the twenty-three other contestants had bobbed hair, she clung to her curls. Miss Neysa McMein, illustrator; Henry Clive, artist; Miss Pearl White, motion-picture actress, and Michael Jacobs, war medal designer, all said she was the prettiest of them all—and that the curls had much to do with it.

In addition to the title of "Queen," Miss Hughes also was awarded a gold barpin set with diamonds, and a trip to Atlantic City, as New York's official representative in the pageant that was held there September 6.

Other bathing beauties in the order of their ranking were: Miss Lilyan Harnach, 112 West One Hundred and Thirteenth street; Miss Mary Hlavka, 355 East Twenty-third street; Miss Ruth Andrea, 264 Henry street, Brooklyn, and Miss Betty Borman, 402 Parkside avenue, Brooklyn.—[New York Herald.

EDUCATION BY MOVIE

It may come as a surprise to some to learn that the United States Department of Commerce has more than 1000 representatives and correspondents outside of American, located in practically all the important trading centers of the world. These representatives include commercial attaches, trade commissioners, American consuls and other representatives of the State Department, who report on business and industrial conditions. The departments is said to be planning to use these extensive facilities in the distribution of educational motion pictures showing the processes and steps of manufacture of various American products.—[Christian Science Monitor.

NEVER "AWAKED"

Mother sent Betty upstairs to arouse her older sister, Marie, and Betty was delighted with the errand.

After trying in various ways to arouse the sleeper who, it seems, was pretending just to tease Betty, she finally went back downstairs and said: "Mother, but her's terribly asleep. Why, I pulled she's nose and rolled all over the bed, and her's never awoked!"—[P. G. in Baltimore American.

PLACING HER

A neighbor next door wears knickers and these are a source of interest to little Donald.

One day the youngster came in with some candy and I asked him where he got it. He answered: "From the lady next door."

"Well," said I, "that was nice of Mrs. S."

"O, not that next door lady," said Donald, "the other one," and then forgetting her name he continued, "you know, Mrs. Pants."—[C. C. in Baltimore American.

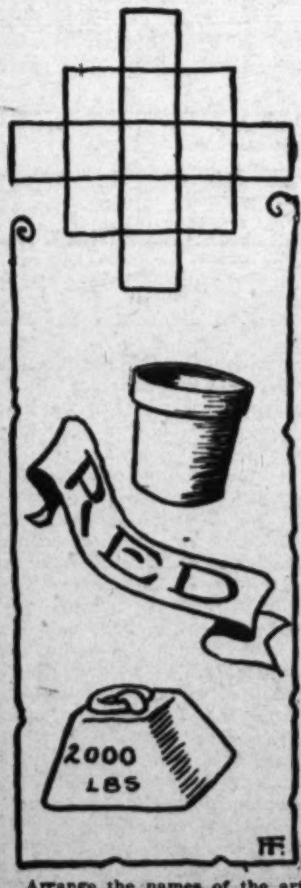
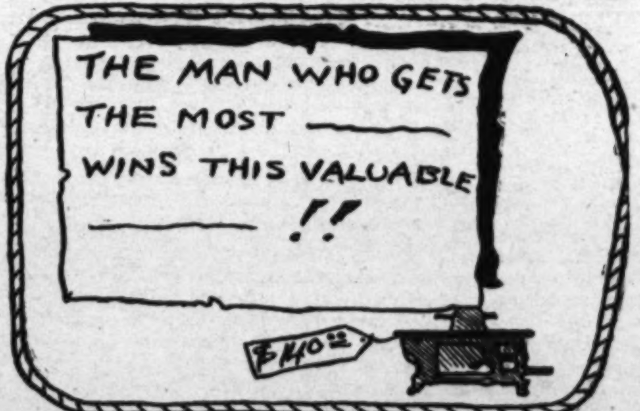
This is a proverb of five words. After you have guessed the five words pictured above, change one letter of each word to form another word, and see if you can get the right sentence. (Answer next Sunday.)

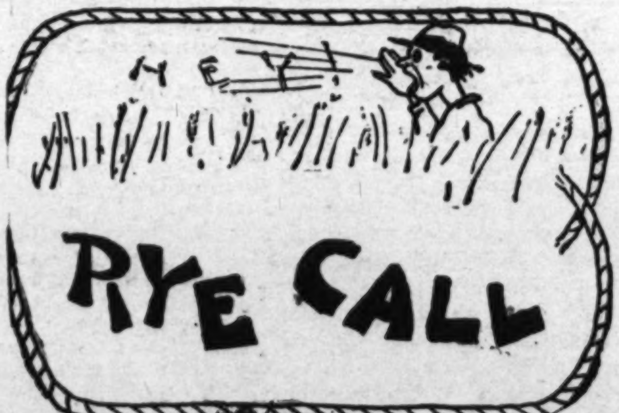


Arrange the names of the articles pictured in the squares, so that the diamond will read the same from left to right as from top to bottom.

Two in One (but Solve One at a Time)



Can you finish this sentence? The two missing words are composed of the same letters.



What great historian can you spell with all the above black letters?

FASTING AMONG ANIMALS

Although man can fast only a comparatively short time, many of the lower animals are able to abstain from food for months. This is the case with certain hibernating animals, which at the approach of winter, seek a hole or a cave to remain in a state of torpor until the advent of warm weather.

There are bears that stuff and gorge themselves with food in order to be able to draw on their energy during the long, lean winter period. It is not uncommon for them to find themselves snowed up in a cave for weeks and months. Hunters who have encountered them after such an experience describe them as thin and weak from hunger. "When a bear steak is right," said the hunter, "it is sweet, delicious and tender. Such meat you may be sure comes from not only a young, but a well-fed bear. But when the meat is tough it is that of an animal that has been spending the winter in storage."

It is no secret that snakes, once having partaken of a good meal, can go without eating for months. Many fish need but little food in the winter. It is recorded of a salmon in a Boston aquarium that went for a period of fourteen months without a meal. It is believed that he was kept alive by taking into his gills unconsciously minute insects that happened to be in his tank.

It is a common thing for animals to go on a hunger strike when they are first placed in captivity. It is a way they have of showing their displeasure at their new environment. Some animals, refusing to touch food placed before them, have died of starvation. Snakes sometimes have to be forcibly fed. An alligator in the aquarium refused for months to sample the delicacies that were placed before him. Rabbits, rats and other morsels dear to the alligator stomach could not tempt him to break his fast. When his keeper had about given him up, the big reptile suddenly evinced a desire to live. He ate everything that was set before him. Indeed, he could not get enough to eat, and he more than made up for his long fast.

Household pets, such as dogs and birds, often proclaim a fast when they are disconsolate at the loss of a master or mistress. It is not unusual for faithful dogs to fret and pine away. At the unexpected return of their master they are filled with joy, and quickly recover their good spirits.

WANTED ALL PIES

A kiddie who lives out on Woodruff avenue comes downtown every day, and crawling up on the high stool in a high-street lunch room, calls for a piece of pie. Ice cream has not attractions for him.

One day he saw his father digging in the garden and asked him:

"Daddy, what are you doing?"

"I'm planting things to eat," the father answered.

"Oh, daddy, please make it all pies," he begged.—[Columbus Dispatch.

BIRD SNEEZES

Little Ethel had spent the day at her aunt's and had been much interested in the new cuckoo clock. Telling her father about it that evening, she cried excitedly: "Oh, daddy! Auntie has a new clock and every little while there's a bird comes out and sneezes!"—[Judge.

SCOUT LEADERS DISCUSS WORK

Administration of Band, Functioning of Commissioners, and Other Subjects Considered

At a meeting of the Council of Troop Leaders recently in the Scout headquarters at Normal Hill Center, the course of the work for the four coming months, including the anniversary week in February, was outlined.

In addition to recommendations of the President and Scout executive that the council should lay stress upon special features in training of the boys, there were discussions, the policy with respect to the future administration of the Boy Scout Band, that is, whether it should be a separate troop or be composed of recruits from the existing troops; of the use of the week-end camp on Sunday; the functioning of the deputy Scout commissioners; leadership training courses and training of patrol leaders and of "children's book week."

There was a lengthy report on the national conference of Scout executives held in Asheville, N. C., where nearly 500 executives, the prime minister of scouting from England, a distinguished leader from France and Canada's foremost leader were present.

An interesting and profitable drive will be conducted by the Scouts during the week of November 12. This is the "children's book week," and every Scout will endeavor to earn enough money to purchase a good book, and so develop his taste for good literature.

A group of commissioners or troop leaders will compile a list of the best books for boys, and these lists will be placed at all of the most popular book stores in the city, where they can be consulted by the young purchasers.

ONE WAY TO FLOAT

Did you ever notice that if you are a thinnish Scout you can probably walk much longer than your fellow Girl Scouts who are—well—fattish? And did you ever notice that in the water you perhaps cannot float at all, that you just sink nicely as soon as you are level, while your plumpish friends lie on the surface like ducks and can float all afternoon? If you are one of those water-Scouts who don't just float naturally, but must learn, try this:

As soon as you throw yourself backward upon the water, "cross" one knee, putting the ankle of one foot at rest on the other knee-cap so that you look like the figure four. Then clasp your hands behind your head, and if you dislike water running into your ears you can put your thumbs across your ea holes and remain quite water-tight. The two elbows and knees act like outriggers on tippy canoes and keep you level and buoyant; in this position you will probably find that you can float quite as long and as comfortably as you want to.

It is worth any Scout's while to learn to float easily, both for long-distance swimming and because sometime your life in the water may depend on your ability to rest. As soon as the whole troop can float efficiently, try what fun it is to form various designs with yourselves on the water—such as stars—each Scout a radius with feet in the center, or double stars—two Scouts long. Did you ever try racing "wheelbarrow,' where a Scout running along the shallow water on a beach or in a pool, pushes a floating Scout in front of her?—[American Girl.

SAFE CAMPS THESE

NEW YORK.—The Girl Scouts throughout the United States during the summer operated 196 camps, accommodating over 35,000 girls. To properly care for this number the National Council early in the summer issued a general order requiring a high standard of sanitation, food and health.

Every camp was required to receive the approval of the local health officer with regard to its arrangements for sewerage, waste, mess halls and the like.

The drinking water had to be analyzed and a certificate given by the health officer that it was pure.

Each camp had to employ a trained dietitian or some one who understood food values and the planning of menus.

Every camp had to have a capable instructor to teach swimming. The Scouts were not allowed to go into the water except at regular hours when the instructor, preferably one who had passed the American Red Cross life-saving test, was in attendance.

NAMER AND GUESSER

In this old Scotch game two players are chosen to be Namer and Guesser. The other players stand in a row and the Namer whispers a name to each in turn. These must be ordinary first names, such as John, James, Joseph, Henry, Arthur, Charles, etc., or Mary, Grace, Elizabeth, Jane, Dorothy, Katherine, etc., for feminine players. As each player receives a name he or she turns around, facing away from the Namer. When all have had names conferred upon them and have turned their backs to the Namer and Guesser, the Namer calls out:

"Baker, baker, your bread is burning." The Guesser responds with the traditional answer: "Give me a corner of it," and takes his place behind the Namer, who chants:

Come, choose me east, come,
 choose me west,
Come, choose me one—Arthur!

The Guesser then makes a guess as to the identity of the player named Arthur by pointing to one of the back-turned players. If the guess is correct the player leaves the line and stands beside the Guesser, but if a wrong guess is made the player goes to the Namer's side. This continues until only one player is left, who had two different names, such as Black and White, Hot and Cold, Needles and Pins. The Namer says to the Guesser: "Black or White?" then "Hot or Cold?" "Needles or Pins?" If the Guesser guesses correctly two out of three of the names the player goes to his side, otherwise he belongs to the Namer. The game concludes with a tug-of-war.

Lumber Camp Dance

First. The players stand in two rows, partners facing. All dance around, three steps to the left; then three steps to the right, each with the left arm extended straight, righ arm across chest, right hand clasping left wrist. Repeating the turn-around dance steps, the players make six ax-swinging motions with both hands, as if chopping trees.

Second. The partners take first position three feet apart—then one dances three steps backward, with one closed hand over the other, as if grasping a buck saw, the opposite partner stepping forward, the second backward. This buck sawing movement is repeated six times.

Third. Partners dance backward, then toe forward, all bend, sway backward and forward, extending arms downward, with hands open and palms up, as if pushing a log into the river.

Fourth. This movement stimulates the lashing of logs together with ropes; each dancer stepping forward, first with arms extended, then clasping hands, as if holding a rope.

Fifth. The lashed logs have become a raft, the partners boarding it hand-in-hand with slightly climbing dance steps. Then the partners dance apart, forming two lines of dancers with hands clasped, extended and swaying, as if poling the raft, all dancing forward at the same time.

Sixth. In the final or landing movement, partners link arms, dance three climbing steps, then march to their seats.

OUR PUZZLE GYM

BY SAM LOYD

AT THE ZOO

It appears that Harry went to the circus, which he was told was an instructive combination of performing horses, riders and clowns, with a scientific zoological collection of animals from the wilds of South Africa. Being of a cautious disposition, however, Harry wished to be sure of seeing his money's worth before parting with his dollar, and therefore interrogated the doorkeeper regarding the number of horses, riders and animals on exhibition.

The doorkeeper, who was really somewhat ashamed of the meager display of wonders within the tent as compared with the glowing pictures on the posters, feigned ignorance of the exact number of marvelous attractions, but explained that in addition to the horses, ladies and gentlemen riders, with the clowns who had 100 feet and thirty-six heads, there was a collection of curiosities from the African jungle which would bring the sum total up to fifty-six heads and 156 feet.

"KING'S SPORT"

If the odds are 7 to 3 against Apple Pie, then we receive back $10 for an outlay of $3; or we would get back $11 for an outlay of $5 on Bumble Bee. Therefore, to balance the book, we must place $27 to $83 on Cucumber, as proven by the following: $33 on A would bring $110, or $50 on B would bring $110, and $27 to $83 on C would bring $110. So if we place $30, $50 and $27, which amounts to $110, no matter which horse wins we would get back $110, which proves that the odds are absolutely just, and without the margin which the bookmaker always leaves for himself.

Two simple home tests

Low Melting Point Easy Digestibility

Into half a glass of lukewarm water drop a small lump each of Crisco and any other shortening. With a spoon gradually add hot water until Crisco melts. You will find that few other fats melt at this point. Food authorities say that an easily digested fat should melt near body heat—98⅖ degrees. Crisco, you will find, melts even below this temperature. It melts at 97 degrees. (This test does not necessarily condemn the digestibility of the other fat, but it will aid you to establish Crisco's fine digestibility.)

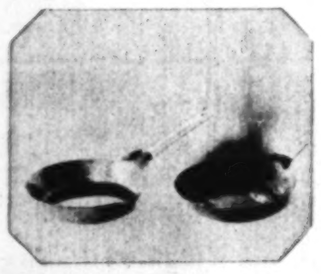
Avoid Smoke and Odor!

Put into separate pans equal amounts of Crisco and any other fat. Heat slowly for eight minutes or until they reach a temperature where a bread crumb browns in 40 seconds.

Notice that the Crisco, unlike most cooking fats, does not smoke at this proper frying temperature.

You will find that frying with Crisco will be very helpful in keeping your whole house fresh and free from the odor of cooking fats.

IN THE QUAINT little home of our friends, Conny and Prudence and Jack and Jim, each day sees the strangest happening! Yes, it is actually true, Conny and Prudence and Jack and Jim are always on time for meals. A secret of their mother's is responsible. She knows how safely to give her boys and girls the very foods they crave. And she tells the children, "cakes and pies and cookies are only for children on time." Any careful mother who wishes to gratify her natural desire to give her boys and girls safe cakes, pies and cookies will find some helpful information below.



A government bureau on "Child foods and health"

Also, some important facts about a digestible shortening

WHEN official investigators announced, after studies in many different cities, that one school child in every three was under-nourished, the Government Children's Bureau took important steps. As one corrective measure they issued a booklet pleading for more intelligent home care. This booklet says, in part:

> "Let an infectious disease, such as measles, whooping cough or scarlet fever, attack a neighborhood and the difference between the well-nourished and the malnourished child at once appears. The child in fine physical condition may not escape the disease, but if he does contract it he has more vigor to withstand the attack and his recovery is usually rapid."

So thoughtful mothers are naturally attaching a new importance to the digestibility of the foods they serve to their boys and girls.

The need for digestible shortenings

These mothers appreciate the peculiar need for intelligent selection of the family shortening. They know that fats are our chief energy foods. They realize, too, that an unwholesome shortening can render difficult of digestion dozens of otherwise healthful foods.

With so much motherly thought centered on healthfulness it is only natural that Crisco is everywhere displacing shortenings of doubtful digestibility. For Crisco, you know, is a vegetable shortening—a shortening which digests in an easy natural way.

When a mother bakes and fries with Crisco she may dismiss anxious doubts about digestibility. When serving fried foods, pies, cakes or cookies, she need not keep saying to her little ones "Be careful." Instead, she may take a natural satisfaction in saying, "Help yourselves."

Unusually delicious results too reward the user of Crisco.

Light digestible cakes which stay fresh longer! Tender, flaky and digestible pie crust! Digestible fried foods with a crisp brown outside and a delicately flavored inside! These, mothers tell us, make Crisco cooking a real pleasure.

So nowadays a really thoughtful mother would no more deliberately choose indigestible shortening than she would deliberately choose inferior milk.

The really progressive grocer, you will find, prefers to sell the most healthful food ingredients. He is more and more recommending Crisco to take the place of shortenings whose ease of digestion may be questioned—such shortenings, for example, as are often sold in bulk.

How to use Crisco

IN PAN FRYING as in deep frying, Crisco has reached proper frying heat when it browns a bread crumb in 40 seconds. (Do not wait for Crisco to smoke.) By straining Crisco you can use it again and again. AS SHORTENING use ⅕ less of Crisco than you would of animal fats.

YOU may anticipate digestible, fine-flavored foods when you find a bakery, hotel or restaurant which uses Crisco.

These proprietors, of course, pay considerably more for Crisco than they need pay for "average" shortenings. But thoughtful owners, wide awake to their customers' interests, seldom hesitate over these few extra pennies per pound. For Crisco, they have learned, assures to their foods healthful digestibility.

GLOBE A1 FLOUR

GINGER COOKIES are popular always and are handy dainties to have available when a light lunch is desired. A very much liked recipe is given here:

2-3 cup sugar	½ cup Brisq
½ cup molasses	1 egg
1 teaspoon soda	1½ teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon salt	2 tablespoons vinegar

Globe "A-1" Flour sufficient to make dough stiff enough to roll.

Put Brisq, sugar and molasses in a saucepan, bring to boiling point and cool. Add the egg, unbeaten, and the soda and ginger dissolved in two tablespoons hot water, then the vinegar, salt and enough flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Roll thin, cut and bake in a moderate oven.

CARPENTER FINDS RECREATED FRANCE

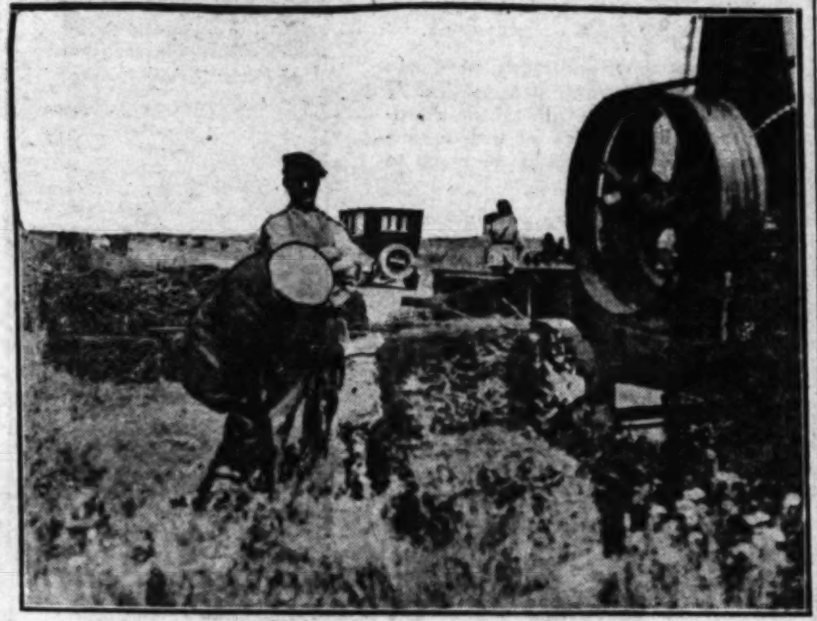
And so I might go on for an hour more, explaining the figures given me by the Minister of the Liberated Regions. The story is one horrible tale of destruction such as the world has not seen since the 17th day of November, along about 2300 B. C., when God sent the flood and destroyed every living thing upon earth, excepting the men, birds, beasts and creeping things corralled in the Ark of old Noah.

What we are more interested in is the work of re-creation. This is going on so rapidly that even the French do not realize the enormous changes that are taking place in the states through which I have toured. Large parts of the country remind one of the frontier towns of our West which spring up in gold mine stampedes or in oil rushes, save that these buildings of France are substantial and put up to stay. One looks far and wide over farms richer than those of the Mississippi Valley, and which at this writing are covered with crops far exceeding in their profit per acre anything we know in America, and sees everywhere on the landscapes the red tiled roofs of farm buildings, and of cities and villages. The new laws prohibit any buildings of wood, and all roofs must be of tile, slate or steel.



After four years France is still digging miles of barbed wire out of the soil of the battle-scarred areas. The wire is compressed into 125-pound bales by this machine and sold to the steel mills for $4 a ton.

The lands already brought back by the plow are more than one-eighth the size of Ohio and that State has no soil so fat. The crops are bigger than ever. The wheat yield of last year was 8,000,000 bushels more than in 1920, the oats and hay crops were enormous, and the nation will soon again be feeding itself. The number of farm buildings entirely rebuilt is about 20,000, and more than twice that number have been completely repaired. Some of us lie awake all night before we decide to build a new barn, France has built over 10,000 within thirty-six months, and they are all roofed with gray slate or red tiles.

Restoring the Live Stock an Important Part of the Work

BEFORE the war there were in round numbers on the farms overrun by the Germans about 900,000 cattle and more than half as many horses, donkeys and mules. Of sheep and goats there were almost a million, and the hogs were one-third as many. Nearly all of these were destroyed or carried away over the Rhine. Today we have here almost a half million cattle and an equal number of sheep, goats and pigs while new live stock is being brought in every day. I have seen flock after flock of sheep watched by shepherds, and great numbers of cows tied by long ropes to stakes feeding on grass which reached to their knees. The cows are allowed to eat only that set before them, and they cut off a field foot by foot as though it were mowed with a scythe. There are no fences whatever, and a cow will feed upon clover, going only to the length of her rope, while right under her nose, just beyond are wheat and oats running forty bushels or more to the acre. After she has eaten her allotted area close to the ground the stakes are moved and she cuts down a new patch.

Let me now take you across country, and show you some of the new farms of North France. We are in a Panhard limousine with Lieut. Desrousseaux and the chauffeur on the front seat. We are going over a road as hard as stone and as smooth as a floor. There are windrows of barbed wire by the sides of the road, and here and there the wire is cocked up like hay in the fields, or put up into bales to be sold as old iron. Each bale is about a foot thick, two feet wide and three long. It weighs 125 pounds and brings $5 a ton. There are cords of such bales by the roadsides and with them the old iron racks which aided in making the entanglements.

In some places we see men picking the wire off the ground. I stop the automobile and watch them cleaning the fields. The men pick up the wire with forked hoes and mattock and carry it on wheelbarrows to the machine upon wheels, at the side of the road, where it is squeezed into bales. I can't tell you how much of this barbed wire there is but it covered tens of thousands of acres.

The "Red Zone" So-Called, Was the Scene of Great Battles

THE greater part of the wire has been taken from the land that can be farmed, and the only places where it still lies in great quantities are in the "red zone" which will be the last cleaned up. This zone is made up of the worst of the battle fields. It equals 3000 farms of 100 acres each. It will cost more than it is worth to redeem it, and so the government has bought the land from the peasants and it will be planted with trees. There is no possibility of making it into farm land for another generation because it will take from fifty to a hundred years for the leaf mold from the forest to create a top soil.

Still this zone once produced two or three times as much wheat to the acre as the average of the United States, and it belonged to the richest of the farming regions of France. It is now scarred with barbed wire and shell holes. Weeds of all kinds are growing upon it, and great beds of red poppies vie with the daisies and thistles in drawing a blanket over its scars. The subsoil is chalk and the zone now looks half desert with white rock showing out through the weeds. Still, all around it the fields are smiling with grain, and the same sort of soil laughs with the harvest.

As we go on with our ride we look out at the right and the left through the trees. The carpet of crops reaches on and on to the wooded horizon. The fields are of all shapes and sizes, and each is as smooth as the newly woven stuffs from the silk mills of Lyons. Here and there in this beautiful blanket a town is rising out of ruins, and patches of great barns with their roofs of red tile stand high over the green.

The fields are of many colors, and just now the declining rays of the sun have turned them to velvet. There are green sugar beets and purple alfalfa. There are patches of golden ripe wheat, lemon hued oats and the dark brown newly plowed land. Now and then we pass a place where the red poppies are trying to conquer the gold of the wheat. The poppies are about the only weeds to be seen, and we ride on and on through what seems a vast garden.

I am surprised at the good farming I see all over France. In our agriculture every third man is a sluggard. His fields are half plowed, and weeds line the roadsides. His meadows are peppered with blue thistle or daisies. In the France I am seeing every patch is clean and of even richness.

France Today is a Nation Hard at Work

THE whole nation is working and this is especially so on the farms. Everyone in the family is out in the fields, and they work from sunrise to sunset. At 5 o'clock in the morning they have a cup of coffee and a piece of bread as their breakfast, upon which they labor till noon. Then they have lunch of bread, meat and cheese in the fields and rest for an hour. After that they go back to work until 8 in the evening, when they come home for dinner. This is the big meal of the day. It consists of soup, meat, bread, cheese and vegetables, washed down with a thin red or white wine. Most of the hired men on the farms are fed by their employers. Their wage, with food, is about ten francs a day, which at present equals $1.

I see many women at work on the farms. They hoe and weed the beets and the turnips, they labor in the hay fields aiding in loading the carts, and they push wheel barrows filled with all sorts of farm produce over the roads. They are doing much of the reconstruction, and some of the rough work of the building. I saw four lusty maidens this afternoon throwing bricks from one to another on the top of a great brick pile outside one of the towns. A little farther on a bare-headed old woman was pushing a wheel barrow, and, in the fields by the side of the roads, boys of 12 and 14 were aiding the harvesters.

The same sort of work is going on in all the towns and the cities. The municipalities are buzzing like bees after swarming and men and women and boys are aiding in the rebuilding, cleaning out the debris and digging the foundations for the substantial structures which are now going up. It is the same in the mines and the factories as I shall show in my letters to come. I can sum up the whole in one sentence. All France is at work, the people are cheerful, and they have faith in their future. They are all saving money, and they believe that God lives.

SECRETS OF CIRCUS LIFE

"palmed" two dimes. The ruralite however, carefully counted his change, and noting the omission, called the vender back:

"Hey, mister, you're short 20 cents," he compained.

"Oh, is that so? Let's see," graciously said the "butcher," taking the change and surreptitiousy adding the missing coins. His second count of course showed the correct amount, a fact that greatly mystified the rustic. Then as if to reassure the patron, the affable vender placed nine dimes in rapid succession in Josh's up-turned palm.

"See that," exclaimed Josh as the vender departed, "if I hadn't been too smart for 'im, I'd been cheated agin."

"Jes, count it again," advised Hiram, "them fellers is so all fired tricky they kin 'most take out your eye without you knowin' it."

Acting upon his friend's suggestion, Josh again counted his money, then he called to the vender who of course pretended not to hear.

"What's the mattah," queried Hiram.

"That doggone slicker," explained Josh, "beat me outta 20 cents after all."

The wily brigand had only given the countryman seven dimes instead of nine as appeared to be the case. When he swiftly placed the dimes singly in Josh's hand, he made each click in turn, but he had while doing this, twice merely clicked the coins without dropping them, making the seven click the message of nine. This trick is known to the circus world as the "telegraph" and is difficult to detect when adroitly executed.

"These slickers is so slippery that a fly with spiked shoes couldn't stay on 'em," observed Hiram. "I guess I bettah hang on to my ginger bread or they'll steal that nex'," he concluded as he picked up a package from an adjoining seat and held it in his lap.

"What yo' doin' with all that gingerbread?" inquired Josh.

"I bought it to eat of course," responded Hiram.

"You su'ah haint hungry again so soon aftah eatin' that big dinnah?"

"I su'ah did eat my fill—I feel as full as a tick yet," answered Hiram.

"Why'd yo' buy all that gingerbread fur then?" persisted Josh, "yo' got 'nough fur four men," he added.

"I know that, but wun of them oily slickers talked to me in a way that's make a starvin' cat leave her cream, and he kept on talkin' till he made me b'lieve I was hungry."

Baring Our Hearts

IT IS not considered quite the proper thing, nowadays, for people to bare their hearts to one another; and certainly it is not fashionable to do so. It is, on the contrary, imposed upon us by the pathetic customs of what must be admitted to be a somewhat superficial age, that we hide our hearts away from the eyes of our fellow human beings.

Well, we do not think it is a good custom. For, if we could see more clearly always into the hearts of our neighbors, life would be less harsh than it is. There would be more understanding, more sympathy and far more Christian charity.

So, even though we violate the prevailing and wholly false code of ethics that exists, we shall make bold to print here, this blessed Sabbath morning, a letter received not long since from a member of the Congregation of the Faithful. It is a message that will warm those who sit in the synagogue, each with his own troubles, his problems, and maybe the griefs that make heavy his heart.

"Dear Conductor," says the letter, "what you require of the readers of your page to make them members of the Congregation of the Faithful greatly appealed to me, Conductor, and I try to live up to your requirements.

"I say my prayers and I follow the advice of Dr. Brook for myself and my children. And at the times when you've given us your viewpoint on heaven I've been, oh, immensely interested, because it's such a human way of looking at it, and I've come to the conclusion that across the Border it is just about as you say, Conductor. I suppose we will oftentimes talk over the worries and fear we had in this life, which we could so easily have left to God and He would have taken care of them for us.

"But now my interest in heaven is a very personal one. You see we had a darling fair-haired boy given us on Aug. 8, 1920. And we called him a 'gift from God' and named him after the great-hearted wonder worker of Padua. But now, Conductor, I've borrowed a phrase of yours, and I think of him as a 'loan from God,' for on the 7th of last month, just the day before he was to have been two years old, God took him back. So, you see, he really was just a loan.

"So I've been thinking more than ever about the Other Side—where he is now. His passing was swift and unexpected. He had been wonderfully well, thanks to Dr. Brook's very good advice. And yet—he was taken away. At first I examined myself very rigidly, indeed, in an effort to discover if we had been remiss in anything. But I failed to find a thing.

"So I think it must be like this: The Savior, while on earth, expressed in no uncertain terms his love and preference for the little ones. So it must be that He takes babies because He wants babies in heaven, because it takes babies to make heaven complete. Why, when we stop to consider that they make a veritable heaven on this drab earth for those lucky enough to possess them, how much must they add to the joys of the real heaven? In fact, it wouldn't be heaven without babies in it.

"So I guess, Conductor, those of us who have a baby waiting on the Other Side have a very special joy to look forward to. For while the children God has left us will grow up and go out into the world, those He has taken in their infancy will always be our babies.

"I don't know if you will have the time or the patience to read this to the end. But I just wanted to tell you that your way of looking at the life beyond has helped me much in reaching the conclusion I've just told you about, and it has been a source of unspeakable comfort to me."

Thus runs the letter which this dear member of the Congregation has sent to us, making us humble for its praise, and of which we are altogether unworthy.

We read the message in the Synagogue for no other reason than that it will cheer and comfort others.

It is a letter from a woman who, when grief tore her heart, lifted up her eyes unto the hills where the God of the Ages sits in His golden chair, and her faith makes her whole.

The Rule of Women

THE man who reads the papers came over to our little high house in the hills the other night.

And, after awhile, several other neighbors dropped in, as the saying is. And it was a pleasant evening, and we talked over a lot of things that were on our minds. About Henry Ford and Mr. Rockefeller, and the like of that. And there was also some talk on the subject of how long do you suppose it will be till women rule the world.

And we remember that the man who plays the flute said then, by gollies, you don't have to wait to know when women will rule the world. They rule it now, he said. And they always did rule it. And they always will. Look at Peggy Joyce, he said, and "Mother" Jones, and Emma Goldman and all the rest of them, said the man who plays the flute.

Now, the funny part of it is that the man who plays the flute knows about women only by hearsay. He is a bachelor. And what does a bachelor know about women? It is as the man whose house is on the mesa said—you must really be a married man, or a widower, to really know anything about women.

Well, sir, it was long after the time of the third (censored) that the neighbors were willing to quit the discussion of when women would rule the world. But, the question was settled then, at last. And it was done by the man we call Homer's friend—the man whose house is beside the road.

Yes, sir, said the man whose house is beside the road, it is true that women rule the world today, and that they always have ruled it ever since Adam grew up to be a man. And when I say that, said the man whose house is beside the road, I don't mean the Peggy Joyces, or the "Mother" Joneses, or the Emma Goldmans, either. Although I have nothing against any of them; they never did anything to me, he said.

But, what I mean, said Homer's friend, is that just the everyday women that no one ever hears of, are the women who rule the world. The women who rock the cradles, the women who bake the bread and who keep clean the hearthstones; the home-loving, God-fearing women of the earth who pray on their bended knees.

Well, sir, there was no more argument on the subject after that. No more was said about it. And the conversation was turned into other and less heart-touching channels.

Vision in the City

Bred in the town am I,
So would I will to be,
Loving its glimpses of sky,
Swayed by its human sea.

Out of its greed and scorn,
Strong hands and kindly reach;
Over its discords borne,
Listen—what gentle speech.

Here in the surging crowd
Modern in habit and names,
Linger all unavowed,
Simon, Peter and James.

Judas goes cringing by Heavily browed and wan—
Yonder with timid eye
Passes the loving John.

On yonder flower-booth raised,
Pallid, the blossoms lean—
There in the lilies He praised,
Look! The Nazarene!

ROBERT GILBERT WELSH.

An Erring Brother

IF WE were asked to go out into the highways and the byways of the world to search for pessimists, the last place we would ever think of looking into would be the lairs of country editors.

Above all men, the editors of country newspapers are the most cheerful, the most optimistic and the kindliest. They turn their clouds inside out so they can always see the silver lining. They go to church and say their prayers. And they never say a mean word about anybody.

So, you can imagine how pained we were, lately, to read in a near-by country paper that brotherly love is a thing of the past. Yes, sir, a country editor wrote it right down on a piece of paper with a lead pencil—the same as we are writing this—and he printed it in his newspaper right where all his subscribers could read it.

Oh, brother, what's the matter? And what the dickens is the matter with the place where you live?

Stand forth Friend Richardson, stand forth John King and Crombie Allen and Robbie Harbison. Here is an erring brother with whose devoted liver something has gone wrong. He has invested himself with a grouch, contrary to all the traditions of our ancient and noble tribe of scribes.

Let us straighten him out. And though he may cry "Throw physic to the dogs," let us make him take a good one.

Charlie Chaplin Seriously

WE WERE discussing Charlie Chaplin one evening, not long ago, in the green Verdugo Hills. The neighbors were gathered together on the stone fence at the time, watching the sunset on the Ventura Mountains.

And, by gollies, we will bet that Charlie Chaplin's ears were burning that evening, wherever he was, because there was so much talk about him. It lasted until the sunset was long fled from the torquoise of the sky. And the stars had lighted their lamps, one by one. And we could see the lights of the foolish automobiles flitting like fireflies up and down the Calabasas Road.

It was the man who reads the papers that started the talk about Charlie Chaplin. He said that in a big woman's magazine which everybody reads, Charlie has a piece this month about the movies. And, by gollies, said the man who reads the papers, it is a great piece. It has a lot of deep thought in it. And it isn't funny at all, as you might think it would be, coming from a man who makes the whole world laugh. And Charlie Chaplin is the best-known man in the world, said the man who reads the papers. He is better known than the President of the United States, or the King of England, or John McGraw, or Jack Dempsey, or Henry Warnack or any of those folks. He is known not only on every continent, but in every town and hamlet of all those continents—Europe, Asia and Africa. The Chinese know him, and the Japs, the Turks, the Australasians and even the wild men of Borneo. He is the most familiar man in the universe. And every time anyone sees his picture or mentions his name they stop whatever they are doing to have a good laugh.

So, said the man who reads the papers, you might think that Charlie Chaplin is just a clown of a fellow, a buffoon, and a man who hasn't a serious thought in his head. But, if you will read this piece that Charlie wrote for the magazine, you will change your mind about him and see what a deep-thinking mind he really has.

Well, sir, this brought up the whole talk about Charlie Chaplin. And we were glad to be able to tell the neighbors sitting there on the stone fence that from our personal knowledge of him, and from lots more that we have heard from his friends, the Charlie Chaplin of reality and the Charlie Chaplin of the pictures are as different, the one from the other, as day is different from night. If you were to meet Charlie Chaplin on a dusty highway of the world and sit with him under the shade of a tree, he would amaze you with high understanding of human history and the deep philosophy of human life. Which is to say that this prince of all comedians is behind his mask of fun a most serious and thoughtful gentleman.

And the neighbors were greatly surprised when we told them all this. And no doubt the world would be surprised to hear it. But, maybe it is better that the world does not know the truth, and that it thinks of Charlie only as a fellow who considers nothing but the light and airy things of life, and whose aim and object in existence are to make people laugh.

Maybe the world would be shocked by the revelation that there are two Charlie Chaplins—the one who cogitates and frets himself with scientific and philosophic ruminations, and the other who never gives one moment of his life to serious thought.

Because if the people of the world knew the truth about Charlie, then it would happen that whenever they saw him on the screen with his funny little hat, his exaggerated trousers, and his turned-out toes, and him cutting capers all the time, they would think, well, this fellow is only making believe after all, and he doesn't believe, himself, in making people laugh, and we ought not to be here wasting our time in a frivolous way, but we ought to be somewhere digging into Plato, Aristotle, Darwin and the Higher Thought, the same as Charlie does.

And in view of all this perhaps it is a mistake for us to rise in the synagogue on this blessed Sabbath morning before the whole Congregation of the Faithful and ruthlessly rob the world of one of its happiest delusions.

It is poor business for a man to be in—to do a thing like that.

The Man Who Did It

BOYS—the junior members of the Congregation of the Faithful—will be glad for us to tell them that a book called "How I Carried the Message to Garcia" is published by Walter D. Harney, Hewes Building, San Francisco. And that they can buy the book for 25 cents.

It is written by Col. Andrew Summers Rowan, himself, the man who carried the message. And there never was a more thrilling tale of adventure written. And, the best of it is, it is true.

Boys' daddies will tell them about the Spanish-American War and "the message to Garcia"—that great feat of heroism performed by an American soldier.

It is a book that grown folks will want to read, too.

GRIZZLY BEAR HUNTING A THRILLING SPORT

i. stood out like spikes. Ellsworth realized his danger—not knowing what the grizzly would do, as he certainly looked mad enough for anything. He quickly pulled himself together, realizing something had to be done, and automatically with the thought he brought his gun to bear on the beast's neck and placed a bullet at the base of the brain, just as it raised from the ground on the spring toward him. Ellsworth says this was the closest he ever was or wishes to be fodder for bear.

Speaking of grizzlies, Ellsworth said that there is no way of estimating the age of the bear, as he is an extremely long lived creature. He added that there was a Rocky Mountain grizzly in the Golden Gate Park when he came to California more than forty years ago, and it was then an old animal. The last time he visited the park the bear was still there. He estimates this bear was about ninety years old. Bears have been known to pass the century mark.

The Grizzly Will Go His Way If Not Interfered With

SOME hunters have stated that grizzlies if shot when they are not aware of the presence of the hunter will for some reason run in the direction from which the wound is received, and this is believed to be the reason so many hunters claim that grizzlies always charge them. Ellsworth, however, states this is not always the case. His experience has been that if you do not interfere with them and are not in their way, they will generally watch you with more or less interest, and unconcernedly move away, while the black or brown bear will always bolt away immediately.

The gait of the grizzly is unusual and almost impossible to describe, being a kind of shuffle, very ungainly, but suggestive of great power and momentum, and certainly gives one the impression of being always on guard and ready for instant action. Nevertheless, his walk has the appearance of leisure, and he can cover long distances in a remarkably short time when he determines that absence is the better part of valor.

As well as being the monarch of the woods the grizzly bear far excels in cunning and shrewdness any other animal found in his domain, and the things he will do and find not to do to outwit the trapper are akin to the uncanny.

There is an old saying that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. This in another sense is equally true of bears, and more grizzly hunters have won their chance to drive their bullets home by studying their victim's appetite than by any other method. It therefore follows that some of the hunting grounds in the great Northwest used to be along streams where the salmon run, for the grizzly has a great appetite for fish and is a very efficient fisherman.

The Grizzly is Among the Most Expert of Fishermen

THE grizzly by that natural instinct, or animal intuition, has his own calendar and never gets his dates mixed. About two weeks before the salmon are due the bears leave the higher hills and ridges and gather near the streams to be on hand when the fish appear. They usually select as a place for their favorite fishing ground, some shallow riffle, and in some places the bank of the stream is worn smooth by the many trails leading away into the dense woods, where they rest up when not fishing.

In localities where they had been little hunted, Ellsworth has seen them out fishing at all hours of the day, and to see a grizzly catching salmon is a sight well worth while and never to be forgotten, and is one of the real thrills for the hunter watching the hunted fishing.

The grizzly usually sits on the bank of the river or creek and watches the riffles over which the salmon try to force their way, and will quietly wait until the salmon is struggling in his efforts to make the steep ascent, when he will dash for his prey and with a lightning sweep of his huge paw and amid a shower of water sends the fish sailing up on the bank. If he is hungry he devours his catch at once. When his appetite is satisfied he will probably continue fishing and, gathering his catch together, bury them under leaves and litter for a future meal. They are so expert they will pick a fish clean, leaving the head, backbone and ribs intact.

It is true that at the time when the salmon are running Bruin has no fur and but very little hair, so that Chester Ellsworth while they would be coming from the hibernating period, consequently his trophies are splendid specimens in full fur.

Two Huge Grizzlies Wreck Ellsworth's Camp

ON ONE occasion, in the fall of the year, he shot two, much against his desire, but had to do so in self-defense, or rather in defense of his belongings. He had gone up to British Columbia to hunt moose and caribou, and located camp. He had an assistant to help him with the rough work; they had picketed out their horses and got everything snugged down and were ready about sunrise to start on the trail, when about 100 yards from their tent he saw two grizzlies looking over a small divide and then suddenly disappear down a gulch. He immediately got on their tracks and shot both of them. This he considered necessary owing to a previous experience when up on Goat Creek divide in the same region. After spring hunting he decided not to carry out a good deal of his equipment but leave it until fall when he was returning for other game. So they tied everything of value up high on the tent pole securely, as they thought, but on returning found everything had been pulled down; bedding and tent were torn in strips; food supplies, even canned goods, were torn open, or had teeth marks; beans spread all over the ground. An old style Eastman kodak was found forty feet from the camp in the grass, the leather chewed off and teeth marks in the metal, but still capable of taking pictures. All of which had been the work of destructive grizzly bears.

Ellsworth relates an experience in Idaho when he knew of seven cows being killed at one time during breakfast, just prior to which they had been let out of the corral. They were simply killed for sheer mischief by one big grizzly which had been seen around, and eventually he shot him.

Another evidence of the natural instinct of bears is how they gauge the time to emerge from their winter dens, because they come out at about the usual time in the different parts of the country accordingly, from about April to May, even though there may be a deep snow still lying over the country. Their dens are usually natural caves, among the cliffs, their openings concealed by dense brush and undergrowth, and these have often been discovered by the tracks and tearing down of undergrowth and snow by the animals forcing their way through.

Ellsworth has also hunted both the black and brown bear and relates many interesting experiences with them. The black and brown bear both have short claws and climb trees. The grizzly is furnished by nature with very long talons and has never been found tree climbing. They all eat roots, vegetation, flesh and fish. The black or brown bear making a kill or finding a carcass will pull it away from where found and start eating it, remaining with it until finished. The grizzly is more of an epicure; he will cover it up with leaves and allow it to remain a few days to mature before making his feast.

Mr. Ellsworth's trophy room in Long Beach is the mecca of many big game hunters. One of his most treasured trophies is the mounted head of what is said to have been the largest moose ever seen in British Columbia. The base of each horn, that is, where it fastens to the head, is twelve and a half inches in circumference; length of the shovels, three feet six inches; width of shovels, sixteen inches; finished with twenty-four points or spikes, running in size from short ones to sixteen inches; spread of horns, fifty inches; length of under jaw, twenty-four inches; age, estimated twenty-five years; weight 1400 pounds.

Because of building operations requiring his presence, Ellsworth was forced to give up his trip this year, but next spring he expects to be back in the wilds of British Columbia.

FLOWER OF THE NORTH

"Philip! Philip!"

The cry came twice—his own name, piercing, agonizing, rising above the thunder of the floods. He heard no more, but raced up the slope of the dip. From the crest he stared down to where Jeanne had been. She was gone. The canoe was gone. A terrible fear swept upon him, and for an instant he turned faint. Jeanne's cry came to him again.

"Philip! Philip!"

Like a madman he dashed up the rocky trail to the chasm, calling to Jeanne, shrieking to her, telling her that he was coming. He reached the edge of the precipice and looked down. Below him was the canoe and Jeanne. She was fighting futilely against the resistless flood; he saw her paddle wrenched suddenly from her hands, and as it went swirling beyond her reach she cried out his name again. Philip shouted, and the girl's white face was turned up to him. Fifty yards ahead of her were the first of the rocks. In another minute, even less, Jeanne would be dashed to pieces before his eyes. Thoughts, swifter than light, flashed through his mind. He could do nothing for her, for it seemed impossible that any living creature could exist amid the maelstroms and rocks ahead. And yet she was calling to him. She was reaching up her arms to him. She had faith in him, even in the face of death.

"Philip! Philip!"

There was no m'sieur to that cry now, only a moaning, sobbing prayer filled with his name.

"I'm coming, Jeanne!" he shouted. "I'm coming! Hold fast to the canoe!"

He ran ahead, stripping off his coat. A little below the first rocks a stunted banskian grew out of an earthy fissure in the cliff, with its lower branches dipping within a dozen feet of the stream. He climbed out on this with the quickness of a squirrel, and hung to a limb with both hands, ready to drop alongside the canoe. There was one chance, and only one, of saving Jeanne. It was a chance out of a thousand—ten thousand. If he could drop at the right moment, seize the stern of the canoe, and make a rudder of himself, he could keep the craft from turning broadside and might possibly guide it between the rocks below. This one hope was destroyed as quickly as it was born. The canoe crashed against the first rock. A smother of foam rose about it and he saw Jeanne suddenly engulfed and lost. Then she reappeared, almost under him, and he launched himself downward, clutching at her dress with his hands. By a supreme effort he caught her around the waist with his left arm, so that his right was free.

Ahead of them was a boiling sea of white, even more terrible than when they had looked down upon it from above. The rocks were hidden by mist and foam; their roar was deafening. Between Philip and the awful maelstrom of death there was a quieter space of water, black, sullen, and swift—the power itself, rushing on to whip itself into ribbons among the taunting rocks that barred its way to the sea. In that space Philip looked at Jeanne. Her face was against his breast. Her eyes met his own, and in that last moment, face to face with death, love leaped above all fear. They were about to die, and Jeanne would die in his arms. She was his now—forever. His hold tightened. Her face came nearer. He wanted to shout, to let her know what he had meant to say at Fort o' God. But his voice would have been like a whisper in a hurricane. Could Jeanne understand? The wall of foam was almost in their faces. Suddenly he bent down, crushed his face to hers, and kissed her again and again. Then, as the maelstrom engulfed them, he swung his own body to take the brunt of the shock.

He no longer reasoned beyond one thing. He must keep his body between Jeanne and the rocks. He would be crushed, beaten to pieces, made unrecognizable, but Jeanne would be only drowned. He fought to keep himself half under her, with his head and shoulders in advance. When he felt the floods sucking him under, he thrust her upward. He fought, and did not know what happened. Only there was the crashing of a thousand cannon in his ears, and he seemed to live through an eternity. They thundered about him, against him, ahead of him, and then more and more behind. He felt no pain, no shock. It was the sound that he seemed to be fighting; in the buffeting of his body against the rocks there was the painlessness of a knife-thrust delivered amid the roar of battle. And the sound receded. It was thundering in retreat, and a curious thought came to him. Providence had delivered him through the maelstrom. He had not struck the rocks. He was saved. And in his arms he held Jeanne.

"rapper" and his kick is referred to as a "holler." The fake detective used in these emergencies is useful both to the grafter and the chief concessionaire. He acts as a "look-out" for the former and a "squarer" for the latter, being on the job to see that the "main squeeze" gets his stimulated part of the loot and that the "butcher" is protected in making his getaway. If a grafter is caught in an attempt to "hold out" on the chief concessionaire, it is up to the detective to keep the offender "off the reservation," as the circus lot is generally known.

The System is Worked out Perfectly by a Code of Signals

WHEN a "mark" has been trimmed of an unusually large sum, the bogus detective is apprised of it and is charged with the duty of keeping the other pirates away from the "mark" for fear that if he again opens his wallet, or "poke" as they term it, he will discover his loss. The detective or "dick" hovers around the victim, and when another grafter approaches, he is warned by a significant cough to keep away. The signal is technically known as the "hock" and means literally "keep off the grass—he's been touched up."

In the event that a "butcher" is caught before he can slip away, and is arrested, or as it is in underworld patois called: "has a fall," his first effort is to obtain his release on the lowest possible bail, which he invariably forfeits rather than stand trial. If, in his judgment, the bail is too "stiff," he engages a "mouthpiece"—as crooks call lawyers—and faces trial, confident that lack of evidence will result in acquittal, as a matter of fact, it turns out in this way in a majority of cases of this sort.

Lest the reader conclude from my remarks that circus grafting is a safe, lucrative calling, I will in passing state that during my many years with circuses, I sounded a score of elderly "butchers" on the subject of their vocation, and each pronounced it neither entirely safe nor profitable in the long run. In fact they were a unit in contending that crime as a business does not pay in the end; that the same amount of energy and brains expended in honest endeavor brings much better results.

In Grafters' Parlance There is no "Closed Season" for Rubes

ALWAYS a shining mark to the circus grafter is the type of good-natured, unsuspecting brand of mankind that we, in our sophistication refer to as the "rube." They are inveterate circus goers, and within the understanding of the "butchers" there is no "closed season" when the man with the rural understanding and a fat purse is in evidence. Two of the kind who had just met and whose attire spoke their character in simple phrase, occupied seats in the row directly in front of me, and from their conversation it was evident that they had run the gauntlet of the grafters and had come out second best:

"Did these show folk skin you outta any money, Hiram," I overheard one ask the other, as he woefully regarded his aching feet encased in new shoes.

"They only got all I had, Josh, that's all. They kept me goin' down my jeans for money till I got a cramp in my arm. They cleaned me jes' like they'd gone through me with a lantern."

"They're the ornriest set I ever seed," ejaculated the one addressed as Josh, impatiently striving to adjust a palpably too large shining celluloid collar to his neckband and straightening his wandering blue ribbon tie; "when I left home my wallet was as plump as a distillery hog, now it feels like it's been through a cider-press. I'd as lief a polecat come nigh me as wun of them measly slickers," he concluded with an air of supreme disgust.

"While I was watching the parade this mo'ning, a fellow wanted to care for my wallet to keep pick-pockets from stealing it. He 'lowed he was the show's 'ficial wallet keeper. He said he had an office in the circus basement. I'm sure now he was a fraud 'cause there ain't no basement to this tent."

Just then a vender was approaching and Josh decided to invest in two sacks of peanuts. "I wish I had the 'xact change 'stead of this dollar," he muttered, his tone indicating an expectation of being short-changed.

Taking the proffered dollar, the "butcher," in returning the change, expertly

Some Talk of Alexander

BY A. S. M. HUTCHINSON
Author of "If Winter Comes"

HIS parents called him Hector. When he and Tom and Harry, his brothers, were tiny things, his pretty young mother used to stand them about the piano and sing pretty old-fashioned songs to them. Presently she would beam at her first-born and cry "Now Hector's song!" and then the piano would change from the plaintive melodies and thump and jingle out the defiant, blaring strains, and they would all shout:

Some talk of Alexander, and some of Hercules,
Of HECTOR and Lysander and such great names as these—

What fun! What jolly, jolly fun!

But from the age of 12, when first he heard fully of the redoubtable Trojan whose name he bore, how he hated the name! How he loathed and detested the defiant, blaring tune!

When school-days ended, Tom went into the army; Harry floated on scholarships to Oxford, thence to enter the civil service. Fine boys; their father was proud of them. Hector was got into an office at Tidborough as a clerk—Wragson's, the big brewers.

This was the period of youth, of young manhood, and Tom and Harry made much of it.

Entirely different the case with Hector. As in his school-days he neglected all school-day sports and interests, so in his youth he developed not the smallest aptitude for youth's affinities and recreations, and within two or three years he quite lost touch with his brothers.

When he was 30 his father and mother died, in the same year. The hateful "Hector" was now finally and completely cut out of him. He was just "Bywash;" by signature H. Bywash—and H., nine times out of ten, signifies Henry. There remained not so much as a hint of Hector.

He was in and out of half-a-dozen situations; at 35 he drifted into what had the appearance of permanency—a desk in the office of Miller & Crowdale, the house and estate agents. Hector had, in addition to his £2 a week, some £90 a year from investments inherited under his father's will.

At 40 Mr. Bywash had no vices and no virtues. He was merely negligible.

An suddenly, at 40, thus circumstanced, thus equipped, and thus inclined, astounding and tremendos things began to happen to him.

He took his annual fortnight's holiday, as he had taken twenty years before it, at the great seaport town of Stormouth, an hour's run from Tidborough on the main line from London.

Only two other persons were in his compartment. There was a man, a huge obese creature with a heavy brutish face. He had enormous hands, great, big, red sledge-hammer hands. His face held the expression of a malevolent and threatening smile.

Uncomfortable, apprehensive, fascinated, Mr. Bywash slid his eyes to the ferocious man's companion, a woman,—and knew immediately and poignantly extraordinary and mysterious and alarming sensations.

Her face was pale, with a creamy pallor, and it had eyes of dim gray, gray with the pearl and exquisite grayness of the last film that lifts above the dawn, and shining stuff about the lower lids. ("Tears!" thought Mr. Bywash dreadfully. "Tears! Oh my, she's crying!") And she had soft black hair that stirred and lifted in the window's breeze. And she was talking, talking. She was imploring.

Mr. Bywash could not hear what she was saying. Scarcely the murmur of her tone was discernible to him. But all too frightfully clear the fact that she was begging, begging, imploring, entreating.

Mr. Bywash watched, with all these never before experienced feelings swelling and surging within him—yearnings, longings, cravings, high desires of brave and reckless actions. Awful sensations, terrible agony. Regret, realization, mortification, for all the fine and shining and valorous things that he most terribly desired to be.

He thought "What would I not be? Oh, what am I?"

There answered him that mock which in his boyhood had so tortured him. The rhythm of the train blared it defiantly and exultingly at him:

Some talk of Alexander, and some of Hercules,
Of HECTOR and Lysander, and such great names as these—

And while he writhed it went on: "If you had the pluck you'd interfere, you'd strike that hulking brute. You'd protect that poor creature. She'd turn to you, Bywash. She'd admire you, she'd cling to you, she'd love you—if you had the pluck, Bywash."

She was still and ceaselessly at it, imploring, beseeching; and the man basilisk, imperturbable, cynical, sinister, with never a word, with only that reserved ferocious threat.

"Interfere!" mocked the new voice within Mr. Bywash. "Look at those butcher hands of his and interfere. Go on!"

Bywash cowered in his seat, abject.

Once while he stared, the man looked up and caught his eye and directed upon him a full look, and Mr. Bywash dropped his eyes and turned away his head, and louder than before the beaten rhythm of the train greeted him:

—and some of Hercules,
Of HECTOR and Lysander and such great names as these—

He groaned between his lips.

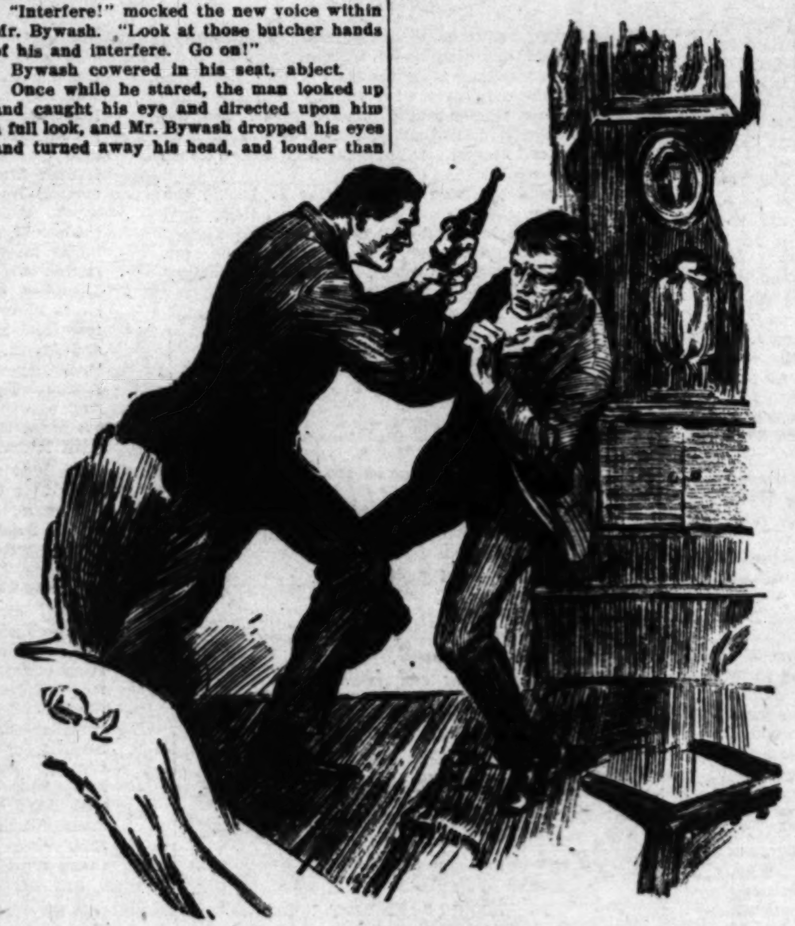
"Imagine it," mocked the voice, "Imagine it, you daren't even be caught watching!"

The train ran into Stormouth terminus. The man flicked open the door and stepped out. The woman followed him. Her skirts brushed Bywash. He made a most frightful effort. He said, and knew it as he said it for the ludicrous squeak that it was; he said, "Can I help you?"

She didn't hear. She was passing up the platform in the man's wake.

Mr. Bywash followed along, keeping safely behind. What was he going to do? He didn't know.

Mr. Bywash lost his bearings after some fifteen minutes of many crossings. He recovered them again as he found himself approaching the district in which lay that Prince's Park where it had been his habit on former visits to lounge away the hours listening to the band. The couple turned down a street he remembered walking on his way to the Park. The houses here were in a solid row on either side. Their doors opened directly onto the pavement, by two steps but without approaches. Before one such door the pair halted. Mr. Bywash abruptly halted also a dozen houses behind. The man opened the door with a key. Mr. Bywash made a great effort at his nerves and came a few paces on. The man went up the steps and in; the woman hesitated, faltered. The man turned and caught her arm, dragging her roughly. Mr. Bywash was trembling; but he advanced. As he came abreast of the door it was swung to.



The revolver muzzle tilted upward in their united grasp. It was poised between them and like the dial of a pressure gauge moved now to this side, now to that, now tensely quivering at the apex of its movement.

He had had a glimpse before the door swung; a long, narrow passage, on the left a room belonging to the window against the entrance by which he stood, at the end a flight of stairs. He could hear things. He heard heavy steps up the passage and the stairs creak. He could see things. A darkening behind the curtain of the window told him that one had entered the room. The man had gone up-stairs; the woman was in the room. He looked at the door. It had not latched. It was open! Even as he looked, it began to move in a widening aperture.

He did a most appalling thing.

He crept within the door and stood in the passage. Overhead were violent movements. In the room beside him was sobbing. He had only one coherent thought: "I'm mad. I shall be killed!" He went into the room. She was collapsed upon a couch, her arms over its back, her head bowed on her arms, sobbing. He stood there.

She looked up. She sprang to her feet. "Oh, what is it? Who are you? What do you want?"

He was shaking, he was so strained with listening for approach from above, that he could not speak, not for a full minute while she stared upon him in amazement. Then he stammered: "Can I help you?"

"Who are you? Who are you?"

"I was in the train with you."

"But what do you want? What are you doing here? I don't understand. What is it you want?"

"I was in the train. I saw what was going on with you. I want to help you—"

She made a quick step to him and pressed him away. "Go! Go! He'll kill you!"

He turned and fled.

When his panic subsided, Bywash found a lodging-house nearby and obtained a room overlooking the street, where he sat by the window, watching.

Early next morning the man came out. How huge he looked! How brutal! Bywash did not recover free breathing until the awful man was around the corner and out of sight.

About midday the woman appeared. She carried a shopping-bag. He took up his hat in a trembling hand and went downstairs and followed.

She made purchases in two or three shops. Her direction became the direction of the park. If only she were to go there! She was! She was! She entered and he followed.

She went to a secluded seat and took it; and Bywash went up to her.

For a long period into that first meeting her part was solely of utter incomprehension. Over and over again she said, "But I don't understand. I simply can't. What is it you want? Why are you speaking to me? I can't understand."

He said, "The truth is just that I want to talk to you. It's incredible that I can be of any help to you. But you never know. Perhaps I can. Oh, if only I could—"

She said: "Oh, do sit down. It's extraordinary, this. Even now I can't quite—But indeed I do thank you very much for wanting to help me. I'm glad to talk to you. If you were anyone else I shouldn't dare. But you—it doesn't seem to matter with you. And I am glad to talk to you. There's no one I'm ever allowed to talk to."

Mr. Bywash said: "He looked as though he was going to— Does he b—" he could hardly frame the dreadful word. "Does he beat you?"

She pushed back to the elbow the sleeve of one arm. He saw bruisings, scars. He writhed in his seat. If only he had been like Tom! If only he were Harry! If only he were any other man than this that he was!

They began, from then, to meet every day. They began to spend, in the park, all of every day together. She told him her husband was a street bookmaker. His beat was down in the docks' quarters. He was out all day from immediately after breakfast until late at night or early in the morning. His business and his companionship were with the roughest men, he often brought dreadful men to the house at night, but everyone was afraid of him; he always carried a revolver.

She told him all her life story. Misery makes strange companions and she was abject in misery and loneliness and fear. Her attitude toward Mr. Bywash was that she welcomed his company as the prisoner in his cell comes to welcome and make friends of the timid mouse.

She told him all about herself. Her father had been a master in the merchant service.

"Why, my father was in the navy," cried Mr. Bywash. It seemed to make a bond between them. "In the Royal Navy. He was a captain."

It was the first time he had ever been proud of his father's position.

Her father was drowned at sea. She and her mother were left penniless, here in Stormouth. They started to take in lodgers—first a good class; and then, not getting them, a poor class; and then, still struggling, and her mother ailing, any class that prayers would bring. So this man came—Mr. Wilks—of whom always she had been terrified. Her mother was failing, her mother needed comforts; at last, if her mother's life was to be saved, she needed better conditions altogether—and there was scarcely enough to keep the roof over their heads. Then the man offered her marriage, promises for her mother's well-being, everything that they most desperately needed. She was terrified. She could not bring herself to it; and her mother worsened and, knowing only cunning kindness from the man, began to implore her consent.

She married him.

Her mother, betrayed in every promise, died within the year. That was five years ago. That was all. She twice had tried to run away. He kept her without money. She had stolen from him that with which she had made the attempt whose lamentable termination Mr. Bywash had seen. And one day he would kill her. She knew he would. Escape—she must escape. Where? How?

She wrung her hands, piteously regarding Mr. Bywash. That was all.

Escape. Where? How? Terrible and enormous enterprises began to shake in Mr. Bywash's mind.

But oh the new and amazing life amid which these terrible and enormous enterprises began to form—the revelations, the ecstasies, out of which, like high sparks springing out of flame, they sprung!

All he had never been, all he had never known, stirred, moved, breathed, warmed, awoke and came to life within him.

ALEXANDER

He loved! The spirit breathed upon the waters of his being and that which had been void and purposeless took form and purpose. He loved! The world which had contained for him nobody and nothing contained a glorious and a wondrous other and, through her, teemed, hymned, and radiated with glories and with wonders.

He never had read anything in his life except the newspaper, desultorily. He began to be veracious of reading, novels, stories, cheap, trashy stuff. Love was the only thing he sought in them. How the hero loved and how the heroine loved; how their love came to them; how they felt their love and how they declared their love. That was all he wanted. With hungry eyes and hungry hands he tore love from these cheap and crudely written prints as a starving animal tears meat from a bone.

One day she told him her name was Enid. Enid!

There were three outstanding things that happened in this matter of reading.

One was the lines printed beneath a water-color painting of a bowl of violets hanging in a print-seller's window:

violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath.

It smote him like a catch at his throat. Once when she was talking to him she had closed her eyes and he had trembled to see the exquisite softness and smoothness and delicacy of her lids. White; and yet not white for having the faintest, softest tinge of blue. He had gazed as a pilgrim might gaze upon a shrine. He had never imagined such a hue could be. Lo, here was the very expression of it, the inexpressible expressed exactly, the vision so ethereal that he never could precisely recall it, here precisely recalled. "Violets dim—" Yes! Yes! And sweeter—"Sweeter than Cytherea's breath." That meant if you stooped to touch wiht your lips a bed of violets. Yes! Yes! Exactly that if one might stoop to kiss those lids of hers! Wonderful! Wonderful! That was what he wanted—words to express these astounding things, these exquisite and thrice entrancing things.

The second occasion touched a profounder depth and led directly to the third. The second occasion was before the second-hand bookseller's from whose tray of cheap moderns and periodicals he distilled his love potions. Within the window were displayed volumes of the poets; opened, their leaves bound back with bands. His eye idly took a verse:

I held it truth with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones

Meaningless! But his eye was held, and completed the stanza:

That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

Ah! He caught at his breath with the sound as it were of a sob.

On stepping-stones—may rise on stepping-stones—of their dead selves—to higher things. Might they? Could they? Might he? Could he?

He turned from the book shop, new matter from that which had taken him there in his mind, and the wind toppled the upmost of a pile of battered second-hand rag-bag stuff. He stooped to replace it and his thumb was upon the concluding words of the volume.

—"So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

He looked at the title. "Pilgrim's Progress." He read again, two lines higher,

"—to the river side, into which as he went he said 'Death, where is thy sting?' And as he went down deeper, he said 'Grave, where is thy victory?' So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

Courage! Courage! The matchless sublimity of courage here!

He bought the book—tuppence!—and hurried with it to his lodging.

He was back at Tidborough

He was planning her escape.

He had for some time known a little empty cottage on the outskirts of the village of Penny Green, a few miles from Tidborough. He sold a portion of the investments left him by his father and bought the cottage; and now the rapturous delights of searching shops to furnish and adorn it—for her!

Before he left her, on the termination of his holiday, he told her of the cottage and of the escape it offered her. He pretended the cottage was already his; "on his hands," as he put it, and would be all the better for having a tenant. How was she to live? That was simple. There was an immense demand for furnished rooms in and around Penny Green; it had always been an idea of his to put into this cottage some one who could let off the two spare rooms there would be; it was really a piece of luck for him to find her for the purpose.

That was how he put it. That the demand for rooms in Penny Green was much greater than the supply was true; he knew it well in the course of his duties at the estate office.

In his daydreams he dreamt to himself that one day, one day . . .

One day— He was arranging her escape. He was planning also the winning of her love. She never could love him as he was. The task was to remake himself—on stepping stones—of his dead self—. And that was to become a man. Not to shrink. Not to tremble. Courage. Courage. The battered "Pilgrim's Progress," more battered for his ceaseless use of it, was now his daily sustenance. As he had torn love from his periodicals, so now voraciously he sought to tear courage from the leaves of Bunyan's story. He read the book again and again and again; and every snatch of reading he terminated with the enormous elixir of that concluding line:

"So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

That tingled him. He used to imagine himself doing some mighty and splendid thing and all the trumpets sounding for him as he went proudly toward her, proudly, lovingly awaiting. That was the thing! That was it! One day— One day—

All was ready! He was walking to the cottage for a last indulgence in the sight of all the beauty and the comforts he had prepared for her. Tomorrow was the day fixed. She was to take the morning express train to London. That would throw her husband off the scent. From London a train would get her to Tidborough at three o'clock. He would not meet her at the station. He was to have the ecstasy ("the pleasure," as he had temperately expressed it in writing to her) of welcoming her in the cottage.

The quaint old cottage, beautiful in itself, had lent its interior to beauty in its decoration. Love gave [illegible] taste. There was not an article he had purchased, nor one he had placed in position, but her face had been imagined against it, directing his perceptions as the north star directs the wanderer. A neghboring cottager, Mrs. Jennings, had been brought in daily to assist the arranging. Stepping in with him on his arrival on this last evening she gave the admiration that was enchantment to him to hear.

"Well, if it isn't just a picture" declared Mrs. Jennings, gazing round the parlor. "A picture, and that's the truth, sir."

How pleased he was! He patted the head of tiny Laura, Mrs. Jennings's little girl, and with his other hand felt in his pocket for Laura's present that was to celebrate this splendid conclusion.

"Yes, it certainly does look nice, Mrs. Jennings. And, Mrs. Jennings, you're going to let Laura be over here tomorrow to be playing here when the lady arrives?"

Mrs. Jennings certainly was

How tiny Laura jumped and clapped her hands for joy! She had been promised anything she liked from the toyshops at Tidborough and a musical box, like one of her friends had, had been what Hector was asked to buy

Mrs. Jennings ran off to her cottage. He seated himself down in the chair specially chosen for Enid's comfort. Tiny Laura at his feet fumbled the musical box out of its wrappings

"Now you're right, Laura. Turn the handle. Let's hear the pretty tunes." He smiled to see tiny Laura's tongue come out and move from side to side under the strain of her melody making. The tinkling tune was vaguely familiar. Some popular national air He wondered if Enid could play the piano; and how much would one cost? Imagine sitting here of an evening while she played. The musical box clicked. The music stopped.

"Go on, Laura. Wind on. Another one coming."

Yes, a piano. How beautiful she would look seated at the keys. How she would love this room. Tomorrow at this hour she would be here. How wonderful, indeed, that he had done all this. He was twice, he was a dozen times, the man he used to be. Stepping-stones of those dead selves. He was climbing up. He was certain of it!

"Go on, Laura. Win away. Still another. Here, let me do this one." He stooped forward and took the box. Yes, climbing up— Would never look back now— He wound the handle.

Some talk of Alexander and some of Hercules,
Of Hector and—

"Take it, Laura. Take it away. You'd better go home now. Don't you hear? No; don't play it. You're not to wind it. Time to go now. Don't you hear?"

Laura was frightened.

The day was Thursday; early closing day at Tidborough and chosen for that reason. He left the office at one o'clock. He went first to his lodgings to spruce himself up in it before going on to the cottage to await her. The night had been bad. That tune, that infernal, hateful tune, coming like that upset him.

But with the morning his oppression had gone. After all, what test of his courage could there possibly be? When she was safely arrived here she would be as secure here and he would be as secure here as if they were on another continent.

He let himself into his lodgings and passed up the stairs to his room. Everything was wonderful and glorious. He was miles removed from the timid thing he had been. He could wish there might be some test of his manhood that Enid could see. If the horse that would be drawing her cab were to run away and he rush out from the cottage and stop it! Something like that!

But it was not anything like that. It was something quite different.

As he opened the door of his room and stepped within, the huge and malevolent form of her husband rose to greet him.

"Shut that door," said Mr. Wilks.

He turned and shut it.

One of those enormous fists of Mr. Wilks presented a revolver straight in his face The other fist shot out and into his chest like a battering ram, staggering him backward. But the fist clutched him, gathering up the better part of his waistcoat and of his shirt in its enormous paw, and shook him ferociously so that his teeth knocked together. "Where's my wife?"

His tongue, in his sheer terror, clove to the roof of his mouth. He could not speak.

"Where is she? Out with it!"

"Not here."

Again that frightful shaking, jerking his head to and fro. "Not here! I can see that with me own eyes, can't I? Is she in this house?"

"No."

"Coming here?"

"No."

He was shaken to and fro for a full half-minute. "Listen to me. I know you've got her away." He called her by a gross epithet. "The —— left half your letters behind I know you've got her." Mr Wilks returned the revolver to his pocket and put up the fist that had held it, clenched, terrific. "Am I going to start this on your face or are you going to tell me? Quick with it?"

"I'll tell you."

"Quick with it."

He told.

Mr. Wilks flung him away with a violent motion. He spun along the wall crashed into the washing-stand and fell over it to the floor. The ewer capsized and shattered. The water drenched him

"Get up," commanded Mr. Wilks. "You louse. Run away with a man's wife You! Get up and show the way and me lady'll see what I'm going to do with you, and you'll see what I'm going to do with me lady. Up with you!"

They were in the cottage, waiting for her. Mr. Wilks lolled in an armchair, a cigar in his mouth, his legs on the table. Hector Bywash sat opposite him, the table between them, his head bowed in his hands. In the little room adjoining was tiny Laura. Hector had smuggled her out of view and shut the door upon her.

While they waited was the steady ticking of the clock upon the wall—bringing her closer—the heavy breathing of Mr. Wilks, inclined to doze, the occasional sharp intake of Hector's breath, in vision watching her approach to his betrayal of her, sometimes through the door the faint tinkle of the musical box.

And suddenly there penetrated the agony of his mind this most frightful thought, "There's still time to save her!"

And immediately there came to him, trial within his own bosom of the kind that is said to await all men in the last senate of eternity.

Mr. Bywash stood in such a court, a prisoner at the bar of truth, and looked into the faces of the verities sitting as arbiters upon his case, and wrung his hands, and protested.

The defendant: "My lords, my lords, you must surely see, it was like this—if only I had had a minute's preparation! If only, as I went up those stairs, I had known he was waiting in my room! If only I had even heard him when I was just the other side of the door. If only I had had the smallest, faintest warning, I would have had time to think, I wouldn't have done it. Indeed and indeed, my lords, I would not have done it.

The arbiters: "Attend. You have got time now. You have betrayed her but she hasn't yet come to your betrayal. She's on the road. But there's—look at the clock—twenty minutes before she can get here. Twenty minutes to save her."

The defendant, with shaking limbs, crept out of the court.

Mr. Bywash very cautiously raised his bowed head to the level of the table. The huge soles of Mr. Wilks's boots confronted him. He raised his glance above them. Mr. Wilks's eyes were half closed, no glow was to be seen upon the cigar that depended from his mouth.

Mr. Bywash's mind fixed on the revolver that had been pointed at him. He knew which pocket it was in. If he could get that! The light table was so small that its farther end was well beneath Mr. Wilks's thighs, and Mr. Wilks's chair was slightly tilted on its back legs. If he gave one great heave from beneath the table—and then a dash and a grab for the revolver while the man was sprawling—if he could—if he dared— Ten minutes passed. He went back into the court.

The defendant: "My lords, my lords, it's like this. You see, if I did attack him what could I possibly do? I'm ready to try I swear I am. But what earthly good could I do? In two minutes I would be killed My lords, my lords, what earthly good? In two minutes I should be killed."

The arbiters: "Attend. If you are killed, he will have murdered you. He will flee for his life. He will never dare to come near her again. She will be free of him forever You have five minutes, Bywash."

The court withdrew and left Mr. Bywash.

He thought " 'On stepping-stones—of their dead selves'—One quick moment and it will all be over."

He put his hands beneath the table. He sprang upright and hurled the table up and back. He flung himself upon the sprawling, cursing body, and dived, and thrust in his hand and got it—the revolver. He was clutched and overthrown They were somehow upon their feet. The revolver was in his right hand. The left hand of Mr. Wilks was upon it. The other hand was at his throat, throttling him.

The revolver was muzzle upward in their united grasp between them. It was poised between them and like the dial of a pressure gauge moved now to this side, now to that, now tensely quivered at the apex of its movement.

Mr. Bywash's face was black with the pressure of Mr Wilks's fingers upon his throat. But while the eyes of Mr. Wilks bulged with fear and with savagery as he strove for decision of the weapon, the eyes of Mr. Bywash shone with an intense and an extraordinary light.

An enormous exaltation of mind was his. There was a great roaring in his ears but it was to him as the clamor of many voices acclaiming him. He relaxed his arm and the pistol came with a thud to his neck and was discharged.

He collapsed at the knees in the arms of Mr. Wilks. He collapsed at the waist and fell away in the arms of Mr. Wilks, his head hanging.

Mr. Wilks stared with starting eyes upon his face. Mr. Wilks said terribly, "My God My God!"

He dropped the body of Hector Bywash and stood away and stared in terror He turned and rushed from the house. A cab was drawing up at the door. The driver shouted.

Mr. Wilks put up his arms to hide his face and turned in the other direction and fled down the road.

A small sigh passed from the lips of Mr. Bywash; and there tinkled from the adjoining room:

Some talk of Alexander, and some of Hercules,
Of Hector and Lysander and such great—

So, to that threnody he passed over; and it was perhaps, as he had wished, that "all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

Secrets of Circus Life Revealed

By Albert Geyer

WORLD'S CHAMPION TUMBLER, RETIRED

P. T. BARNUM, I believe, coined the classic reminder of the public's gullibility: "There's a sucker born every minute," and in thus crassly expressing it he supplied the keynote to the mental process which opened the door of opportunity to that once familiar type of easy-money-getter catalogued by the police as the "circus grafter." Of course Mr. Barnum's primary meaning had to do with that large army of unsophisticated persons who need only the encouragement of a flaming billboard or a bally-hoo artist's call to make them give up their good money and accept as bona fide the various "freaks of nature" assembled under the tented show. But nevertheless, when we seek to find the reason for the public's credulity in matters which contain the essence of fake, we find a striking co-relation between the state of mind which impels some men to exchange their currency for a seat at a palpably fraudulent performance and that which leads them to swallow the bait of a "con" man or circus grafter. The mental process is precisely the same. It depends upon an admixture of credulity and avarice.

It is this element in human nature that once made the professional confidence man a familiar figure in the train of most of the tented shows, big and little, in this country. Fortunately his is today a vanishing type. He exists, but not in such numbers as he did a few years ago; and now only with minor shows that follow a circuit of the lesser towns where he is comparatively safe in following his calling. Mind you, I do not wish it understood that all minor shows are grafting enterprises or include in their unofficial personnel the "con" man or professional grafter, for this is not so. No more than one in twenty could so be classified. The major circuses are today free from this vice—as free as I once heard it expressed, as a frog is of feathers—although not many years ago grafting in many forms was as inseparable from the circus as the menagerie is today. The grafters were among the most skillful and dangerous members of the crook world. Their methods were many and devious, and a majority of them, highly practiced and possessing wits of rare fertility, made their calling exceedingly profitable. While some of them worked from the outskirts or outside of the show proper, others enjoyed a kind of unofficial or subrosa standing with the management; in fact the privileges they enjoyed were granted them just as the pink lemonade or popcorn concessions were to men who followed those lines. The management, of course, got a proportionate rakeoff from the grafter's earnings for permitting him to operate on the grounds.

The Grafter is Rapidly Passing in Accord With Higher Standards

BUT, as I say, both the grafter who had some legitimate concession with the show and to whom the characterization is because he expertly short-changed you at every opportunity, and the grafter whose business was to entice the unwary into the "shell" game, or some other form of thievery, is about extinct, at least in the sense of public menace. He is gone entirely from the habitat of the big shows; he will soon be a thing of the past as a recognized factor with the lesser ones if their proprietors profit by the lessons learned in the business world today. Some of them sense this; others do not.

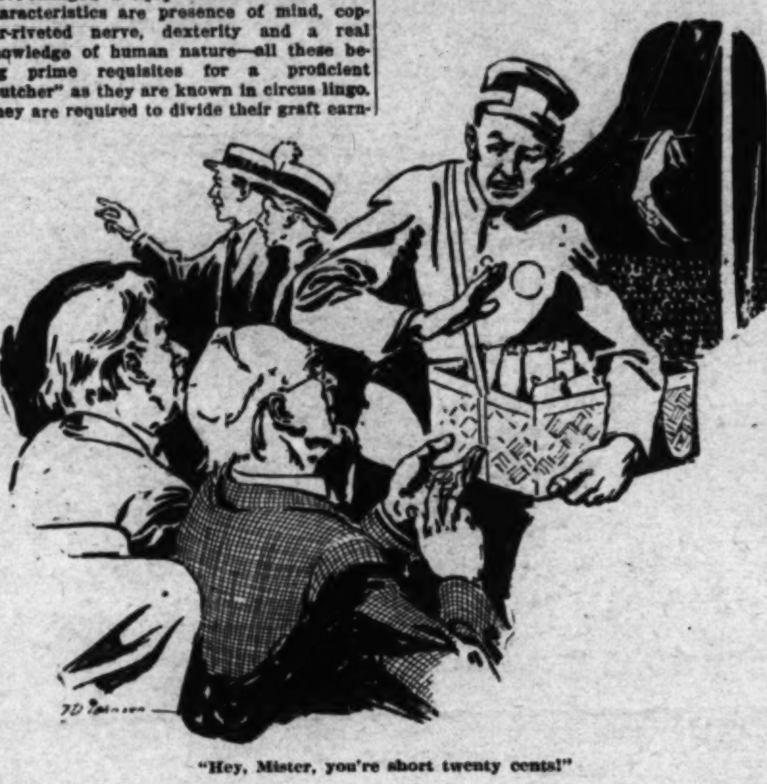
While the manager of the grafting show may not be one whit more conscientious in the matter of protecting the public than his prototype of a decade ago, he refrains from the wholesale robbing practice of his predecessor because he finds it no longer expedient to risk the public's displeasure. The public patience has about reached its limit with this sort of thing, so the manager, more likely than not, employs a disreputable detective as a part of the show. There is a moral in this—the alibi is ready if required. Ostensibly the detective is there to co-operate with the local police in making the show grounds an unhealthy spot for any and all members of the gentry of crooks.

"Sure shot" men, as confidence men are known, nowadays are rarely associated with grafting shows, largely for the reason that they cannot operate as safely as of yore, and also because the management does not welcome the notoriety which attaches to their presence around the circus. A man who has been robbed of a small sum as a rule will remain silent through a sense of shame, but one who has been relieved of a large amount is more apt to register a complaint. The victim's outraged protests are not regarded as favorable publicity, and unfavorable publicity impairs a show's reputation and curtails attendance.

The manager of a grafting show usually plays safe—that is to say he avoids and shifts the responsibility of outwardly crooked practices—by leasing various concessions to a smooth brigand who is, generally, as crooked morally as the body of a coiled boa constrictor. This slick individual, in turn surrounds himself with as skillful a horde of sleight-of-hand artists as ever short-changed a tipsy sailor. Their chief characteristics are presence of mind, copper-riveted nerve, dexterity and a real knowledge of human nature—all these being prime requisites for a proficient "butcher" as they are known in circus lingo. They are required to divide their graft earnings with the chief concessionaire for the privilege of being allowed to fleece the show's patrons and for such legal and physical protection as the chief concessionaire is able to afford them.

ANNOUNCEMENT

This is the first of a series of intensely interesting articles dealing with the secrets of circus life from the pen of Albert Geyer, world's champion tumbler, retired. Mr. Geyer spent the whole of his active professional life as a performer in the greatest circus organizations in the world and his revelations are authentic and from the inside. He has been a resident of Los Angeles for a number of years and has consented to write this series for the exclusive use of The Times Illustrated Magazine. Everybody's interested in the circus. Get the inside facts as revealed in this series. Don't miss a single installment.—[Editor.



"Hey, Mister, you're short twenty cents!"

This arrangement works to their mutual advantage; the concessionaire gets a substantial rake-off without jeopardizing his liberty and the "butcher" assumes the risk for the opportunity to "work" the circus with comparative immunity from arrest.

Grafters are, with few exceptions, inordinately vain about their sleight-of-hand accomplishments and are much given to boasting about their ability to "put it over" on the public. They take very great pride in their various tricks and dodges in separating their unsuspecting victims from their coin. As a rule they are inveterate gamblers, and like the general run of gamblers, are free spenders, much of their money passing over the table in games of chance.

The grafting show, as you may know, is as much despised by the executive staff and attaches of other circuses which are conducted along legitimate lines as is the auction faker despised by the honorable merchant. The performers and musicians "trouping" with these questionably conducted shows do not participate in the thieving transactions imposed on the patrons, nor do they fraternize with the grafters. In fact they despise and avoid the grafter, and by holding themselves aloof from the rapacious drove they impose an effective ostracism which has created a wide gap between these two elements of circus life.

Not long ago I visited a grafting show which was exhibiting in a small western town. My escort was an old-time acrobat whom I had known in the days when I was an active "kinker" (performer) in the sawdust ring. My friend had told me that this particular circus was an interesting survivor of the public-looting days, in the number of tricky pirates associated with the enterprise, and I wanted to be convinced by ocular evidence.

Arriving on the show grounds, we were greeted by a variety of ear-splitting noises including the shrill notes of the steam calliope piano, the metallic clash of the sideshow band, the hawking of the refreshment venders, the blatant "bally-hoo" of the sideshow barker whose marvelous descriptive powers concerning the "wonders of the globe" assembled under the canvas roof served admirably to lure the crowd within the circle of "mystery." We tarried for a moment to watch the antics of an agile gymnast performing upon a tight-rope, this being a free exhibition which served as a bait to draw the throngs to the show grounds.

An animated multitude was surging around the ticket wagon clamoring for the pasteboards that gave their holders admission to the tents. Dodging this mob, my companion and I passed through the main entrance into the "big top." Standing with conspicuous aggressiveness at the main gateway was a "ticket scalper," a member of the grafting circus clan who has long preyed on the public and who is ever present, even as an attache of the larger circuses of today. This particular, flashily attired, diamond-bedecked "butcher" loomed up at the entrance as we passed in, offering admission tickets which sold at the wagon for 50 cents, to those who preferred to avoid the rush, charging an advance of 10 cents. He was doing a brisk business, paying the management, my showman friend informed me, $5000 a year for the privilege. Most of his profit, I was told, came from short-changing those imprudent enough to tender him currency in excess of the ticket. I was disposed to credit this, as his sharp eyes fairly glittered with cunning and the fellow appeared so adept at dishonestly changing money as to be a post-graduate in the art of tricky finance.

Tricksters Delight in Short-Changing the Unwary

INSIDE the main entrance leading to the menagerie we stepped aside, away from the incoming crowd, to note what happened to the unwary victims of these brigands who stood watching like coiled serpents, ready to strike.

The first grafter was stationed immediately inside the entrance, and had reserved tickets to sell.

"This pious looking grafter," remarked my friend, "is one of the smoothest propositions that ever came down the pike. He's one of those innocent looking birds that can lamp you straight in the eye while citing scripture, and deal from the bottom."

The first patron to come under the eye of this grafter was a portly individual whose generous bulk reminded you of a fat pillow bursting from its cover. He waddled along like a seal on land, his full-moon face beaming good nature and oozing July perspiration like a pitcher with ice in it. Of course he wanted a reserved seat. Having just escaped from the crush around the ticket wagon outside, the affable "spiel" with which the ticket-selling "butcher" regaled him sounded good. He took the ticket and unsuspectingly tendered a $5 bill. Immediately the artful crook was alert to his chance. He slipped the note into his small open satchel suspended from his neck, and drew forth nine half dollars which he laid in the palm of his upturned hand. Counting them slowly to convince the patron that the change was correct, he reversed the position of his hand and dropped the coins—that is all but two—into the portly man's open fist, all the while looking his victim steadily in the eye and maintaining a flow of pleasant talk, this to divert his attention from his money. The man pocketed his change and passed on, apparently too pleased with himself and his surroundings to suspect his loss. I'm afraid his faith in human nature received a jolt when, later, he counted his change and discovered that simple credulity had cost him a dollar.

Next came a gaily dressed negro of the type easily recognized as the "dusky sport." His apparel plainly indicated that the decorative instinct was uppermost in his nature. A large phony diamond sparkled from the pin in his flamboyant necktie, a new "dicer" sat jauntily on his ebony head, and he sported a flexible, gold-headed cane. The whites of his large eyes against a background of midnight black skin, were as conspicuous as two hen eggs atop a scuttle of coal. Pointing to him my friend said:

Bilks a Colored Gentleman of Sporting Proclivities

"IT'S CINCH that the seven and eleven have turned up pretty often in that 'smoke's' favor lately. He's got as much chance to get by these 'butchers' without getting bumped as a chicken has to grow old in a coon neighborhood."

A pleasant smile of anticipation played about the corners of the darky's lips as with characteristic racial vanity he embraced every opportunity to display his unaccustomed wealth. He approached the ticket seller, ostentatiously drew forth a roll of greenbacks, which he immediately repocketed, and with assumed nonchalance exhibited a few gold coins, and, selecting a $5 piece, passed it to the ticket man's waiting hand. The latter gave the sport a silver half dollar and the balance of his change in $1 bills and by an ingenious strategy, cheated him out of a dollar. I will in explanation state that the resourceful grafter, in anticipation of this and other contingencies, sets the stage for certain tricks which figure in his repertoire, prior to the arrival of his prospective victims. In preparing for this particular deception, he spreads two $1 notes full length—one laying atop the other.

gested or broken up and utilized in the metabolism of the system. It is ingested as salt and excreted unchanged. Every cell in the system that absorbs salt contracts and thereby disgorges its albumin and other constructive elements. In this way it hardens the tissues in general and shrivels the corpuscles of the blood. It obstructs absorption of food and disturbs natural osmosis (the filtering through the membrane.) It also interferes with secretion and excretion, prevents the formation of fibrin and dissolves the globules. It is a historic and scientific fact that salt, in connection with flesh, gives rise to scurvy, salt rheum, kidney trouble and other cutaneous and constitutional disorders. The historic epidemic 'Black Death' of Europe, was caused by pickled meat. Salt is one of the causes of the inflammation under the breasts, in the armpits and under the nose.

"Salt causes an irresistible thirst, which has led many a man to inebriety and dipsomania.

"Salt has only a few uses in domestic economy. It is indispensable in liquifying ice below the freezing point. It compels ice to absorb positive temperature when used in freezers. It is substituted for sand in salt rubs. It is a good emergency emetic, and, if need be, an irritant. Lastly, it is a good antiseptic, in substances that are not intended for food. English stock breeders found it detrimental to the highest development of prize stock; hence they have excluded salt from all stock food. Their stock is known to be the finest. Salt is a poison to fowls, especially to songsters. Don't try it on your pet bird.

"In North Siberia salt is unknown as a food condiment."

A Flag of Distress

"MEDICAL SCIENCE" seeks always to suppress symptoms, instead of showing the patient how to remove the cause. Pain is a symptom of disease. Suppressing the pain does not remove the cause.

Here is an illustration by Dio Lewis, M.D.:

"A ship's crew is seized with some fearful malady. They hang out a flag of distress. Another ship passes near the infected vessel. Its captain discovers the flag of distress. A boat's vrew is sent to cut it down. The captain turns to his passengers with the triumphant exclamation, 'We have saved them. All signs of distress have disappeared.!'

"A human body is diseased in every part. A flag of distress is hung out, in the form of an ulcer at the ankle. Some ignorant physician sees it. He covers it with a salve which compels it to close. Then he cries, 'See, it is all gone!'"

Mucus-Forming Foods

SOME foods, when eaten to excess, by those whose digestions are weak, tend to form slimy mucus in the tissues. This waste matter nature tries to cast forth, in the shape of "colds." Then "medical science," instead of showing you how to remove the cause, proceeds to suppress the symptoms, which is like sitting on the safety valve of a boiler.

Among the principal mucus-forming foods is starch, of which the American people so much overeat. Starch is used to stick paper on the wall. If eaten to excess, it will glue up your "innards," [illegible] strong, when it will be piled up as surplus fat, or potential disease matter.

You can't store up mucus matter from apples, or celery. If you eat too much of those foods, you will get dyspepsia.

All this is easy for the common people to understand; but those who follow what is misnamed "medical science" are so blinded by bacteriology that they haven't learned it yet.

They have "discovered" that cooking destroys the life elements of food, and "vitamines" are now ethical and fashionable. Perhaps, before long, they will discover that overeating of mucus-forming foods, by persons of weak digestions, is one of the leading causes of diseases. Then they will declare that they knew it all the time. That is a funny way they have.

Sugar and the Nerves

DR. AXEL GIBSON writes:

"Another menace due to sugar indulgence lies in the excess of uncalled for saccharine matter retained in the system and giving rise to a constant overstimulation of the nerves. As one-tenth of 1 per cent constitutes the normal amount of sugar required to meet all the expenditures of energy involved in muscular innervation, it follows that if a larger percentage, due to an excessive intake of sugar into the system, is forced into the blood stream, a premature detonation will occur with a threatening stroke of short-circuiting in the capillaries and nerve tactiles. In the course of time, the effect of these physiological explosions will be manifested in a weakening and partial destruction of the insular tubing surrounding the nerve fiber. From this it follows that, if an abrasion of the insulation should occur, the nerve would become exposed and its current deflected into the surrounding tissues, causing abnormal conditions to arise in the nerve life, such as migrain, tic douloreux, spastic paresis, loss of muscular and nervous control, general or functional neurasthenia and even partial paralysis of the involved structures."

"What Seems to Agree"

THE phrase "Eat what seems to agree with you," is a favorite with orthodox physicians, when their patients ask advice about diet. It is used to hide ignorance.

When we remember that a great majority of diseases are due to errors of diet, that excess proteid food is responsible for nearly all the more serious diseases, and a deficiency of organic salts for nervous ailments, does it not seem like a grim burlesque that one belonging to the healing profession should say to a sick person who seeks information: "Eat what seem to agree with you." Blind leaders of the blind!

Some of the most unwholesome foods digest quickly and "seem to agree," but their after effect is seen in Bright's disease, cancer and other diseases that often prove fatal.

How should physicians know? Dietetics is not taught in medical colleges—or, when taught, only in an absurdly inadequate manner.

Not long ago, I got copies of the curriculum of thirteen of the leading medical colleges of the United States. Here are the number of hours—yes, hours, not months—devoted to dietetics, in the four years' course: One college twenty-six hours; three colleges sixteen hours; two colleges eleven hours; seven colleges none at all.

The Story of California—

A LITTLE HISTORY OF A BIG STATE

BY ROCKWELL D. HUNT, Ph.D.

(ILLUSTRATIONS BY BARNDOLLAR)

THE DAYS OF GOLD

THE California gold-seekers of '49, like the band of Greek heroes that sailed before the Trojan War in search of the golden fleece, have won the name of Argonauts. The California population, numbering (exclusive of Indians) scarcely more than 25,000 at the beginning of that wonderful year, received additions amounting to nearly 100,000 before New Year of 1850. Of this great multitude of victims of the gold fever four-fifths were Americans.

From "the States" these pilgrim bands came by three main routes; around Cape Horn, across the Isthmus of Panama, and across the western plains. It is said that 140 ships left the Atlantic Coast for California during the single month of February. There was sure to be plenty of hardship and plenty of excitement whatever route was chosen, although the least hardship was usually encountered by taking the long trip 'round the Horn. Western frontiersmen naturally came across the plains in the prairie schooner, which was scow-built, hooded from end to end, freighted with goods and chattels; and therein the whole family lived and moved and had its being during the long voyage to the Pacific Coast. The rendezvous from which nearly all started was Independence, in Western Missouri.

Once in California, prospects of speedy fortune, heightened by news of the latest "strike," lured the hardy pioneer on to the gold fields. Purchasing his miner's outfit at San Francisco or Sacramento, he pressed on, eager to try his luck.

Laughing at hardship, deterred by no misfortune, he set to work with right good will—and hard work it was, too! But what mattered that? He was always looking for better prospects, he was sure he would strike it yet!

The prospector became exceedingly skillfull in the use of the pan, and was amply rewarded for his patience when able to "show the color." The cradle, or washing rocker, and the long tom, ending in a kind of sieve, were among the most useful devices for surface mining. The pick, pan and shovel were to be found in every miner's outfit. But even the jack-knife many a time proved extremely useful in working out the gold from a narrow crevice and in a hundred ways.

While fabulous quantities of gold were being produced and the soil remained untilled, it was but natural that prices would be exceedingly high. Eggs sold at from 50 cents to $3 each; sugar or coffee, $4 a pound; a butcher knife, $30; laudanum, $1 a drop; pills sometimes sold for $10 apiece. Rents in San Francisco reached unheard-of levels, and interest on loans was at the rate of 10 per cent to 15 per cent per month. Gold scales were always to be found on the merchant's counter, and payment was commonly made in "dust," which was carried in small buckskin bags and reckoned at $16 an ounce. Everybody seemed to have gold; it was a period of wild extravagance and unrestraint.

A young Frenchman, referring to San Francisco, wrote: "You will not find any human beings there, only money bags, either filled or empty." But Bayard Taylor was a keener observer of conditions in early California when he said:

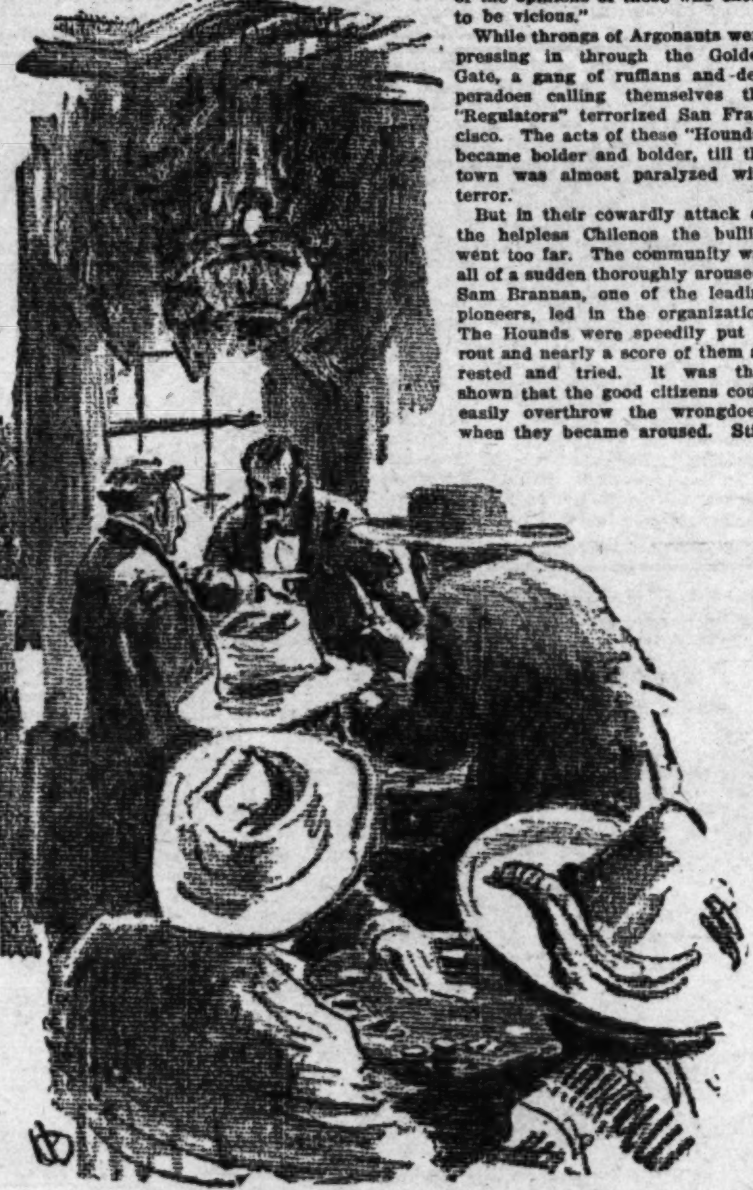
"The principles of hospitality were as faithfully observed in the rude tents of the diggers as they could be by the thrifty farmers of the North and West. The cosmopolitan cast of society in California, resulting from the commingling of so many races and the primitive mode of life, gave a character of good fellowship to all its members; and in no part of the world have I ever seen help more freely given to the needy, or more ready co-operation in any humane proposition."

The miner's career was filled with uncertainties; his life was one great speculation. We need not be surprised, therefore, that gambling became his most common form of vice. And along with gambling, as has always been the case, went drinking, often to great excess. Some of the miners married Indian wives, and some threw away all moral restraint, for in early days in California the pioneers were almost totally deprived of the elevating and refining influences of true home life.

With the sturdy pioneers came a number of "bad whites"—"bummers," as they were called—who had no intention of earning an honest living: these men were like human vultures, expecting to live on the toil of others and to make profit out of the weakness of their fellowmen.

At the other extreme of society from these "loose fish" came the Christian missionaries, like William Taylor and Samuel Willey, courageous and devoted, who withstood every temptation and whose brave words and stout hearts won the admiration and support of even the roughest of the pioneer miners.

A fine spirit of brotherhood prevailed at the mines, and the grasping spirit of avarice was tempered by genuine good fellowship.



Gambling became the most common form of vice.

The typical '49er was neither a saint nor a devil. He was at times rough in language as well as in dress; but beneath the rough exterior resided nature's nobleman.

The men of '49 were not the sons of wealth, nor were they poor; they represented the plain American middle class, which has always been the chief glory of our nation. They were picked men, superior to their fellows—otherwise they would not have reached California. Because of their strong qualities of rugged courage, unfailing enterprise and ultimate success achieved in spite of temptation and difficulty, they will forever deserve a tribute at the hands of later generations.

"Those brave old bricks of forty-nine!
What lives they lived! What deaths they died"

THE VIGILANCE COMMITTEES

California was fast filling up with all sorts of people. Most of the men who came were good, honest, sturdy pioneers; but with these came not a few scamps and hardened criminals. Such men could be depended on to give trouble; nearly everybody was busy making money, the neglect of the duties of citizenship by really good men gave excellent opportunity for lawless adventurers to get in their evil work.

Even though the most of its citizens were upright men, San Francisco at the time of the gold rush was undoubtedly a reckless city. Any true expression of public sentiment was lacking; civic conscience had not yet been aroused. The population was new, it was made up of elements from all over the world, and it was for the most part transient and not permanent. Every man was inclined to let every other man do as he pleased individually—the general welfare was seldom thought of; there was "tolerance of the opinions of those who chose to be vicious."

While throngs of Argonauts were pressing in through the Golden Gate, a gang of ruffians and desperadoes calling themselves the "Regulators" terrorized San Francisco. The acts of these "Hounds" became bolder and bolder, till the town was almost paralyzed with terror.

But in their cowardly attack on the helpless Chilenos the bullies went too far. The community was all of a sudden thoroughly aroused: Sam Brannan, one of the leading pioneers, led in the organization. The Hounds were speedily put to rout and nearly a score of them arrested and tried. It was thus shown that the good citizens could easily overthrow the wrongdoers when they became aroused. Still, the lesson was quickly forgotten in the general hurry of the times; and now immigrants were coming by thousands.

Another evidence of the disordered condition of San Francisco was a series of six disastrous fires that swept the city between December of 1840 and June, 1851. In '49 houses sprang up like mushrooms, as if by magic. They were constructed mostly of cloth and light wood frame. After the third fire, involving a loss of more than $3,000,000, cloth houses were prohibited within the fire limits; butthe combustible redwood was only a slight improvement in this respect. The fifth fire was the most disastrous of all—more than $10,000,000 worth of property was destroyed and a number of lives lost.

Conditions in San Francisco became intolerable in 1851. Murders and robberies were of almost daily occurrence. The Jansen robbery and assault in February stirred the people to intense indignation. On June 10 an organization was effected and 200 men of prominence enrolled in the "Committee of Vigilance of San Francisco," whose specific objects were "to watch, pursue and bring to justice the outlaws infesting the city, through the regularly constituted courts, if possible; through more summary course, if necessary."

Stern work there was for the committee. Four notorious offenders, after being given fair trials, were publicly executed by hanging; about thirty were banished from California; and several scores of "toughs" deemed it best to leave San Francisco without delay. Many of these went to interior towns and mining camps, where they were again confronted with the same spirit of vigilance.

In the early mining days every camp became a law unto itself. As a class the miners were truly democratic and strictly honest; but the few who would rob and plunder were shown scant mercy. Vigilance committees were formed at Sacramento, Stockton, Downieville, Jackson and other places. In most cases they were careful to insist on a fair trial for every accused man; but in some instances lynch law prevailed, and the communities were not free from mob control.

Within a few years San Francisco had grown into a city of more than 50,000 population; social conditions seemed even worse than before. Thousands of good men proved to be bad citizens by forgetting their duties to their city while absorbed in making money for themselves. The city government became extremely corrupt—graft and bribery abounded—there was tampering with primary elections and wholesale stuffing of ballot boxes.

Matters came to a crisis when James King, free lance editor of The Bulletin, who boldly denounced wicked men and evil conditions, was shot down by James Casey. This tragedy was the signal for the organization of the great Committee of Vigilance of 1856.

William T. Coleman, who had served the earlier committee so loyally, was made head of the new committee, which grew by leaps and bounds until it numbered 6000 men under arms, fully equipped and organized into one battalion, four companies of artillery, one squadron, two troops of dragoons, four regiments, and thirty-two companies of infantry.

Although there was some opposition to the committee by the "Law and Order Party," holding it to be an illegal body, it immediately won the support and approval of the overwhelming majority, not only in San Francisco but throughout California. San Jose telegraphed an offer of 1000 men, and many other towns pledged active support.

In the committee, whose proceedings were kept profoundly secret, were to be found men of many nationalities, all religious denominations and opposite political parties, without distinction of trade or occupation.

"Fort Gunnybags" was the name given to the headquarters because its breastworks were constructed of hundreds of sacks of sand. On the roof of Fort Vigilance, which faced on Sacramento street, alert sentinels were stationed, and bristling cannon guarded the approaches. There also was the great fire bell, whose sharp tones summoned the members to their solemn tasks.

Casey and three other murderers were publicly executed; thirty condemned men were banished from California; and it is understood that about 800 bad characters took their leave without undue ceremony.

The vigilances were heartily glad when the day of final adjournment came: they had no desire to continue a single hour after their work of purging the community was completed. The grand review of August 18 closed "one of the grandest moral revolutions the world has ever witnessed." The loyal men quickly resumed their respective callings; but California has never forgotten the lessons and fruits of vigilance.

inevitable and near; that it will come suddenly upon the world, with no declaration; that it will be waged mainly against entire populations, and not against armies alone; that it will have at its command agencies even more destructive than Lewisite, when twenty aircrafts will be able to destroy the entire population of a city of the size of Berlin and level the city to the ground.

"There are even those, like Clarence Day, Jr., in his 'This Simian World,' who are fond of reminding us that man at his best is only a progressively hairless ape, and that he actually tends, like Tarzan, to revert to the pythicoid state, as is seen in the lure of the frontier, and in his vacation tendency to revert toward the savage, if not the feral, condition of primitive man.

"R. T. Morris, in his 'Microbes and Men,' says that the intrinsic and ineluctable trend of culture is toward the elimination of the species, just as most flowers lose their breeding ability as they double, and also become more vulnerable to microbic influences or tend to produce freak progenies. Thus it is in the nature of things that individuation interferes with genesis, and nature destroys her finest products by sterilizing the units which represent them.

"T. E. Young, who ranks with Karl Pearson as an acute and critical English statistician, thinks man reached the acme of his development in classical times or before, and has slowly declined ever since; that human evolution has spent its maximal force; that man's trajectory has reached the highest point of its curve, and is now dropping, although his decadence is masked by modern hygiene, which gives him an artificial vitality.

"These books, nearly all of them written since the armistice, are only samples of many more which suggest either a great new fear now abroad in the world, with a depressing morale, or else read dangers."

What is the answer?

To avoid destruction, we must get back to a saner, simpler life. We must recognize that the spiritual is greater than the material; that mind is above matter.

Otherwise, we shall inevitably follow other great civilizations that have risen and fallen.

Treatment of Diphtheria

DIPHTHERIA is caused by a filthy condition of the blood, due to long continued wrong feeding, especially of starches and sweets. No person whose blood is pure can get diphtheria.

The antitoxin treatment of diphtheria causes many deaths.

As soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear begin treatment in an energetic manner. Stop all food. Sip a little water with lemon juice. Cleanse the bowels thoroughly by an enema. If the patient is an adult, give him a warm sitz bath for about twenty minutes. Surround him with blankets during the bath, so as to favor perspiration. The feet should be placed in a hot foot bath in the meantime, and the head should be frequently wet with cool water. After the bath, quickly sponge the whole body with water a little cooler than that of the bath. Then put the patient to bed and cover him up warm. Keep the feet warm, cool the head by frequent bathing, and sponge the whole body every hour or two with tepid water if the patient is very feverish.

If the patient is a child, a warm pack will be preferable to a sitz bath. Wring a woolen sheet out of water a little more than blood warm. Spread it quickly upon the bed, place the patient upon it, and quickly envelop him. Then wrap him snugly with dry blankets, and let him sleep for half an hour if he feels so inclined, as he usually will. Follow the pack by tepid sponging, as directed after the sitz bath.

After putting the patient to bed, apply, alternately, hot fomentations and cold compresses. Fold a flannel cloth twice, so as to give four thicknesses, wring it out of water as hot as can be borne dry enough so that it will not drip, and apply at once to the throat. After a lapse of three to five minutes, apply a cold compress for the same length of time. Then reapply the fomentation, and continue to alternate until each has been applied four or five times. Then apply a cool compress and change it as often as it becomes warm.

In ordinary cases, it will be sufficient to wet the cool compress in the coldest water that can be obtained; but in cases in which there is great irritation of the throat, pounded ice should be applied, being placed between folds of the compress.

By all means avoid the use of all of those caustic applications so commonly employed in this disease. When white patches appear in the back part of the mouth, touch them every two or three hours with pure lemon juice, using a swab of soft linen or sponge attached to the end of a lead pencil or a small stick.

If the patient is old enough, some relief will be given by using a gargle of water acidulated with lemon juice. Another excellent gargle which destroys the vegetable parasites always present in this disease is a solution of permanganate of potash. The crystals can be obtained of any druggist. Place two or three in a glass of water, and stir until they are dissolved. The fluid should not be taken into the stomach, though no harm will result if a few drops are swallowed.

A favorite remedy is the inhalation of the vapor of warm vinegar. The vinegar may be heated in a coffee pot, and inhaled from the nozzle. A plan highly recommended is the inhalation of the vapor which arises when lime in slaked in a vessel. These measures will often give great relief.

The sick room should be well ventilated, in order to carry away as rapidly as possible the foulness which results from the disease, and thus prevent their reabsorption into the blood.

"Sport"

THE French declare that when one of my countrymen, who happens also to be a "country gentleman," rises in the morning, he says: "What a fine day! Let's go and kill something!"

Indeed, "sport," in the Anglo Saxon language, has come to mean almost exclusively the killing of some living thing.

One does not call butchering oxen and sheep "sport."

Following is from Collier's:

"When the average huntsman or fisherman says that it isn't so much the birds or the fish that he cares for as a day in the woods, he is spoofing. Else why tote a gun or a rod? The day in the open is doubtless enjoyable, but what he wants is an objective. His day has not been successful unless he can bring home trophies.

"Instinctively he is apologizing for killing. But dead animals and fish are not the only possible trophies of the chase. The nature lover, too, may bring back some definite result of his quest—a photograph of a nesting ovenbird, a rare orchid, the memory of a brown thrasher's song. The hunter who has discovered the haunts of the showy lady's slipper or the purple fringed orchid, or who has listened to the melody of the hermit thrush, has won trophies that the slayer of trout and woodcock well may covet."

Salt

SALT eating is a bad habit that grows upon one. You may see some people putting salt on salted codfish.

Chloride of sodium is a slow mineral poison. Get your chloride and your sodium from natural foods.

George Starr White, M.D., writes:

"Salt, sodium chloride (Na Cl) is a very stable substance, composed of chlorine gas, which is intensely negative, and sodium, an intensely positive, metallic element. The elements, sodium and chlorine, when united to form a molecule, still manifest their individual character by an intense molecular vibration. The molecular vibration of salt blinds the sense of taste in the taste buds, just as direct sunlight blinds the sense of sight to everything that is less bright. After a continued use of salt, the sense of taste becomes so blunted to the natural and finer flavors of food that nothing savors or pleases except salt or condiments of equal intensity. For this reason, salt has been commonly used to hide flavors objectionable to the abnormal or perverted sense of taste.

"Salt is so stable that it cannot be di-

Rupture Kills 8000 Annually

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO Method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD, when adhering closely to the body, cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended, so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 298 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and instructive information. (c) P.L.—[Advertisement.

CARPENTER FINDS RECREATED FRANCE

Miracle of the World's Biggest Job of Reconstruction Since the Days of the Flood

With Motor Car and Camera He Inspects the New Farms, Mines and Factories in the Battle Scarred Regions—Tells How They are Baling Tons of Barbed Wire to Make Steel Rails—Filling in the Trenches and Renovating the Soil—How the Red Zone Looks—The New Farms and Their Wonderful Crops—A Graphic Story of the Mightiest Feat of Reconstruction Since Noah Landed on Ararat—Men, Women and Children at Work from Dawn to Twilight

Frank G. Carpenter

Lille (France) 1922.—For the past week I have been motoring over the devastated region dictating descriptions and making photographs of the new farms, new factories, and new buildings that have sprung Phoenix-like from the ashes of war. I have had my secretary, Dale N. Houghton, at my elbow taking my notes, and Charles C. Colt, a Harvard junior who got his schooling in France, interpreting my talks with the people. In addition the government has given me a guide in the person of Lieut. Robert Desrousseaux, a man who was wounded and gassed a dozen times during the war, and who knows the battle fields as you know the palm of your hand.

We started at Rheims and rode back and forth, making many detours and going through Chateau Thierry, along the Chemin des Dames, by Soissons, St. Quentin, Arras, Albert and a score of other cities and towns, traveling through the valleys of the Marne, the Aisne, the Oise, and the Somme, and ending our journey here at Lille in the Department of the Nord. Some of the time we were so close to the frontier that I could have thrown a stone from France into Belgium, and again as far south as the Germans got in their rushes toward Paris. Before that I had traveled through other parts of the battle fields so that I have, as it were, almost the whole of re-created France in my eye.

A Re-created France Rising From War's Ruins

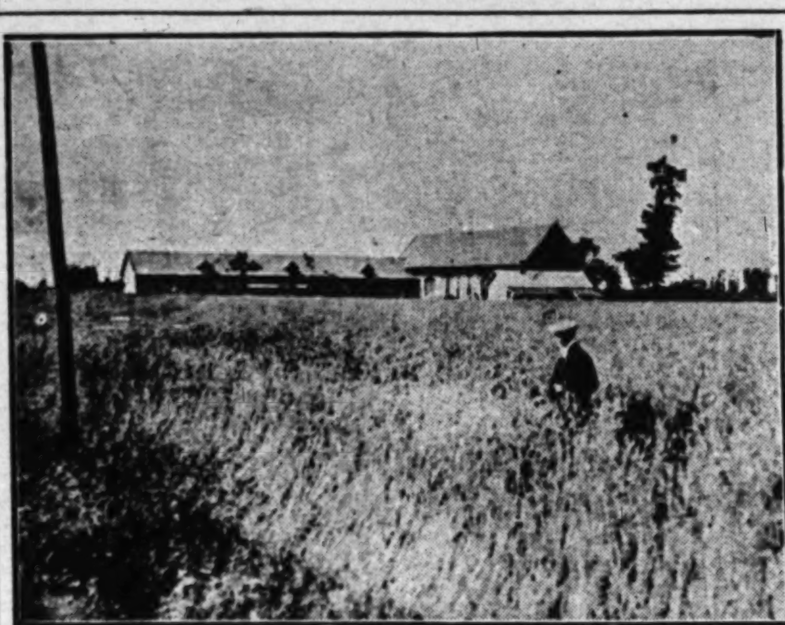
I SAY re-created France, for the country I have seen is a new France rising more rapidly out of the ruins than did San Francisco after the earthquake or Chicago or Baltimore after their fires. We thought those works of rebuilding enormous. They were like fitting together the toy house of a baby, compared to the great work going on here. The reconstruction is so vast and so rapid that I despair of making you realize the marvels that have sprung up since the treaty of peace was signed.

Villages, cities and factories rising like magic out of the most terrible ruins! Mines, blown up and flooded, pumped out and at work again under the mighty shaft houses which have risen above them! Farms, cut up by shell holes and covered with a net of barbed wire, now as smooth and as clean as your garden, and loaded with crops. New roads and railways. The work recalls that mighty event of 5926 years ago when God divided the light from the darkness, and in the space of six days laid the foundations upon which man since then has been building.

But before I describe what has been done and is doing, through which I have traveled and what it looked like before the Germans began their work of destruction. I have the facts and figures from Monsieur Charles Reibel, the Minister of the Liberated Regions, but I shall take the liberty of translating the hectares into acres, the kilometers into miles, the francs into dollars, and of using round numbers and plain simple American comparisons that you may the more easily grasp just what it all means.

The Extent of the Battle-Scarred Region

IN THE first place the country destroyed by the Germans lies in North France, this side of Belgium, running from the North Sea to the Rhine and reaching south almost to Paris. It comprises 6000 square miles. It is one-sixth as big as Indiana and two-thirds the size of Massachusetts. It embraces ten of the richest departments or states of the Republic of France and one thirty-sixth of its territory. Divide France into fields of thirty-six acres and one acre in each field was fought over. Collect all its people, and one in every six lived in this battle-scarred region and that sixth paid more than its share of the taxes. The actual number was about twice as many people as we have in Philadelphia, or as many as there are in Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland combined. To appreciate how dense was the population of this area, let us continue our comparison with Indiana. In 1920 that State had less than 3,000,000 Hoosiers. You could multiply its population by nine and it would still be less thickly settled than was this section before the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah fell upon it out of the skies. We have more souls in Rhode Island than in any other part of the Union. The number equals 600 for every square mile. These ten departments had 800 per square mile, which equals a family of five for every four acres, and that notwithstanding there were no large cities or towns in our sense of the word.



Fields that were recently fought over are now yielding forty bushels of wheat to the acre, while new farmsteads with their red brick walls and red tiled roofs are seen everywhere. This is a typical view in recreated France.

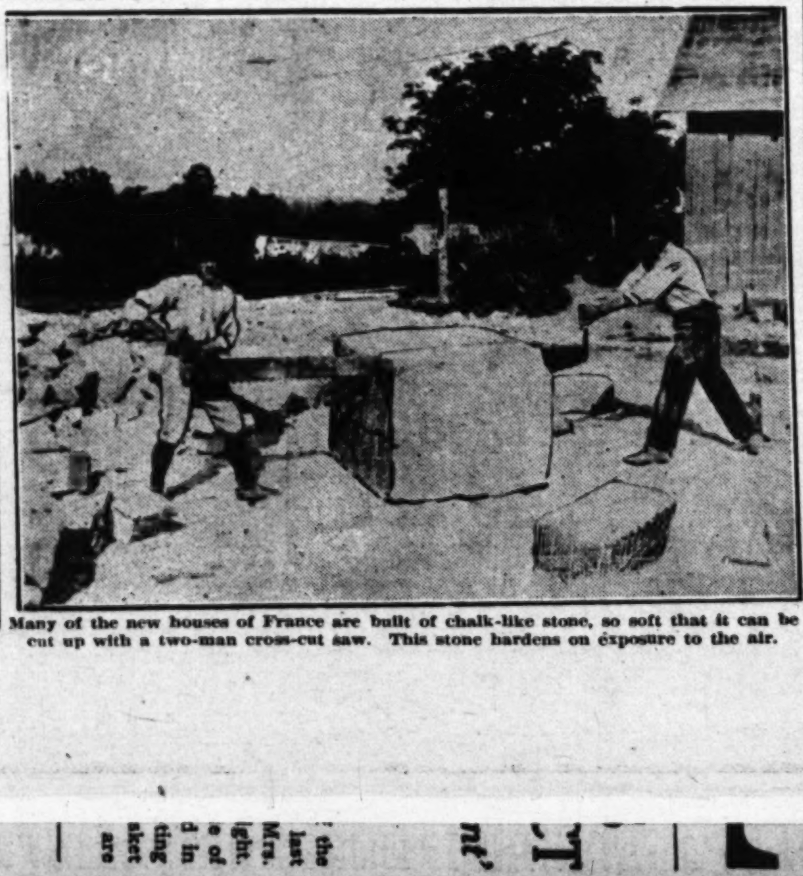
Industrial Section as Busy as Pittsburg

FOUR of the states, or departments, were almost as busy as the region around Pittsburg. They were beehives of factories and foundries of steel works and glass works and great textile mills. From under their surface came 90 per cent of the iron ore, and more than half of all the coal produced by France. They made more than three-fourths of the pig iron. It is in these four states that I now find the most active rebuilding going on.

In the whole of the devastated region, not one-tenth as big as Missouri, there were 11,000 factories out of which came 95 per cent of the woolen goods and 60 per cent of the cottons which France made for export and domestic consumption, and it produced also seven-tenths of the beet sugar consumed by the people. All together it had more than 25,000 industrial establishments, representing one-third of the wealth of the French. In the mills about 900,000 men were at work, and 150,000 men were employed in the mines. Several hundred thousand were engaged in spinning and weaving.

No Pen Can Describe What the War Did to France

NOW look at the conditions after the armistice, when France began to count up its losses. Remember I am giving the figures prepared by the government department that has charge of this vast work of re-creation. When the Germans left, the population of the ten departments had so shrunk that there were only two out of every five people left. Take two out of every family in Boston, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland and Philadelphia, and those cities would be reduced to the condition of this territory at the close of the war. One thousand communes or counties had been completely destroyed and 2000 more badly damaged. Out of the whole only 374 were saved. In some of the departments not a single village was spared, and in the four principal ones 290,000 houses were completely destroyed, 164,000 badly damaged by projectiles, and more than 250,000 seriously injured in one way or another.



Many of the new houses of France are built of chalk-like stone, so soft that it can be cut up with a two-man cross-cut saw. This stone hardens on exposure to the air.

One of the great calamities was the ruination of the water supply. These French villages relied largely on wells or the hydrants on the corners of the streets. There is no running water in the home of the average French peasant. He goes to the village well or to the hydrant, to get the water he drinks and uses in cooking. I saw men, women and children drawing water in every town I passed through. In the devastated regions about 30,000 wells were totally destroyed, more than 25,000 had been poisoned while more than 100,000 had to be cleaned up. In addition it was necessary to clean out 5000 acres of ponds, and so many streams that if they were joined together would fill a canal longer than from Kansas City to Paris.

Filling the Dug-outs an Immense Job

THOUSANDS of acres of the farms were entangled in a network of barbed wire. Vast areas which had been plowed up by shells were as hilly as a prairie dog village and other tracts had holes so big that they would make a grave for an elephant or even take in the cubic contents of our National Capitol at Washington. About 8,000,000 acres of land were thought to be ruined, and two-thirds of this had been under the plow. A vast territory had been sown with projectiles, some of which were live shells which blew up so many children who played about in the fields that when the work of reconstruction began the little ones had to be guarded and kept away from the workers. The dug-outs and trenches formed a great network that had to be filled. There were 333,000,000 cubic meters of these, enough to equal a ditch a yard wide, a yard deep and more than 240,000 miles long. If Old Mother Earth had a waist belt of dry land you might have dug a ditch round her, three feet wide and six feet deep and the work of filling that ditch would be just about one-fourth that of filling the dug-outs left here in France. Yet France has nearly finished this part of the job.

Roads, Mines and Factories Were Completely Destroyed

AS TO the roads, there were so many destroyed that joined together they would have made ten automobile highways from New York to Seattle, and most of them were in better condition than the best tourist routes of New England. On these roads there were torn down and broken up about 5000 bridges and viaducts, and of the magnificent trees lining the roads vast numbers were cut off by shells, chopped down with the ax, or so treated that they now look like the dead forest in the Dismal Swamp of Virginia. I have motored this week for miles between stumps, short and tall, the latter tipped with brushes made by the shells. The same sort of destruction occurred on the railways. Enough tracks to lay a road from Boston to the Mississippi River were torn up, and 1500 bridges and tunnels needed rebuilding. In my trip of this week nearly all of the road bridges we crossed were brand new.

And now just a word as to the factories and mines. In another letter I will describe their reconstruction. Two-thirds of the coal pits of the Nord and Pas de Calais, had been blown up or flooded and 220 had to be bored over again. The concessions of Lens, Lievin, Courtral, Marchin and Drocourt had been totally ruined. Most of the power plants had been systematically plundered and of 200 gas factories 150 were damaged. Ninety per cent of the textile industries, amounting to something like $10,000,000, were wiped out and glass works and chemicals works to four-fifths that amount were destroyed. In another letter I will show how all this looks today.

CARE OF THE BODY

awake almost completely, with a suddenness which was the astonishment of all observers; and perfectly reposed, he was then fresh and disposed for his affairs.

"This is a power that everyone can acquire, by giving themselves the trouble of a progressive training in an exercise, tedious and tiresome at first, but which quickly gives the most encouraging results.

"The object of this exercise is to learn to isolate one's self from the exterior world, to recall the power that the vagabond and undisciplined thoughts have carried uselessly in all directions, and not to let them fly away again.

"This is the 'retreat into the silence.'

"This isolation can be practiced anywhere; at home or abroad, during the day or at night, sitting or lying down.

"But for the beginner, it is better to retire into a chamber partly or wholly darkened, away fom noise, where one will not be liable to be disturbed.

"One should place one's self comfortably, in an easy chair or better yet in a reclining chair or on a bed, the eyelids partly closed, and the hands half shut. When there, make a mental effort to recall the forces from outside and also to prevent the further emission of thought; all movements, voluntary or involuntary, must be controlled and all the muscles must be relaxed as completely as possible.

"The mouth must be shut, without pressing the lips together, and the breathing must proceed slowly through the nostrils only.

"The field of consciousness must be entirely closed, and every thought, no matter what it may be, must be repelled as soon as it is perceived, in a word, one must not think at all.

"Two effects equally useful are produced; the muscular relaxation and the arrest of thought.

"It is not easy at first. Rarely is the muscular relaxation complete, nor can a total inactivity of thought be maintained for more than thirty or forty seconds.

"The efforts necessary for this exercise are very fatiguing and one is obliged to cease from them at the end of two or three minutes.

"But, little by little, the possibility to isolate one's self is realized; the circulation of the thought is more easily arrested, the relaxation becomes complete, and one can maintain that condition very easily during eight or ten minutes. Serious advantages from this state commence to be realized, for one can repose one's self more or less completely in a very short time.

"In continuing to develop this faculty, one is able after a time, to isolate one's self even in the midst of noise and confusion, and the noises from outside even when intense are only perceived feebly. The sensibility diminishes to such a degree that if a fly comes and lights on your nose, it does not trouble you."

Salvaging Civilization

THE state of the western world has brought forth many pessimistic utterances from thinking men, who can look beyond their immediate surroundings. In the Century, G. Stanley Hall glances at some of these utterances:

"Prof. McDougall, recently called from Oxford to Harvard to succeed the late Prof. Munsterberg, and who seems, like his predecessor, to feel charged with the duty of becoming a mentor to the New World, tells us in his 'Is America Safe for Democracy?' that the United States is 'speeding gaily with invincible optimism down the road to destruction.' He reminds us that something like one-fourth of our drafted men were unfit for military service, and the tests of two or three millions of them show them to have an average psychological age of thirteen years and an educational equipment of the sixth school grade. This is a very different reality from the ideal of that of the founders of our nation.

"Edward Alsworth Ross in his 'The Old World in the New,' shows that in the year the war began the proportion of our foreign-born and their children was not only greater than ever before, but that the quality of the immigrants is steadily deteriorating, and he deplores 'the mysterious decline that came from the people early in the twentieth century.'

"R. H. Johnson, discussing race suicide in America, reminds us of our one million childless homes, and shows with great statistical detail the inevitable results of breeding from the lowest section of the population while the better classes become progressively sterile.

"Ireland, in his 'Democracy and the Human Equation,' urges that our representative government, based on the idea of leaving great questions to the experts it chooses and can trust, is degenerating not only by the use of the initiative, referendum and recall, but still more by the fact that our government has become a mere body of delegates instructed by the incessant petitions, lobbies and activities of the all-dominant financial interests.

"Klein, in his 'Dynastic America and Those Who Own It,' computes that 500 persons in the United States own $5,000,000 and upward each, that 2 per cent of our people own 60 per cent of our wealth, and that the money power is the real, though invisible, ruler which controls all that we call government; that, saying nothing of church, press, education, all our public utilities are controlled by soulless trusts; and that about half of our great fortunes have already passed by inheritance to those who earned no part of them and render no real service to the community.

"In 'The Modernizing of the Orient,' Clayton S. Cooper reminds us that Asia, with its 900,000,000 people, or nearly four times as many as are in Europe, has so far been but slightly affected by the West; that Alexander's conquests, Rome, and the crusades left hardly a trace; while if England withdrew from India and Egypt, most traces of her dominion there would be forgotten in a generation.

"Hyndman, in his 'The Awakening of Asia,' tells us that the assumed superiority of Europe over Asia 'does not exist;' that Asia has influenced Europe on the whole far more than she has been influenced by her; that Japan has the same aspiration to rule Asia that Germany had to rule Europe; that China, despite her hatred of Japan, would prefer to be dominated by her than by the West. He thinks an even greater war than that which has just closed is liable to break out between the yellow and the white races.

"Lothrop Stoddard, in his 'The Rising Tide of Color,' says that the Russo-Japanese War taught Asia that the white races were not invincible, and 'we stand at a crisis, the supreme crisis of ages.' The recent war came as an answer to the prayers of the colored races that the whites fall out among themselves, and our solidarity is broken.

"Will Irwin, in his 'The Next War,' thinks that it will be greater than the last, and is

Ancient Romance of the Jemez Plateau

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

Pueblo Indian women in their national dress

IN PERPETUAL ornaments, also, they made a great advance when they settled down. The longing for jewelry is nearly as old as humanity itself; and in the new mode of life these people had better opportunity for this expression of sentiment and art. From unknown ages they have been digging out nuggets of turquoise from a chalky hill, Mt. Chalchihuitl, some twenty miles southeast of Santa Fe. This has always been the favorite gem of all the tribes of the Southwest and of Mexico; and it was the most important article of barter they had in primitive times. Mauling chunks of the matrix out from the rude tunnel they had burrowed in this sacred hill, cracking the chunks into bits, rubbing these down on gritty sandstone till the matrix was all gone and the blue or greenish turquoise was smoothed and rounded, they perforated this bead or pendant with an agate point set in a bow-drill; and strung it on threads of deer sinew. There are also in the Southwest spars and other minerals of ornamental color and striation, which made admirable beads. And they sawed the bones of large birds and small animals into beads, with saws of jagged obsidian, or agate from the petrified forest of Arizona—another of the most important circulating mediums of a million square miles. This aboriginal barter was a remarkable development of primitive business. The trader was a privileged character, and held sacred even between tribes at war; and the buffalo robes of the plains found their way well down into Mexico, and the parrot plumes of Central America reached the sacred ceremonial chambers of Northern New Mexico and Colorado, and the turquoise and the petrified wood circulated a thousand miles in either direction; and the shells of the Gulf of California came back in barter to be made into the most beautiful wampum of the Cliff Dwellers.

Cotton Was Raised in Ancient Pueblos and Woven Into Fabric

A CERTAIN leisure and security is necessary not only to become a jeweler, but to be a weaver. Out on the Buffalo Plains, our Indians had dressed in buckskin, for shirts and leggings, skirts and moccasins. In the new environment buckskin was still chiefly used, but it was not the only recourse. In certain localities the ancient Pueblos raised a little native cotton which they wove into very good fabrics. In lieu of buffalo robes they made blankets of rabbit skins—cut in strips, twisted and dried with the hair outside, and the strands sewn together something after the fashion of our grandmother's rag carpets. These were very warm and reasonably cheap, in a country teeming with cottontails and jack rabbits. There were plenty of bears, too—brown and grizzly and silver-tip; but we know pretty well that these were seldom killed—not because of a superstition like that of the Navajos, but because with stone-tipped arrows it would be pretty hard to extinguish a great beast whom a dozen or twenty Winchester bullets are often required to subdue. And, also we know, because among the innumerable animal bones we excavate in these prehistoric ruins those of the bear are extremely uncommon.

But the finest fowl in America—the one that really ought to be the national bird, if only because he is exclusively American, whereas the eagle is of every land—was most abundant in all the higher ranges of the Pueblos, the wild turkey. There were no hens, cats, peacocks, guinea fowl, horses or mules, cattle or sheep in America until the Spanish introduced them; but the wild turkey was domesticated by the Pueblos and had also a ceremonial importance. And from the feathers of this great bird, the Cliff Dwellers wove (even as did the Aztecs) fine capes and mantles, chiefly for ceremonial use and sacred dances, but also of real utility as protection. Eagles were also captured and kept prisoner by tether of buckskin or in little pens of sticks, for worshipful reasons, and for medicine making and magic, as well as for insignia and distinction.

One of the most universal plants of the Southwest, common alike to the lofty pine-clad plateaus and the burning deserts of 3000 or 4000 feet less altitude, is the Palmilla, the "Spanish bayonet," also called Amole. These long bayonet leaves tipped with a needle-pointed thorn were pounded up and cleansed of the pulpy matter, leaving a mass of tough slender fibers, excellent for thread and for weaving. Of these fibers the Cliff Dwellers wove their sandals; some of them so compact as to outwear good sole leather. It is a beautiful little touch of the vitality and sincerity of the art-instinct in primitive man that we find the soles of these sandals wrought in beautiful raised patterns—though they were to be worn out upon the sharp gravels and abrading lavas. It is literally true that no act of life with the ancient Pueblos was so trivial or so selfish as to be without a distinct religious coloration and motive; and no article of use so trivial or so base that it must not be made beautiful.

With Safety and Shelter the Arts Rapidly Developed

THESE arts and crafts of a people at last come to shelter and security from attack or from stampeding, developed in very many ways beyond the scope of a nomad. But above all, the effect of stability, safety and shelter upon the mind was notable. It developed the rudiments of "literature" which man has even in his most primitive stage, but which evolves very slowly until he becomes sedentary. For countless ages the laws and the traditions of the tribe had come down from father to son by word of mouth to faithful and attentive ears; but now that they could gather around the little smoky hearth at night and sit and think and talk and dream, the volume of this folk lore developed greatly, not only in mass but in imagination. The unwritten but unvarying lore of the Pueblos, largely retained even to this day by some of the oldest men, was so staggering in quantity, so full of sanity and who have delved in that rich field have a new respect for the universal heritage of man. I have recounted a score or so of these first American fairy tales in my book "Pueblo Indian Folk Stories;" but this is only a hint of the great treasure house of such lore that was the heritage of the Pueblo Indian. The great mass of their tribal laws and ceremonials and sacred songs would make a very respectable library; and much of it has been saved and recorded by our students.

Education Was Carried on Under Strictest of Discipline

WE IN civilization have really "Forgotten What a Memory is For!" We have notebooks and "mems" and card catalogues and indexes and textbooks and secretaries to remember for us—and with many of us a pencil is the larger part of our memory. But when people had no writing and no secretaries and no books—why, all they had to do was just remember! These stories and rituals, told-down from generation to generation, were as literally kept in form as if they had been printed. Indeed, they were more accurate than the average reprint of one of our old favorite songs. I doubt if all the Cliff Dwellers in New Mexico put together ever boggled in all their great repertory, so much as I have seen "Annie Laurie" twisted by publishers. The education of an Indian boy began from the time he was 4; if he was brought up for any important position in the tribe this education was continuous throughout his life. The discipline was strict, and nothing short of letter-perfect was tolerated. True they knew no "letter;" but accent and inflection and sound were as strict as they would be with a music master among us. The fine old Pueblo woman, Marcelina Abeita, who was godmother to my youngest daughter (born in the pueblo,) maintained a little store, as well as large herds of cattle and horses and flocks of sheep, and a hundred vehicles of all sorts, including a horse-power threshing machine. Her store business ran up to $60,000 a year. It was largely on credit, in 5, 10 and 25 per cent purchases; the bill being invariably paid when the customer sold sheep or blankets or grapes or otherwise acquired the wherewithal. And Marcelina's books were her good gray head! And she never made a mistake. Of course each debtor knew perfectly well the amount of his indebtedness; but Marcelina knew also, and I never knew her statement to be questioned. It was her father, by the way, who loaned our government some $20,000 during the Civil War to pay off troops in New Mexico. He never was repaid—nor have his heirs yet received recompense for that patriotic loan.

Settled Mode of Life Influenced Cranial Characteristics

BUT this sitting safe around the family hearth at night, in comfort and sociability and reflection, and another very remarkable effect. It resculptured the heads and features of these people. The high cheek bones, the narrow, prowlike countenances of the hunters and warriors, ever drifting, ever alert, ever tense—here softened and rounded, imperceptibly but surely. Those tiresome scientists who try to scare us off from learning by the use of frightful Greek words have classified two broad types as "Dolichocephalic" and "Brachycephalic." Which means in plain English "narrow head" and "broad head," or as we more familiarly say, "hatchet faced" and "round head." The skulls of the Cliff Dwellers and their descendants, the Pueblos, became on the average far more square and broad than those of their nomad neighbors. This is no strange thing to occur in a race, for it is frequently noted in the individual. Porfirio Diaz, the great ruler of Mexico for thirty years, within my own friendship with him, changed the whole shape of his head. Theodore Roosevelt, when I first knew him at Harvard in 1877, was essentially "hatchet-faced," even "jimber-jawed," besides being long-necked and thin chested and weakling of look. In the forty years of our friendship I had chance to note his cranial development, for after college it was ten years before we met again. Everyone knows what a great, square, powerful head finally dominated his bull-like shoulders. There is no question that deep thought tends to round out the skull more than the use merely of the perceptive faculties. And on the average, too, the general build of the farmer becomes notably different from that of the roving hunter.

Greenwood cemetery, in Brooklyn, comprising 475 acres, was opened in 1840, and since that time more than 300,000 burials have been made in it. Among the noted monuments in Greenwood cemetery are those erected in memory of Horace Greeley, James Gordon Bennett, John Matthews, the Brown brothers, S. F. R. Morse, Mary M. Danser, Charlotte Canda, Capt. Caraja and A. S. Scribner. The soldiers' monument, the firemen's monument, the Brooklyn theater monument, the pilot monument and the bronze statue of De-Witt Clinton are also worthy of notice.—[Capper's Weekly.

Sonnet

How my eyes have ached for the cool sweet grass,
For an opened door where the shadows lay
Like a silken veil in the moon of days!
I've hungered for sight of a country lass,
In the winding lanes where slow cattle pass;
For the reaper's song midst the golden hay,
For the Angelus calling hearts to pray,
In the twilight's hush like a requiem mass

How my heart has ached for a tender smile,
For an humble hearth when the day was fled!
Is there recompense for a simple fame?
From the haloed crown of a toil-bent head
From the haloed crown of a toil-bent head,
Or the treasured sound of a mother's name?

establish the paternity of a child through a blood test is preposterous, and is based on the false assumption that every drop of blood is a replica of the entire body. Blood can be termed a tissue. Each tissue of the body differs from every other tisse in construction and blood is not an exception to that rule. A tissue located within one hundredth of an inch from a diseased tissue will not necessarily show symptoms of the disease. Consequently a drop of blood cannot reveal all the bodily ills."

Perhaps if you send Abrams a lock of your hair he will tell you how much money you have in the bank.

Strange, is it not, that apparently intelligent people will "fall" for this sort of thing, while doubting, or denying, the simple laws of health.

Hippocrates

HIPPOCRATES is called the "Father of Medicine." How far "medical science" has strayed from his simple, sensible teachings.

Hippocrates made more important contributions to the advancement of medical science than any other man in the history of our race. This remarkable man was born in Cos, an island in the Archipelago, about 858 B.C. He was a nobleman, and a man of strict virtue and piety. His instructions seem to us now simple enough, but for the period in which he lived they were little short of miracles.

Following constitute the more salient features of his instructions.

"In the winter, to resist the cold, let your food be dry and warming. In the spring, when the weather grows milder, the diet should be accommodated to the season, and should be somewhat cooler and lighter. In summer, when the season becomes hot and dry, the food should be cool and the drink diluting. But after the autumnal equinox, your aliment should again be of a warming nature, and your clothes thicker by degrees, as you approach the winter."

"It is of great moment to a man's health whether his common bread be white or brown, well or ill baked."

"It is very injurious to health to take in more food than the constitution will bear, when, at the same time, one uses no exercise to carry off this excess."

"A variety of foods, discordant in their nature, should not be indulged at one meal, because they make a disturbance and create wind in the bowels."

"If they, who have been accustomed to one meal a day, should chance to eat two, they soon grow dull, heavy and thirsty."

"Excess in drinking is not quite so bad as excess in eating."

"When the body is impure, or loaded with bad humors, the more you nourish it the more you hurt it."

"Mutton is good food for the delicate and for the robust."

"Milk is hurtful to those whose bowels are subject to flatulency, or grumbling, and to those who complain of thirst, but good for the consumptive and emaciated, if they are free from fever and the above-named derangements of the digestive apparatus."

"The healthy and strong may drink such water as comes in their way indiscriminately, but they who drink water for the recovery of health must be careful in the choice they make. The lightest, purest and softest waters are most fit for those who are apt to be costive, wheras the hardest waters do most service to those whose bowels are moist and phlegmatic. Hot temperaments receive benefit from drinking water. Water drinkers generally have keen appetites."

Rest and Recuperation

THERE is much in the badly misnamed "New Thought" that is exaggerated, silly and preposterous. There is also much that is good. For instance, the idea of an occasional hour, or half hour, or ten minutes, of silent meditation, for rest, relaxation and development of the will, is specially appropriate in this age of rush and hurry. On the other hand, some Orientals carry this idea to absurd extremes.

Following article is found in a little publication of Rochester, N. Y., called "The Mighty Atom." The article is described as "Adapted from the French by W. Durville, by A. F. Munroe:"

"The human organism, like all other living organisms, is naturally subject to periods of activity during which it loses power, and to periods of repose, in which the lost power is regained.

"These two periods, very different from each other, are the state of wakefulness, during which we work and the state of sleep, during which we repose.

"The body is the instrument of the soul; it is the natural reservoir of the mental force which needs to be in a good state in order to work with profit.

"If the body is too much fatigued, the soul is obliged to spend more than the normal amount of force to sustain it, and then the soul itself becomes fatigued and even exhausted.

"The child whose principal labor has relation to the development of its physical body, needs to spend at least half of its time in sleep; and the adult, although the physical body may be nearly formed, needs to sleep about the third part of each day. If a sufficient quantity of sleep is not taken, the physical and moral forces are not renewed to an adequate degree; there is fatigue at first, and exhaustion afterward; and a nervous break down, with its sad procession of incapacities, is not slow to declare itself.

"If thoughts are things, and their emission is accompanied by an expenditure of force, as is now almost universally admitted, it is indispensable to know how to think, and to regulate in a suitable manner the course of one's thoughts; and especially, at certain moments not to think at all.

"During wakefulness, and especially when we think of many things at the same time, we expend force in all directions, and we fatigue ourselves quickly.

"Being fatigued, if we could arrest this expenditure of force and recall to their center, that is to say to ourselves, all these scattered forces, we could very rapidly regain our lost power.

"In fifteen or twenty minutes, we could repose ourselves fully as much as we ordinarily do druing a sleep sufficiently restful of two or three hours.

"We would be fit to do each day much more work and to do it much better and with greater ease.

"Napoleon possessed this power to a very remarkable degree. At a given moment, he could isolate himself and regain very rapidly his lost strength; thus he slept little. Furthermore he could go to sleep or

A DAY MARKED WITH A WHITE STONE

ALAMO MOUNTAIN is the last stand of the San Rafaels toward the east. Of course there is McDonald Peak right under Alamo's crest; and Stewart Mountain, and Snowy Peak, and Black Mountain just a few miles further on; and then, the very last of all, Cobblestone Mountain, which looms up so grandly on our left as we drive up the Ridge Road, beyond Saugus. And they are respectable mountains, too, rising well up around 7000 feet; but when we are on the summit of Alamo, and are looking out over them, we hardly note them at all.

So we may consider Alamo Mountain as the last high stand of the San Rafaels in their eastern extension.

Where Van and I made camp at the junction of Lockwood Creek with the Piru, after our strenuous day's trip from the Sespe, was in the very shadow of Alamo Mountain, at its northwest foot. It was Alamo Mountain which had drawn us there. We had heard of its attractions, and had long looked forward to the time when we should realize for ourselves what others had told us of. And now we were in camp at its foot!

We were astir the next morning at 4:30; and at 5:30 we left camp for a long day on Alamo. We went afoot, that we might stray about as we pleased, take our time to it, and be entirely carefree. Then, too, the animals needed a rest, and as there was some uncertainty as to the forage we were likely to run into during the few days, we thought they deserved a feast while it was in sight. So we picketed two of the horses where the grass was knee-deep and turned the others loose.

There are several trails leading to the top of Alamo Mountain. Perhaps the most used one is the Henderson Trail, which starts from the Piru, at the north foot of the mountain. It is favored, because a road reaches its foot on the Piru, It may be considered as part of a through trail over the top of the mountain and down the south side by way of the Alder Creek Trail—the final outlet in that direction being the Sespe Hot Springs Trail. Then there is the Snowy Creek Trail from the east, which is very little used. None of them is very much traveled, for that matter, as but few persons other than the forest rangers visit the mountain.

Miller Trail, a Monument to Ranger Who Built It

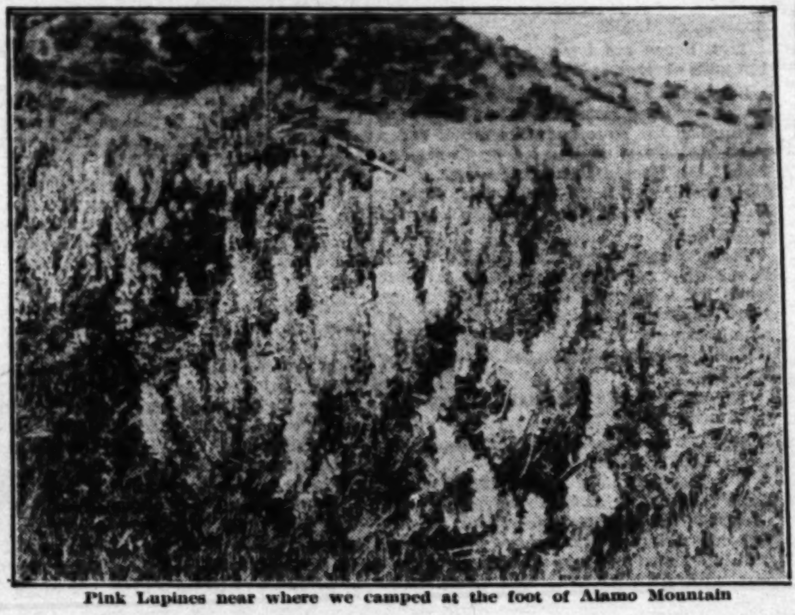
WE HAD originally intended to take the old Alder Creek Trail from the south, but when we were in camp on the Piedra Blanca, the district ranger, who happened to be there on trail repair work at the time, told us of a newer trail up Alamo which started from Piru Creek where the Lockwood joined it. This was known as the Miller Trail from the ranger who built it. It was not only a better trail than the one by Alder Creek, the ranger said, but it would save us a day's time. The ranger had further told us that Miller had died since building the trail, and that we would find the road he had made a worthy monument to his memory. We did.

From our camp we back-tracked up the Piru, crossed the Lockwood and kept on upstream for perhaps a quarter of a mile, where we found the Piru bridged with a log. We crossed over and almost immediately picked up the trail. We found, indeed, that Miller had left a monument to his industry. But we also noted that Time is the respecter of no man's memory. Already the trail was cluttered with rocks and the chaparral was rapidly coming back. If Miller's memory is to be kept green, a small crew will have to spend a few days every two or three years clearing away rock waste and cutting chaparral. The trail has a moderate grade, good width, and a fairly smooth footing. Its length is perhaps six or seven miles—to which we gave most of the forenoon in a leisurely climb. It was a day in the fragrant month of May, and there never was a finer! The way was bordered with trees and shrubs and flowers! And as we mounted higher and higher, new and distant scenes opened to our view! Could we ask for more? Is it any wonder that the day is marked in my memory with a white stone?

The trail might have been smoother; but we were in no hurry, and the granite spalls over which we sometimes stumbled only more forcibly called our attention to the enduring character of the rock. There were young shoots of mountain mahogany, chamise, ceanothus, and other sorts of chaparral taking possession of the path again, but they were not yet large enough to make us turn aside. But we did often have "to mind our steps," else we were continually trampling and crushing flower beds beneath our feet. Two flowers, especially, seemed to consider the trail as a place which had been cleared for their own particular use. One of these was a little phacelia, violet-eyed and quite as pretty as its cousin, the baby blue-eyes; and the other was the "brownie," maroon-colored and one of the prettiest of all the monkey-flower tribe. Little "Violet-eyes" made the more solid beds, often usurping the trail from side to side; but "brownie" seemed to be everywhere.

The pine-covered park on the top of Alamo Mountain

But there were other flowers, too; lupines, and chia, and collinsias, and wall-flowers, and mariposas and many others. And we had one real "find." This was the Bitter Root, the State flower of Montana. It occurs here in the south only on the higher mountains. I have since found it in some half a dozen different places in our region, but the first time I came across it was along the Miller Trail on Alamo Mountain.



Pink Lupines near where we camped at the foot of Alamo Mountain

The top of the mountain is a park, covered with one of the most beautiful open forests of yellow pine that I know of. It is in the shape of a sort of half-basin, with the high rim on the east and north, and the inside of the curve and the flat on the west and south. The flat is a couple of miles long, and a half-mile or so wide at its broadest. Great drifts of snow were still lying on the ridge and down the north slope when we were there. From the snow little rills were trickling down into the flat, where they gathered into larger streams that dawdled across the nearly level floor, meandering in a lazy fashion among the pines, until they reached the place where the ground began to fall away; then they suddenly waked up and rapidly gathered into a stream that became Alamo Creek. The flat had a liberal sprinkling of bunch grass, a sort of forage of which horses are especially fond. Everything combined to make the spot an ideal camping place at that time—had we known of which in advance, I think we would have been tempted to take our outfit to the top of the mountain at the outset. I have been told by those who have been here later in the summer that feed is scarce at that time, and the water is none too plentiful. I feel quite sure, however, that good water may always be found a short distance down the draw at the head of Alamo Creek.

The culmination of Alamo Mountain is the narrow, broken ridge that rises abruptly and boldly along the northeast edge, forming the rim of the half-basin which I have already mentioned. On the outer side this ridge drops off for a thousand feet so perpendicularly that trees have a hard time finding permanent dwelling places. The inner side is a steep curve of 300 or 400 feet, ending in the basin-like flat. In places the ridge rises clear of all surrounding trees; and from these points there is to be had one of the most extensive and comprehensive views afforded by any spot in all Southern California. Only two near-by points of land are higher—Mt. Pines, twenty miles northwest, and Frazier Mountain, ten miles due north—neither of which stands in a position to obscure more distant and desirable views, as seen from Alamo Mountain.

We followed the ridge on Alamo over its highest point, where we spent an hour viewing the "distant lands," and in locating far-off landmarks. It were scarcely profitable here to expand on the wonder of the vistas which were spread out before us as we stood on the topmost pinnacle of Alamo Mountain. But the contemplation of the panorama was part of the glory of the day, and should not be passed without some brief mention.

Here We See the Glories of Our State From the Heights

FAR off in the north and northwest, beyond the San Joaquin Valley, 150 miles away, and mingling its summit with the clouds, stretched the great white ridge of the Sierra Nevada. To the east, and almost at our feet, were the Tehachapi Mountains, flanked on the right by Antelope Valley—where, with the aid of field glasses, we could make out houses and highways. Nearer, in the same direction, we could follow the white line of the State highway over Tejon Pass and on southward toward Saugus—the route which we know as the "Ridge Road."

In the southwest were the Sierra Madres, the north side of old San Antonio white with snow. And nearer in the same direction were Mt. Pacifico and Mt. Gleason, neither so lofty a mountain as the one upon which we stood, yet both dark with a crown of pines. As we still gazed in the same direction, and our eyes dropped lower, they rested on the White Mountains, at our very feet as it were, with McDonald Peak, Cobblestone Mountain and several somewhat lower companions.

In the south, almost near enough to touch, as it seemed, were the black Topatopas and away beyond them the Canejo and Santa Monica Mountains, much lower than the Topatopas, but seen by us over the top of the latter because of our high station; and still farther away, the Pacific, with its mountainous islands showing but dimly.

In the west were the ridges and peaks of the Santa Ynez and San Rafael ranges—Reyes Peak looking especially alluring and tantalizing. And then, only a score of miles away in the northwest, Mt. Pinos rose to a full quarter of a mile above us, oval topped and pine-clad, and still wearing a blanket of snow. And lastly, due north, to complete the circuit, Frazier Mountain challenged us to a future climb that would be higher than that of Alamo by 750 feet.

Around the base of Alamo Mountain Piru Creek coils itself in nearly two-thirds of a circle. From our lofty station its whole watershed, with its lacework of tributaries lay spread out below us like a finely drawn map.

It was a wonderful prospect, that which we got from the top of Alamo, alone worth climbing the mountain to enjoy; yet it was only one item among many that caused the day to be marked in memory with a white stone.

Twice since that entrancing day have I seen Alamo Mountain: once, a few days later, from the simmit of Mt. Pinos; and another time, not long ago, from the top of Frazier Mountain. From both these lofty stations it was a faraway picture. There were others by my side as I stood on Frazier Mountain, and together we singled out the distant Alamo. But the views we got were not the same. What they saw was a dark pine-covered ridge, the only detail of which was the fringe of trees on the sky-line. But I, looking back through half a dozen years, saw the winding Miller Trail, with its carpet of violet-eyes and brownies, the open forest of yellow pines, with their clean, straight trunks of red-brown, the snowbanks on the ridge, and the trickling rills winding their way across the flat—all as they were that day which is marked in memory with a white stone.

I sometimes think I would like to visit Alamo Mountain again. But I am almost afraid to. It might not have so much to offer me another time, and I might lose some of the treasure it has already given me. I know of others who have been there and who have not come away with the same happy impressions as were mine. Yet it may have been the time. Yes, I'm quite sure it must have been. Surely in late May or early June Alamo Mountain must always be an an entrancing spot! The things are there to make it so!

landular functions; but it is also more than ikely that food poisons and other toxins in the body are the cause of the disturbance the normal activity of the glands. And se food poisons are generated by overding. The woman who grows fat at 40 ay be suffering from a lessened activity of rtain glands, but this lessened activity is e in turn to autointoxication from excess od intake. The chief cause in most of ese cases, however, is in all likelihood the creased need for food without a corresponding decrease in food intake. At this age the individual tends to slow down in her activities, and her tissues burn up less food; if at this time she does not make a corresponding decrease in her diet fat will begin to accumulate.

"When all is said and done, the fact remains that the fat person is eating more food than he is using up; the surplus goes to fat. The fat man may be a light eater, but we can't get away from the fact that he is eating more than he needs. Every person is a law unto himself in this matter. If the scales show that you are increasing in weight, there is but one logical conclusion; you are eating more food than your body is using.

"We see 'obesity cures' widely advertised. I have one thing to say regarding these: all drugs which reduce weight are harmful; there is no safe way to reduce weight by means of drugs.

"There is no place to start, if we are going to consider obesity from the standpoint of its real cause, unless we start with the proposition that the fat man eats too much. The only way to keep the weight down is to strike a balance between food eaten and food used up in the body. There is only one legitimate, scientific way to reduce weight, and that is to eat less than the tissues burn up, thus compelling the tissues to subsist for a time partly upon the stored fat in the body. The proposition is perfectly simple.

"Certain foods are essentially fat-builders, and these are the foods that must be shunned by the person who wishes to reduce. The main fat-producing foods include milk, sugars and sweets, starches and fatty foods. The fat person must eat very lightly of these foods. He must take less of them than the amount which can be allowed to the thin person, thus giving the body an opportunity to draw its heat-producing supplies for the time being from its own fat-laden tissues. After the weight has been sufficiently reduced, the scales should regulate the amount he may take of this class of foods. The fat person must not take candy, soda fountain drinks, pie or cake. He must eat lightly of breads, potatoes and cereals. All his bread should be toasted. He should partake but moderately of cream, butter and eggs. He may eat plenty of fruits and vegetables of the salad or nonstarchy variety. As a rule the fat person may eat liberally of lean meats.

"Here is a good rule for the obese: Two meals daily, with nothing at noon but a pint of water and a brisk walk. This means two meals, and not three or four meals eaten at two sittings. Never eat bread oftener than once daily, preferably at breakfast: Have all bread thoroughly toasted."

A Medical Mountebank

DR. ABRAMS of San Francisco is getting a lot of free advertising, in newspapers and magazines. Or does he, perhaps, pay for it?

Abrams seems to be rather overdoing it, lately. Here is a Chicago dispatch:

"Dr. Albert Abrams of San Francisco, founder of the electronic school of medicine, who is in Chicago attending two conventions for the advancement of his methods, said today that of late he has been diagnosing disease from an individual's autograph. It makes no difference, he stated, whether the writers are living or dead.

"Edgar Allan Poe, it was said, gave reaction of dipsomania when his signature was subjected to electronic analysis. Samuel Johnson revealed a blood disease and tuberculosis. The autograph, Dr. Abrams says, reveals not only the physical condition but the sex as well.

"Dr. Abrams's paternity test is the most novel of his reputed abilities. By means of his electrical devices he claims to be able to diagnose, almost without failure, virtually every disease. Not only will he essay a diagnosis but in the case of cancer he will make an assertion as to location and malignancy, all from a drop of blood.

"Dr. Abrams also has asserted that religion may be determined from a drop of blood. The telltale drop reveals whether an individual is a Catholic or Protestant, a follower of Brahma or a disciple of Confucius.

"Dr. Abrams, in discussing the Tiernan baby case, said he refused to make the test because he could not have the co-operation of Harry Poulin."

The famous so-called "blood test," by which Dr. Abrams would establish the paternity of Billy, the 10-months-old son of Mrs. John P. Tiernan of South Bend, Ind., was declared "pure bunk" by Dr. Hugh Cabot, dean of the school of medicine, at Ann Harbor, Mich.

"It is founded on a false theory and supported by a lot of interesting but meaningless words," said Dean Cabot.

Dr. Cabot does not feel any animosity for the "pseudo-scientist," as he terms Dr. Abrams. He stated his views as head of the school of medicine at the University of Michigan because he believed that the public should be given the facts on the scientific side.

"Scientists have bordered upon his theory long ago, but have dismissed it," Dr. Cabot added. "Dr. Abrams's assertion that he can

NEAL-TONE

For

Premature Old Age

Neal-Tone is a wonderful tonic for men and women who feel themselves slipping and growing old before their time. Old age is not a question of how many years you have lived, but how you have lived those years. Some men and women are old at 25, others young at 60. If you feel that you are 10 or 15 years older than your real age it is because you have been deprived of the tissue-building salts that nourish the nerves, regulate the vital functions and maintain good health.

The early symptoms of failure of the vital functions and premature old age are poor appetite and digestion, loss of weight, constipation, liver and kidney troubles, skin disorders, weakness, nervousness and a "let-down feeling."

Doctors advise Neal-Tone for these conditions because it supplies the tissue-building salts and is safe, reliable and pleasant to take. Neal-Tone does not contain quinine, strychnine or nux vomica.

Thousands of men and women who have taken Neal-Tone recommend it because it gives results that cannot be obtained with any other tonic. Neal-Tone is the ideal family tonic. Strong enough for father and mother. Mild enough for children, babies and delicate invalids convalescing from debilitating diseases.

If you have that tired let-down feeling that warns you old age is creeping on you prematurely, get a supply of Neal-Tone from your druggist. Or send $1.00 to Neal-Tone Company, 4562 West 18th St., Los Angeles, for a full package. It will be worth many hundreds of dollars in health returns. Be sure you get Neal-Tone.

Neal-Tone can always be obtained at the American Drug Company, Pacific Electric Building, 6th and Hill streets, 8th and Spring streets; the Court Drug Company's stores, 9th and Hill streets, Broadway at 11th street, 300 N. Broadway, 1601 South Main, 5100 Santa Monica Blvd.; Sun Drug Company.

Self-Assembled Edward Bangs

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

YOUNG Edward Bangs, better known to his intimates as "Teddy," was pursuing a Big Idea. It was a very big idea—so big that Teddy had even ceased smoking to give it his full attention. Smoking, he had discovered, went with pleasant reveries, and with huge easy chairs, and with heels comfortably elevated to a restful position on desk or table. But on the rare occasions when young Bangs went in for real thought he found it advisable to lay aside his cigarette, to bring his feet to the floor, and even to assume a more conventional attitude in his easy chair. He was going in for real thought now—hence he was physically uncomfortable but mentally alert.

It will be no surprise to the gentle reader to know that the center of his thoughts was a girl—a very nice girl, a charmingly pretty girl—in short, The Girl. She was from Ted's home town, and he had known her since she was 3 and he himself was 5. They had gone to kindergarten together, to school together. Without pausing to analyze the grounds of this hope, Teddy had assumed that they would always be together—except, of course, during those intervals in which the currents in the life of a young Captain of Industry would temporarily carry him out of her reach, only to triumphantly sweep him back again.

While he was in college he had spent his vacations ostensibly with his devoted parents, but in reality with the girl. His father openly grumbled that he "slept at home, but that was all there was to it." His mother had a daily talk with him during the late breakfast she kept hot for him. Then she resignedly watched him leave for Mabel's house. Her name was Mabel. Both families—Mabel's and his own—took it for granted, as Ted himself did, that he and Mabel would always be together. It was not until this very night that young Mr. Bangs had been visited by a horrible doubt as to the permanence of their association.

It was all his own fault. Loyally he told himself that. He had invited Mabel and her mother to New Haven to be his guests during graduation week. He had planned his program very nicely. His own father and mother, also in New Haven for his final college week, would, of course, take Mabel's mother off his hands, thus leaving Mabel exclusively in his care. All that part of the plan had worked out beautifully. Mabel's mother, Mrs. Rorke, had been kept busy and happy by Mr. and Mrs. Bangs, who recognized a clear duty when they saw one. But—there was no getting away from the fact—the rest of the program had gone all awry.

Teddy had known, of course, that Mabel would make a hit. He had felt an immense satisfaction in the knowledge, and had looked forward to Mabel's "bowling over" Rexford and Whipple and Morgan and Sanderson, the four classmates he himself most admired and looked up to. What he had not expected, had not even remotely dreamed, was that Rexford and Whipple and Morgan and Sanderson would bowl over Mabel, would annex her, would firmly and enthusiastically monopolize her during her visit. Yet this was exactly what those fellows had done—with the result that tonight, at the class dance, Teddy, who had of course escorted Mabel there, had been given by her only the opening number of the dance program. It was then revealed to him that, consciously or unconsciously, she had promised all the dances to Rexford and Whipple and Morgan and Sanderson, possibly without realizing how short the program would be. All Teddy could do was to picturesquely drape himself against a wall and mournfully watch Mabel enjoy herself. He was not even privileged to take her in to supper. Rexford and Whipple did that. Teddy saw the three pass by, a chum on each side of the girl he loved, who seemed too much absorbed in her new friends to observe him as she made her triumphal little journey into the supper room between the mighty football captain and the popular halfback. Ted watched her till she was out of sight, then turned abruptly at the touch of a fan on his arm. His mother stood beside him, smiling into his somber young eyes.

"Will you get me some supper, dear?" she asked cheerfully. "Your father has vanished with Mrs. Rorke. There's a delightful little corner off there near the stairs. Suppose you get enough sandwiches and salad for us both and bring them there, and I will hold the place against all comers until you are back."

He han planned his program very nicely

Teddy looked at her suspiciously. Was she sympathizing with him? Had she come to comfort him in his embarrassing isolation? If she was she was not showing it. Nothing could have been more carefree than her attitude, but now her voice took on a plaintive note.

"I am hungry, Ted," she added, "and thirsty, too. If you could get some lemonade—"

He was off, forcing his way through the crowd in the supper room, helping himself to plates, foraging for what food he could get, and finally returning to his mother in a rather breathless and disheveled state, due to his exertions. She welcomed him with a soft little crow of exultation which he remembered as running through his childhood and youth and accompanying her gayest moments. Under it his heart softened and lightened. He was glad to be with his mother. She was the dearest thing in the world—save only one other. Though she was the mother of the 23-year-old young man at her side, she had kept her youth, her beauty, her figure, and her knowledge of the art of dressing. He was very proud of her—almost as proud as he was—had been—no, was, of Mabel.

Mrs. Bangs ate her sandwiches daintily but with obvious enjoyment.

"You might have given me a dance, Teddy," she said, at last. "As it is, I have been thrown on the mercy of your father and a poor freshman who was led up to me and hadn't the force of character to get away. To get rid of him I finally took him to Mabel. I suppose he is still on the fringe of her circle."

Ted produced a short sound in his throat. It was what novelists might call a sardonic laugh, but his mother did not appear to observe anything unusual about it. Almost simultaneously her son uttered the last words which he had intended should leave his lips.

"Oh, no, he won't," he said. "There isn't room near the circle."

Mrs. Bangs raised her handsome eyebrows, as if in surprise.

"You mean that she is surrounded all the time?" she asked, as if she herself had not observed the phenomenon. "Well, that's perfectly natural. It's what you expected, isn't it? Mabel was sure to be a great success with your friends. You would have been horribly disappointed if she hadn't been, wouldn't you?"

Ted frowned. All this was true, but there was such a thing as a happy medium between having one's guest admired and having her altogether swept away from one. However, he was not sure he cared to discuss the matter. If he began he might say more than he wished to say. But his mother was already discussing it, in a casual voice, frequently interrupted by the consumption of salad.

"It must be a wonderful experience for Mabel," she was saying. "This is such a good salad, Ted. You ought to eat some. You see, you are the only college man Mabel has met till now. They don't abound in our little town. And the whole atmosphere here is different from anything she has ever seen. It must be simply fascinating for her to be in the life here and watch the different types. Any girl would find it so. If you are not going to eat that pickle sandwich, dear, I will. It's the novelty, you see, with a girl, and it's really Mabel's one chance to see and enjoy a phase she has not known anything about, except what you have told her. And, of course," she added reflectively, "she would be more than human if she didn't enjoy showing off before you—letting you see her effect on others. Do eat something, dear."

Her son turned quickly and for the first time met her eyes. Under the look of misery in his the expression in her own changed.

"Do you really think there is anything in that?" he asked, abruptly, dropping his guard—"that she is just showing off a bit, I mean? You see, what puzzles me most of all is that she seems so different—so unlike herself."

"Of course she is showing off," his mother warmly asserted, "and she is too young to realize that she is not being fair to you, nor courteous, either. As for those boys—"

She had said too much. Her son replaced his guard so promptly that she could almost see it slipping into position. Then, with an air of indifference, he said:

"Oh, that was all understood between us. She told me of her engagements. Now, if you'd like a turn, we might try one. The room is almost empty," he added, tactfully. His mother looked at him and shook her head.

"My dear boy," she said, "your manners need polishing. I hope you don't say that sort of thing to Mabel. You ought to copy the manners of that nice Mr. Rexford. And I hope, too," she added, as she took his arm, "that your dancing has improved. You know I begged you to take some lessons this year. Any girl dislikes to have a man dance on her feet instead of his own!"

Now the dance was over and Ted had taken Mabel and her mother back to the hotel, where the older lady had revealed a sad lapse of her usual tact. Exhausted herself, she assumed that her daughter was equally so, and had swept Mabel off to her room without giving the young couple a moment for a parting word. Teddy took back to his room only the memory of Mabel's excited eyes and her whisper, "I have had a wonderful evening, Ted!"

It was of that remark he thought now as he sat alone in his college room. It was, indeed, that remark which had been the turn of the screw. She had had a "wonderful evening"—and she had had it without him, even without the slightest realization of the suffering she had caused him. Never, in all the years of their association, had he seen her eyes shine like that. Never had he dreamed of the passion for pleasure which burned within her and illumined her face like a flame. She had the look of a girl lifted outside of herself, into a new world, a new life in which he, Teddy, had no part. What he had to face—and for an hour he had resolutely faced it—was the discovery of this new Mabel who, however much he had in common with her, suddenly appeared to have nothing whatever in common with him. If that was so—if that was so—

Ted's mind approached the thought as an unwilling hunter approaches a hurdle, but finally made the leap. If that was so, then all his past had been leading up to nothing, to worse than nothing—for life without Mabel would be just that. If he had ever had her, and he realized now how an if that had been, he had won her only because, as his mother had put it, there was no one else. At the first appearance of possible rivals she had turned from him with an ease that was appalling. She had turned to the "new types" of whom his mother had spoken—to the gay, debonair young chaps who were such a contrast to the quiet fellow, Edward Bangs, whose society was not only unstimulating but an old, old story. If that was it he must accept the fact—or must he?

It was at this point that the Big Idea began to come, slowly lifting him out of the abyss into which he had dropped. Down there he had seemed to see the end of all his hopes. If the Mabel he had watched this week—the new Mabel he told himself he was just beginning to know—was the real Mabel, then there was nothing in the simple personality of Edward Bangs to justify his longing to win her. Three days among strangers and she had almost forgotten his existence, save when he was necessary to the carrying out of her plans. Away from the new environment, far from these agreeable strangers, she might once more revert to the acquiescent personality of the girl he thought he had known. But he had not known her. He would never know her, because there was nothing in himself to call out the new nature which he had just discovered. And if after this discovery he married her, later some one else might call it out.

"Nothing in himself." Or was there? Or, if there was not, could the necessary qualities be acquired? The Big Idea was becoming more definite, for Ted's brain, stimulated by his misery and his need, was working for him clearly and eagerly. He had, it told him, his chance of losing the girl he loved, or of meeting her on her new ground, of supplementing her new personality by something new in his own. What should that something be? Obviously, something she admired—the things the other fellows had and which he, Teddy, lacked.

Resolutely, he faced the difference between them and himself. Yes, he was a quiet chap—a very quiet chap. He had always been a quiet chap, willing to listen while others talked. He would have to change that, and other things as well, if he meant to keep Mabel in his life. For example, even his doting mother had told him he ought to copy Rexford's charming manners. What else would he have to change, to drop, to acquire? That question was easy to answer. He need only to call up the characteristics of the four men who for days had monopolized Mabel, and, as it were, fit himself with the most desirable ones. There was, as he had just decided, Rexford's manner, especially his manner with Mabel—a perfect blending of admiration, respect, and at least potential devotion. He, Ted, must add that manner to his equipment. His own manners, he now realized, hod been entirely too matter of fact.

Next there was Whipple. What could he take from Whipple that would help him to be the all-'round man Mabel must have as a husband? Whipple's strong suit was his cheerfulness. He was the most buoyant and breezy of human beings, as refreshing as a cool wind on a hot day. Ted, deliberately studying himself with the critical eyes of a stranger, knew that he, too, was cheerful. He had rarely had any excuse for being anything else. But his cheerfulness was the quiet sort—the deep, underlying kind that did not easily find expression in such youthful exuberance as Whipple's. Still, he believed he could copy that. He had known Whipple for four years, and had affectionately watched him go through his paces. If he needed Whipple's best asset to hold Mabel, and apparently he did, he could and would show Mabel the best imitation of in the bacteriological dictionary. They show that were he dying of the disease today a knowledge of the germ theory would avail him naught. With all the talk of modern medicine, antitoxin, tuberculin, and the rest of them, he would die just as surely, and just as quickly. And so he would if he had the smallpox, or measles, or diphtheria, or pneumonia, or any other disease under the sun—and no germ theorist has dared to deny it. Consult, for instance, the so-called mortality report of any city. In it there will be seen recorded that in each month of every year, from say 1850 to 1904, there were just so many deaths from certain diseases. An inspection of the lists from year to year will show that the deaths from certain diseases have become gradually less. This fact, an undeniable one, is taken by the germ theorist as a demonstration of the value of his theory. 'There,' says he, 'see how the mortality has diminished year by year? See what wonderful improvement the science of medicine has undergone. See what cures it has accomplished.' And the deceived listener takes it all in without a murmur of protest. The statistician has bunkoed him completely. He has shown him a death rate and led him to believe it a mortality report. He has taken a whole population, 75 per cent of which never had any disease, and from these has wrought his mortality statistics. If he had honestly eliminated all but the sick, and had shown the number of deaths among these, he could have demonstrated nothing but the fact that just as great a proportion of sick people died in 1904 as died in 1850.

"But why, it may be asked, are there fewer deaths in proportion to the population, today, than there were in former years? In the first place, barring the deaths from cholera and yellow fever epidemics, such is not the fact. Through no fault of the germ theory there has been no cholera epidemic since 1876. In that particular year it almost decimated a great many localities. That it did not decimate the same localities in 1898 was due only to the fact that there was no epidemic of the disease. Had there been an epidemic, its mortality would have been just as great as ever. We know no more of its pathology than we knew then, and we have not a single remedy for it that we did not have at that time.

"But why, again, do we not have epidemics of cholera? Certainly not because of the germ theory. The germ theory did not build sewers in the towns and cities, and did not do away with contagious swamps and frog ponds, and the doing of these things alone has had to do with the lessening of epidemics. And just because enough sewers have not been erected and because all swamps and frog ponds have not been done away with, some epidemics are still with us, and it may be related that in a recent one of yellow fever, in some of the Southern States, people afflicted with it died as of yore. The health boards and quarantine officials called it an acute infectious disease of microbian origin, and treated it with shotguns, intimidations and germicides. But it will not die out until it gets good and ready, nevertheless..

"Even a better illustration, perhaps, may be had in typhoid fever, a disease always epidemic in the larger cities, which is generally in every year notoriously fatal. Influenza, a disease epidemically unknown to Europe and the United States before the advent of the germ theory, is today a horrible reality. It is worse than cholera or yellow fever. It is epidemic throughout the greater part of every year.

"Cerebrospinal meningitis, another disease of so-called microbian origin, is, oftentimes, epidemic in many localities of the United States. It is almost unbelievable when it is declared that the disease is more fatal today than it was before the germ theory was advanced, but such is the fact, nevertheless. In the country districts, where medical men have not had time to study the germ theory, the disease is rarely fatal. In the larger cities, where the older remedies have been laid aside for bactericides, men, women and children are dying with cerebrospinal meningitis as sheep die with the rot."

Reducing Weight

FAT comes from the food we eat and from no other source. To avoid obesity you have only to strike a balance between the food you eat and the food your body consumes. You can regulate your weight absolutely, by governing your diet, if you have the will power.

Following is by Dr. C. F. Conrad, in the International Brief:

"By reason of reducing forty pounds during the last year the editor is often asked for an explanation. In 'defense' he wishes to say, that any man or woman can do what he did in the reduction of flesh, providing they have patience and self-control.

"I reduced forty pounds—from 240 to 200, in approximately one year's time, but diet was the principal though slow method of reducing. Slow, because I could never average more than one pound per week in my reducing process, though I had cut out potatoes, rice, barley, cereals, macaroni, spaghetti, vermicelli, bread or cake and pie in any guise, pastry, pudding, ice cream, nuts, corn on ears, bananas, mayonnaise dressing, bacon, candy, cheese and soups of all kinds, indulged in sugar, butter, steaks, chops, roast beef, lamb and veal very sparingly, ate fish and fowl of all kinds except ducks and geese; did not touch pork at all; used very little alcoholic beverages, but consumed ample quantities of fresh fruit, also canned fruit, but not preserved fruits. Used no cream nor milk.

"Exercised regularly ten minutes every morning and twenty minutes every Sunday morning. I would not venture to relax much in either diet or exercise, as it is as hard to stay down in weight as it is to reduce, especially if you live a sedentary life and are over the age of 40. It is absolutely useless to attempt a reduction of flesh unless you have determination (will-power) backed up by intelligence. All machines and contrivances advertised for the reduction of flesh are useless, according to my personal experience.

"R. R. Daniels, M.D., writes:

"'There is no use for me to try to keep from getting fat. My father and mother were both fleshy; my brothers and sisters are the same. It runs in our family. Everything I eat turns to fat.'

"It is true that there is often a family tendency toward obesity; but when analyzed this tendency will be found to be a family habit of overeating and underexercising. These people are compatively inactive; they burn up less food than those who are energetic and active. The laying on of fat depends upon the balance between the food eaten and the work done. An inactive person will get fat on less food than will keep his nervous, active neighbor thin. During the winter the lean person needs more foods to keep him warm than does the person who is covered with a blanket of fat.

"The latest fad in medical circles nowadays is 'glands;' and it is not strange that we hear it asserted that glandular conditions are to blame for some people getting fat while others remain sylphlike in their proportions. It is the writer's opinion that the gland theory is being overworked in this connection. It may be that the habitually fat person has a deficiency in some of the

Cancer Is Being Successfully Treated By the Hornby Method We Know It and Can Prove It

For months we have had under our constant examination cancer cases being treated by the Hornby Method at Long Beach. We can refer to over seventy cases that have been successfully treated during that period.
We have watched many bad cases through from beginning to successful conclusion, and now, after this most complete and thorough investigation, we are convinced that we owe it to humanity to bring this remarkable cancer remedy before the people suffering with this terrible disease.
Mr. Hornby has been perfecting this medicine over a period of thirty years, and we have investigated many cases that were treated over thirty years ago and in no case have we found a recurrence of the cancer.
Hornby Associates has been organized for the purpose of making available to the public what we believe will be one of the world's greatest benefits to suffering mankind. All treatments are administered by our medical director personally, and we invite the most rigid investigation of all of our statements and of our entire treatment. Consultation or inquiry do not obligate you. Write today for further information.

FOR WEAK STOMACH—INFLAMMATION

The basic origin of indigestion, gastritis, all stomach trouble, is INFLAMMATION. Relieve the inflammation and you remove the cause of the trouble. The first dose of O-M Tablets will ease an inflamed acid stomach. "I could not digest anything," writes one. "Two doctors said my whole alimentary canal was inflamed. O-M Tablets have completely relieved the trouble. They helped me from the start."

A dyspeptic patient writes us: "First time in six months that I have held food for one hour. Milk would curdle in ten minutes and would have to eject it. Doctors said I could not get better, as I had Gastric Catarrh far advanced. Your O-M Tablets have removed every trace of the trouble." HUNDREDS OF LETTERS LIKE THESE.

TRY THEM FOR ONE WEEK

Do not over-diet. The system needs variety in food. Keep up your strength. The lack of food will not overcome your trouble. It only depletes the system. Take an O-M Tablet with your meals for a while. They cause natural and more thorough digestion. INFLAMMATION of the mucous linings is the real cause of stomach trouble, and O-M Tablets are proving a revelation in the treatment of this condition. PEOPLE WHO HAVE SUFFERED FOR YEARS ARE GETTING RELIEF.

NATURE'S MEDICINE FOUND IN RADIUM

It is a well-known fact that many ailments which do not respond to ordinary methods of treatment yield quickly to the beneficent influence of radio-active rays. The wonderful results obtained in stubborn, chronic cases that had baffled medical skill tend to show that radium is nature's own medicine for the restoration of human health.

During past years a multitude of sufferers have been denied the benefits of radium, owing to the excessive cost of treatment. Thanks to M. L. Degnen, inventor of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, this remarkable curative agent has been brought within the means of practically everyone.

There is nothing so simple, delightful or easy to apply as Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad. Worn next to the body day and night, it sends a glowing stream of radio-active energy into the nerves and tissues, promoting a vigorous circulation of blood and helping to remove congestion, which is the source of nearly all pain and disease. Its soothing, healing influence reaches throughout the entire system, gradually assisting in throwing off impurities and giving new life to weak, sluggish nerves and organs. Any person who suffers from pains or aches, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, neuritis, rheumatism, stomach trouble, disease of the heart or lungs or kidneys, liver, or bladder complaints can obtain the benefits of radium at a surprisingly low cost, by using Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad. If you are earnestly seeking health, no matter how long you have been ailing, write or call today for free literature. RADIUM PRODUCTS CORPORATION, 304 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

Whipple cheerfulness the old world could afford. For the first time in his reflections Teddy grinned. It had suddenly occurred to him that he was like a machine adding new and needed parts—he was becoming a sort of self-assembled chap, in which the qualities he most admired in his four chums were to be added to his own makeup. Rather a good notion, that, if he could carry it out—and he believed he could. He had been rather good in college theatricals. It had always been easy to take on a new role, probably because his natural one was so unobstrusive.

All right. He had now assembled Rexford's manner and Whipple's cheerfulness. What could he take from Morgan and Sanderson? Even as he asked the question the two young men seemed to stand before him offering the answers. Morgan's patter, of course. Talk was Morgan's best suit, and, while it was never brilliant talk, it was rarely dull talk. Whatever it was, there was plenty of it. No group could be dull with Morgan in it. Ted was not a "born talker" like Morgan. He preferred the role of listener. But henceforth he would talk. He could talk, quite as well as Morgan, as he had demonstrated on the rare occasions when he felt like doing it. In fact—he saw it now—he had never exerted himself for anybody, not even for Mabel. He had taken it for granted that he need merely be himself—not because he was pleased with himself, but because he had never before gone in for such self-analysis as he was indulging in now. He wondered why he had not done so. It was easy enough to see his lacks; it should be easy to supply them. It was, indeed, so easy that he now leaned forward, helping himself to a cigarette, lit it, and drew a long, refreshing whiff.

There remained only Sanderson from whom to take a leaf and the leaf fluttered before him even as the reflection came. Sanderson's role was that of a man of the world. It was a role that fitted Sanderson and which Teddy had observed with secret admiration. As he recalled it he was not so sure of its adaptability to himself as he had been of the other roles. But at least he could and would do his best with it. He would rehearse it—indeed, he would rehearse all the new roles before he publicly tried them—first by himself and then for the benefit of his family. It would be a little odd in the beginning, but he would soon get used to the effort—and it simply had to be made. Mabel's husband must be an all-'round chap. And if the new plan didn't work he would, at least, have tried it out. He would not have taken defeat lying down. With which conclusion young Mr. Bangs finally undressed and went to bed.

It must be confessed that when he awoke in the morning and slowly recalled his project, its hues seemed infinitely less alluring than on the night before. He did not feel at all like a man of the world. He did not want to chatter like Morgan or to be as cheerful as Whipple. The whole proposition seemed rather absurd in the cold light of a new day. But he clung to it doggedly. He would try it at breakfast, on the family—an appalling test, but a necessary one, for there was no time to lose. That is, he would talk a lot, and be cheerful and worldly. He was glad that at least he would not have to assume Rexford's manners until later. Mabel and her mother had announced the night before that they would breakfast in their own rooms. He had promised to breakfast at the hotel at 9 o'clock with his father and mother, and he met the appointment without enthusiasm, but with his new roles in play. He was as cheerful as Whipple, as chatty as Morgan, and almost as worldly as Sanderson. Thank heaven, there was a lot to talk about. His mother and father were interested in all sorts of details which heretofore he had not exerted himself to give them. Nevertheless he could not feel that he was wholly successful. The effect on his father and mother was not quite all that he could have wished. Several times he saw them exchange glances, at first of surprise, then almost of anxiety.

Suddenly he knew what they were thinking. This gayety, this talk, were assumed to conceal an aching heart under a carefree manner. Inwardly his father was chuckling. The boy was overdoing the thing, of course, but he admired his pluck. The elder Bangs played up to the new role good humoredly. Ted's mother's delicate mouth, however, was settling into unfamiliar lines. "That girl" was making her boy unhappy and wholly unlike himself. "That girl" ought to be brought to her senses.

Mabel slept late. It was afternoon before Ted was privileged to see her and to try on her the effects of his new cheerfulness and chatter. The effort, which would have been difficult at best, was complicated by the presence of Rexford and Sanderson, who, dropping in at 4, had settled into place beside Mabel's tea table with the affect of cornerstones and showed every intention of monopolising her till dinner time. But each experienced a surprise. Young Bangs, so yielding until now, was suddenly asserting his rights. He talked constantly, interrupting even Rexford without apology. He coolly set Sanderson right when the latter made a statement that permitted correction. He hung over Mabel with a devotion slightly tinged with proprietorship, and he maneuvered quietly but steadily until he had attached both his unwilling classmates to the sides of his mother and Mrs. Rorke.

It cannot be said, however, that he was winning increased popularity by his methods. He was merely surprising and annoying his companions. For he was playing his new roles badly. Even more than at breakfast time he was overdoing them—and to a degree that made Rexford and Sanderson exchange comprehending glances. At last Ted himself realized that the was not making a success of the Big Idea. He was merely making himself absurd. For a moment a sense of hopelessness enveloped him. Then, as he caught a look that passed between his two chums, something better than the Big Idea suddenly came to life in Edward Bangs. Without effort, almost without realization, he suddenly revealed a new personality—that of the strong man lurking hitherto unsuspected in the depths of his nature.

"We must get rid of these chaps," he coolly told Mabel under the cover of the talk between the two mothers and the restless young men. "I'm going to take you and the family to dinner and the play, and you need an hour of rest first."

Mabel, still at the tea table, gazed at him in surprise. Something she saw in his eyes changed the objection that rushed to her lips.

"I—I—promised Mr. Rexford—that is I—" she faltered.

Teddy sadly shook his head.

"Rex will have to play with some one else tonight," he said firmly. "So will Sanderson and the others. We're fed up with them. Of course they don't know that you and I are engaged to be married. That's their excuse. If they did they wouldn't be under our feet all the time."

"But we're not engaged—" Mabel began.

Teddy looked at her in surprise.

"Of course we are," he said. "We always have been. Didn't you know it? Then it's high time you did, my dear girl. And I'm going to tell the others right now."

He told them, and the little group, at first rather stunned by the annoucement, rose to it and to its social demands. True, Sanderson's man-of-the-world air was slightly blurred and Rexford's air of devotion had suffered an eclipse, but Mabel was not permitted to ovserve these lapses. Teddy, very happy and wholly at his ease, was now Rexford, Sanderson, Whipple and Morgan all in one, and he was also the new Bangs Mabel had met so unexpectedly ten minutes before.

When, at last, they had a moment alone together, she clung to him almost convulsively.

"Oh, Ted, I'm so happy," she said, "and I was so wretched."

"Wretched?" He stared at her incredulously.

"Yes, wretched. I knew you wanted your friends to like me, and that you would be dreadfully disappointed if they didn't, so I did my best. I had Miriam Armstrong coach me for weeks before we came here—you know she's the most popular girl in town—and then I acted exactly the way she does. I felt I had to make a success. I thought I would lose you if I didn't. But I couldn't have gone through it at all if I hadn't copied Miriam. They got so on my nerves—Mr. Whipple with his cheerfulness and Mr. Morgan with his everlasting talk—that I thought I should scream! And the strain of my own efforts almost drove me crazy. Oh, the comfort of being myself again! Teddy, darling, I'm so glad you're strong and determined—and restful!"

Teddy held her close. He made no reply, for it was not a time for conversation; but he experienced a dizzying sense of happiness, combined with one of incredible relief. Like Mabel, he could drop the new parts. They did not fit him. He could go on being himself—a better self, of course; a stronger self, a self fit for Mabel, and all that sort of thing; but not a chattering, over-cheerful, over-sophisticated self. He didn't want any of those things. All he wanted was what he had got. Nevertheless he had unconsciously acquired and ever afterwards retained one of his new qualities—a manner of devotion for Mabel which not even Rexford in his best moments could have bettered.

HIS BIRTHDAY

BY EDWARD E. PARKINSON

As a bit of artistry the room was perfect, the soft gray of the walls blending harmoniously with the rose-colored window hangings, the coverings of the chairs, the divan in front of the fireplace and the rich tints in the oriental rugs. A Chinese lamp on the center table threw its soft light over the well-filled bookcase lining one side of the room, while here and there vases of pink roses added a touch of beauty and filled the air with fragrance.

On the tiger-skin in front of the fire lay a fox terrier with one eye open and his ears cocked as if in expectancy. Nor was he disappointed, for the door opened and in walked the mistress of the house with a box in her hand. Tall, slender and with such graceful carriage one might have supposed her to be in the late thirties instead of the early fifties. Her gray hair was arranged becomingly and enhanced the singularly pure beauty of her face— a beauty of the spirit rather than one of mere regularity of feature and coloring, as of one tried in the fire and emerging conqueror.

As she crossed the rug in front of the fire she stooped to pat the dog, whose whole body was aquiver with delight at seeing her. Then she went to her desk and, opening the box she carried, took from it a miniature wreath of orange blossoms and set them against a photograph in an oval silver frame, on the bottom of which was inscribed, "Kate, from Billy," whispering as she did so: "Your birthday, my beloved. It's thirty years since you died, but I always think of you as I saw you last, under the orange trees."

The face that looked out through the frame of blossoms was that of a young man in his twenties. Strong, self-reliant, with a splendid forehead and dark hair, firm chin, Grecian nose and deep-set, fearless eyes, though with just the suggestion of cruelty in them, while at the same time a smile seemed to lurk in their depths. The mouth marred the face, otherwise unusual, for it evidenced sensuality. However, taken in its entirety it was distinctly a lovable, strong face and one whose development would prove worth watching.

Thirty years ago, on a certain evening in February, a curious passerby might have seen a young man and a girl seated under an orange tree on the Florida plantation of a wealthy northerner. They were lovers.

"Kate, this is our last evening together until you come north in April, and in June we are to be married. How wonderful it all seemed! More like a beautiful dream than a reality. Yet we have known each other for two years, dearest. Your love has inspired me to greater effort, and when I am with you I feel the urge to finer things. Well, soon you will be all my own, darling, and I can look into your wonderful eyes each morning. Then who knows but that I may accomplish things," he ended, taking her hands in his.

A breeze moved the branches of the orange tree, and softly, like snowflakes, petals of orange blossoms fell into the girl's lap.

"Oh, look, Billy," she said, pointing to the blossoms. "They're symbolic of our wedding day."

It was growing late as they strolled back to the house. He looked at his watch. The time had come to go. "Good-by, beloved," he murmured as he held her in his arms. "Write often, darling, for I need your letters to help me over the long wait." Kissing her passionately he went slowly down the walk toward the hotel.

In that same year of long ago, on the East Side of New York, beyond Lexington avenue, was a small insignificant Spanish restaurant, held in somewhat ill repute by the blue-coated guardians of the law. The owner, a Spaniard from Barcelona, and an ex-convict, boasted of two things—his criminal record and his beautiful daughter. The latter was a dancer, whose daily performances in one of the city's many theaters had proved a great attraction. Her beauty was of the pure Spanish type, black hair, large, liquid, dark eyes and clear olive complexion tinged with the flush of youth. Graceful and fascinating, with her soft foreign accent, she was the center of an admiring group of men-about-town, who vied with each other in the offerings of gifts and flowers, hoping in return for a glance, perhaps a kiss or a fleeting embrace. All these the senorita accepted sweetly, passing the more substantial tokens on to her father, who had once endearingly whispered that should she fail to think of him in her hours of triumph he would see that she suffered for it.

Needless to say, her lovers were totally unaware of the relationship between this alluring girl and the villainous-looking man who prepared and served such delectable suppers in a certain Spanish restaurant.

So almost nightly in the latter part of March might have been seen, comfortably ensconced in a corner of the aforesaid restaurant the beautiful dancer and her latest affinity. That their converse, limited by her knowledge of English, was, for the most part, carried on by glances and tse gentle pressure of hands, in no way detracted from their enjoyment of the rare wine and well-cooked supper over which they lingered.

"Don't forget, Billy, you promised me a beautiful ring if I would dance for your supper party at Marco's. Well, last night I danced the Tarentella for you and you said such nice things to me after it was over." The dancer paused a moment as if to awaken his curiosity, then continued. "Well, now I will have my ring—the one on your little finger. I have always wanted that ring; the stones in it are so wonderful and the setting—what is it you call it?"

"Platinum, dear," he answered.

"Oh, yes, platinum. It brings out the colors of the ruby and sapphires so well," she ended.

"Of course, I haven't forgotten my promise, my beautiful Rose," he replied with a smile. "You were so nice to have danced for me, and it was wonderful. You shall have a duplicate of my ring as soon as the jeweler can make one. This ring would be too large for you."

"But, Billy, you don't seem to understand. I want your ring because it is yours. Just to have another ring would mean nothing to mé. I have so many given to me by stupid, silly men, but your ring would mean so much—what you call a whole lot." She ended with a laugh and a ravishing glance from her dark eyes.

"Tomorrow, then, dearest, I will give you the ring when we meet after the theater, and in the meantime I will order a duplicate for myself. You see, I am very fond of it and have worn it for a long time, so while I am glad you want it because it's mine, I must have another to take its place." He ended, drawing out his watch. "Hello, it's after 1; you've missed your beauty sleep. Let's be moving."

"Not tonight then?" she said slowly in a low voice. "Tómorrow you will give me the duplicate and keep your own ring. Men are all alike, ready to promise but slow to fulfill," she ended with a sigh.

"How could I do that? Just think a minute. No jeweler could make a duplicate of a ring in a day. Only a drawing could be made in that time. Besides, if you think so poorly of me why should you wish the ring?" and he looked at her with a questioning glance, and summoning the waiter paid the reckoning and they went out.

"You're a dear old goose, and so blind," she said looking down into his eyes with one of her rare smiles.

Slowly they walked eastward, until coming to a dimly lighted side street they turned into it continuing for a short distance, then she turned and whispered:

"You must leave me here, for it would never do for Padre to see us. He is so afraid that some day he may lose me, and," she added with a smile in her half-closed eyes, "who knows, Billy dear, but perhaps he may! Oh! do look at the new moon over your left shoulder. In Spain it is so—what is the word I want—good—fortunate—lucky, ah, that is it—so lucky to see the new moon when walking with your—"

The man turned to drink in his fill of luck, but as he did so the veil fell from the dancer's face, and with the cruel look of a tiger about to spring, she drew a stiletto from under her mantilla, stabbed him through the heart, and then pulling the dagger out wiped it on the inside of his coat. Stooping she removed the ring from his finger, murmuring as she did so:

"You thought you could fool me. You didn't know I had seen the words 'Kate to Billy' cut in the inside of your ring. You pretended to love me, all the time you were making a fool of me just to amuse yourself. Well, it's I who have fooled you, and yet," here her voice trembled with emotion, "I could have loved you well, my Billy. Why did you insult my very soul by trying to buy me for your amusement! Bah! there are too many men like you; one less will save some poor coward, perhaps." She slipped the ring on her finger and glancing once more at the upturned face of the dead man she went her way.

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Diabetes

DIABETES is not a disease, but a symptom of an abnormal condition, due to wrong feeding of the body.

An Ontario correspondent sends a communication in regard to what he says he has found to be a successful treatment of diabetes. The main thing appears to be onions—and then more onions—raw, if you can, cooked if you can't.

There is no particular virtue in the onion, so far as its mineral contents go. It is low in its percentage of most of the organic salts. It contains an essential oil, which may act in some unrecognized manner upon the system.

The fact is that all raw vegetables, salad plants and fruits, are especially valuable in cases of diabetes, because that disease is mainly due to lack of minerals in the blood, and this is furnished by the organic salts in which these foods abound. The lack of certain mineral elements in the hemoglobin of the blood (principally iron and sulphur) prevents the system from taking up a sufficient supply of oxygen to burn up the sugar in the lymph into carbonic acid and water. Deep breathing is of little value as long as the blood is not in normal condition. Diabetes is generally preceded by anemia, or lack of red blood corpuscles.

The proper method, therefore, is not merely to withdraw the sugar—although, as readers know, I do not approve of the use of cane sugar in any form—but to so improve the condition of the blood that it can dispose of a reasonable amount of sugar. Otherwise, it would be like taking a light burden off a weak man's back, instead of strengthening the man, so that he can bear it.

The correspondent also says, in regard to diet: "Avoid absolutely all food containing sugar, albumen and the proteins." This, of course, is nonsense. To begin with, proteid and albumen are the same thing. Then, again, all natural foods contain albumen, or proteid, to a greater or less extent. The average human body contains twenty-eight ounces of nitrogen, which is equivalent to 170 ounces of proteid. It was formerly assumed that we need about four ounces of proteid daily, but later investigations have proven that this is far too much. Now about an ounce and a half is considered sufficient by most investigators. In my opinion, one ounce is sufficient for people doing moderate work.

It has been usual, in the treatment of diabetes, to withdraw all sugar and starch, and put the patient on a purely albuminous diet. Gluten foods have been provided for diabetics. These are starvation foods, with the important and indispensable organic salts washed out of them. They all contain more or less starch—some almost as much as ordinary bread. On a diet of pure gluten a person would starve to death, almost as soon as if he ate nothing. More sensible is flour made from almonds, which come near being a perfect food.

However, as stated, the main thing is to select a dietary rich in the organic salts, which abound especially in green leaves, fruits and vegetables. Make your diet mainly of these, and your kidneys will soon be all right, unless they are altogether too far gone. Also, be sure that you feed your lungs with fresh air daily, and night, and keep the other depurating organs active, so as to relieve the strain on the kidneys. That is to say, keep your bowels and pores open.

Remember, further, that this treatment is good for other diseases also, for all disease is one.

One of the "monographs" of Carl Van Noorden of Frankfort, Germany, is devoted to the subject of diabetes. These books were translated under the direction of Dr. Boardman Reed of Los Angeles. Van Noorden's dietetic prescriptions are apt to make a well man sick, and are therefore not only worthless, but dangerous in the cure of the disease. His daily menu furnishes about 170 grammes (6 ounces) of proteid, at least three times as much as the latest scientific investigations by Profs. Fisher and Chittenden indicate.

Instead of taking up the question of organic salts in natural foods, Van Noorden turns to the inorganic salts in mineral waters which he, in common with so many other physicians, recommends. That the use of mineral waters is injurious is hardly necessary to mention. The slight improvement which people experience at watering-places follows certain restrictions in diet, and the increased exercise through walking in the open air. As soon as these people return home and take up their old habits the disease often makes itself felt more severely. Only a radical change in the diet and habits of the patient can bring relief, and that takes time. It often takes months and years to correct faulty metabolism in the system, and restore normal conditions. People should therefore never expect immediate betterment, but learn to acquire self-control, patience and perseverance in a simple, frugal, and active life.

In 1903 Van Noorden introduced his "oatmeal cure" for diabetes, another case of mistaking effect for cause.

Van Noorden's book shows how little the subject of diet is understood, even by so-called "prominent physicians." His dissertations deal mostly with the symptoms of diabetes. As he frankly admits, the origin of the disease is still a riddle to him. The only instance where he slightly touches on an important point is when he mentions Naunyn and his school, which maintains that "the diminution of the alkalinity of the blood and tissues is at the root of the essential nature of the diabetic intoxication."

Diabetes is closely related to asthma and obesity, which have their origin in eating large quantities of emasculated, artificially-prepared food, deprived of its most essential constituents, the mineral elements. Further, constant indulgence in alcoholic beverages and tobacco, also lack of fresh air and exercise. Naturally the disease is more common among well-to-do people than among workingmen, who are engaged in muscular and outdoor work.

Here is an admission made by Van Noorden as to the futility of the laboratory methods of investigating and treating disease:

"We are all still so much under the influence of that glorious epoch in which pathological anatomy was the only mistress from whom scientific medicine could learn with profit that it is often difficult for us to realize that important disturbances of function may occur when microscopic examination reveals no distinctively pathological changes."

Dr. C. S. Carr said that every day he received pathetic letters from patients suffering from derangements, mostly of a mental character. He refers particularly to diabetes, and points out that there are two forms of this disease—"diabetes mellitus" and "diabetes insipidus." Diabetes mellitus is what is known as "sugar diabetes." In the other form, the constituents of the urine are perfectly normal, except, of course, that the excessive quantity makes it of lower specific gravity, consisting, as it does, almost entirely of water. As Dr. Carr says, this form of diabetes should be called "polyuria," which means simply too much urine. Dr. Carr points out that there is no similarity whatever between these two affections. Diabetes mellitus is as different from diabetes insipidus as stone bruise is from cancer. Describing the symptoms of real diabetes, Dr. Carr says:

"The victim of real diabetes—diabetes mellitus or sugar diabetes—is free from all nervous apprehension, has an enormous appetite, digests his food well, has no period of passing scanty urine, grows thin rapidly, and in no way resembles the victim of diabetes insipidus, or polyuria."

Waste of Money

WHY the McKinley Home for Boys at Gardena, Cal., a worthy institution, has decided to accept no more State aid is set forth in a statement issued by the trustees of the home, which says:

"From October, 1918, to June, 1919, McKinley had eight boys receiving State aid. Seven of these were half orphans and one orphan. For the half orphan we were allowed $6.25 a month and for a whole orphan $8.33, making approximately the sum of $515 received for the care of these boys during this period. The nurse or agent of the board of control, as shown by the State books, received $466.67 for salary and traveling expenses.

"The report made by this agent, covering thirty-five pages, most of which was duplicating some one or other of the other eighteen commissions, speaks of the vaccination of the boys. This is very fully covered by the health department and the medical department of the school board. Then the report recommends the cows be inspected for tuberculosis. This is covered by the Veterinary Commission. The report also speaks of excelsior matt[illegible] which did not please her. The fact th[illegible] excelsior mattresses is [illegible] McKinley derived no benefit of any kind from this inspection, and since it was impossible to comply with demands made by this nurse and the other eighteen commissions, the trustees decided not to take any more State aid.

"These details throw some light on the percentage of the State aid that really reaches the widows and orphans."

This is a sample of what is going on all over the country. Municipal, county, State and Federal "health departments," furnishing fat jobs for political doctors and their satellites, at the cost of the taxpayers, and doing no good, but rather harm.

Now that we are talking of retrenchment in State affairs, it would be well to investigate some of these so-called "health" and "welfare" departments.

Germs and Mortality

FOLLOWING is by J. T. Sutton, M.D.:

"Of all the arguments for and against the germ theory of disease, one question and that one most important of all, seems to have been neither asked nor answered. What profits it? Has the germ theory helped mankind? Has mankind conquered the germs? Are diseases less malignant because of it? Are cures more frequent?

"For thirty years we fought the dwarf of vegetation. We have deluged it in a billion gallons of a solution of corrosive sublimate. We have expended millions of dollars in the attempt to stay its growth. By health boards and quarantine officials we are surrounded and by them the confines of civilization are marked off with a line of formaldehyde. Every corner of the earth is staked with barrels of carbolic acid. And the germs we leave behind us are in duplicate quadrillions in every frog-pond and in every alley on our journey's way. And all this to what purpose?

"Let us go back to the beginning of the germ theory. What was the mortality of disease then—any disease? What is the mortality now? It is well to note here that mortality does not mean death rate. Mortality refers to the number of deaths among a given number of sick people, and not to the number of deaths among the whole population, sick and well. Has medicine, as a science, retrograded or has it improved? Do we cure a greater proportion of people sick with any disease than we cured of that disease fifty years ago? The records show that we do not. They show that the mortality of any disease is just as great as it was the year prior to the birth of the germ theory. They show that a man dying of consumption, while ignorant of the germ theory, did not die one whit quicker than he would have died had he known all the microbes

BY DR. EDWARD P. BAILEY

THERE are few sports that afford thrills equal to that of big game hunting. There are few kinds of big game hunting that call for more skill, daring and accuracy in the use of a gun than the hunting of the grizzly bear. These great lumbering beasts are endowed with all the qualities of courage and cunning that hunters admire in their quarry, and the man who successfully brings down one of these may well assume a position of prominence among his fellow-sportsmen.

It is therefore entirely meet and fitting that a man who has to his credit thirty grizzlies should be honored among his fellows as "Single Shot Grizzly Bear King," such being the title conferred upon Chester Ellsworth of Long Beach, the well-known sportsman and hunter, by his friends of the Adventurers' Club of Los Angeles and Long Beach, at a meeting of the club held at the Jonathan Club in Los Angeles recently.

Indeed, this is no empty compliment, conferred without reason, but a well-deserved distinction that few men, including trappers and seasoned hunters, have earned, for in the course of his experience he has actually brought down thirty of these huge denizens of the forests and in each instance with a single shot from his Winchester 405.

Hunting grizzlies requires more quiet, more skill and more patience, combined with coolness, self-reliance and quicker thinking than almost any other kind of hunting. This animal is the monarch of the country which he inhabits; he is really the king of beasts, for in contests with the lion, the latter has been killed in quick order. The wonderful power of life which these animals possess renders them dreadful. Their weight ranges from 400 to 1000 pounds, according to age.

Grizzly is a Powerful Brute and Exceedingly Hard to Kill

HUNTERS say there is no chance of killing the grizzly by a single shot unless the ball goes through the brain, and this is very difficult on account of two large muscles which cover the side of the forehead and the sharp projection of the center of the frontal bone, which is very thick. Chester Ellsworth's experience is, that what is needed is a powerful weapon, and he used a single shot Winchester 405, and not to pull the trigger until your sights draw on a vital spot—either the butt of the ear or on the heart. On account of the grizzly bear's terrible strength and ferocity Indian hunters entertain the greatest of respect for this animal and never venture to attack it except they are well armed and in parties of at least three or four.

Mr. Ellsworth is a thorough-bred American product. Though born in Pennsylvania, he soon heard the call of the wide and open plains and he loves the West, the home of God's great outdoors. True to the traits of the adventurous pioneer blood, he has been a soldier, blue-jacket, cow puncher, Indian fighter, government scout, deputy sheriff, merchant and what not.

It is a lot of experience that the old hunter has piled up into the seventy and some odd years that he has lived. He does not look the 70 by any means. He is still "some husky hombre"—six feet in his stockings, square shouldered and hard as nails.

Those experiences of his began a long time ago at the outbreak of the Civil War, when he rushed to the defense of the Union and was mustered into the navy. In the operations that followed, he saw active service as a member of the crew of the famous gunboat Essex. As a memento of this service, he is now a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

In those days anything west of Chicago was pretty much "wild west," with a fascinating and dangerous atmosphere of marauding Indians, stage robbers and gun fighters. Each man fought his own fight, everyone a law unto himself, relying upon his own strong arm and his gun for protection. Children were raised on horseback with sixshooters for playthings—almost.

Among those who got the "wild west" fever was Ellsworth, who, having married in 1867, brought out a young bride from Lake View, Mich., and settled in Boise, Idaho.

Indians Were no Mean Antagonists in Early Days

FROM 1877 to 1880 the Northwest was still more or less overrun by Indians who were hostile and carried on war—killing white people or taking horses and cattle whenever the opportunity offered. These small groups were not large enough to offer any resistance to the troops, but they were well provided with horses, knew the country thoroughly, and were skillful in misleading the troops, or, when too closely followed up, in concealing their own trail.

The following interesting account of the experiences of Chester Ellsworth, christened by his friends of the Adventurers' Club of Los Angeles and Long Beach "Single Shot Grizzly Bear King," was prepared by Dr. Bailey of the Adventurers' Club especially for The Times Illustrated Magazine.—[Editor.

A corner only of the Ellsworth trophy room at 424 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach

The pursuit of such marauders was hard but fascinating work. Almost anyone enjoys hunting and Ellsworth was a born hunter. The hunting of outlaws, a game where quarters were neither asked nor given, and where the hunter and the hunted were equally matched, watchful and fearless, offered peculiar attractions.

It was here as a government scout that Ellsworth gained the distinction of being the champion rifle shot of the Northwest. He won one champion trophy after another in competition open to all participants from everywhere and with any kind of rifle they chose to use, a remarkable achievement considering that rifle shooting was an accomplishment as common among frontiersmen as shimmying and fox trotting are among our young men today.

It was while thus employed that he participated in the suppression of the Bannock Indian uprising in 1873. He was connected with the command of Maj. Egbert, who afterward was promoted to general and who was killed in the Philippine insurrection. Of the men who took part in such scouting some of the younger ones are still alive, and the memory of these chases and scraps remains vivid. Told in simple frontiersman fashion, their stories possess a very great interest for people that know something about the "good old days," and not the least interesting are the stories told by Ellsworth.

Mr. Ellsworth's Collection of Tropies Ranks High

HUNTING is his hobby, as his wonderful trophy room at his residence will attest. Every year he makes a trip, usually alone except for the guides he employs from one point to another, into the wilds of the mountain regions of British Columbia. As he returns from these pilgrimages he brings with him a small carload of skins and specimens of bear, moose, caribou, elk and deer, adding to his splendid collection, which now ranks as one of the finest in the Southwest.

Chester Ellsworth in camp. This is the outfit that as destroyed by grizzlies

Altogether Ellsworth has killed thirty bears with his single shot Winchester 405, not to mention scores of other game. It is about fifteen years since he began to make his collection of hunting trophies, which now includes the mounted heads of elk, moose, five large grizzly bear rugs, several black bear skins, golden pheasants, a fine specimen of the American golden eagle, and other trophies too numerous to mention. The specimens of the Ellsworth collection have been prepared by D. C. Bryant, a nationally known Seattle taxidermist.

Were the hunter given to telling stories about himself, he could cite a number of occasions, when facing a nimble footed Bruin with no means of escape, his life depended on a steady nerve and a sure aim.

The bear skins Ellsworth has in his trophy room are wonderful specimens not only in regard to size, but the length and texture of the hair; being shot in the spring after hibernating they are naturally in fine condition.

Grizzly is Shrewd and Often Evades Capture for Years

IN HUNTING, as in other matters, it is more often than not that the unexpected happens, and this is especially so in the sport of hunting grizzly bear and it is always a matter of the hunter pitting his shrewdness and wariness against that of Bruin as Ellsworth soon learned.

Several years ago, away out in the wilds of the Canadian Mountains, 500 or 600 miles from civilization, there was a grizzly bear, a huge monster, which had been terrorizing the countryside for years. The beast had been smart enough to spring the traps of the hunters and get away, and gobble up the fat calves and young lambs of the farmers. Time and time again the trappers and the gentlemen hunters had tried to get the bear, but no one cared to get close enough for a short distance encounter.

On his arrival in the mountain regions Ellsworth and his trapper companion were told of the grizzly's depredations with a warning to be on the qui vive. This news pleased Ellsworth and he determined to add another bear skin to his collection.

Having outfitted at Barkerville, B. C., Canada, with only a hired man to assist, it was necessary to pack their supplies on their backs to the foot of Caribou Mountains, using snowshoes where necessary and carrying as much baggage as possible. Finally they reached Indian Point River and the first leg of the journey was accomplished. Sending his assistant back for the rest of the equipment, Ellsworth set out to get the lay of the country and scout around for game. He spent several days investigating, and knowing that bear come down from the mountains to the plains to find feed in the early spring, he investigated and found tracks of bear measuring sixteen inches long and eleven inches wide, exclusive of the talons. This was at about 10 o'clock in the forenoon and the snow was getting soft and he was without his snowshoes. He decided to return to camp for the shoes to follow up the trail when he discovered fresh tracks leading into the brush, and as it is the usual custom of Bruin to lie down in the thicket during midday and take a siesta, he concluded to move carefully and soon saw a large animal resting in the brush. He decided, as the cover was not good for stalking the bear, not to disturb him but to wait a better opportunity. Turning to look about he suddenly discovered coming out on a knoll just behind him another immense grizzly, which was slowly advancing very unconcerned. Moving forward Bruin elevated his muzzle and sniffed the air, and then started for Ellsworth. Coolness and steady aim sent the bear lunging on the reverse, followed by the hunter who found him dead under a fir tree, seventy-five yards from where he was hit. An expansive bullet had entered his breast and tore the heart apart. Only the intense strength and vitality of the animal had allowed it to travel that distance.

His Kill Was the Big Fellow Who Had Been Hunted for Years

ELLSWORTH returned to the camp for knives and with his trapper-assistant started back. Upon reaching the spot the trapper threw up his hands and exclaimed: "That's the big grizzly bear they have been after here for years." It weighed 1000 pounds.

Another interesting occasion and unexpected event happened on a rainy day. Ellsworth had been scouting around Long Lake in the Caribou Mountains. On this trip he was hunting alone, and passed around the foot of a range in some dense scrub, when on going around a brush thicket he met another large member of the grizzly family. They were within fifteen steps of each other before either saw or sensed the other, and both immediately came to a full stop. The bear bowed his neck and the bristles along having frequently watched the fishing episodes, made the practice of hunting his favorite game in the spring of the year, when

Strong Pull

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON in a recent discussion of war reparations said to a reporter:

"Whatever you suggest to Germany, it's too much. She can't do it. And then follow some glib excuses.

"Germany is like the girl whose mother said severely:

"'Mabel, last night in the moonlight didn't I see young Mr. Stockton stroking your arm?'

"'Sure,' said Mabel, yawning. 'That's just a habit of his, you know. He used to stroke the Yale 'varsity crew.'"

Too Much

MRS. ASQUITH said at a farewell dinner in New York:

"Women's dress has always been alluring, even provocative, but never to such an extent as since the war to end war was ended.

"An Englishwoman went into one of your Fifth-avenue shops the other day and asked to see some gowns of the latest fashion.

"'We have all the latest fashions in gowns, madam,' said the haughty saleswoman. 'What sort do you prefer—the kind that is too short, the kind that is too transparent, the kind that is cut too low in the back, the kind that is too—'

"But the Englishwoman, blushing violently, had already fled."

Hold Your Breath

HORACE S. WILKINSON, head of the Crucible Steel Company, said at a dinner in New York:

"The steel business must be very carefully conducted in these days of depression. Some of our economies are so minute, in fact, that an ignorant person, if he knew about them, would think we resembled old Uncle Peleg.

"The meanest man in Croydon Four Corners," said the general store keeper, "is undoubtedly Uncle Peleg Wiskehson. Somebody told him once that in his breathin' he took in oxygen and gave out carbon. Wall, he spent gosh knows how much time and money tryin' to find out which of them two gases cost the most. He wanted to know, by gosh, whether he was makin' or losin' money when he breathed.'"

Cost of Cussing

A PENNSYLVANIA magistrate who was trying a man for swearing at another person has unearthed this existing law, passed in 1794:

"If any persons of the age of 16 years or upward shall profane, curse or swear by the name of God, Jesus Christ or the Holy Ghost, every person so offending shall pay the sum of 67 cents for each profane curse or oath. Persons swearing by other names than the aforementioned shall pay 40 cents for each curse word uttered."

While it may seem that the money value thus placed on profanity is amusingly small, yet it might be observed that in the case of a really proficient and aroused cusser the grand total might run into figures sufficiently large to make a real dent in the pocketbook. While, of course, there is no defense to be made of cussing as a habit, yet it must be admitted that there are times when even the most careful of men might consider a few cusses even at 67 cents each a sound investment.

Ask Mother

A TEACHER was reviewing her class on a lesson she had given them on modern invention.

"Who can mention one important thing we have now that we did not have 100 years ago?" she asked.

Tommy raised his hand.

"All right, Tom," the teacher answered, "what is it?"

"Me," said Tommy.

Good Intentions

IT WAS the new curate's first sermon and he was most anxious to make a good impression.

As he was a rather vain young man, he turned to the sexton and asked, "Could you get me a glass? A small one will do."

The sexton hurriedly departed and came back with something under his coat.

"I know what it is to be nervous," he said in a kindly voice. "I've brought you a whole bottle."

"But," gasped the curate, "I don't, I don't—"

"That's all right," said the sexton, "I'd never got it if I hadn't said it was for you."

POLI NEGRI, best known to Americans through her performance in "Passion," arrived in Hollywood the other day, and was fairly swept off her feet by the succession of receptions and parties in her honor.

Just at present her command of English isn't what you'd call A-1 but she knows exactly what she wants to say and has the faculty of making you understand what she means.

For example, during an interview with a Times' reporter she remarked, "I have heard so very often that Hollywood was a very wicked city. That I do not agree although I can truthfully say I am already having what you Americans call 'one helluvatime.'"

The Hyphenites

"GEORGE HARVEY turning Anglophile? Not on your life!" said a New York editor who had worked as a reporter with the ambassador-journalist in the old days.

"George," he went on, "at a fashionable dinner at the Embassy while I was visiting him poked fun at English names.

"He said that one of the aristocratic Cave-Brown-Caves went over to New York and made there the acquaintance of a man named Home.

"Home, as he talked to his new friend, kept calling him Mr. Cave. The Englishman winced every time this happened, but Home didn't notice anything amiss, so finally he said:

"'I say, call me Cave-Brown-Cave, there's a good chap, won't you?'

"Home accepted the correction humbly. But he was biding his time. After a while the Englishman called him Mr. Home, and he said:

"'I'll ask you to call me Home-Sweet-Home if you don't mind.'"

"Don't know, sir," said Billy.

"What does your mother keep to catch mice?"

"Trap, sir."

"No, no. What animal is very fond of milk?"

"The baby, sir."

"You stupid! What was it that scratched your sister's face?"

"My nails, sir."

"I am out of patience. There, do you see that animal on the fence?"

"Then tell me what does c-a-t spell."

"Kitten, sir."

New-Born Treasure

SENATOR LODGE at a Boston dinner party said apropos of an autograph collector who had bought a fake autograph of Marlowe, the Elizabethan dramatist:

"That reminds me. There was once a New York man who collected books with autograph dedications. Most of these dedications were to himself. Open his Longfellows, his Kiplings, his Bernard Shaws, or his Maupassant, and there would be his name in a flattering autograph dedication from Ruddy or Guy, from Henry or George.

"Now, this man's friends had noticed, or thought they had noticed, a certain similarity about the handwriting of all these dedications. Probably they were wrong, but, anyhow, after he had shown a fine folio volume of Marlowe to a festive gathering one evening, he found inscribed in the ancient book the next morning the following words:

"'To Bill'—his name was William—'From his faithful old friend and schoolmate, Kit Marlowe.'"

Up Against It

BEFORE Frederick W. Steckman became the Washington representative of certain banking and financial interests in New York, he occupied just a simple office of his own, with his name painted on the glass door. Steckman had always complained that he was a sort of easy mark, a sympathetic fellow who was susceptible to more than his share of hard luck tales.

One night as Fred Steckman sat in his office alone a wayfarer came in the door, related a sorrowful tale and touched Steckman for the price of a meal. As Steckman handed over the money and exhibited just a bit of impatience he asked:

"Say, I wish you'd tell me one thing: Out of all the men and offices in this big building why did you select me and this office to make a touch?"

"Well," said the panhandler, "I dunno exactly, except that your name sorter looked easy. I looked 'em all over all down the corridor and when I came to Steckman it somehow suggested to me that here was a kindly fellow who'd fall for my yarn. And you did. I don't know why it struck me that way, but it did."

"Well, I'll be damned," said Steckman, as he turned back to his desk. "Even my name costs me money."

Right!

PATIENCE was the subject of the teacher's discourse, and to illustrate her point she drew on the blackboard a picture of a small boy sitting on the bank of a stream, fishing.

"You see this lad, children," she said beaming on her pupils. "He's fishing. Well, even the pleasure of fishing requires patience. He must be prepared to sit and wait." And she dilated on the importance of being patient.

"Now, then, can any of you boys tell me what we need most when we go fishing?" she invited.

Like one voice came a chorus from the class: "Bait!"

"What's that?" snapped the other.

"That 1700 pounds make a ton."

"'You ought to be ashamed,' my friend said to the profiteer. 'The idea of charging me $1.75 for this miserable little beefsteak!'

THIS happened at a conference of negro preachers. A visiting bishop was looking at the various examination papers, and came upon one marked 101 per cent.

"See here, Brother Jones," he asked of the worthy who was conducting the test, "what does yo' base yo' answers on?"

"One hundred per cent," advised the minister.

"But how does this man come to be marked 101 per cent?"

"Oh, yo' see, suh," answered the darky, "he answered one question we didn't ask him."

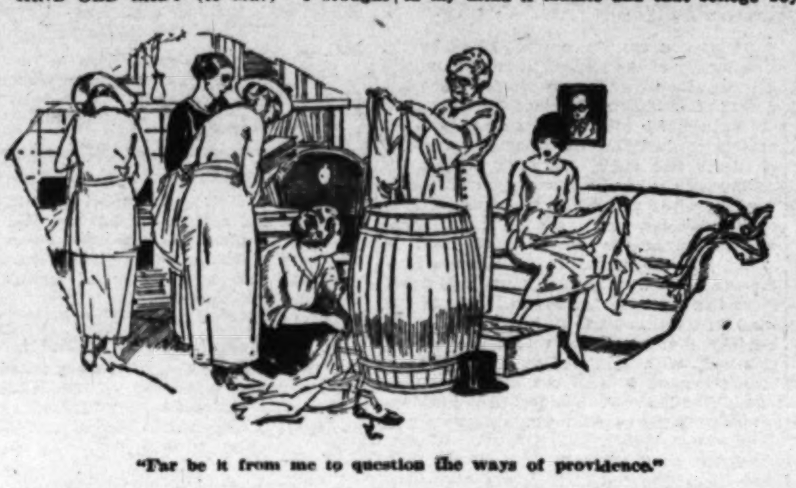
PROLOGUE

About this time each year a few of the more tender-hearted members of the Ladies' Aid get together and pack a barrel, to be sent to some indigent minister with eight or nine children out in Idaho or Wyoming . . . the scriptural injunction, alas! says only, "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep," the idea being, perhaps, to let the shepherds shift for themselves . . . never be it said, however, that the Ladies' Aid, of whom Ma Potter is one of the aidest, would neglect their bounden duty . . .

Scene I—Potter Living-room

A most interesting time is being had by Ma and the ladies, who are not only packing the minister's barrel but are discussing that subject so dear to Ma's heart—the impending marriage of Mamie and Red . . . Ma, as you know, has been unable to win Pa over . . . he believes, poor misguided creature, that a man should be able to support a woman before he marries her . . . does he not know that every man has a right under the constitution to starve a wife if he can get one? . . .

KIND OLD LADY (to Ma:) I brought some nice magazines to put in the barrel. They will help the dear minister to while away the long winter evenings.



"Far be it from me to question the ways of providence."

(Gives Ma bundle of two and three-year-old copies of magazines . . . this kind old lady never knew what could be done with back copies of magazines until she discovered they could be sent to poor ministers . . . being poor, they couldn't send them back; and, being ministers, they couldn't say what they thought.)

MRS. TOMPKINS (a born pessimist:) They say this poor man has six children, and the oldest ain't able to take care of the youngest. Well, them that has large families usually can't support them. Far be it from me to question the ways of Providence, but I do say that it does move in mysterious ways its wonders to perform.

(Carefully packs old evening gown in barrel, and one of Genevieve's slightly torn party dresses, Genevieve is 12, so this dress will come in handy for the minister's baby girl six or seven years hence.)

MA (earnestly, to Mrs. Tompkins:) Are you dead set against young people marrying before they are pretty well off?

MRS. TOMPKINS (gloomily:) I should say so! It's suicide. It's awful. I'd never let a daughter of mine marry a man unless he could provide for her bountifully. There's the Lamberts—nicest young couple you ever saw, but they married on nothing, and he had just a little scrawny salary, and they furnished their home on the installment plan, and then a baby came, and hospital and doctor bills, and he couldn't keep up the payments, and they took away his furniture, and she had to go to work, and he fell sick, and her folks had to take her and the baby, and the first thing you know there was another one, and when he got out of the hospital he couldn't get a job, and—

MA (frightened by gloomy recital:) My goodness! Think of that! I guess you're right.

KIND OLD LADY (soothingly:) Oh, it's not always so bad as that. Now, there's the Reynoldses. Nicest little home you'd see in a day's walk, and when they married they had nothing but each other. But they were young and strong and in love with each other, and they worked together and saved together and bought a little home with a little down and the rest like rent, and they've got it nearly all paid for. Just three or four more years. And happy—say, they're just as gay as two larks! And I heard just the other day that she's going to . . . (Drops voice to whisper.)

MA (happy once more:) Well, now, isn't that just fine! You know, Red is an awfully nice boy, and Mamie is so fond of him . . . they are so devoted to each other and they make such a lovely couple . . . I just know they'd get along together nicely. What you said has cheered me all up again.

MRS. PERKINS (energetic, club president type . . . very businesslike . . . knows all about budgets and things:) Only one out of fifty families lives within its income. That's because they do not budget their expenses. The woman throws it out the back door faster than the man can bring it in the front. No system. No intelligent marketing. No careful planning. And a young man has to make so much these days to support a family. It's a grave question in my mind if Mamie and that college boy can make a go of it. (Shakes her head gravely.) A grave question.

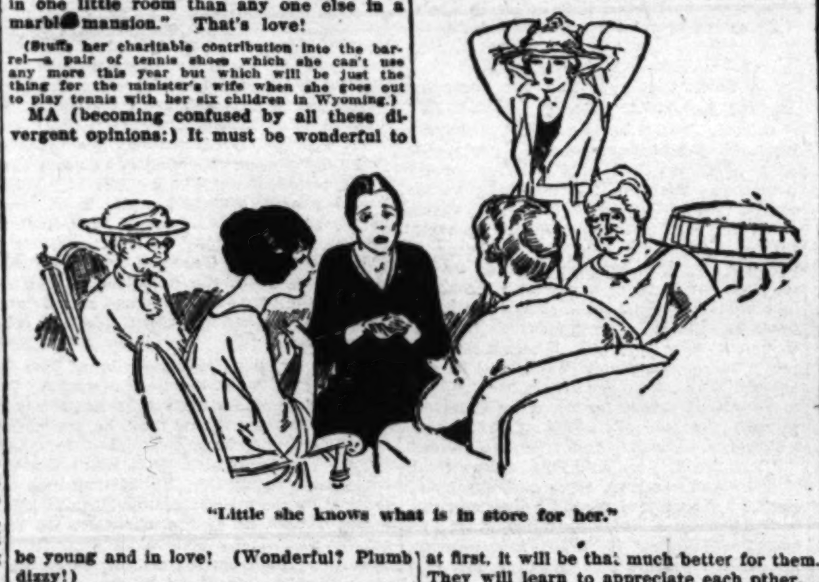
MA (back in the dumps:) Honestly, don't you think they'd get along all right?

MRS. PERKINS (carefully wrapping up five cracked phonograph records for the minister's barrel:) I'm afraid their matrimonial bark will founder on the shoals of household finance. (Ah, that's a good one. Makes note to remember that for her next speech.)

MRS. DOBIE (sentimental young thing. Still in the ogle-ogle stage of matrimony . . . has her tweetums forgot to kiss his sweetums? . . . umm—umm—umm! . . . Time! Break! Back to your corners!:) Oh, I just think it's just too adorable for words when a boy and a girl love each other so madly! I think it's just a shame to keep them apart—fussing about the cost of living, and all that silly stuff. If they love each other, what else matters, after all? Just as George says so often to me, "Sweetums"—he always call me Sweetums, you know: that's his pet name for me, and I call him Tweetums—"Sweetums," he says, "I would rather have you in one little room than any one else in a marble mansion." That's love!

(Stuffs her charitable contribution into the barrel—a pair of tennis shoes which she can't use any more this year but which will be just the thing for the minister's wife when she goes out to play tennis with her six children in Wyoming.)

MA (becoming confused by all these divergent opinions:) It must be wonderful to be young and in love! (Wonderful? Plumb dizzy!)



"Little she knows what is in store for her."

MRS. TOMPKINS (gloomily:) Of course you know lots of young couples mistake infatuation for love, and when they get married and have to meet gas bills and rent bills and light bills, and the little ones begin coming, they wake up and find that what they thought was love was a foolish infatuation, and then they begin to find fault with each other and pick little flaws they never saw before, and . . .

KIND OLD LADY: Ah, there are lots of couples getting along together nicely, and they have got a better chance when they're young to adjust themselves than they have when they get older and get sot in their ways.

MRS. PERKINS (snappily:) But they're extravagant when they are young, just when they ought to save, and they go in debt for things, charge everything, break their necks trying to keep up appearances, and the first thing you know their matrimonial bark is shattered on the shoals of finance. (Nods pleasantly to herself . . . sounded all right.)

MA (now hopelessly confused:) I guess you're right.

MRS. DOBIE (romantically:) Don't keep the dear, sweet things apart if they love each other. Love is the only thing that counts, after all. (Yes, after all the bills are paid.)

MA (brightening:) Yes, I guess you're right.

(Absently stuffs Bill's golfing knickers into the minister's barrel . . . Mrs. Dobie follows it up with a handful of sheet music which served its time entertaining the young lads of many years back . . . "When I Get You Alone Tonight," "Oceanna Roll," "Everybody's Doing It," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" . . . the little Wyoming parish is in for some charming evenings.)

MRS. TOMPKINS (more gloomy than ever:) Love's all right in its place, but I always think of the Driscolls. Mary Ryan—that was her name before she was married—she used to come over to my house—she was only a slip of a girl then, with big brown eyes. She used to ask me for my advice. I used to say to her, I used to say, "Mary, don't do it. He's not good enough for you, Mary." But she went ahead and did it; (with a bitter pause) they always do (more brightly.) But she lived to regret it. She lived to regret it. You know, they started out, and they didn't have nothing and got 'way in debt, he lost his job, and the first thing you know they was in only one little room with a few sticks of furniture, and he was down and out, and she was working to keep the little home together . . .

MA (terrified:) Isn't that awful!

MRS. TOMPKINS (warming up:) Mamie is just like Mary Ryan, young and innocent and trusting and so full of hope. Little she knows what's in store for her.

MA (depressed:) Maybe you're right.

KIND OLD LADY (with spirit:) Don't you believe it! Let the young folks live their own lives, and don't interfere with them. If they have a little hard sledding at first, it will be that much better for them. They will learn to appreciate each other.

MRS. PERKINS: It's the hard sledding during the first year that breaks up many a home.

MA (who is getting more confused and bewildered the more she is advised:) Well, maybe you're right. I dunno.

MRS. DOBIE: She's wrong. She's all wrong.

MRS. PERKINS: I'm right. I know I'm right.

KIND OLD LADY: You're both wrong.

MRS. TOMPKINS: You're all wrong.

MA (her head ringing with all the dos and don'ts and bewares and cautions and encouragements and warnings:) I don't know just what to think. I'm so worried about it all. Mr. Potter is dead set against it, and I thought he was wrong. But now I dunno . . . I dunno . . .

(Looks as though Mamie Potter is about to lose her best ally . . . how can she and Red get married if Ma turns against them, too . . . but Pa is going to talk it over with some of his friends . . . maybe they'll change his mind who knows . . . meanwhile Mamie and Red are chafing at the delay . . . they may take things in their own hands . . . wouldn't that surprise the Potters?)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

It Was

There was an explosion in the powder mill and the proprietor hurried over to ascertain the damage.

"How in the world did it happen?" he asked the foreman of the mill as he viewed the wreck. "Who was to blame?"

"Well, you see, sir," replied the foreman, "it was this way. Bill went into the mixing room and inadvertently struck a match. He—"

"Struck a match!" exclaimed the proprietor in amazement. "I should have thought that was the last thing on earth he would do?"

"It was, sir," replied the foreman, sadly. —[London Telegraph.

"Glory"

Keep me from seeking glory on this earth
While life may last
Help me to pay for years misspent from birth
For time flies fast.

Use me as thou would'st have it best for Thee
To help some one
Climb up and o'er the mountain tops to see
Thine only son.

Give strength to bear when trials swamp my soul
And swirl around
My fainting heart, and let thy spirit whole
In thee be found.

Help me to sacrifice in gratitude
Because of love
Thou poured upon me oft in sorrow's mood
Through stars above

Feed me as thou hast done on dreary waste,
When I did cry
O, God, help me to help and keep me chaste,
Till I shall die.

Keep me from seeking vain things on this earth
Or idols crave,
Be with me when I leave this old world's mirth,
And near my grave.

Autumn

Over the fields where the daisies grew
The white frost gleams tonight;
Lone autumn winds are calling—calling
Out through the woods where the leaves are falling,
And the moon shines cold and white.

Where are the roses that bloomed in the dew,
And where are the violets sweet?
Faded and gone, and the winds are sighing
In search of the lost ones, crying—crying,
And roaming with restless feet.

Where are the birds that sang in the blue
And built in the hillside trees?
Gone with the summer; their bare nests only
Hang on the leafless boughs so lonely,
And away to the sobbing breeze.

Where are the hearts so warm and true
Who loved the wildwood so?
Scattered and gone, like the birds of summer,
While memory floats where the cold winds murmur,
And sighs for the long ago.

"Passing"

Say a kind word to each other,
Just nudge up as though a brother,
And help some one like a mother,
Passing.

Do the deed now, not tomorrow,
Fight the hardest when in sorrow,
Smile if some one would borrow,
Passing.

Sing, the tears your eyes are blinding,
Hum, though every word is finding,
Spots to send your soul a-pining,
Passing.

Show all mercy to the fallen,
Bend your back and help the calling
When distress does come appalling,
Passing.

THE HOW IN HOUSES

HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF INTERIOR DECORATION

IF YOU feel very sure in the deepest recesses of those convictions from which you can never escape that you are decorating or are expecting to decorate the kind of a home in which you and your family will be best contented then you are building on rock and not on sand and all will be well. But if you are planning for a house that is too large or too small for you, too elegant or too simple, your home will not be able to withstand the flood of your mounting dislike for it. You cannot be truly happy in it.

Since it is scarcely within the strength of any of us to escape undisturbed from the flattery, praise, or blame of our fellows, we usually overstep ourselves in the choice of our houses and the decorations of them. If only we might keep in mind that the truly great are truly simple in their tastes it would help considerably to speed us on our way to genuine happiness.

Cast a Secure Anchor in the Way of a Home

TO MY mind the first essential to interior decoration is choice of location for the house. Steadily keep in mind the fact that the proper location, at your price, is to be found. If your means are limited the only difficulty is that it may take you longer to discover it than it will take your wealthier friend to find his. Yet you may come upon it quite unexpectedly, so do not be dismayed. Now all of this presupposes that you are going to own your own home. And that is best. There is so much of the tramp in all of us that we owe it to ourselves and to our families to cast a pretty secure anchor somewhere. Even with this, there will still be enough of the rocking of the ship to keep us from becoming too firmly placed.

Besides this, associations throughout a number of years with our own home, instead of with a landlord and his property are much more delightful. Also if we move from place to place our furnishings are never quite suited to their surroundings. And then, too, although this should be the least important thought of all, if we choose the site for our home wisely and build with equal wisdom we can rest satisfied that from a monetary viewpoint we have made a good investment.

Let the Home Site be What You Really Wish For

WHICH do you like best, the hills, a broad valley, the ocean? Do you like to live on a closely built-up street or do you like the open? In Southern California you may have any or all of these or almost any combination of them. Do, but realize what you really wish. Obtain it. Be happy with it.

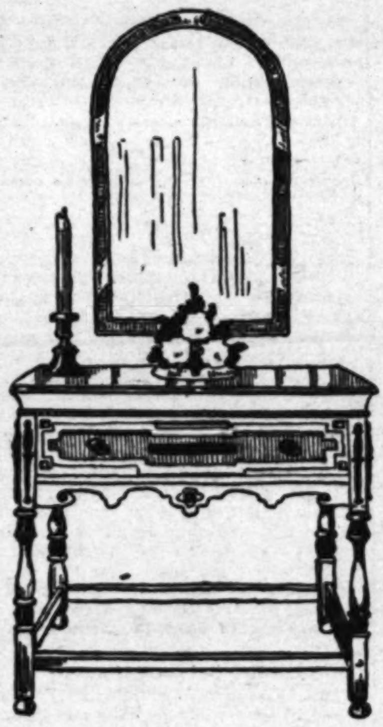
Those who wish, either for themselves or for their heirs, to make a good investment in land need to stop a little longer to study underlying causes of development. There are some keys that open the situation with practically unfailing surety.

Good advice to the home-maker of moderate means is not to make the mistake of buying too small a piece of land for your future home. Having bought your piece of land put your house in or near the middle of it, counting crosswise. Leave more space for back yard than for front yard. More and more we are realizing that living in the eye of the public is deadly to the best that is within us.

If you expect to need a larger house ten years from now, place windows and doors in such positions that additions may be made without too much remodeling of rooms already built, keeping in mind at the same time the contours of the house as they appear from without.

But do not forget that doors and windows should be placed according to their utilitarian value plus their outlook, which includes the trees and shrubbery of your garden. One nice house that I know of is built sideways on the lot in order to get the best of the scenery and the sunlight.

It is well known that square houses are most economical of building material and, in cold sections of our country, of fuel also. But in California, where the latter problem is not a serious one, do not decide too hastily upon a square shape. Since we have scenery and sunshine in such glorious abundance let's revel in them a bit even if it takes a few more dollars at the start to do it. Long narrow houses, houses with patios or with ells have much to recommend them in an open-air country. At the same time we must all acknowledge that a square may be perfectly artistic, and that with such modifications as bay-windows and tower rooms, light, air, and scenery may be fully enjoyed.



Dressing Table

So far I seem to have forgotten my subject. But this is far from being true. I've been within so many four walls where adequate self-expression was but a strenuous possibility that I find it is better to begin a talk on the principles of interior decoration even farther off than the exterior of the house. So many of us buy and build with so little thought only to find our decoration problem a desperate one.

Interior decoration is a unit, but scenery, light, temperature are essential parts of it.

In every particular in relation to our homes we should be determined egoists. In the first place the little piece of earth that is to be ours for our life-time should be suited to our feelings, the house should be an integral part of its surroundings, and its furnishings should be in accord with the house. In a home where all these things are in the heart as well as in the mind there is bound to be harmony of spirit. There will dwell peace and contentment. There will be true beauty. But if we allow others to set up our standards of values for us, if we build differently than we can afford or than as we feel there will be dissatisfaction and discord.

It has already been said that in the placing of doors and windows, views and shrubbery should be taken into account. Just as truly, in the placing of these openings, must adequate wall spaces be taken into account. The wise man and woman plan for the placing of each piece of furniture that requires wall space. Many rooms are spoiled for comfortable and artistic furnishing by the injudicious placing of windows and doors. In living rooms space is usually left for a piano, but beyond this no piece of furniture seems to get any consideration. The awkwardness might so easily be obviated by the grouping of windows instead of scattering them, and doors might be placed in corners instead of breaking wall-spaces with them.

The grouping of windows is not only more decorative and more convenient but also you will find that almost without exception it will give more light.

Let the Light of the Universe Drift In

HAVE you ever been spell-bound by the beauty of the moonlight or the sunlight drifting through your open windows or glass doors? Carefully made plans for the homes of the wealthy take into consideration the casting of daylight and moonlight shadows on floors and walls, but even though the builders of our humble homes cannot do this, we can, while neglecting the shadow, give ample consideration to the light. In Southern California the rooms most lived in should face the south. In the summer time the sun is so far overhead that it does not enter the south- facing rooms, while in the winter time the sun is so low in the southern sky that our living rooms are flooded gloriously with light and warmth. If your breakfast-room is also the dining-room, it should face the east. The facing of a dining-room that is not used for a breakfast-room is much less material. That you have the east sun in the room where you eat breakfast is more than important. Did you ever stop to consider how the morale of your family is affected by the light exposure of their home?

Since we have in mind the founding of a home marked by simplicity, all the lines of the house outside and in as well as those of the furniture should be of the straight line and simple curve type. Short, nervous straight lines or wiggly curved lines may easily become a nightmare. Fortunately the short silly lines are more expensive than their longer, more restful relatives. Let us indulge in them. Architects sometimes indulge themselves in cutting up simple plain walls with panels formed of molding. How in the world do they think we are going to make our pictures fit their foolish panels! And how much better is a simple mantel than one fixed up with little pigeon-hole shelves! And why spoil room-doors and closet-doors with decorated panels, or with any panels at all. A plain door is very beautiful.

The same principle holds in the lines of wall papers and carpets. The figure spacing of both should have no obtrusive lines unless it be in stripes on the wall paper. Yet striped wall paper seldom has a good effect except in bedrooms. Even there they should not be very pronounced. If they are too marked the pictures are at a great disadvantage and also we become very tired of their staring at us. In draperies some short-line effects are very good, but there should be enough long lines to balance them. The most poorly framed pictures are those of many curlycue lines. Most of us seem positively afraid of straight-line effects. Fussiness has become second nature to us. One of the greatest destroyers of good lines is the presence of numerous small and insignificant ornaments placed on every available ments away with the exception of two or three of the best ones. You and your family will enjoy the orderly effect this will give your rooms.

But in striving for simplicity of line do not swing too far in the other direction. Do not carry it so far that your home has a look of severity. There must be variety of line. This may be accomplished in many ways. Window and door spacing has already been discussed. But it may also be reached by the use of small or large window panes, according to the character of the variety needed; by picture molding placed close to or far from the ceiling; largely by the size of the rugs; and by the placing of the furniture. For instance, ninety-nine times out of a hundred the placing of a table in the center of a living-room will spoil the entire line effect of the room. As a general rule the largest pieces of furniture should be at the greatest distance from the center of the room. Generally they should be placed against the wall. Do not break the lines of a room by placing furniture diagonally across the corners. If the architect did his work well you are spoiling some of his best achievements. Even a round table is better placed against a straight stretch of wall than in a right-angled corner. It is bad for the table and the corner both. Give each a chance to put its best foot forward, or, at least, give the table this chance. If your dining table has four good legs let it support itself. Place the chairs against the wall.

Side Lights

OBSERVE THE RUG

Perhaps it is time to repeat once more the adjuration against having rugs laid at angles on the floor. Let the rugs lie so as to be parallel to the walls of the room and so avoid the appearance of confusion otherwise created.

STRUCTURAL LINES BROKEN

In spite of all the eloquence interior decorators have expended on the subject of hanging curtains in straight lines, without loops or tie-backs, the fantastically draped curtain is still found in many homes.

Useful and attractive pieces of furniture are those closely following the Italian credenza in line.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Ignores the Captain's Orders and Ruinously Floods Their Stateroom

"YOU ought've packed some of this stuff tonight," scowled Warren, glowering about the cluttered stateroom for a place to hang his dinner coat.

"Why, dear, I'll have plenty of time in the morning—we won't land before noon," Helen was straining after an elusive hook in the back of her evening gown.

"You always leave everything till the last minute," ripping off his collar. "Didn't you see that notice? All trunks must be ready by ten."

"I'll get up early," propitiatingly. "Oh, he's shut both portholes!"

"Yes, and they'll stay shut," grimly. "Going to be rough tonight—always is just off the French coast. That ventilator's open—plenty of air."

But the ventilator gave very little air. The one stormy night of the voyage when both portholes had been closed, Helen had almost suffocated. And now this last night so near land—surely it could not be very rough.

"What're you ringing for?" demanded Warren, as she touched the bell.

"I'm going to ask him to open one just a little. I'll be sick without any air."

"Yes, and have the whole place flooded. You can't travel like anybody else—always putting up a kick about air! Next time—"

"Hush—sh, dear, here he is!" opening the door to the steward's knock. "Steward, can't we have one of these portholes open? It's stifling in here!"

"Sorry, ma'am, but we've just had orders from the bridge to keep them closed. It's blowing up a bit."

"Hope you're satisfied," growled Warren as the door closed. "Now stop chewing the rag and turn in."

Lack of air seemed never to trouble Warren, and he was soon sleeping stentoriously. But Helen could hardly breathe in the sickening room.

It was NOT rough! Noiselessly she climbed up and peered out the thick, round glass. A black starless night, but the frothing waves, faintly lit by the deck lights, seemed harmlessly far below. It would take a much stronger wind to lash them up to their portholes.

To open one would be perfectly safe. If it should grow rough in the night she could close it.

Finding she could not turn the great brass screw, she stole out to look for the wrench with which the steward had screwed it down. She found it on the ledge under the corridor porthole that was also closed.

Back in their stateroom, the obstinate screw finally yielding, the porthole swung open, letting in a rush of cool salt air.

Even as she drank in the grateful freshness. the "Orders from the Bridge," omniously shadowed her thoughts.

But she slept very lightly. The first rising wave would arouse her.

With this reassurance, the fresh air and murmurous sea soon lulled her to a deep dreamless oblivion.

Bang! A thunderous crash! A dash of icy water in her face brought a terrified consciousness.

"Hell!" Warren's explosion tore through the darkness.

The next second he had switched on the light and bounded from his berth in spluttering, dripping fury.

One panic-stricken glance showed Helen, the drenched stateroom. With fear-weakened fingers she was trying to close the porthole.

"What in blazes?" roared Warren. "How'd that damn thing get open?"

"Could—could it have blown open," she faltered, frightened into the near-lie.

"Blown open!" shoving away her futile efforts he banged the porthole shut. "Where'd this come from?" he thundered.

Shrinkingly she gazed at the betraying wrench he snatched from the ledge.

"Your insane craze for air!" in a brick-red rage. "You ought to be put in a strait-jacket! Just look at this mess!"

"Oh, it—it wasn't rough! I—I didn't think it would blow up so quick," mopping off the dressing-table with a towel.

"You heard what that steward said about orders from the Bridge?" he fumed. "You thought you knew more'n the Captain? You—"

"Dear, don't stop to scold now—help me wipe it up! No—no, don't ring for the steward yet! Let me get the worst of it up first!"

But Warren kept a relentless thumb on the bell while he stormed on.

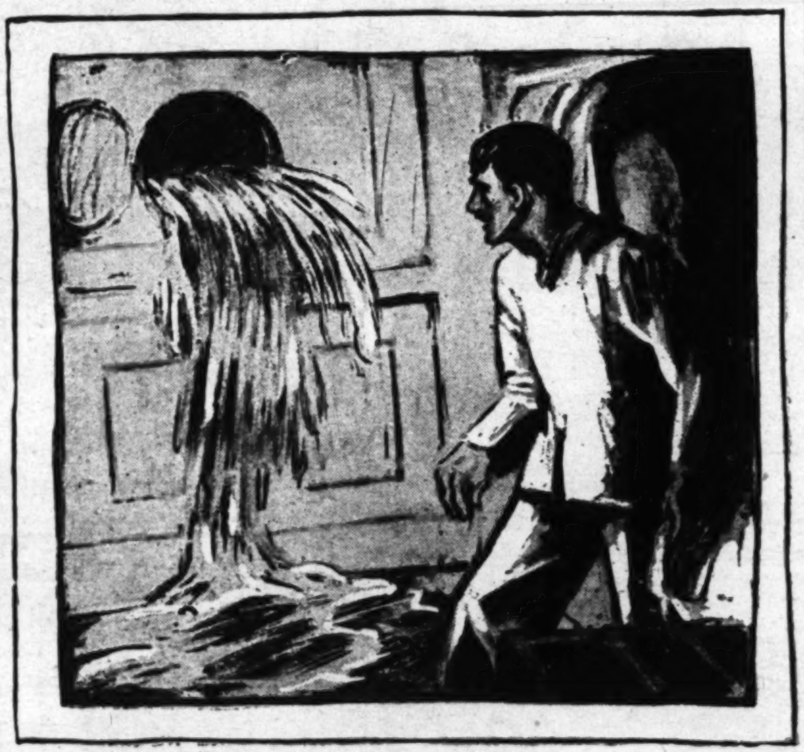
"Get me some dry pajamas. Just look at this!" clutching his wet sleeve. "Next thing I'll be down with pneumonia!"

"It's only that one sleeve—and salt water doesn't give you a cold. Here's a dry pair—you only want the coat."

With a fresh burst of profanity, he poured the water from his slippers.

"They'll dry out—it won't hurt them," hiding his drenched steamer cap that had hung by the porthole.

His bathrobe she could not hide, but she hastily shook it out with the tremulous assurance that it would "soon dry."



"Did you ring, sir?" It was the steward's knock.

"We're drowned out in here," Warren flung open the door.

In blank consternation the steward stared about the drenched stateroom.

"I don't see how this happened, sir. I screwed down those portholes myself—soon as I got the orders from the Bridge."

"Yes, but Mrs. Curtis thought she knew more than the Captain," grimly. "She hunted up your wrench and opened one."

Her crimson face averted, Helen felt the steward's gaze as she wiped off the dripping woodwork with Warren's discarded pajama-coat.

"Don't worry, ma'am, worse things than this happen at sea," the kind-hearted steward pitied her distress. "That was a pretty big wave—but I'll soon fix you up."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," almost breaking down at his kindliness. "But it was suffocating—and it seemed so smooth—"

"Treacherous waters along here. Get a lot of cross currents—blows up mighty quick. I'd better screw that down a bit more," as another lashing wave sent a thin stream trickling through the porthole.

He wiped off the water-beaded walls and ceiling, remade the berth with fresh bedclothes and changed the soaked pillows.

While Helen fluttered about trying to help, Warren, hunched up in the one chair, his overcoat substituting for his wet bathrobe, watched the hurried renovations in surly silence.

"Now I think you're all right," the steward was giving the last drying touches. "Anything else you want ma'am?"

"No, no, thank you so much," murmured Helen, resolving to supplement the generous tip Warren always gave.

When the door closed after him Warren flung off his coat and rolled into his dry berth.

Well, he was a darn sight more decent than I'd have been. All that work because of your fool stunt! I'd have felt like reporting you to the Captain. Damnation; Look at my watch!"

With another explosive outburst he extricated his watch from the soaked wall pocket by his pillow.

"Wait, let me dry it off," recklessly snatching up her silk petticoat. "It's only the case—it hasn't gone through to the works. I got in the tub with my wrist watch and it didn't hurt it a bit!"

But this proved an unfortunate consolation, as it elicited further acrid comments on her mentality.

"Got in the tub with your wrist watch, eh? Just like you. Haven't the brains of a rabbit."

Then suddenly sitting up in bed, he glared under the opposite berth.

"What's that under there? Looks like a broken bottle."

"My tooth wash! That wave knocked it off," hastily gathering up the fragments.

"Now, I'll get broken glass in my feet—can't put on those wet slippers."

"I'll get it all up—every piece," picking up the tiny slivers.

"Huh, you've made a fine mess! You can't travel like anybody else! Always got to have every blasted window open. Never satisfied until you—"

"Oh, dear, don't scold any more," tremulously. "It can't be helped now. I'll never say another word about opening a porthole."

"You bet you won't! You won't get a chance. I'm about fed up with his sort of thing. Next trip I'm coming alone!"

Through blurring tears, Helen groped for the broken glass. The neck of the bottle, the cork still in it, had rolled under the berth.

With a smothered cry she drew back her hand.

"Eh? What's the matter? Cut yourself?"

A red stain was seeping through the towel she pressed about her finger.

"A splinter of the glass!" wincing from the stabbing pain.

"Let's see," drawing her under the light. "Now hold still."

Squeezing her finger, his stiff nail probed painfully after the splinter.

"Hold still! There, I've got it, Jove, that was a nasty bit! Bring any witch-hazel? No peroxide either? Well, hold it under here."

Drawing her to the washstand, he ran the cold water over the profusely bleeding finger.

"Poor Kitten, you're white as a sheet."

His arm about her, he drew her down to the edge of the berth.

"Hurt much? It'll let up in a minute."

But he did not know that the tears which dampened his fresh pajama-coat were tears of grateful relief.

The cut finger had diverted his wrath. She welcomed the pain that brought her immunity from further maledictions on the flooded room.

Yet she wondered, as he stroked her tumbled hair, at the masculine inconsistency of his sympathy.

Why should he be so cruelly willing to hurt her mentally, to lash her mercilessly with words—yet so quickly melt to tenderness at any evidence of the slightest physical pain?

(Copyright, 1922, by Mabel Herbert Harper.)

Sleeping

Long, long ago, his hair was dark as midnight,
With no hint of the white wave shining through;
His eyes, that had not learned of age or darkness,
Were just glad Irish blue.
And long ago, when I was very little,
I used to sit at evening on his knee
And hear, with eyes grown wide and heart that pounded,
The tales he told to me.

He righted all the little wrongs of childhood,
My little woes he vanquished with a smile;
He lifted all the tiresome little burdens
Life brought to me the while.
And often, when at play or work with others
Premeditated mischief would befall,
Then he would cry, "What! Have they hurt my baby?
Your Pa will lick them all!"

But heavy years dragged long at last—and dreary;
His step fell slow, his black hair turned to gray;
His glad blue eyes grew dim, and then one morning
They said he'd gone away.
And now he's sleeping—oh, so deeply sleeping—
Where small flags droop, and pale sad flowers bloom,
He does not even know his baby's weeping
Alone beside his tomb.

He then places a third dollar bill full length over the other two, giving the package of three the appearance of four when counted from the augmented end. When making change for $5, he grasps this prearranged package in the center between the first and second fingers. This enables him to hold the doubled note firmly in place while counting. The ticket seller applied the end count several times and then passed the bills to the negro's waiting hand, not once pausing in his flow of pleasant chatter.

The self-absorbed "dusky sport" had proceeded but a few yards when he was accosted by another showman and again enmeshed in the pirate's net. I did not watch the outcome of this encounter as my friend directed my attention to an individual who had just entered.

Mr. Tightwad Buys a Glass of Circus Lemonade

HE WAS an angular, dour-faced man of middle age, who impressed me as being a cross-roads merchant. Our surmise was that here was a person whose presence was due to a ticket given by the management in exchange for a poster display in his store window. My reading of his countenance and general appearance told me that he counted his money twice before indulging in such recklessness as a circus seat. Somehow this type of being carries the unmistakable earmarks of the "tightwad." I type easily spotted by the vigilant grafter, whose resourcefulness is usually equal to extracting coin from even this brand of mankind.

The demeanor of this particular individual inclined strongly toward suspiciousness, as if a previous experience amid circus wiles had primed his bump of caution. At any rate, he glanced apprehensively at the reserved seat seller, his face reflecting the same amount of affectionate regard with which the porch-climber might view the burglar alarm, and then he passed on and stood for a time cautiously gazing at the animals.

"That grouchy simp," observed my friend, "has sure been bumped before; he seems to be as gun-shy of "butchers" as a Mexican peon is of soap."

"Grouch" made a futile effort to beg a drink of water at a refreshment booth. My friend nudged me and said:

"Mr. Grouch is sure due to kiss some of his coin good-by when he begins flirting with that 'butcher' he's talking to. He can spot an easy mark a mile off and he's always Tommy-at-the-rat-hole when a good thing comes near."

Grouch told the refreshment attendant that he didn't care for lemonade, and he stepped aside while another patron drained a glass of the feeble fluid, laid down a nickel and departed.

"I guess I'll have one," he ventured, slowly releasing a bill, which I noted bore the government's easily recognized $10 inscription, from a well-thumbed wallet and, handing it over, he took a glass from the booth attendant's hand. The butcher shot him a swift appraising glance, promptly scooped in the note, and while he raised his voice in raucous warbling ostensibly to attract others to his stand, by a series of rapid finger movements he quite innocently folded it until it assumed the meager proportions [illegible] abstraction, out of which he emerged on remembering that his customer's change was as yet unreturned, the attendant inquired:

"Say, mister, haven't you got 15 cents in change?"

"Fifteen cents," the man demanded incredulously; "you don't intend to charge 15 cents for that drink?"

"Sure thing," was the bland response; that's the regular price."

"Poppycock—regular price!" snorted the man, his choler beginning to assert itself. "Nothing of the sort—didn't I just see you charge a man 5 cents for the same kind of drink?"

Hand-made Lemonade Worth More than Machine-made

"HIS was a machine-made lemonade and yours was hand-made; you can't expect hand-made articles to sell as cheap as machine-made ones."

And as the grafter, with the bill still protruding from his hand, dipped his ladle into a bowl of the pinkish fluid on top of which floated several meager slices of lemon, he again resumed his litany concerning the charms of lemonade, the irate customer ex- - rxtobegh?Bhhe$laorfifteenhesti.fdfiarvcede ploded:

"That's the poorest excuse for lemonade I ever drank," he stormed, "you ought to be arrested for selling such stuff."

"You ginks sure give me a pain," retorted the 'butcher,' "you're so used to lapping up slop that a swell beverage tastes punk to your perverted palate."

"See here young man," testily replied "grouch," "I don't want any of your sass; I won't be called gink, either, I don't know what it means, but I don't like the sound."

"Nix on the rough stuff, simp," answered the attendant, his hard gimlet eyes narrowing to mere slits, "it won't get you nothing here—we go to the mat with fresh ginks, see?" Then, as if hailing somebody at a distance, he shouted: "don't leave with that ambulance yet, there may be one more to go in that." Then turning again to "grouch" he said: "You've got a nerve to spring a big bill like this for a glass of lemonade. You bet if I could change it I'd make you come through with 15 cents all right, you old cheap skate. Now hit the trail while the hot-footing is good," he concluded, naturally thrusting the folded note into the outraged man's extended hand, at the same time leaning forward and waving him away. The customer, white with anger, thrust the folded note into his wallet, stamped into the crowd expressing his sense of outrage more volubly than his church affiliations would condone.

Mr. Grouch Leaves Mad, but Shy Just Nine Dollars

THE transaction ended precisely the way the unprincipled showman had planned. While deliberately aggravating "grouch" to the point where his judgment and caution had virtually become nil, the crafty scoundrel had cheated him out of $9. Had "tightwad" been amiable instead of testy, he would have been swindled just the same, but the pill would have been ministered with jelly—he would have been "jollied" instead of irritated. This is how the theft was perpetrated: When the "butcher" observed his customer delve into his purse, he correctly surmised that a bill would be forthcoming, and he secretly "palmed" a $1 note which had previously been folded to the exact size that he later folded the patron's $10 bill, and placed it in a handy position under the counter. The feat of substituting the smaller bill for the larger one, is simple enough for the proficient crook. This trick is known in circus parlance as "the shove back." While extremely simple, it seldom fails.

Now came into sight an obviously amiable, sun-burned youth, evidenty a farm laborer and presumably of Swedish extraction, who need not have proclaimed his freshness from the countryside. Perhaps he exchanged the mud-stained overalls incident to his rural calling only a few hours before for the "store clothes" which served to exaggerate his husky, good-natured awkwardness. It was apparent that he was on pleasure bent, as was also his buxom, cornfed Swedish sweetheart, dressed in her best bib-and-tucker, who walked at his side. Their faces were flushed with anticipation, and as they proceeded toward the performance tent—he affecting the half-uncertain boldness of a country lad in a strange environment and she shyly clinging to his hand, they appeared not unlike two wandering children viewing the city's high lights for the first time. My companion nudged [illegible] persuasive, high-flown spiels on the [illegible] soon enticed them into the maze of money spending. Pink lemonade? Certainly. Peanuts and popcorn—naturally. Candy? Of course. It would not have been a "regular circus night" for them had it been otherwise. They were dwelling for the time in a world of wonders, under bright lights and amid scenes which charmed their senses and dazzled their eyes. As I surveyed the pair, especially the boy, and watched the various processes of "short-changing" and mulcting through which he progressed at the hands of relays of watchful sharks, my mind leaped forward a few hours to the morrow, and I fancied seeing him awakening to a dull, painful realization that somehow, somewhere—he could not vaguely guess at the hows and where—his pocketbook had been sadly "nicked."

The "Shove Back" is One of the Commonest Forms of Robbery

MY FRIEND had to dress for his "act," and as we temporarily parted, I made for the performance tent, where the arenic display was being announced by a preliminary of blatant bugle notes. Here my attention was attracted to an angry spectator who was loudly protesting that he had been "robbed." Being curious to learn the form of robbery, I pressed forward and took a seat in the bleacher section a few seats removed from his. He grew very excited as he explained to those about him how an artful dodger—one of the gang of circus thieves of course—had "robbed" him. He grew more and more vehement as he loudly called for the manager. I gathered from his excited, rather disconnected talk that, in payment of a soft drink, he had tendered the vender his last $10 bill. The "butcher," pretending to be short of change, had apparently passed the note back to its owner afterthe [illegible] ended: "Keep your money and pay me when I get back with the change." He had folded and "palmed" the large note and substituted the smaller one. It was the same "shove back" trick done under different conditions which differed slightly from the experience of the man at the refreshment booth a short time before.

Now came briskly forward a man who introduced himself as "the detective with the show." He listened with respectful interest as the man retold his story, sympathetically threw in a few imprecations of his own concerning the obnoxiousness of the gentry of crooks, and ended by offering to pilot the irate patron in search of the offending one, who had, by this time, of course been warned to duck his precious head. The "detective" was an attache of the circus whose office, on such occasions, was to pose as a thief-taker and act as a buffer between the victim and the management. The whole proceeding was a bit of stage play the pretense of which was not easily detected by the uninitiated.

But the aggrieved patron was not to be thus mollified. He stormed on and insisted on seeing the manager, and as a last resort the chief concessionaire, posing as the manager, appeared and inquired the cause of the trouble. His manner, too, was full of polite sympathy. He assured the indignant man that "a mistake" had undoubtedly been made; one that could easily be rectified. Rather than have the show's fair name besmirched, he would see to it personally that the loser was reimbursed. The man's heat quickly subsided, and together, "manager" "detective," and victim departed in amity for the office.

In circus vernacular a patron who registers a vigorous complaint is known as a balsam which he had spread out between two rocks for his bed. He lay down and pulled Pierre's blanket over him, but his fatigue and his desire for sleep seemed to have left him, and it was a long time before slumber finally drove from him the thought of what he had done. After that he did not move. He heard none of the sounds of the night. A little owl, the devil-witch, screamed horribly overhead and awakened Jeanne, who sat up for a few moments in her balsam bed, white-faced and shivering. But Philip slept. Long afterward something warm awakened him, and he opened his eyes, thinking that it was the glow of the fire in his face. It was the sun. He heard a sound which brought him quickly into consciousness of day. It was Jeanne singing softly over beyond the rocks.

He had dreaded the coming of morning, when he would have to face Jeanne. His guilt hung heavily upon him. But the sound of her voice, low and sweet, filled with the carroling happiness of a bird, brought a glad smile to his lips. After all, Jeanne had understood him. She had forgiven him, if she had not forgotten.

For the first time he noticed the height of the sun, and he sat bolt upright. Jeanne saw his head and shoulders pop over the top of the rocks, and she laughed at him from their stone table.

down to the creek and wash yourself, or I shall eat all alone!"

Philip rose stupidly and looked at his watch.

"Eight o'clock!" he gasped. "We should have been ten miles on the way by this time!"

Jeanne was still laughing at him. Like sunlight she dispelled his gloom of the night before. A glance around the camp showed him that she must have been awake for at least two hours. The packs were filled and strapped. The silken tent was down and folded. She had gathered wood, built the fire, and cooked breakfast while he slept. And now she stood a dozen paces from him, blushing a little at his amazed stare, waiting for him.

"It's deuced good of you, Miss Jeanne!" he exclaimed. "I don't deserve such kindness from you."

"Oh!" said Jeanne, and that was all. She bent over the fire, and Philip went to the creek.

He was determined now to maintain a more certain hold upon himself. As he doused his face in the cold water his resolutions formed themselves. For the next few days he would forget everything but the one fact that Jeanne was in his care; he would not hurt her again or compel her confidence.

It was after 9 o'clock before they were upon the river. They paddled without a rest until 12. After lunch Philip confiscated

The afternoon passed like a dream to Philip. He did not refer again to Fort o' God or the people there; he did not speak argain of Eileen Brokaw, of Lord Fitzhugh, or of Pierre. He talked of himself and of those things which had once been his life. He told of his mother and his father, who had died, and of the little sister, whom he had worshiped, but who had gone with the others. He bared his loneliness to her as he would have told them to the sister, had she lived; and Jeanne's soft blue eyes were filled with tenderness and sympathy. And then he talked of Gregson's world. Within himself he called it no longer his own.

It was Jeanne who questioned now. She asked about cities and great people, about books and women. Her knowledge amazed Philip. She might have visited the Louvre. One would have guessed that she had walked in the streets of Paris, Berlin and London. She spoke of Johnson, of Dickens, and of Balzac as though they had died but yesterday. She was like one who had been everywhere and yet saw everything through a veil that bewildered her. In her simplicity she unfolded herself to Philip, leaf by leaf, petal by petal, like the morning apios that surrenders its mysteries to the sun. She knew the world which he had come from, its people, its cities, its greatness; and yet her knowledge was like that of the blind. She knew, but she had never seen; and in her wistfulness to see as he could see there was a sweetness and a pathos which made every fiber in his body sing with a quiet and thrilling joy. He knew, now, that the man who was at Fort o' God must, indeed, be the most wonderful man in the world. For out of a child of the snows of the forest, of a savage desolation, he had made Jeanne. And Jeanne was glorious!

The afternoon passed, and they made thirty miles before they camped for the night. They traveled the next day, and the one that followed. On the afternoon of the fourth they were approaching Big Thunder Rapids, close to the influx of the Little Churchill, sixty miles from Fort o' God.

These days, too, passed for Philip with joyous swiftness; swiftly because they were too short for him. His life, now, was Jeanne. Each day she became a more vital part of him. She crept into his soul until there was no longer left room for any other thought than of her. And yet his happiness was tampered by a thing which, if not grief, depressed and saddened him at times. Two days more and they would be at Fort o' God, and there Jeanne would be no longer his own, as she was now. Even the wilderness has its conventionality, and at Fort o' God their comradeship would end. A day of rest, two at the most, and he would leave for the camp on Blind Indian Lake. As the time drew nearer when they would be but friends and no longer comrades, Philip could not always hide the signs of gloom which weighed upon him. He revealed nothing in words; but now and then Jeanne had caught him when the fears at his heart betrayed themselves in his face. Jeanne became happier as their journey approached its end. She was alive every moment, joyous, expectant, looking ahead to Fort o' God; and this in itself was a bitterness to Philip, though he knew that he was a fool for allowing it to be so. He reasoned, with dull, masculine wit, that if Jeanne cared for him at all she would not be so anxious for their comradeship to end. But these moods, when they came, passed quickly. And on this afternoon of the fourth day they passed away entirely, for in an instant there came a solution to it all. They had known each other but four days, yet that brief time had encompassed what might not have been in as many years. Life, smooth, uneventful, develops friendship slowly; an hour of the unusual may lay bare a soul. Philip thought of Eileen Brokaw, whose heart was still a closed mystery to him; who was a stranger, in spite of the years he had known her. In four days he had known Jeanne a lifetime; in those four days Jeanne had learned more of him than Eileen Brokaw could ever know. So he arrived at the resolution which made him, too, look eagerly ahead to the end of the journey. At Fort o' God he would tell Jeanne of his love.

Jeanne was looking at him when the determination came. She saw the gloom pass, a flush mount into his face; and when he saw her eyes upon him he laughed, without knowing why.

"If it is so funny," she said, "please tell me."

It was a temptation, but he resisted it.

"It is a secret," he said, "which I shall keep until we reach Fort o' God."

Jeanne turned her face up-stream to listen. A dozen times she had done this during the last half hour, and Philip had lislike an autumn wind that grows stronger each moment in the treetops. The murmur was steady now, without the variations of a wind. It was the distant roaring of the rocks and rushing floods of Big Thunder Rapids. It grew steadily from a murmur to a moan, from a moan to rumbling thunder. The current became so swift that Philip was compelled to use all his strength to force the canoe ahead. A few moments later he turned into shore.

From where they landed, a worn trail led up to one of the precipitous walls of rock and shut in the Big Thunder Rapids. Everything about them was rock. The trail was over rock, worn smooth by the countless feet of centuries—clawed feet, naked feet, moccasined feet, the feet of white men. It was the Great Portage, for animal as well as man. Philip went up with the pack, and Jeanne followed behind him. The thunder increased. It roared in their ears until they could no longer hear their own voices. Directly above the rapids the trail was narrow, scarcely eight feet in width, shut in on the land side by a mountain wall, on the other by the precipice. Philip looked behind, he saw Jeanne hugging close to the wall. Her face was white, her eyes shone with terror and awe. He spoke to her, but she saw only the movement of his lips. Then he put down his pack and went close to the edge of the precipice.

Sixty feet below him was the Big Thunder, a chaos of lashing foam, of slippery, black-capped rocks bobbing and grimacing amid the rushing torrents like monsters playing at hide-and-seek. Now one rose high, as though thrust up out of chaos by giant hands; then it sank back, and milk-white foam swirled softly over the place where it had been. There seemed to be life in the chaos—a grim, terrible life whose voice was a thunder that never died. For a few moments Philip stood fascinated by the scene below him. Then he felt a touch upon his arm. It was Jeanne. She stood beside him quivering, dead-white, almost daring to take the final step. Philip caught her hands firmly in his own, and Jeanne looked over. Then she darted back and hovered, shuddering, near the wall.

The portage was a short one, scarce two hundred yards in length, and at the upper end was a small green meadow in which river voyagers camped. It still lacked two hours of dusk when Philip carried over the last of the luggage.

"We will not camp here," he said to Jeanne, pointing to the remains of numerous fires and remembering Pierre's exhortation. "It is too public, as you might say. Besides, that noise makes me deaf."

Jeanne shuddered.

"Let us hurry," he said. "I'm—I'm afraid of that!"

Philip carried the canoe down to the river, and Jeanne followed with the bearskins. The current was soft and sluggish, with tiny malestroms gurgling up here and there, like air-bubbles in boiling syrup. He only half launched the canoe, and Jeanne remained while he went for another load. The dip, kept green by the water of a spring, was a pistol-shot from the river. Philip looked back from the crest and saw Jeanne leaning over the canoe. Then he descended into the meadow, whistling. He had reached the packs when to his ears there seemed to come a sound that rose faintly above the roar of the water in the chasm. He straightened himself and listened.

Philip Whittemore, adventurer, conceives a plan to commercialize the vast fishing resources of a Canadian wilderness when he learns of the construction of a railroad which will cut the heart of a rich country filled with lakes and rivers. Brokaw, Whittemore's deceased father's business partner, obtains a provisional license to operate the industry and Whittemore goes north to take charge. In his absence, Brokaw organizes the Great Northern Fish and Development Company and sells a million and a quarter in stock. Whittemore returns and is enraged to find that this legitimate undertaking has been turned into a wholesale stock-jobbing scheme. Still hopeful that the business may prove profitable to its stockholders, he evolves a plan for further development, and Brokaw backs him with the company's funds. Whittemore returns north. Brokaw warns him by letter that rival factions are plotting to wreck the enterprise. Shortly after two warehouses are burned. Tom Gregson, Whittemore's artist friend, joins him in the fight. Later Brokaw and his daughter, Eileen, arrive in the north. On a certain night, Pierre Couchie and his sister, Jeanne, friends of Whittemore, en route to meet him at their forest rendezvous, are attacked by unknown assailants. In the fight that ensues, Pierre is wounded and Jeanne, abducted. Whittemore rescues her and together they start for Fort o' God. Recalling the manner in which the name, Lord Fitzhugh Lee, his mysterious enemy, had startled Pierre, Whittemore seeks to learn his identity through Jeanne, but she denies any knowledge of the man.

"THERE is no danger of our being pursued," assured Philip, though he had left the flap of his revolver holster unbottoned. "They will search for us between their camp and Churchill."

"Citius venit periculum cum contemnitur," remonstrated Jeanne, half smiling.

She was pale, but Philip saw that she was making a tremendous effort to appear brave and cheerful.

"Perhaps you are right," laughed Philip, "but I swear that I don't know what you mean. I suppose you picked that lingo up among the Indians."

He caught the faintest gleam of Jeanne's white teeth again as she bent her head.

"I have a tutor at home," she explained, softly.

"You shall meet him when we reach Fort o' God. He is the most wonderful man in the world."

Her words sent a strange chill through Philip. They were filled with an exquisite tenderness, a pride that sent her eyes back to his, glowing. The questions that he had meant to ask died and faded away. He thought of her words of a few minutes before, when he had asked about Fort o' God. She said, "My father, Pierre, and I, with one other, live there alone." The other was the tutor, the man who had come from civilization to teach this beautiful girl those things which had amazed him, and this man was the most wonderful man in the world. He had no excuse for the feelings which were aroused in him. Only he knew, as he rose to his feet, that a part of his old burden seemed suddenly to have returned to his shoulders, and the old loneliness was beating at the door of his heart. He rearranged the pack in silence, and the strength and joy of life were gone from his arms when he helped Jeanne back to her place among the bearskins. He did not notice that her eyes were watching him curiously, or that her lips trembled once or twice, as if about to speak words which never came. Jeanne, as well as he, seemed to have discovered something which neither dared to reveal in that last five minutes on the shore.

"There is one thing that I must know," said Philip, when they were about to start, "and that is where to find Fort o' God? Is it on the Churchill?"

"It is on the Little Churchill, M'sieur, near Washiaowaka Lake."

Darkness concealed the effect of her words upon Philip. For a moment he stared like one struck dumb. He stifled the exclamation that rose to his lips. He felt himself trembling. He knew that if he spoke his voice would betray him.

Near Waskiaowaka Lake! And Waskiaowaka was within thirty miles of his own camp on the Blind Indian! If a bomb had burst under his feet he could not have been more amazed than at this information, given to him in Jeanne's quiet voice. Fort o' God—within thirty miles of the scene where very soon he was to fight the great battle of his life! He dug his paddle into the water and sent the canoe hissing up the river. His blood pounded like that of a race-horse on the home stretch. Of all the things that had happened, of all he had learned, this was the most significant. Every thought ran like a separate powder flash to a single idea, to one great, overpowering question. Were Fort o' God and its people the key to the plot against himself and his company? Was it the rendezvous of those who were striving to work his ruin? Doubt, suspicion, almost belief came to him in those few moments, in spite of himself.

He looked at Jeanne. The gray dawn was breaking, and now light followed swiftly and dissolved the last mist. In the chill of early morning, when with the approach of the sun a cold, uncomfortable sweat rises heavily from the earth and water, Jeanne had drawn one of the bearskins closely about her. Her head was bare. Her hair, glistening with damp, clung in heavy masses about her face. There was a bewitching childishness about her, a pathetic appeal to him in the forlorn little picture she made—so helpless, and yet so confident in him. Every energy in him leaped up in defiance of the revolution which for a few moments had stirred within him. And Jeanne, as though she had read the working of his mind, looked straight at him and smiled, with a little purring note in her throat that took the place of a thousand words. It was such a smile, and yet not one of love, which puts the strength of ten men in one man's arms; and Philip laughed back at her, every chord in his body responding in joyous vibration to the delicate note that had come with it. No matter what events might find their birth at Fort o' God, Jeanne was innocent of all knowledge of plot or wrong doing. Once for all Philip convinced himself of this.

The thought that came to him, as he looked at Jeanne, found voice through his lips.

"Do you know," he said, "if I never saw you again I would always have three pictures of you in my memory. I would never forget how you looked when I first saw you on the cliff—or as I see you now, wrapped in your bearskins. Only—I would think of you—as you smiled."

"And the third picture?" questioned Jeanne, little guessing what was in his mind. "Would that be at the fire, when I burned the bad man's neck—or—or when—"

She stopped herself, and pouted her mouth in sudden vexation, while a flush which Philip could easily see rose in her cheeks.

"When I doctored your foot?" he finished, rather unchivalrously, chuckling in his delight at her pretty discomfiture. "No, that wouldn't be the third, Miss Jeanne. The other scene which I shall never forget was that on the stone pier at Churchill, when you met a beautiful girl who was coming off the ship."

The blood leaped to Jeanne's face. Her soft lips tightened. A sudden movement, and the bearskin slipped from her shoulders, leaving her leaning a little forward, her eyes blazing. A dozen words had transformed her from the child he had fancied her to a woman quivering with some powerful emotion, her beautiful head proud and erect, her nostrils dilating with the quickness of her breath.

"That was a mistake," she said. There was no sign of passion in her voice. It trembled a little, but that was all. "It was a mistake, M'sieur Philip. I thought that I knew her, and—and I was wrong. You—you must not remember that!"

"I am no better than a wild beast," groaned Philip, hating himself. "I'm the biggest idiot in the world when it comes to saying the wrong thing. I never miss a chance. I didn't mean to say anything—that would hurt—"

"You haven't," interrupted the girl, quickly, seeing the distress in his face. "You haven't said a thing that's wrong. Only I don't want you to remember that picture. I want you to think of me as—as—I burned the bad man's neck."

She was laughing now, though her breast was rising and falling a little excitedly and the deep color was still in her cheeks.

"Will you?" she entreated.

"Until I die," he exclaimed.

She was fumbling under the luggage, and dragged forth a second paddle.

"I've had an easy time with you, M'sieur Philip," she said, turning so that she was kneeling with her back to him. "Pierre makes me work. Always I kneel here, in the bow, and paddle. I am ashamed of myself. You have worked all night."

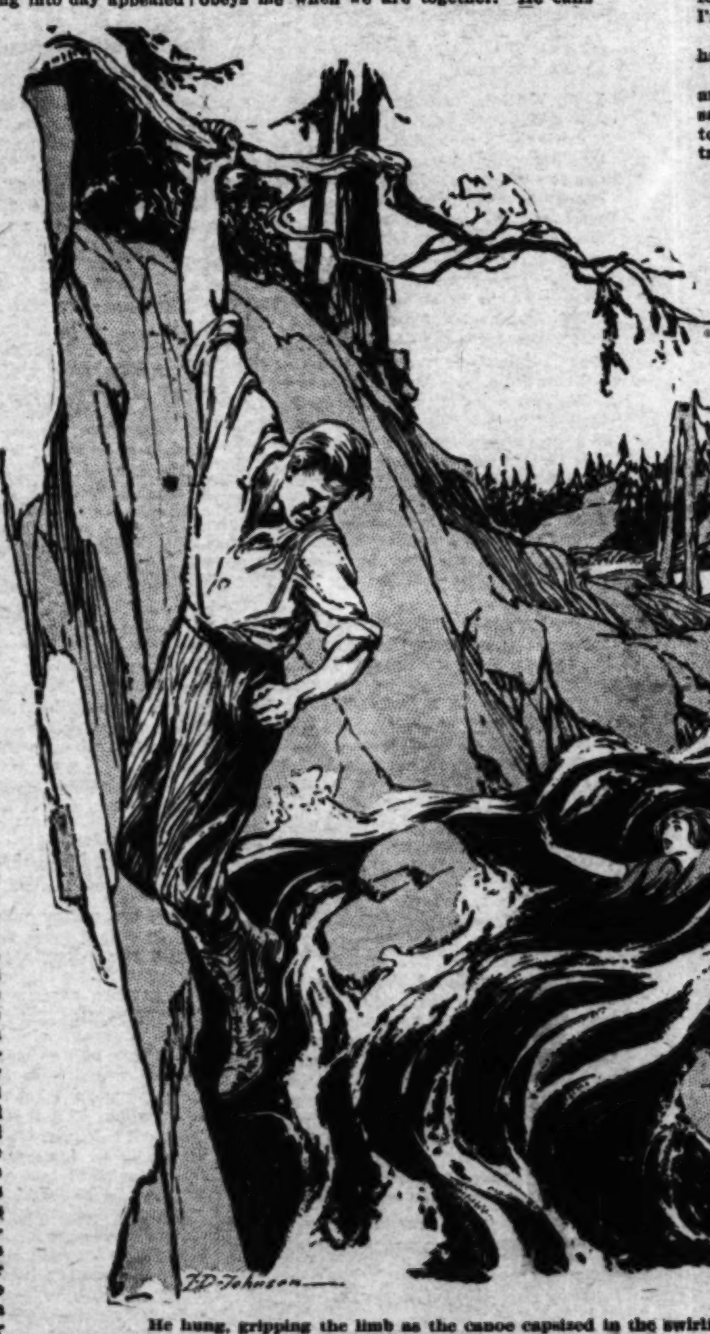
"And I feel as fresh as though I had slept for a week," declared Philip, his eyes devouring the slim figure a paddle's length in front of him.

For an hour they continued up the river, with scarcely a word between them to break the silence. Their paddles rose and fell with a rhythmic motion; the water rippled like low music under their canoe; the spell of the silent shores, of voiceless beauty, of the wilderness awakening into day appealed to them both and held them quiet. The sun broke faintly through the drawn mists behind. Its first rays lighted up Jeanne's rumpled hair, so that her heavy braid, partly undone and falling upon the luggage behind her, shone in rich and changing colors that fascinated Philip. He had thought that Jeanne's hair was very dark, but he saw now that it was filled with the rare life of a Titian head, running from red to gold and dark brown, with changing shadows and flashes of light. It was beautiful. And Jeanne, as he looked at her, he thought to be the most beautiful thing on earth. The movement of her arms, the graceful, sinuous twists of her slender strength upon the body as she put her paddle, the poise of her head, the piquant tilt to her chin whenever she turned so that he caught a half profile of her flushed, eager face, all filled his cup of admiration to overflowing. And he found himself wondering, suddenly, how this girl could be a sister to Pierre Couchee. He saw in her no sign of French or half-breed blood. Her hair was fine and soft, and waved about her ears and where it fell loose upon the back. The color in her cheeks was as delicate as the tints of the bakneesh flower. She had rolled up her broad cuffs to give her greater freedom in paddling, and her arms shone white and firm, glistening with the wet drip of the paddle. He was marveling at her relationship to Pierre when she looked back at him, her face aglow with exercise and the spice of the morning, and he saw the sunlight as blue as the sky above him in her eyes. If he had not known, he would have sworn that there was not a drop of Pierre's blood in her veins.

"We are coming to the first rapids, M'sieur Philip," she announced. "It is just beyond that ugly mountain of rock ahead of us, and we will have a quarter-mile portage. It is filled with great stones and so swift that Pierre and I nearly wrecked ourselves coming down."

It was the most that had been said since the beginning of that wonderful hour that had come before the first gleam of sunrise, and Philip, laying his paddle athwart the canoe, stretched himself and yawned, as though he had just awakened.

"Poor boy," said Jeanne; and it struck him that her words were strangely like those which Eileen might have spoken had she been there, only an artless comradeship replaced what would have been Miss Brokaw's tone of intimacy. She added, with genuine sympathy in her face and voice: "You must be exhausted, M'sieur Philip. If you were Pierre I should insist upon going ashore for a number of hours. Pierre obeys me when we are together. He calls me his captain. Won't you let me command you?"



He hung, gripping the limb as the canoe capsized in the swirli

"If you will let me call you—my captain," replied Philip. "Only there is one thing—one reservation. We must go on. Command me in everything else, but we must go on—for a time. Tonight I will sleep. I will sleep like the dead. So, My Captain," he laughed, "may I have your permission to work today?"

Jeanne was turning the bow shoreward. Her back was turned to him again.

"You have no pity on me," she pouted. "Pierre would be good to me, and we would fish all day in that pretty pool over there. I'll bet it's full of trout.

Her words, her manner of speaking them, was a new revelation to Philip. She was delightful. He laughed, and his voice rang out in the clear morning like a schoolboy's. Jeanne pretended that she saw nothing to laugh at, and no sooner had the canoe touched shore than she sprang lightly out, not waiting for his assistance. With a laughing cry, she stumbled and fell. Philip was at her side in an instant.

"You shouldn't have done that," he objected. "I am your doctor, and I insist that your foot is not well.

"But it is!" cried Jeanne, and he saw that there was laughter instead of pain in her eyes. "It's the bandage. My right foot feels like that of a Chinese debutante. Ugh! I'm going to undo it."

"You've been to China, too," mused Philip half to himself.

"I know that it's filled with yellow girls, and that they squeeze their feet like this," said Jeanne, unlacing her moccasin. "My tutor and I have just finished a delightful trip along the Great Wall. We'd go to Peking, in an automobile, if I wasn't afraid."

Philip's groan was audible. He went to the canoe, and Jeanne's red lips ised in the swirling rapids.

curled in a merriment which it was hard for her to suppress. Philip did not see. When he had unloaded the canot and turned, Jeanne was walking slowly back and forth, limping a little.

"It's all right," she said, answering the question on his lips. "I don't feel any pain at all, but my foot's asleep. Won't you please unstrap the small pack? I'm going to make my toilet while you are gone with the canoe."

Half an hour later Philip unshouldered the canoe at the upper end of the rapids. His own toilet articles were back in the cabin with Gregson, but he took a wash in the river and combed his hair with his fingers. When he returned, there was a transformation in Jeanne. Her beautiful hair was done up in shining coils. She had changed her bedraggled skirt for another of soft, yellow buckskin. At her throat she wore a fluffy mass of crimson stuff which seemed to reflect a richer rose-flush in her cheeks. A curious thought came to Philip as he looked at her. Like a flash the memory of a certain night came to him—when it had taken Miss Brokaw and her maid two hours to make a toilet for a ball. And Jeanne, in the heart of a wilderness, had made herself more beautiful than Eileen. He imagined, as she stood before him, a little embarrassed by the admiration in his eyes, the sensation Jeanne would create in a ballroom at home. And then he laughed—laughed joyously at thoughts which he could not reveal to Jeanne, and which she, by some quick intuition, knew that she should not ask him to express.

Twice again Philip made the portage, accompanied the second time by Jeanne, who insisted on carrying a small pack and two paddles. In spite of his determination and splendid physique, Philip began to feel the effects of the tremendous strain which he had been under for so long. He counted back in the bush to avoid discovery, but, at hours in the last forty-eight. There was a warning ache in his shoulders and a gnawing pain in the bones of his forearms. But he knew that he had not yet made sufficient headway up the Churchill. It would not be difficult for him to make a camp far enough back in the bush to avoid discovery. but, at the same time, if he and Jeanne were pursued, the stop would give their enemies a chance to get ahead of them. This danger he wished to escape.

He flattered himself that Jeanne saw no signs of his weakening. He did not know—that Jeanne put more and more effort into her paddle, until her arms and body ached, because she saw the truth.

The Churchill narrowed and its current became swifter as they progressed. Five portages were made between sunrise and 11 o'clock They ate dinner at the fifth, and rested for two hours. Then the journey was resumed. It was 3 o'clock when Jeanne dropped her paddle and turned to Philip. There were deep lines in his face. He smiled, but there was more of haggard misery than cheer in the smile. There was an unnatural flush in his cheeks, and he began to feel a burning pain where the blow had fallen upon his head before. For a full half-minute Jeanne looked at him without speaking.

"Philip," she said—and it was the first time she had spoken his name in this way, "I insist upon going ashore immediately. If you do not land—now—in that opening ahead, I shall jump out, and you can go on alone."

"As you say—my Capt. Jeanne," surrendered Philip, a little dizzily.

Jeanne guided the canoe to the shore, and was the first to spring out, while Philip steadied the light craft with his paddle. She pointed to the luggage.

"We will want the tent—everything," she said, "because we are going to camp here until tomorrow."

Once on shore, Philip's dizziness left him. He pulled the canoe high up on the bank, and then Jeanne and he set off, side by side, to explore the high, wooded ground back from the river. They followed a well-worn moose trail, and two or three hundred yards from the stream came upon a small opening by clumps of birch, spruce and banskian pine. The moose trail crossed this rough open space; and, following it to the opposite side, Philip and Jeanne came upon a clear, rippling little stream, scarcely two yards in width, hidden in places under thick caribou moss and jungles of seedling pines. It was an ideal camping spot, and Jeanne gave a little cry of delight when they found the cold water of the creek.

Philip then returned to the river, concealed the canoe, covered up all traces of their landing, and began to carry the camping outfit back to the open. The small silk tent for Jeanne's use he set up in a little grassy corner of the clearing, and built their fire a dozen paces from it. With a sort of thrilling pleasure he began cutting balsam boughs for Jeanne's bed. He cut armful after armful, and it was growing dusk in the forest by the time he was done. In the glow and the heat of the fire Jeanne's cheeks were as pink as an apple. She had turned a big flat rock into a table, and as she busied herself about this she burst suddenly into a soft ripple of song; then, remembering that it was not Pierre who was near her, she stopped. Philip, with his last armful of bedding, was directly behind her, and he laughed happily at her over the green mass of balsam when she turned and saw him looking at her.

"You like this?" he asked.

"It is glorious!" cried Jeanne, her eyes flashing. She seemed to grow taller before him, and stood with her head thrown back, lips parted, gazing upon the wilderness about her. "It is glorious!" she repeated, breathing deeply. "There is nothing in the whole world that could make me give this up, M'sieur Philip. I was born in it. I want to die in it. Only—"

Her face clouded for a moment as her eyes rested upon his.

"Your civilization is coming north to spoil it all," she added, and turned to the rock table.

Philip dropped his load.

"Supper is ready," she said, and the cloud had passed.

It was Jeanne's first reference to his own people, to the invasion of civilization into the north, and there recurred to Philip the words in which she had cried out her hatred against Churchill. But Jeanne did not betray herself again. She was quiet while they were eating, and Philip saw that she was very tired. When they had finished, they sat for a few minutes watching the lowering flames of the fire. Darkness had gathered about them. Their faces and the rock were illumined more and more faintly as the embers died down. A silence fell upon them. In the banskians close behind them an owl hooted softly, a cautious, drumming note, as though the night-bird possessed still a fear of the newly dead day. The brush gave out sound—voices infinitesimally small, strange quiverings, rustlings that might have been made by wind, by breath, by shadows, almost. Overhead the tips of the spruce and tall pines whispered among themselves, as they never commune by day. Spirits seemed to move among them, sending down to Jeanne's and Philip's listening ears a restful, sleepy murmur. Farther back there sounded a deep sniff, where a moose, traveling the well-worn trail, stopped in sudden fear and wonder at the strange man-scent which came to its nostrils. And still farther, from some little lake nameless and undiscovered in the black depths of the forest to the south, a great northern loon sent out its cowardly cry of defiance to all night things, and then plunged deep under water, as though frightened into the depths by its own mad jargon. The fire died lower. Philip moved a little nearer to the girl, whose breathing he could hear.

"Jeanne," he said, softly, fighting to keep himself from touching her hand, "I know what you mean—I understand. Two years ago I gave up civilization for this. I am glad that I wrote to you as I did, for now you will believe me and know that I understand. I love this world up here as you love it. I am never going back again."

Jeanne was silent.

"But there is one thing, at least one—which I cannot understand in you," he went on, nerving himself for what might come a moment later. "You are of this world—you hate civilization—and yet you have brought a man into the north to teach you its ways. I mean this man who you say is the most wonderful man in the world."

He waited, trembling. It seemed an eternity before Jeanne answered. And then she said:

"He is my father, M'sieur Philip."

Philip could not speak. Darkness hid him from Jeanne. She did not see that which leaped into his face, and that for a moment he was on the point of flinging himself at her feet.

"You spoke of yourself, of Pierre, of your father, and of one other at Fort o' God," said Philip. "I thought that he—the other—was your tutor."

"No, it is Pierre's sister," replied Jeanne.

"Your sister! You have a sister?"

He could hear Jeanne catch her breath.

"Listen, M'sieur," she said, after a moment. "I must tell you a little about Pierre, a story of something that happened a long, long time ago. It was in the middle of a terrible winter, and Pierre was then a boy. One day he was out hunting and he came upon a trail—the trail of a woman who had dragged herself through the snow in her mocassined feet. It was far out upon a barren, where there was no life, and he followed. He found her, M'sieur, and she was dead. She had died from cold and starvation. An hour sooner he might have saved her, for, wrapped up close against her breast, he found a little child—a baby girl, and she was alive. He brought her to Fort o' God, M'sieur—to a noble man who lived there almost alone; and there, through all these years, she has lived and grown up. And no one knows who her mother was, or who her father was, and so it happens that Pierre, who found her, is her brother, and the man who has loved her and cared for her is her father."

"And she is the other at Fort o' God—Pierre's sister," said Philip.

Jeanne rose from the rock and moved toward the tent, glimmering indistinctly in the night. Her voice came back chokingly.

"No, M'sieur. Pierre's real sister is at Fort o' God. I am the one whom he found out on the barren."

To the night sounds there was added a heart-broken sob, and Jeanne disappeared in the tent.

CHAPTER XIV

Philip sat where Jeanne had left him. He was powerless to move or to say a word that might have recalled her. Her own grief, quivering in that one piteous sob, overwhelmed him. It held him mute and listening, with the hope that each instant the tent-flap might open and Jeanne reappear. And yet if she came he had no words to say. Unwittingly he had probed deep into one of those wounds that never heal, and he realized that to ask forgiveness would be but another blunder. He almost groaned as he thought of what he had done. In his desire to understand, to know more about Jeanne, he had driven her into a corner. What he had forced from her he might have learned a little later from Pierre or from the father at Fort o' God. He thought that Jeanne must despise him now, for he had taken advantage of her helplessness and his own position. He had saved her from her enemies; and in return she had opened her heart, naked and bleeding, to his eyes. What she had told him was not a voluntary confience; it was a confession wrung from her by the rack of his questionings—the confession that she was a waif-child, that Pierre was not her brother, and that the man at Fort o' God was not her father. He had gone to the very depths of that which was sacred to herself and those whom she loved.

He rose and stirred the fire, the stray ends of birch leaped into flame, lighting his pale face. He wanted to go to the tent, kneel there where Jeanne could hear him, and tell her that it was all a mistake. Yet he knew that this could not be, neither the next day nor the next, for to plead extenuation for himself would be to reveal his love. Two or three times he had been on the point of revealing that love. Only now, after what had happened, did it occur to him that to disclose his heart to Jeanne would be the greatert crime he could commit. She was alone with him in the heart of a wilderness, dependent upon him, upon his honor. He shivered when he thought how narrow had been his escape, how short a time he had known her, and how in that brief spell he had given himself up to an almost insane hope. To him Jeanne was not a stranger. She was the embodiment, in flesh and blood, of the spirit which had been his companion for so long. He loved her more than ever now, for Jeanne the lost child of the snows was more the earthly revelation of his beloved spirit than Jeanne the sister of Pierre. But—what was he to Jeanne?

He left the fire and went to the pile of

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON

Asparagus Sprengeri in window boxes

NOW begins the season to garden, and to garden seriously. Though we garden every day of the year in Southern California, it is only during the wet season, when nature most aids, that all will garden. During the warm, dry summer months some considerable effort is needed to produce ideal leaf and blossom on the fundamental plants or to tease the flowering annuals into growing at all. Those who have professional gardeners easily solve the problem, but he who does his own plant growing generally lets the summer glide by without loss of physical energy expended in posy culture.

But then, gardening is for the affections and if it seriously and adversely "affects" one to garden in hot weather, he is hereby excused. But now, when "every prospect pleases and only man is vile" he should bestir himself, for the responsibility is his. It is well not to attempt too much. Better to cultivate a small area well, or to grow a few plants well, than to have much that is given but little attention. No one feels proud of ordinary results. Anything that is worth doing is worth doing well. Therefore, get the best plants, though few in numbers, or the best seeds, and tend them well. Begin with unusually thorough preparation of the soil, enrich it, plant with care, keep weed-free, water as needed and do not overdo it, and joy shall be yours.

Plant Bulbs Now

The narcissus is one of our most beautiful spring flowering bulbous plants, and thrives well in California. Some very desirable effects can be had by planting them in solid beds, and also by planting them among shrubbery and allowing them to become naturalized. They may be planted from the first of October to the middle of January, in any good garden soil, covering the bulbs to the depth of about five inches. The polyanthus varieties, of which the Chinese lily is the best known, also succeed well in water.

For many years it was considered almost impossible to grow tulips successfully in Southern California, but of late years it has been demonstrated that the late flowering varieties can be grown here with the very best of results. A shady or partially shady situation is preferable, and they thrive best in a sandy soil, well enriched with plenty of rotten manure. The bulbs should be covered about five inches deep, and may be planted from October to January, though early planting is advisable.

Spanish iris succeed remarkably well in California, and are of the easiest culture. The bulbs may be planted from October to December, in any good, light soil, three to four inches deep and six inches apart. The flowers are on long stems and are almost equal to orchids for richness and variety of color. They last a long time in water and are largely grown by florists for cut flowers. Dutch iris is a new race resembling the well-known Spanish iris, but of much more vigorous growth and flowering fully two weeks earlier. The flowers, which are very large, are of remarkable substance and produced in many beautiful shades of blue, purple, lavender and white with very conspicuous blotches on the wide falls. They require the same treatment as Spanish iris.

Avocado Association Meeting

At Santa Ana on November 4 the California Avocado Association will hold its semiannual meet. A special endeavor is being made to insure a large fruit display and all who can are urged to send or take fruits. Especially is it desired to have new seedlings of promise. During the forenoon visitors will study the fruit display and at 11 o'clock they will listen to Dr. J. Eliot Coit on "How to Make the Avocado Bear." (Some people tried to make it "Alligator." Ed.) At noon there will be a luncheon at a dollar per. As seating capacity is limited to 400, you are expected to make reservations early. The program states that at 2 o'clock Dr. A. B. Stout of Pomona College will speak on "Pollination to Make the Avocado Bear." (This is another bear.) Next is K. A. Ryerson, who will tell how fertilization will make the avocado tree "bear." Following this the following persons will present five-minute papers on "How to Make the Avocado Tree Bear." (The bear has now become a bull.) The speakers are all well known in "Avocadodom:" C. V. Newman, T. J. Walker, Dr. H. J. Webber, E. C. Dutton, R. W. Hodgson, C. F. Kinman. Everybody who is in any way interested in avocados is welcome. Remember the place and date—St. Ann's Inn, Santa Ana, Nov. 4, 1922.

Avocadan Abroad

W. A. Spinks, well-known avocado grower of Duarte, in a letter from Gothenburg, Sweden, says: "This is a city of many beautiful parks. You would revel in it. I have never seen elsewhere so much space devoted to parks. The town is clean, the people well dressed and good looking, but the proportion of blondes is no greater than to be seen in Los Angeles. (We have all the peroxide.—Ed.) This is a beautiful and charming country of fine, wholesome people. We go to Stockholm, next, and will be home in December."

Why?

Why should some plants have alternate leaves on the branches while others have opposite leaves? What purpose in nature is served by one or the other? Why is it that nearly all American trees have alternated leaves? But three tree families have opposite leaves—ashes, maples, horse chestnuts. In no other way do they differ from the trees about them, therefore, why?

Culling as Related to Robust Breeding Stock

PROLIFICNESS NOT EVERYTHING. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG

First Dark Cornish Cock

At recent Southern California Fair at Riverside, F. S. Farner, Rialto, exhibitor

CULLING is ever an interesting and popular phase of poultry culture—and what is of larger significance it results in larger commercial values. The time to cull is all the time, for certain it is that faulty specimens are always cropping up in a growing flock; the sooner such are removed the better. Naturally all weaklings, those showing constitutional defects, those that show faults that make for disqualifications in the Standard of Perfection, have no place in a nice even flock of pure-bred fowl. From a breeding point of view and exhibition qualities, culling of late years has been more along productive and economic lines, which has many virtues and also some possible defects. To breed from prolific hens at first glance seems good practice, but an exhausted bird is quite apt to be wanting in stamina and virility in the breeding pen; when to this is added careless culling, chicks of weakened vitality are liable to result. Prof. Rice of Cornell University, during his recent visit to California, warned the poultry breeders against dangers from this quarter. In his talks with breeders he was quite emphatic in calling attention to the urgency of allowing heavy laying hens, selected for breeding purposes, a period of rest and recuperation from the drain caused by heavy laying. In the regions of ice and snow this is brought about by climatic conditions—the production of hen fruit always being light during the severe cold weather of eastern winters; in California, however, this is hot nearly so pronounced, consequently Prof. Rice's note of warning is all the more significant here. Obviously, the experienced breeder in California knows this, and as a consequence many do not use the high layers in the breeding pen at all, finding it better practice to mate specimens of recognized quality from the same strain and ancestry rather than the actual high-producing specimens themselves.

Melv'n W. Buster, assistant farm adviser in Sonoma county (where poultry culture is dominant in rural activities,) lays down the following five points to secure virility and robust breeding qualitics in growing stock:

(1.) Careful culling to eliminate the poor producers and weak hens during the summer and early fall.

(2.) A good supply of succulent green feed, particularly during the late fall, winter and early spring.

(3.) Plenty of room in the houses—preferably two and one-half square feet per bird of floor space, together with plenty of yardage.

(4.) Good sanitation. Keeping the birds free from lice and mites. Keeping the litter clean and dry and cleaning the dropping boards at least once a week, preferably twice a week.

(5.) No forcing or stimulating feeds such as wet mash, relishes, condiments and high protein feeds, which will tend to stimulate higher egg production during the fall and early winter particularly. Naturally the best clean feed is important. It is possible that diluting the mash somewhat with bran for the sake of the laxative effect as well as diluting the richness of the mash and feeding somewhat heavier of grains may be advisable.

In this connection it is interesting to note a growing intention among some breeders to return to the practice of doing their own hatching with incubators. For this there can be no other excuse than that they have been disappointed with stock and chicks received from the professional hatcheries, which, if true, is regrettable. Other things being equal, it is, in our opinion, good economy for the egg farmer to secure his replenishment for his flocks from the commercial hatcheries, either as day-old chicks or as pullets "on their feet." Should there be a general return to breeders doing their own hatching, it will greatly modify present practices and lines of activity, not only on the poultry farms, but in the incubator business also; it would result in the larger sale of small machines, which has in certain directions been somewhat negligible. It is an evidence that poultry breeders are beginning to appreciate that prolificness at the expense of robust breeding qualities and stamina in growing stock is anything but a desirable quality.

Faking Exhibition Birds

With the show season in full swing all over the country, it is again timely to call attention to the villainous practice of faking. Often this is more the result of ignorance and indifference to fine points of honor and a healthy sportsmanship, than a malicious intention to deceive. Every experienced breeder grooms and "dolls up" his exhibition specimens, and within certain limits this is right and proper; but when it verges into deception, and passing off spurious coin of the breeding pen, it becomes a crime. To clarify the situation, the American Poultry Association has specifically declared faking to consist of any one of the following counts:

Red Pyle Game Bantam

First cockerel in class at Southern California Fair. Shown by W. M. Clarke, Los Angeles.

(1.) When sickles or main tail feathers are obviously bent or broken down.

(2.) When saddle feathers are obviously crimped or broken back.

(3.) When there is evidence of artificial coloring of lobes, faces, beaks, toes, shanks or plumage.

(4.) When white is removed from red lobes or red face.

(5.) When red in a white face or ear lobes is colored or removed.

(6.) When there is evidence of an alteration to cover a disqualification.

(7.) When a feather formation is pulled that leaves a hole or evidence of same in the shank or toe.

(8.) When any white bird has gone through any process or treatment which leaves the skin in an irritated state or inflamed condition, or leaves the feathers brittle, or destroys the natural life and appearance of the feathers, it shall be considered as faked.

(9.) When any colored or parti-colored bird has been dyed or subjected to any process which has resulted in evidently deepening the tone of the plumage color, or evidently altering, softening or intensifying the shade and tone of the plumage color, it shall be considered faked.

Note on 8 and 9. The appearance and condition of the plumage shall be sufficient evidence to justify the action of the judge.

(10.) Singing feathers is faking.

(11.) Dying feathers is faking.

(12.) Using artificial color on any parts of the bird is faking.

(13.) Cutting, trimming, fixing or mutilating any section of the bird is faking.

Note: It shall not be considered faking to pull occasional undesirable feathers in any variety except sickle, main tail, primary or secondary feathers. In case they are missing they shall be cut as required by the standard.

Let this be a note of warning to intending exhibitors and at the same time an admonition to judges to penalize the bird that shows evidences of faking by its owner.

Advertising the Nutritive Egg

Readers of this page will recall the frequent references that have been made advising poultry breeders and dealers to advertise the nutritive value of eggs as a food in the human dietary, and calling attention to what has been accomplished in the same direction with many of our fruit food products. Insofar as tangible results are concerned, but little ever came of it, excepting that breeders quite generally indorsed the idea in a tentative sort of a way. The organized poultrymen in the San Francisco bay region, however, have taken hold of the proposition, and advertisements are now appearing in the San Francisco papers advocating the wider consumption of hen fruit, informing the public of its nutritive values, assimulative and digestible qualities. Some of the dailies are holding so-called "Egg Contests," to which readers are asked to contribute their reasons why more eggs should be used, the idea being that with this information in available form, the public will be educated to the economic use of more eggs in both public places and private families. Breeders will watch the results of this campaign with interest; our own judgment is that if intelligently and forcibly carried out, it will prove a good investment. An additional consumption of only half an egg a day per capita of population as a result of this sort of general publicity, would clean up surplus stocks in a little while, and so strengthen the market that food prices to producers would be maintained.

A Rangey Hen has an Experience

The country hen was feeling blue. Worms and bugs were scarce and getting scarcer, with all the young stuff coming on to grab them from under her eyes. There were not many seeds to be had, either; it looked as though the chicks of all hatches gleaned the wheat and oat fields before Mrs. Hen could get out. Of course, she could not lay eggs on grit and water, and that was all she was getting in abundance, though her owner did say her chickens were on range so she no longer had to feed them.

First At Riverside Fair

Black Tailed Japanese Bantam hen, exhibited by Mrs. Ben Davis, Cucamonga.

"Sure I'm on range," the country hen grouched. "I range from morning till night, but my crop has not been full since that last hatch came off."

One day along came a lady from town. "I wonder," she said to Mrs. Farmer, "if you will sell me a hen for Sunday dinner. I keep a few chickens myself, but they are laying so well I don't want to kill them. I got six eggs from six hens yesterday."

That night found the country hen in town. Her buyer looked her over for lice and signs of disease, searched in vain for a barrel or box under which to keep her and finally turned her loose with the other hens.

The newcomer was hungry. "Any worms or bugs around here?" she inquired promptly.

The town hens looked at her languidly. "We don't use them," one hen drawled. "There's green cut bone and beef scrap, milk or cottage cheese from which from time to time we get our nitrogenous material. Help yourself to whatever is in the hopper."

The country hen was not bashful. When she had eaten her fill of protein, she queried: "How about grain?"

One town hen looked at the others. "What is the menu this evening?"

"If it isn't wheat, it's oats or corn or barley—maybe a mixture," was the answer.

"Whatever it is, it's better than the range," the country hen declared.

"Before you ask about the green food," spoke up a hen in the corner, "let me tell you we get lettuce, cabbage, kale, mangels, alfalfa, clover and sprouted oats at our place, and all the water we can drink—clean water, mind—and grit and oyster shell. How long are you going to stay?"

"Forever," said the country hen; "if I have my way about it, but I figure that to stay I've got to lay."

Which, of course, she did, for before the lady was ready to kill her hen for the Sunday dinner, she was heard to to remark:

"I think I had better order a Swiss steak for Sunday dinner. I have seven hens in the hen house, and today I got seven eggs."—[Wallace's Farmer.

Grading Hen Fruit by Machinery

During the past two years important advances have been made in the matter of cleaning and sterilizing eggs, both operations being done by specially made machinery, to which attention has already been called in these columns. Now comes the news from New York of the invention of a machine to grade hen fruit, with a capacity of from 200 cases to a carload of eggs per day. In describing it the New York Produce News says that it is so systematic that the labor saving is from 25 to 30 per cent in comparison with the present system, and that in addition a positively uniform pack is assured. A machine twelve feet long has a capacity of 200 cases a day and requires three men, one to see that the eggs are fed in the machine properly, one to examine and grade them, picking out the defective ones and replacing them with good ones, and a third man to see that the good eggs are returned to the cases. A grades eighteen feet long has a capacity of 300 cases a day and one twenty-four feet long can take care of a car of eggs a day. The larger the machine the more men needed to operate it.

An entire layer of a case of eggs is fed into the machine at a time from one end of the machine. The eggs are carried in baskets, after the flats and fillers have been removed, toward the other end of the machine. The baskets are of metal and are propelled by hand along a metal slide. At the center of the machine, and just below where the eggs pass, is a box containing electric lights, for the purpose of candling the eggs. In this manner, the rots, spots and checks are easily discernible. They are picked out and good eggs are substituted for them, so that, by the time the trays reach the far end of the slide, they contain an entire layer of good eggs.

At this end, flats and fillers are placed on top of the eggs, which are quickly inverted by another operation, so that they go into the case right side up.

Here we have another example of the resourcefulness of business. As enterprises grow, the means of their economic operation is also developed.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 29, 1922.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Our County Fair

THE first annual Los Angeles County Fair, held at Pomona from October 17 to 21, inclusive, was not only one of the finest agricultural and industrial expositions ever held in Southern California, but one of the most notable "first-effort" events of its kind ever seen in the West. The Pomona people want not only an annual Los Angeles County Fair that shall be a real county fair in every sense of the word, but they want that fair to be a Pomona institution. They are so dead in earnest about it, too, that they have signalized their ambition by providing a permanent site in an attractive location near the famous Ganesha Park. The fair which ended last Saturday was held on that site and the live and forward-looking community which staged that fine exposition is even now considering ways and means of adding to the initial building equipment and general facilities of the grounds.

The richest county in agricultural production in the United States should have a county fair second to none other in the land. Los Angeles county, too, can stage just such an annual event if the county as a whole will get behind and help. Where that fair shall be held is not so much the question as that it shall be held and that the entire county work to make it a success. No one community should be expected to take hold of the thing, although Pomona probably came nearest to succeeding at this of all the communities that have tried to stage widely representative fairs. Pomona, it is true, had co-operation from many sources, but the first annual Los Angeles County Fair, as it was called, was essentially a Pomona achievement.

Pomona's fair next year should have the hearty support of all Los Angeles county and if, as Pomona believes and hopes and intends, this event is to become the great Los Angeles County Fair that has been dreamed of, all community rivalries should be forgotten and everyone should concentrate upon making this one fair the greatest of its kind. There was something tangible and significant about Pomona's convincing start, for the fair gave a good indication of just what could be accomplished if the county were to take up the thing in real earnest. All credit to the wide-awake and progressive citrus belt community for pointing the way!

The Young Farmers

INCREASING interest shown by boys and girls who are members of Agricultural clubs in their exhibits of live stock and agricultural products at California fairs indicates a healthy trend toward farm progress. Unless the interest of the youth of the State were enlisted in the cause of agriculture, of course, California would cease to hold her proud position among the producing States. Those who visited the county and sectional fairs in California this fall could not fail to note the enlarged agricultural club exhibits, and the keen delight the boys and girls who participated in these exhibits took in showing their handiwork in breeding and planting lines. At Southern California fairs, in particular, the educational exhibits which were shown by the agricultural clubs were striking evidences of the great interest the rising generation is taking in agriculture and live-stock husbandry. These boys and girls aro really showing the way to better production to their elders. A new generation of farmers who are studying crop and live-stock production from the ground up, and getting the benefit of scientific instruction from capable leaders is springing up in California, to the great benefit of husbandry.

HAVE THIS YEAR'S CROPS SHOWN LONG PRUNING TO BE A FAILURE

By VINCENT F. BLANCHARD, Agricultural Extension Service

FIVE years ago fully 90 per cent of the deciduous fruit trees of California were pruned by the old California open vase, heading back method. Today more than 70 per cent are pruned by the so-called "long" pruning or thinning system—perhaps the first time in the history of horticulture that a standard, recognized practice has been changed so completely in such a short period of time.

When the Agricultural Extension Service undertook to convince growers of the merits of the "long" system, as worked out by the College of Agriculture, it was realized that there would be some disappointments among fruit growers, as it was practically impossible for all who attempted the system to carry it out as recommended.

The 1922 fruit season has brought forth serious doubts in the minds of some deciduous fruit growers as to the value and success of the "long" pruning system. There seems to be a general tendency to lay the fault of poor quality fruit to the "long" pruning system. Field men employed by some canning companies have in many instances encouraged this feeling against that system. It has been a season of many complaints. An excessively large crop, small fruit, poor in quality, fog scab, much breakage, and the production of fruit only in the tops of trees, have all been laid to the "long" system. If such were the experiences of most fruit growers who have tried this system as recommended, then one might conclude that it is a failure. But such was not the experience of all fruit growers, for many who use the "long" system produced large crops of first-class fruit, and obtained satisfactory prices.

There were failures experienced in the case of some orchards which were supposed to be pruned by the "long" system, and the owners of those orchards are at least deserving of an analysis of the causes of their failures. Generally the difference between success and failure with the "long" system is largely a matter of either understanding or not understanding the principles involved, and the application or the misapplication of those principles. Each of the various troubles experienced will be considered.

SOME EXPERIENCES

(1.) Excessive bearing. If deciduous trees are not pruned at all, they will produce a greater tonnage of fruit for a limited period than if pruned. One might ask then, "Why is it necessary to prune at all?" Pruning merely regulates fruit production, and does not increase production. Production can be increased or dimished with the degree of severity of pruning. In fact, the heavier and more severe a pruning is given, the lighter the crop will be. That is why the heading back system produces lighter crops than the long system. The long system is a less severe system. Excess bearing with the long system is largely brought about by not pruning enough. In most cases which have been examined where the crop was too great, the trees came very near the "no-pruning" class. It is necessary to reduce the top by thinning out heavily.

(2.) Breakage of limbs. One of the most serious complaints this year was that limbs broken down under the weight of fruit with the long system. One of the specific recommendations made by the Extension Service was that fruit should be knocked off the ends of the limbs, using a pole with a hose attached, especially in the case of apricots. Fruit is produced lower down with the long system, and what fruit is borne on the terminals can be knocked off without any serious loss of production. Another reason for breakage is that many trees pruned "long" were in past years headed back, with the result that weak limbs were formed. When the limbs beyond the cuts became loaded, and part of the load was not knocked off, the weight was too great, and breakage resulted. Growers should gauge the load with the tree's condition, and not permit over-bearing.

Still another reason for breakage is that growers sometimes leave too many limbs with the result that these never grow sufficiently large to hold up a crop. A few large limbs are far better than many slender limbs.

(3.) Failure to size up. The price obtained for fruit is determined in part by its quality, and small fruit usually brings a low price. The complaint that the "long" pruning system produces small fruit is an unjust one, for if the system is carried out as recommended, fruit of good quality will be obtained. It is characteristic of most fruit trees to produce more fruit than will set. However, occasionally there will be ideal conditions for setting of fruit, and too much fruit will mature to be sized sufficiently. In such cases, it is necessary to practice thinning of fruit, even with apricots. It is impossible for a tree to bring a full crop to a good size. Thinning is a paying investment. Many a grower received a poor price this season because he did not thin heavily enough. The peach grower has it brought forcefully to his attention that thinning is a necessity, for the canner will not buy small fruit and small fruit will not sell fresh.

Another reason for failure to size up fruit is that in many instances trees suffered from lack of moisture. There is a general impression amongst deciduous growers that irrigation is detrimental to the quality of all fruit. Perhaps one of the reasons for that impresion is that when soils become dry, growth of trees and fruit become checked, and the addition of water in such instances causes uneven growth and poor quality. Trees must have moisture in order to mature the fruit, and prepare for the next year's crop. When the soil moisture content becomes low, the leaves take moisture from the fruit, with the result that its growth and development are impaired. A uniform application, supplying a sufficient amount throughout the year, will do much towards producing a good quality of fruit. The soil in most orchards examined by members of the Agricultural Extension Service Staff was found to be dry, in spite of the heavy rainfall last season.

(4.) Fog scab. Climatic conditions this season were favorable to the production of fog scab on apricots. It was most prevalent on fruit exposed to the sunlight, consequently trees which did not have fruit knocked off the terminals had much fog scab. It was the fault of the grower and not of the long pruning system.

(5.) Fruit in tops and little below. A complaint which is sometimes made is that most of the fruit is produced in the top where it is expensive to harvest. That is another case of not following the "long"

FIRST LOS ANGELES COUNTY FAIR AT POMONA BIG SUCCESS

MORE than realizing the confident expectations of its enthusiastic backers, the First Annual Los Angeles County Fair, held at Pomona from October 17 to 21, inclusive, marked the beginning of what promises to become one of the great yearly fair fixtures of the West.

To Pomona and Pomona Valley belong the principal credit for the success of this exposition of products of the Nation's richest agricultural county; but it was an idea that caught hold the county over, and the fair itself reflected the friendly interest and hearty co-operation of many communities.

The event was staged on the forty-acre tract bought by the city of Pomona, with the aid of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce, the fair committee, public-spirited individuals and the county board of supervisors, a site which all Pomona Valley is hopeful shall be the permanent location of a great and growing annual institution—a real Los Angeles County Fair. And every one of the thousands of visitors who flocked to the fair from all parts of the Southland, admitted that a wonderfully convincing start had been made toward that end.

The site lies between beautiful Ganesha Park and the Mountain Meadows Country Club, in the shadow of the San Jose hills. To the north, the Sierra Madre Mountains form a background to an attractive picture. Spectators in the grandstand look across a rich valley to the jagged outlines of Old Baldy, Ontario, Cucamonga and other peaks.

On this permanent site had been erected an array of buildings, tents and stock barns that was a revelation to every fair visitor. The huge main tent, 548 feet in length by 130 feet wide, was said to be the largest ever set up in the West. Within it every square foot of available space had been filled with interesting and beautiful exhibits. Another large tent was given over entirely to tractor, truck, pump and farm implement displays. A third "big top" contains a noteworthy poultry show, and a fourth was divided between a large exhibit of rabbits and pet stock and exhibits of the work of various high schools and other institutions specializing in agricultural subjects. Permanent barns and sheds housed all the livestock with the exception of the sheep, for which provision had to be made in a special tent. Minor tents and buildings and the grandstand and racetrack completed the impressive layout, the whole representing a miracle of transformation from the bare fields of a few short weeks before.

Sixteen agricultural communities of the county entered displays in this, the first big fair at Pomona and, in addition, a number of industrial communities were represented by attractive booths. Three counties, Los Angeles, Fresno and Kings, had fine county displays of various products, although that of Los Angeles county was not entered in competition for prizes. The individual exhibits of farm products and of canned and preserved fruits and other products of the household were numerous and of excellent quality. The trades' and manufacturers' exhibits were as complete as any ever seen at a similar fair in Southern California. The State Department of Agriculture, the State Board of Health, the County Forestry Service, Farm Bureau and Los Angeles County Horticultural Commission all had highly instructive exhibits illustrative of public service work being done in California.

In the community exhibit competition, judged by Ernest Braunton, "Garden Beautiful" editor of The Times Farm and Tractor Section; H. J. Ryan, horticultural commissioner of Los Angeles county, and Dr. Flanders of Pomona, East Pomona was given first place. Second went to El Monte, third to Chino, fourth to Baldwin Park, and fifth to La Verne. The contest was so close in many phases that results were difficult to arrive at, somo of the displays not receiving awards excelling in important features. In the county division, Fresno received first award and Kings second.

One end of the mammoth main tent housed the automobile show, a feature that

The California State Board of Health has recommended a new procedure in reference to the control of rabies. Through recent scientific investigations it has been found that dogs may be immunized or vaccinated anti-rabic virus by veterinarians, thus owners to have their dogs vaccinated with anti-rabic virus by venterinarians, thus protecting the dog from rabies. When a dog has been treated with anti-rabic serum, it will not be necessary to quarantine or muzzle him in case of an outbreak of the disease. The process of immunization is known as the "one injection method" and according to Doctor M. Dickie, secretary of the State Board of Health, is comparatively cheap. Veterinarians and members of the veterinary medical association are enthuiastic, as the method will also be a protection to the veterinarians in handling suspicious cases of rabies.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

CALEXICO.—The seed and grain dealers of the valley formed an organization at Calexico recently and elected J. C. Archias of the Cuff-Archias Seed Company, Brawley, president, and A. C. Rath of Rath & Marshall, El Centro, secretary. A survey of the present situation, made by these men, who make it their business to keep in close touch with the ranchers, shows that this year's alfalfa planting has increased about one-third over that of last year; also that the lettuce acreage will not be as large as was first reported.

GOOD CROP PROSPECTS

MONROVIA.—Much better citrus crop prospects are seen now than a short time ago, according to Inspector Frank Ferguson, who believes the crop in this district will run above 70 per cent normal. A little over a month ago scarcely a grower could be found who would say he had a 60 per cent crop, but with the coming of cool weather, the navels have begun to color, and the inside fruit is beginning to show up. The frost of last winter, which shortened the coming citrus yield, affected least the wood inside, and this is beginning only now to show fruit. There is little indication that any but scattering shipments of citrus fruits will be made before the first of the year.

SCALE CONDITIONS

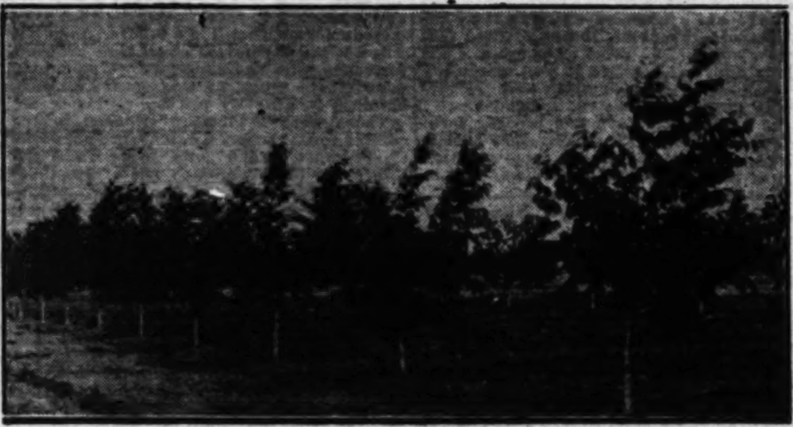
REDLANDS.—While some sections of the citrus belt report much black scale killed by the heat this summer, the groves of Redlands and Riverside, both great navel-producing districts, have not been largely benefited, although some "kill" has been noted by the horticultural inspectors. They say that on the south side, and less frequently on the east side, of the tree a fair "kill" has resulted. The black scale is not so prevalent here as nearer the Coast. The growers of the two districts are more bothered with the citricola scale, and this was not even touched by the hot weather. The horticultural commissioner's men, after an inspection as to the "kill" of the scale, say that, while the crop is to be light, it was never in better condition than now. The fruit is larger than usual. Fred Anderson, of the horticultural force in the Ontario district, says that the trees there are in better condition because of the heat. Growers here say their trees are in fine shape, but are disinclined to give the heat the credit.

COMPLETE APPLE PACKING

CHINO.—Packing of the Chino apple crop was completed for the season on October 14, according to Manager Ditcher of the Apple Growers' Association. This is one of the best seasons that the house has had, although the apple price has been poor, necessitating the storage of a large percentage of the crop. The price of cider has increased over that of last year about 300 per cent. This is largely due to the establishment of the roadside booth, where the cider, newly pressed each day, is sold. Many of the lower grade apples are being stored this year for making cider during the winter and spring. Each packing-box makes about four gallons of cider in the press at the house, the output being about 100 gallons an hour. Vinegar is stored at the rear of the house in huge casks. This is distributed locally.

SHIP MISSIONS EAST

BEAUMONT.—Mont P. Chubb, owner of Glen Eyrie ranch, recently shipped eleven cars of old mission grapes to New York City. These grapes, from the oldest vineyard in the Pass, produced about eight and a half tons to the acre. Using refrigerator cars and loading to full capacity, Mr. Chubb sent out over 180 tons, which he sold, f.o.b. here, at a good price. At the Southern California Fair Phillip Truby, one of Beaumont's successful apple growers, took first prize on his exhibit of Delicious, Rhode Island Greenings, Winesaps and Stamens and second on Rome Beauty.



Eighteen months from brush.

FRUIT SHIPMENTS

RIALTO.—While the shortage of cars still continues in the Rialto district, as elsewhere, fifteen cars of grapes were recently shipped, while six cars of Valencia oranges had gone out by the end of the first week in October. The total grape shipments for the season will amount to about 100 cars. Cox & Wood, growers and shippers of both citrus fruit and grapes, sold on the same day at the New York Auction three cars of grapes, each car topping the market in price received, the [illegible] variety selling for $2.55 per box and the Berguers for $3 per box. Some 695 cars of citrus fruit have been shipped from the Rialto district this season, the Valencia cars numbering 180, the navel cars, 397, and the miscellaneous varieties making up the rest. A considerable amount of oranges, grapefruit and lemons has been sold from the packing-house to go out on trucks, and one buyer alone reports 100 cars of oranges sent to a neighboring district to be shipped out under the brand of that district.

ADVICE FOR GROWERS

VISALIA.—Frank R. Brann, county horticultural commissioner of Tulare county, has entered into an agreement with the Chamber of Commerce organizations of Tulare county whereby the growers of various districts needing advice on such matters as pest control and agricultural law interpretations will be put in direct personal contact with a representative of the horticultural office. A uniform "call-list" system has been adopted, and it is felt by the members of the various chambers of commerce that mutual benefits will be attained by this extended educational service.

EXTENSIVE PLANTING

TULARE.—H. C. Merritt, Jr., manager of the Tagus Ranch, five miles north of Tulare, announces extensive planting operations on that property. Over 400 acres of alfalfa are being put out at this time for hay and pasture for the raising of feeder hogs, two carloads of which are being brought from Texas. It will require 200 acres of alfalfa to feed all his stock, Mr. Merritt states. The ranch recently purchased the A. J. Elliott herd of pure-bred Poland China hogs and is making a specialty of this breed. At present forty hog houses are under construction to house swine on the ranch.

SHIPPING OUT FRUIT

DEVORE.—Besides immense quantities of grapes and apples taken away by auto trucks, growers of Devore have shipped twenty-five carloads of other fruit this year. Fifty cars have gone out from Verdemont. The Meyers Brothers plan to double their vineyard acreage next year, though they now have 600 acres in full bearing. For a time the shortage of cars was a serious handicap, but later cars arrived in sufficient numbers to take care of the crop.

CITRUS OFFICERS RESIGN

DUARTE.—E. D. Northup, for the past twelve years head of the Duarte-Monrovia Fruit Exchange, resigned at the annual election this year. The post has been filled by the election of H. B. Wooldston, a retired Chicago manufacturer who came to Duarte three years ago and bought the Gearhart ranch. Following the resignation of Mr. Northup, C. M. Downs, secretary and manager, also tendered his resignation. Mr. Downs has been with the exchange since 1908. His place has not as yet been filled.

VENTURA FAIR AWARDS

VENTURA.—Following is the list of awards in some of the principal divisions of the agricultural and horticultural exhibits at the Ventura County Fair: Community Exhibits—Mound, first; Santa Paula, second. Simi-Santa Susana, third. Feature display of lemons—Limoneira, first; Rancho Sespe, second. Feature display of oranges—Fillmore Citrus Association, first. Piru Orange Association, second. Commercial pack of lemons—Fillmore Citrus, first, with Lisbons; George C. Powers, first, with Eurekas. Commercial pack of oranges—Mupu Citrus Association, first, for first grade; Fillmore Citrus Association, second; Piru Orange Association, third; Mupu Citrus Association, first, for second grade; Fillmore Citrus Association, second; Piru Orange Association, third. Most original, attractive and novel display in agricultural and horticultural tent—Ojai community, first.

SECOND ANNUAL CHINO FAIR NEXT MONTH

CHINO.—Promising to be more important and to offer more exhibits than the event of last year, the second annual Chino community fair is to be held November 1, 2, 3 and 4. This fair is given to show what the fertile soil of the Chino district, combined with plentiful water and a liberal application of brains, can produce.

Every department of the fair has been enlarged this year and the exhibits will cover a space of 50,000 square feet. J. B. Fugate, the director of the fair, states that the agricultural and live-stock exhibits will be better both in quantity and quality. A guarantee fund, pledged by popular subscription, has been raised to make good and deficit, if there is one.

The heads of departments are: Automobile and machinery, R. J. Coles and A. Sanman, Jr.; commercial exhibits, E. C. Jertberg; civic and fine arts, W. S. Reilly; live stock, R. A. Condee, H. H. Cooke, Alex Wilson and J. G. Dickey; agricultural exhibits, H. A. Eastman and Roy Sebring; concessions, Elmer L. Howell and W. B. Hunsaker.

GRAPE SHIPMENTS

Up to October 6, 19,495 carloads of grapes had been shipped from California this year, as against 16,942 carloads to the same date last year. This represented about half the crop. The loss will not be as great as at first supposed. It is believed that 90 per cent of the crop will be shipped.

STANDARD FOWLS AND PIGEONS FEATURE COUNTY FAIR EXHIIT

THE Los Angeles County Fair poultry show tent housed one of the largest and finest collections of birds ever exhibited at such an event in Southern California. The pigeon display, according to Paul E. Kennedy, manager of the show, was the largest ever staged in connection with an agricultural fair in this section, 852 birds being shown in this division. The total number of standard fowls shown, Mr. Kennedy stated, was 1219, there being also about 200 Bantams. The number of exhibitors outside of the pigeon display was 119. The Rhode Island Red exhibit was notable, there being 197 birds of this breed on display. The White Leghorns numbered 134, while some fifty Buffs and Browns were shown. There was a goodly showing of both Barred and White Rocks, with some thirty or more Buff and Partridge Rocks also on display. In the coops were to be found also creditable exhibits of White Rocks, Buff Orpingtons, White, Columbia and Partridge Wyandottes, Blue Andalusians, Sicilian Buttercups, Minorcas, Anconas and Silver Campines, with interesting displays of Polish, Dutch, French, Game and miscellaneous classes. A score of Jersey Black Giants attracted much attention.

The Light Brahma classes were well filled with birds of excellent quality, a hen of this breed being named best female of the show. Best male went to a Rhode Island cockerel. Best pen was also claimed by the "Reds." Turkeys, geese, ducks and guinea fowls also had a good representation.

Following are the first prize awards in the different divisions of the show:

1000 Eggs In Every Hen

If You Keep Chickens, Cut This Out—Four to Seven Eggs a Week per Hen Through Cold Winter Season. With Eggs at Dollar a Dozen, Means $5.00 Profit per Hen in Next Six Months. Amazing Poultry Secrets Revealed by

AMERICA'S FOREMOST POULTRY EXPERT

This is an offer no reader of this paper who keeps chickens can afford to ignore. We will tell you why.

Henry Trafford, Famous Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of "Poultry Success," has developed a new and remarkable system of rearing, breeding and feeding chickens for heavy egg production that seems certain to revolutionize the poultry industry and give five eggs or more for every egg produced today. This plan, or system, is explained in Mr. Trafford's "1000 Egg Hen," a free copy of which will be sent to any person who keeps six hens or more.

Poultry keepers, following Mr. Trafford's directions, learn how to start young pullets laying early; make old hens moult quickly and resume heavy laying during entire winter season. Most any hen will lay in spring when eggs are cheap. Mr. Trafford tells how hens lay four to seven eggs a week during coldest winter days when eggs sell at a dollar a dozen or more. His system shows how any breeder, with ordinary care, may get 1000 eggs or more from nearly every hen in four to six years' time at a net profit of $25.00.

There is big money to be made with chickens this winter by the man or woman who gets the eggs. The time to get the hens ready for heavy winter laying is now. Mr. Trafford's "1000 Egg Hen" system tells how and arrangements have been made whereby any reader of this paper may receive one copy absolutely free by using the Coupon below. Send no money, but cut out the Coupon and mail it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, 1048 R Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and the story of the 1000 Egg Hen will be sent you by return mail.

AMPLE SUPPLY OF BULBS IS ASSURED

The Dutch ship Dindledyjk arrived in Los Angeles Harbor September 28, with approximately twenty-six carloads of bulbs as a cargo, all consigned to Los Angeles seed houses and bulb growers. This was the largest shipment of bulbs ever consigned to the Pacific Coast. The Dutch growers guaranteed storage, and the bulbs, the majority of which were hyacinths, tulips and narcissus, came through in fine condition, being carefully packed in buckwheat hulls and kept in a cold temperature throughout the trip. They were passed as disease-free by the quarantine authorities.

The seed houses report an increased demand for all sorts of bulbs this year. Attractive window displays of the new bulbs are drawing many gardening enthusiasts to the various store, and the sales show that the gardeners will plant a large number of bulbs this fall for spring blooms. The several changes in tariff rates on them did not effect the retailer's prices, as these were fixed before the new tariff went into effect.

The new tariff is welcomed by the California bulb growers, who are increasing their plantings this year. The last quarantine regulation governing the importation of seed, nursery stock and bulbs stipulated that certain bulbs could not be imported and sold direct by retailers, but that growers could import planting stock to plant and sell the following year. A great many growers took advantage of this, and it is predicted that they will be able to supply the local demand in a few years.

The paper-white narcissus is imported from France, but, due to the crop failure there this year, the supply in this country is now and the price correspondingly high. One Central California grower is reported to have the largest stock of this variety in the country, and is being depended upon to supply the Coast demand. Other growers have good stocks on hand, but most of them are planting a great deal more of them than they are selling.

California soil and climate conditions are ideal for bulb culture. The quality of the local-grown bulbs, except, perhaps, for the hyacinth, is better than that of the imported ones, as has been proven the past few years—a fact which gives promise of a new and profitable industry to California.

A tabular comparison of the old and new tariff rates on bulbs is as follows:

	Old Rate Per 1000.	New Rate. Per 1000.
Tulip	$ 50	$2 00
Narcissus	1 00	2 00
Hyacinth	2 50	4 00
Crocus	50	1 00
Lily	5 00	2 00

DECIDUOUS PRUNING TO BE DEMONSTRATED

Beginning Monday, November 13, a series of field demonstrations on pruning trees is to be staged by men of the Agricultural Extension Service in Los Angeles county.

It is declared by the extension service specialists that the long pruning as practiced by the majority of deciduous fruit growers is not the long pruning system as advocated by the service, and an attempt will be made at these demonstrations to correct false impressions extant as regards the long-pruning system.

In announcing the series the extension service bulletin states:

"It is hoped that this series of pruning demonstrations will be the means of getting growers to do better pruning, as well as to handle their trees in a way that will enable them to produce satisfactory crops of fruit. The sooner the growers realize that the long pruning as advocated by the extension service and the long pruning as practiced by most growers is different, the sooner will they get their trees into a condition that will enable them to produce as they should."

Your Lawn and Home

Just as an attractive gown adds to a woman's appearance, so does a bright green lawn enhance the beauty of your home. Make the first impression of your home a good one; a well-kept, bright lawn helps immensely to give that desired effect. It also will increase the value of your property.

Bermuda Grass is now turning brown in the old lawn. Use a Worthington Rake to pull it out and then re-seed the old lawn with A & M Velvet Lawn Grass. For old lawn or new you make no mistake in choosing this fine lawn seed. It has been proved through several years to be the kind best adapted to our climate. It is beautiful green, bright in color, and the grass while fine in texture possesses remarkable wearing qualities.

90 cents per lb.; 5 lbs. for $4.25; 10 lbs. for $8 (postpaid)

Every lawn needs stimulation. Apply A & M Lawn and Garden Fertilizer and let the rains drive it into the ground.

A&M reliable SEEDS

Reliable Brooder

The most popular and satisfactory brooder is the Reliable. Is especially adapted to our climate and is economical, reliable and absolutely safe. Has no valves to clog and cause trouble. Operation very simple; cost of operation very low.

Plant Winter Vegetables Now

With the coming of the rainy season, winter and spring vegetables should be planted. To have fresh vegetables on your table all the time, arrange to plant every week a few popular varieties; rotate, and repeat about every third week. Be sure the seeds you plant are A & M Reliable. This week we recommend:

A & M Admiral Peas—Most succulent and best adapted to winter growing.
A & M L. A. Market Lettuce—The wonder lettuce of the world.
A & M Early Egyptian—Early, splendid color and excellent flavor.
A & M White Icicle Radishes—Best variety for the home garden.
A & M Purple Top Globe Turnips—Solid, very sweet, slow to get pithy.
A & M Leek—Delicious in salad, more mild than onions.
A & M Prickly Seeded Winter Spinach—Delicious on winter table.

BY ROBERT T. LYANS.

Banquets and business sessions by various breed organizations were much in evidence at the Southern California Fair. At the regular meeting and banquet of the Southern California Holstein Friesian Association, held in Riverside October 11, officers were chosen as follows: R. A. Condee, California Junior Republic, Chino, president; H. Michel, Venice, vice-president; W. R. Harriman, Hondo, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Condee was named as representative to the Southern California Pure-bred Live-stock Association. F. F. Pellissier, Whittier; E. H. Agee, Rivera, and Earl Sturgis, Lankershim, were selected for the Executive Committee.

On the same evening the Southern California Guernsey Breeders' Association held a banquet and business session, electing G. T. Drinkwater, Lakeside, president; W. H. Dupee, Riverside, vice-president, and D. O. Brant, Owensmouth, secretary-treasurer.

The following evening, October 12, was given to the regular annual meeting and banquet of the Southern California Pure-bred Live-stock Association. Officers elected for the coming year in this organization were: H. Michel, Venice, president; Alex Wilson of the Italian Vineyard Company, Guasti, vice-president; W. W. Van Pelt, Riverside, secretary-treasurer. Breed directors chosen were R. A. Condee, Chino, Holstein; G. T. Drinkwater, Lakeside, Guernsey; Ferdinand R. Bain, Los Angeles, Jersey; A. E. MacMinn, Riverside, Ayrshire; D. H. Ogden, Alpine, Hereford; F. A. Langdon, Perris, Milking Shorthorns; F. E. Collier, Wildomar, Beef Shorthorns; F. F. Peabody, Santa Barbara, Aberdeen-Angus; F. L. Hall, Perris, draft horses; L. E. Sheets, Pomona, sheep; J. C. Craig, Owensmouth, Duroc-Jersey swine; C. T. Johns, Ontario, Berkshires; William Mays, Riverside, Poland Chinas; Carl Meiners, Ojai, Hampshires.

On October 13 the Southwest Berkshire Congress met at its annual banquet, which was flavored with good talks by Dr. Nettie Haight, Mr. Stingle, El Monte; G. E. Gordon, Los Angeles; H. A. Miller, Los Angeles; Wyman N. Lovejoy, Rockford, Ill.; Charles Maurer, Escalon, and others.

Livestock judges who placed the ribbons at the Los Angeles County Fair were John L. Smith of Spokane, Washington, who judged Holstein and Ayrshire cattle; F. H. Scribner, of Pasadena, who judged the Guernsey and Jersey cattle classes; and Ralph Jenkins of Orleans, Indiana, who placed awards in the hog classes.

In the milk display at the recent Los Angeles County Fair the certified class was won by Arden Dairy of El Monte with a Extraordinary Draft Sale!

60 REGISTERED HOLSTEINS

FRIDAY, November 10th, 1922

Meadhart Breeding Farm,
Fred Hartsook,
Lankershim, California

Unbiased authorities concede that Mr. Hartsook has assembled what is possibly the greatest herd of registered Holstein females in America ever secured by a single breeder as foundation material.

Every animal that has gone into this herd has gone in strictly upon the basis of individual merit, and price has been a secondary consideration in securing such animals.

That being true there has never arisen a need to cull the herd because of ill advised purchases, and the present offering is the first of a regular series of draft sales through which the surplus breeding animals will be offered to the public.

It may be noted here that the herd now contains over 300 head of registered females, a larger number than the plans of Mr. Hartsook contemplate, and from now on the size of the herd will be regulated by regular public sale offerings of high-class cattle.

THE PRESENT OFFERING WILL INCLUDE COWS WITH LARGE 7 DAY AND YEARLY RECORDS, DAUGHTERS OF SUCH COWS, AND EVERY BRED FEMALE IN THE SALE IS BRED TO SIR AAGGIE DE KOL MEAD, THE $30,000 SON OF MISS VALLEY MEAD DE KOL WALKER.

Think of the wonderful opportunity presented in this offering to secure such females bred to such a bull!

Detailed announcements will appear later.

COTTON CARNIVAL PLANS ANNOUNCED

CALEXICO.—The committee of Calexico citizens having the International Cotton Carnival and Pageant in charge has announced a partial program and has decided upon November 4-11, inclusive, as the time for holding the exposition.

Saturday, November 4, will be International Day. There will be a big parade in which Mexican as well as American interests will be featured. The fine Mexican military band, as well as valley and outside bands, will furnish music. American and Mexican lodges and civic organizations, native tribes, and orientals in full native costumes will be in line.

Wednesday, November 8, will be San Diego Day, and the 9 will be Los Angeles Day. The chamber of commerce and citizens of these two cities have been invited and will respond in characteristic fashion by running special excursion trains to Calexico on these dates, it is announced.

November 10 will be Municipalities Day. All the schools in the valley have been invited and school children will be admitted to the carnival free of charge. It is believed that this day will be a record breaker for attendance.

November 11 is Armistice Day. The American Legion will be in evidence with a '49 camp and other features. There will be a big patriotic parade at 1 o'clock, followed by a free barbacue.

Chinese residents of Calexico and Mexicali are arranging for exhibits showing what China has done and can do in art, needle work and agriculture. The Japanese, also, are alive to the opportunity presented and will have a display.

Mayor J. T. West is building a Cotton Palace, which will be one of the main features of the exposition. More than 200 bales of cotton will be used in the construction of the building. There will be a miniature cotton field and picking and other field work will be demontrated. The process of ginning will also be shown. An interesting feature will be a diplay of the various products of the cotton seed mills.

FARMERS GOING TO SCHOOL AT BRAWLEY

BRAWLEY.—This city is showing commendable enterprise by fathering a five-weeks' agricultural night school, which opened Monday evening, October 16. The school is for everybody, old and young. It is sponsored by the Brawley Union High School, assisted by local commercial bodies, the farm bureau and the agricultural extension service of the county. Sessions will be held from 7 to 9 o'clock on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of each week.

Talks on dairying, stock raising, grain, fruit and vegetable growing—in fact, the production of all crops that can be successfully grown here—will be made by local and outside experts. Soil testing, fertilization, irrigation and the proposed program of the irrigation district are being presented to students by men having a thorough knowledge of the subjects treated.

The local speakers are, John T. Rice, civil engineer, who will speak on "Soil Testing;" E. L. Garthwaite, speaking on "Problems Confronting Imperial Grape Growers;" L. G. Goar, director of the Meloland Experimental Station, subject, "Value of the Experimental Station to Imperial Valley Farmers;" L. T. Simmons, subject, "Packing and Ripening Dates;" County Dairy Adviser DeTar, subject, "Imperial County Cow Testing Association;" Vance Clymer, subject, "Dairy Sanitation;" Mark Rose, director of Imperial irrigation district, subject, "The Program of the Imperial Irrigation District." Other local men will be heard during the sessions.

Among the speakers from outside of the county are: Fred N. Bigelow, chief of the Division of Markets, who will speak on "Marketing of Farm Products;" E. V. Crow, State live-stock reporter, who will discuss "Market Reporting;" W. S. Childs, whose topic will be "Grapefruit Culture;" and Dean Charles J. Booth, Chaffey Union High School College of Agriculture, who will speak on "Soil Conditions." An effort is being made to secure Dr. Von KleinSmid of the University of Southern California, for the closing address.

PACKING VEGETABLES

CHINO.—Packing of peaches at the Libby, McNeil & Libby cannery is over. The long season and full crop have meant a pack this year of 100,000 cases of fruit. This does not include the apricots, which were finished early in the summer. Tomatoes for soup, catsup, and canned vegetables are the exclusive work of the 150 men and 75 women who are now employed at the plant.

The bean crop of the Pacific Coast for 1922 will be about 5,679,000 bushels, as compared with 3,902,000 bushels last year.

Long Pruning

system as recommended. Such a result is due to insufficient opening up in the tops of the trees. It is only by means of sunlight coming in contact with the dormant buds within the trees on the bare places that growth can be stimulated. The long system, when properly carried out, produces fruit which can be picked from the ground after the third year, to a large degree.

WHAT GROWERS SAY

Many growers have expressed themselves this season as having obtained splendid results with the long system. Claude Gibbs of Lankershim, a man who has been a commercial pruner of good standing in the Lankershim district, both with the heading back system and the long pruning system, and who has a peach and apricot orchard of his own, recently sent in a report to the extension service office as to results of using both pruning methods, and his interpretation of those results. Mr. Gibbs stated:

"I have heard of considerable dissatisfaction with the long pruning system, but in no case have I heard complaint where the pruning was done as advocated, and proper care given afterwards. With me the long system has been highly satisfactory. We have better fruit than ever before, while most people complain of having poorer fruit this year. We will get more than one-half as much again for our fruit than we would if I had used the short system, besides I find easier sale for it as it is of better quality and has a higher color. We find the picking also is much easier and faster. In the plot of Elbertas where I kept a record of eight trees each, eight trees pruned by the short system yielded forty-five boxes, eight trees pruned by the one year long system produced fifty-two and one-half boxes, and eight of those pruned by the long system, two years, sixty-one boxes. All the trees were of the same size and age and had the same care. Very few people thinned enough with either system. Most people who complained, largely pruned by the let alone system."

Mark Grimes of Van Nuys reported excellent results with his apricots, having obtained eight and one-fourth tons per acre from six-year-old trees with the long system. The Prune and Apricot Growers' Association stated that his fruit was from one of the few orchards of the valley which graded uniformly "Sun Sweet," the best grade.

W. P. Young of Van Nuys reported: "This year I thinned my apriocts, but found I had not thinned enough. Immediately after thinning, I irrigated. My fruit was of very good size and good flavor. I contracted with Rosenberg & Co. for fifty tons. They took over eighty tons before they stopped shipping, so you can see that we had good 'cots. I consider that my loss by not being prepared to dry was about twenty tons, making in all a good one hundred tons from thirteen acres. Will use the "long" system again, but will do more thinning. We decided that all or nearly all the 'cots on the ends of the branches should come off."

Harry R. Miller of Hansen Heights reported: "I have been pruning by the 'long' system for three years, and by so doing have done away with the heavy sucker growth which was the result of the heading back system. With the 'long' system, I now have a full crop from the ground up. As far as breakage goes, I do not have as much as with the old system. I have heard a great deal of complaint on that score from growers and my observation has been that this was caused by one or two reasons—either they did not thin the tops of their trees sufficiently during pruning, or did not thin the fruit sufficiently. The late Dr. Whitten and Prof. Overholzer, in all of their demonstrations, advised growers to take a club and knock all fruit off the ends of long branches. Another advantage of the 'long' system is that it allows plenty of light to strike the fruit on the inside of the trees, thereby giving you a much better color, which has a distinct advantage when marketing your fruit."

One of the soundest arguments in favor of long pruning is that, in Sutter county, where peach orchard competitions have been held during the past three years, the winning orchard has always been pruned by the long system. The competition is based on production, quality of fruit, and condition of the orchard itself.

In determining whether his system of pruning has been a failure or a success, the grower should endeavor to analyze the whole problem, and endeavor to form an accurate opinion.

AFTER THE DAIRIES

TULARE.—A campaign to "clean up" Tulare county dairies has been launched by Dairy Inspectors T. W. Beddo and Charles R. White. Several arrests have been made and the inspectors state that stringent methods will be used in the future to force all dairies to keep up to the standard. According to Inspector Beddo, who is employed by the city of Los Angeles, the difference in the price of sweet cream and churning cream is a direct result of inspection service.

[illegible] Golden Lustre, while his two-year-old bull, Gamboge's Majesty Falcon, after winning his class, was named the senior and rgrand champion Jersey bull. His senior bull calf, Sibyls' Perfection, was made junior champion and reserve grand champion bull, and his first prize junior heifer calf, Falcon's Una of La Lomita, was selected for junior and reserve grand champion honors.

In the Ayrshire division the H. G. Ranch of Buellton exhibited the junior, senior and grand champion bull and the junior champion female; while A. MacMinn of Corona showed the senior and grand champion cow.

In the hog classes the Berkshire grand champion boar was shown by A. B. Humphrey of Escalon and the grand champion sow went to the Italian Vineyard Company of Guasti. Charnock Ranch of Hemet practically made a clean sweep in the Duroc-Jersey breed, taking all championships, his aged sow, Fancy Sensation Maid, being named senior and grand champion sow, while his junior yearling boar, Charnock Pioneer Sensation, was made senior and grand champion Jersey bull. His senior hill of Santa Barbara took all awards in the Hampshire classes. In the Poland China classes A. Buckland and son of Fresno captured the senior and grand champion in both the boar and sow classes, while G. H. Goodrich of Los Angeles took both junior and reserve grand champions and succeeded in taking six blue ribbons with only five head entered.

Following is a list of awards in the livestock classes:

A Land of Milk and Money

It takes proper feeding, more than anything else, to put your dairy farm on a moneyed basis. For it's the feed that shows up in the flow. It's the feed that, in the end, makes your herd profitable or unprofitable.

SUREMILK is a highly concentrated grain feed. Fed in conjunction with alfalfa hay (or other roughage) it enables your cows to produce the greatest amount of milk at the lowest cost.

Our booklet, "Converting Feed Into Money," tells how and why. And it's free—send for it today.

NATIONAL AID IS NEEDED IN SOLVING AVOCADO PROBLEMS

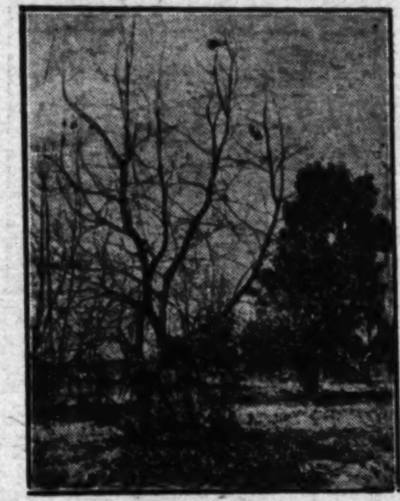
By K. A. RYERSON, Agricultural Extension Service.

THE avocado industry in California has arrived at a point where definite problems are hindering its continued development. Research has failed to keep pace with development and the lack of information about the tree and its habits is felt most keenly.

Through the agency of the Federal Department of Agriculture, the native avocado districts of the world have been combed for their best varieties. The explorations of Wilson Popenoe of Altadena along this line have been of the utmost value and of fundamental importance to the industry. The varieties found are now being tried out under conditions existing in California and Florida. From the hundreds of seeds planted here some superior local varieties have originated. Private exploration and importation have also added desirable varieties. However, the presence of trees that produce some fruits of excellent quality does not of itself make the industry successful. Trees of good growing habits and of consistent production are not commonly found. Varieties differ widely in bearing habits, according to locality. No one factor is responsible. Scientific research must be applied to solve some of the problems, and co-operative effort and the application of some of the general principles of fruit production will solve others. Some of the most important of these problems are here discussed.

POLLINATION QUESTION

Avocado trees that bloom profusely, but set no fruit, are common, and have caused much disappointment. This condition is not limited to seedling trees, but is found in many budded trees of supposedly good varieties. There has been no thorough investigation of this problem so far, and it is one that merits much attention. Investigation in other fruits shows that self-sterility is a common condition, and that cross pollination must be effected in order that fruit may set.



Variations in Resistance

Avocado trees in orchard hit hard by frost last January. Note disfference in effect cold spell on two seedlings.

In the Eastern States, the Bartlett pear requires the use of other varieties for pollination, though in California good crops of pears are obtained without this interplanting. On the other hand, certain plums fail to set fruit in California until pollenized by other varieties. It is not unlikely that many avocado trees which year after year bloom and drop their flowers could be made fruitful through application of a similar plan.

FROST RESISTANCE

One phase of pollination study is closely tied up with frost resistance, since it is believed that the development of large-fruited, frost-resistant types will come primarily through cross-breeding. Of the varieties recommended for commercial planting by the varietal committee of the Avocado Association, two stand out above all others since the severe freeze of last January—the Fuerte and the Puebla.

It is believed that the Fuerte is a natural hybrid between the thick-skinned Guatemalan type and the thin-skinned small-fruited Mexican type. It has apparently grown naturally in the vicinity of Atlixco, Mex., where both types are found together. It partakes of the qualities of both types, and has a medium thick skin like the large fruited Guatemalans, but is unlike them in that the skin is leathery and shell-like, an intermediate texture between the latter and the thin skin of the Mexican group. There is a slight anise taste in the leaves of the Fuerte not found in the true Guatemalan tree, and it has very vigorous growing habits natural to first generation hybrids. In hardiness it greatly outranks any of the other large-fruited types that have commercial possibilities. If such hybrids can be produced, it is believed that a field of great promise can be opened up through breeding work.

There are at the present time in California varieties with varying degrees of hardiness, shape, size, color and quality. The material is here to work on. Studies of this nature of a necessity require long periods of time and much patient work; thousands of crosses are required, but it is through this means that better varieties will be evolved in the future. The expansion of the industry depends upon the development of hardy varieties of the medium large-fruited type. It is doubtful if the smaller thin-skinned varieties can ever dominate the market.

BUD SELECTION

It is the opinion of those who have observed the avocado closely that it is the most variable fruit that is known to California horticulture. Studies of citrus trees by Prof. Shamel have indicated the many types of citrus trees that have developed from the parent stock, but indications are that bud variation is much more common in the avocado than in citrus. The Fuerte is normally a long, pear-shaped fruit, but some trees are known to throw branches from time to time that produce short, rounded, oblate fruits very different from the normal. One case is on record of a green fruited variety that developed a branch which produced black fruits. A limb of the parent Taft tree is said to be consistently shy in bearing as compared to the rest of the tree.

Taking into consideration other factors which affect fruiting, there still remains much variation that apparently can be explained only by bud variation. An unsuccessful effort was made this year by the Avocado Association to secure a Federal appropriation for bud selection work on the avocado for the coming year, but indications are that it will receive attention in the not too distant future. This work also will have to be carried on for a long period of time before reliable records can be secured on which to base conclusions.

IRRIGATION REQUIREMENTS

One of the phases of avocado culture which varies widely wherever avocado trees are grown is irrigation and its relation to the maintenance of proper soil moisture conditions. From investigations with the soil auger, it is safe to say that, except in isolated cases on heavy soil types, the avocado is underirrigated in California. The amount of water given is often too small, and further, the period between irrigations is too long. The soil becomes too dry between irrigations. This fluctuating condition, with alternating wetting and drying, is not conducive to fruit production.

Undoubtedly one of the very important causes of the dropping of immature fruit is the moisture fluctuation. While not tol-

PROMINENT DEALERS EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Many prominent dealers in tractors, trucks, farm implements and irrigation equipment were represented by exhibits in the big "power-on-the-farm" tent at the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona. This feature was the largest seen at a Southern California fair this year.

Glimpse of Los Angeles County Fair Automobile Show.

The tractors shown included the C. L. Best, Cletrac, Fordson, Case, Henneuse, Tioga, International, Holt and Wallis. Different sizes and models were shown and there were a number of "stripped" machines on display.

The trucks on exhibit included the "Big 4," for the manufacture of which a factory is being built at Pomona; the Mack, International, Autocar, Packard, Moreland, G. M. C., Selden and Pierce Arrow.

A great assortment of farming tools and equipment was shown by the various exhibitors. There were many tillage tools, together with orchard sprayers, orchard heaters, scales, silo fillers, feed grinders and other kinds of equipment on display, all being arranged to facilitate easy inspection by fair visitors.

Among the leading exhibits of pumps and irrigation equipment were those of the Byron Jackson Iron Works, the Layne & Bowler Corporation, the Pomona Manufacturing Company, the Western Machinery Company, the Commercial Iron Works, the Frank J. Kimball Company, the Lutweiley Pumping Engine Company and the Johnson Turbine Pump Company.

DECIDUOUS GROWERS TO HOLD INSTITUTES

Los Angeles county deciduous fruit growers are much interested in the coming deciduous institutes, which are to be held at Van Nuys, in the women's clubhouse, on November 9, and at the Palmdale auditorium on November 10. After the programs inside, Prof. Warren P. Tufts will demonstrate pruning methods in the field.

Following is the program for the institute at Van Nuys:

"What the Deciduous Fruit Growers' Department Is"—Robert W. Hodgson; "Pruning Results During the 1922 Season"—Vincent F. Blanchard; "Improvement in the Quality of Canning Fruits"—S. W. Cunningham; "Methods of Drying Apricots,"—H. C. Dunlap; "Control of Bacterial Gummosis and Brown Rot of the Apricot"—Dr. J. T. Barrett; "Control of Insects and Diseases of Deciduous Fruits"—Prof. George P. Weldon; "Soil Improvement and Soil Moisture for Deciduous Fruits"—L. C. Holmes; "Improvement in Quality of Fresh Fruits and Marketing Methods"—Speaker to be selected.

PLAN LARGE PLANTING

VISALIA.—Although the market toward the last of the season fell off, and many growers were left with a considerable acreage of melons on their hands, cantaloupe growers of the southern section of Tulare county are planning another heavy planting next spring. They believe that conditions can be improved this time, that the crop can be planted earlier and that improved methods of handling the fruit can be perfected and higher prices secured. Early season fruit from Tulare county this summer was quickly taken up on the market and was of excellent quality. The results, considering that this was the first year of melon growing on an extensive scale in Tulare county, were most gratifying. It is thought that at least twice as many can be harvested next season and that a ready market can be found.

For early green peppers sow the seed in hotbeds in December and January.

The demand for garlic is limited, and the price has a wide range.

FINDS INDEPENDENCE ON A SMALL RANCH

BAKERSFIELD.—With forty-three varieties of grapes growing on ten acres of land, Richard Stansbury, rancher of Shafter, Kern county, has found the road to independence through intensive cultivation. One acre he spared to apricots and from these he has realized from $400 to $500 a year. With these fruits, a vegetable garden, a Jersey cow and pen of Barred Rock chickens Mr. Stansbury declares he lives a life as nearly approaching the dream of Utopia as he ever expects to find—"except, of course, you have to work," he adds. Making every foot of ground produce, he continues to add dollars to his bank account.

Through leafy vineyard aisles Mr. Stansbury shows the vines laden with their wealth of fruit—flaming Tokays; enormous Servian blues, bursting with luscious juice; dainty Rose of Peru; spicy, sun-warmed Muscats—name your own variety, Stansbury has it. Five acres are in bearing Thompson seedless vines, which have averaged in production two and a half tons of raisins to the acre.

The model little ranch lies at the edge of Shafter, with Main street just two short blocks away, yet when Mr. Stansbury first came to the district long-eared jack rabbits held sway on what is now the front lawn, coyotes sang the evening song at the close of day and the rich vineyard tract was a sage-brush waste.

The best soil for truck crops is a rich, sandy loam.

Insure Your Orchard!

Progressive farmers, breeders, orchardists insure their lives, their buildings, their automobile, etc. They do so because it is good business. It is even more important and more necessary that orchardists insure their fruit crop against frost and freezes—because when killing frosts come—the loss is appalling. Orchardists should protect themselves against these lost profits. These losses can be eliminated. The DUNN Orchard Heater completely solves the problem.

650 thousand DUNN Orchard Heaters in use by largest citrus growers in California. Hundreds of thousands of this type heater in use elsewhere in U. S. Most effective because of exclusive patented features. Improved lower stack with perforations depressed to inside, radiates heat to side and down—with more intense heat at bottom of stack. Perfect combustion. All heat—and no smoke. Joints fit tightly. Only draft is through patented down draft tube. No other draft anywhere. Heat generated rapidly—maximum protection secured at once.

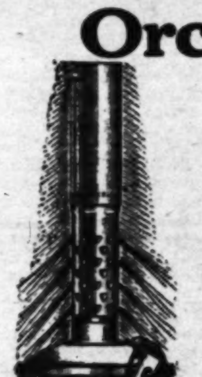
The DUNN Orchard Heater is the only orchard heater with permanent asbestos lighting wick. Lights quickly and stays lit. The DUNN Orchard Heater burns clean as a gas jet. Uses less oil.

9½ gallon heater burns 20 hours at full 100% efficiency without refilling. Collapsible stacks. Patented swedge on bowl is fine hand grip for carrying heater. Made of 24 gauge extra heavy Keystone Copper Bearing Steel. Seamless bowl and cover.



Shows how the DUNN radiates heat to the side and to the ground—with more intense heat waves coming from bottom of the improved stack with perforations depressed to inside.

Orchard Heaters Needed Everywhere

Citrus growers in California, Florida and adjacent states should obtain facts about records and performance of the DUNN Orchard Heater in citrus groves.

Orchardists in Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Carolinas, Tennessee, Arkansas, should also make inquiry as to the DUNN Orchard Heater and how it protects profits.

Growers in the east—New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and adjoining states, need the orchard insurance made possible by use of the DUNN Orchard Heater.

Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan—you are not 'immune from profit-destroying frosts.' Ask us for the facts. Do away with the loss caused by freezes.

The Northwest too—Washington, Idaho, Oregon—investigate the DUNN Orchard Heater.

Records—everywhere—show DUNN Orchard Heaters do pay hundreds of dollars on the investment. The first cost—except for fuel—is the only cost. Depreciation based on actual facts less than 5% for 8 years.

You want and need DUNN Orchard Heaters. Write or send coupon for booklet which gives all the facts and valuable information on how to protect YOUR crops and insure profits. Every orchardist should have it. Write us today. No obligation. Use the coupon. Or a postal will do. Address

MACHINES DO WORK NOW DONE BY HAND

UNIVERSITY FARM, DAVIS. — The Agronomy and Engineering Divisions of the University Farm, on September 30, conducted one of the most successful demonstrations in the history of the farm, about a hundred farmers gathering from all parts of the State to inspect types of machinery offered by various manufacturing firms for harvesting of the new crop of Yolo in which agriculturalists are now interested. A new idea was presented to many of the farmers, when it was pointed out by Prof. Hendry, that a profitable crop of Yolo had been produced on an ordinary summer fallow without irrigation and a second surprise came when no less than six different machines were brought forward and satisfactorily demonstrated in harvesting a crop which had hitherto been regarded as suitable only for hand picking.

Milo and Egyptian corn have always been hand picked in California at a cost of from $5 to $6 per acre and the slowness and costliness of the operation has deterred many from growing a profitable and drouth-resistant crop except on a small scale. Few, perhaps, have dreamed of utilizing extensive areas of summer fallow for the production of a profitable crop. At Davis, this season, a forty-acre field, which had never produced anything but barley and wheat, having produced a crop of barley a year ago last June, and which was plowed last winter and planted to Yolo in April, yielded a ton of Yolo seed per acre in 1922. The entire cost of production was $14 per acre and the value of the crop $24 per acre. Figuring another way, a summer fallow was made to return a profit of $10 per acre and the field, which was foul, was thoroughly cleaned by the growth of a row crop.

The new variety is dwarf, with uniform straight heads like grain and can be conveniently harvested like grain. A small Deering combined harvester was used on part of the field, eliminating entirely the preliminary heading and drying operation, and put the grain in the sack for about $3 per acre. A twelve-foot McCormick push header was used on another block and delivered the head into a header wagon as cheaply and with as little loss as in heading wheat or barley. This could be used on late-maturing Yolo crops on moist land, too green to thrash directly from the stack to the sack, it is believed. Three one-row headers—the Deere, the Reschke and the Ventura—were also successfully demonstrated. They are all of the type which may be attached to a farm wagon bed and are inexpensive machines adapted to small areas. They handled Yolo admirably and cut the heading cost below $1 per acre; but failed on the old irregular-growing varieties like Milo.

A year ago, a 2900-pound crop of Yolo was produced in the quadrangle of the University farm with one irrigation and following harvest in October, the stubble was disked and sixty pounds of Hard Federation wheat drilled per acre without other preparation. The wheat yielded twenty-two sacks or forty-four bushels per acre last June and the field will go back in alfalfa in February. This is a good three-course rotation, producing grain and hay, and illustrates the usefulness of a summer grain crop adapted to machine harvesting in a system of crop rotation.

The Yolo crop in the Quadrangle field in 1921 attracted so much attention that the entire crop was distributed for seed with the result that this season there were 40,000 acres of Yolo in thirty-two California counties, grown by 764 California farmers.

INCREASE ACREAGE OF CAULIFLOWER

According to reliable reports from the field, the Los Angeles County cauliflower acreage this year shows an increase of 300 acres over that of last year, plantings totaling 4930 acres for all varieties. The condition at the present time, is satisfactory and if weather conditions remain favorable, growers expect more than an average yield.

Tributary to the Vegalia and Laguna varieties. Plantings around Norwalk and Downey total 1000 acres, a substantial increase over last year. Fruitland, the old and reliable Snowball Cauliflower district, reports 225 acres of that sort, and about 100 acres of the others. Compton and districts adjacent report close to 500 acres, the majority of which is in the Medium Early Pearl. Inglewood, which makes its initial entry into the cauliflower growing field this year, has a total of 140 acres of the Early and Medium Early. Other districts report a slight increase over last year.

Conditions in some districts of the North, as is confirmed by several local distributing agencies, indicate that the crop there will not figure heavy in the shipping this year. Around Colma, where experienced growers plant a large acreage each year, the crop is nearly normal. But other districts, the newer ones especially, were planted late, and the 'flower is not expected to mature.

The car shortage looms up as a possible obstruction in the disposal of the crop. Although the present outlook is not favorable both growers and distributing agencies are hoping that the situation will be relieved by the time the main crop matures. A few cars have been shipped already, the season having begun November 1.

Los Angeles County Fair

has come to be one of the big cards of fairs in Southern California, where every farmer, stock man and orchardist is as much interested in the newest in autos as is his city friend. The automobile show at Pomona was one of the best that has been seen at a Southland fair.

From the auto exhibit, the visitor stepped into the big tractor and farm implement tent, where was shown the best assemblage of its kind seen in the South this year. Many makes of tractors were exhibited, some as "stripped models," showing the mechanisms, and most of them attached to various tools used in orchard and farm operation. The exhibit of trucks was especially noteworthy, reflecting the increasing interest upon the part of agriculturists in the use of this kind of power in their work. There were a number of interesting pump and irrigation equipment displays, several booths having such machines in operation.

The poultry show was in two respects the most notable held at a Southern California fair this year, surpassing all others in number of standard bird shows and in the size and quality of its pigeon display. The fair at Riverside the week before had a record-beating exhibit of Bantams which was not equalled by that at Pomona.

The rabbit and cavy show at Pomona reflected the interest in these small animals in the Southland and the goat show, while not equal in size to that held at Riverside, attracted a number of leading milch goat breeders.

Yolo at University Farm, Davis.

Great interest was shown by all fair visitors in the attractive displays made by boys and girls of schools and club taking an interest in agricultural activities. First prize for exhibits of this character went to the boys of the California Junior Republic of Chino, and second to Chaffey Union High School.

LIVE STOCK SECTION ....

The live-stock show at the Los Angeles County Fair was a great success, in spite of the fact that this fair date conflicted with that of the California National Livestock Show at San Francisco. Besides many entries from old-established breeders, there was a hearty response from newer and smaller breeders, who made their appearance in the show ring for the first time, this indicating in a very substantial way the progress that is being made in establishing new, pure-bred herds in Southern California.

The well-filled classes of horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and goats brought out, in many instances, outstanding individuals. The dairy breeds were strong in quality. In the Holstein division the former grand champion bull, Dichter Spofford Korndyke Lad 5th, owned by the California Junior Republic of Chino, came in for premier honors in the male classes, while the wonderful aged cow, Ava Model Hengerveld 2nd, State Fair grand champion, owned by Fred Hartsook of Lankershim, was made grand champion female. Mr. Hartsook's first prize junior yearling heifer, Caroline Wayne Fayne, was junior champion, and his first prize junior yearling bull, Tritomia Panzie Ormsby, was selected for junior champion male.

In the Guernsey division the Italian Vineyard Company of Guasti won grand champion female honors with its two-year-old heifer, Caroline E. Langdon of Hollow Hill Farm, while a single entry, an unnamed junior bull calf, exhibited by A. O. Dinsmoor of El Monte, after winning his class, was made junior and grand champion bull.

Ferdinand R. Bain of Los Angeles, with his La Lomita ranch herd of Jersey cattle, took all championships in this division, the senior and grand champion cow being his

GROWING SCARCITY OF HAY IN SOUTH

CHINO.—S. A. Minnick, manager of the Chino Alfalfa Growers' Association, is of the opinion that there will be a shortage of hay this year. There is not enough hay to meet the demand, and as a consequence the price of loose hay in the field has advanced to from $22 to $23.50 per ton. Baled hay is now priced anywhere from $25 to $27 a ton, according to the quality of the product. The reasons given are, first, the increase in the number of dairy herds throughout the State, and second, the scarcity of hay in all sections of the State. Farmers of the Imperial Valley, who raise enormous quantities of hay during normal years, have practically none to sell this year, and hardly enough for local needs, it is reported.

The territory tributary to Chino now has about 4000 dairy cattle, and half the alfalfa acreage in that section is owned by dairymen. The acreage south of Pomona and west of Chino, which formerly supplied much of the loose hay demand for the Pomona section, is now largely planted to citrus and deciduous fruits and walnuts, and it has become necessary for the consumers in this section to haul hay from east of Chino, where there is not the crop this year as in former years. In fact, the hay situation in this section of the country may be very acute before the winter season is over.

TO RESTORE VALLEY SOILS TO FERTILITY

BRAWLEY.—The fertility of the soil of Imperial Valley was one of the best talking points of the early real estate men here. They said the soil was a mile deep; that its fertility was inexhaustible, and so many ranchers, believing this to be gospel truth, sold stable manure to coast orchardists for a song. Ranchers continued to crop their land, putting nothing back, and now many find their soil impoverished.

A campaign of education that has for its object the restoration of valley lands to their original fertility has been launched by Clark Adair, a well-known rancher. He has enlisted the interest of the farm bureau, chambers of commerce, bankers and others in the movement. It is proposed to hold a series of public meetings during November, to be addressed by agricultural experts and successful valley farmers.

The matter of fertilizing the soil by means of cover crops and stable manure, especially the former, has been a hobby with Horticultural Commissioner Waite for years. It seems the good seed he has been sowing has finally taken root.

SELECT PERSONNEL FOR ORANGE SHOW

SAN BERNARDINO.—Plans for the thirteenth annual Orange Show were discussed at the recent meeting of the governing board. Decorations was the principal phase discussed. Secretary Mack stated that from now on the members of the board and officers of the show will convene every week until plans for the exposition have been completed. Mr. Mack is spending a great deal of time at the show grounds, where improvements are rapidly being completed.

Members of the board are: J. B. Gill, president; J. Dale Gentry, vice-president; J. H. Wilson, secretary; R. H. Mack, general manager; J. D. Gentry, admissions; S. W. McNabb, amusements; H. C. McAllister, auto exhibits; A. G. Kendall, awards; J. E. Rich, by-products; J. W. Curtis, citrus institute; Z. T. Bell, concessions; B. L. Holmes, decorations; Arthur J. Brown, entertainment; W. S. Shepardson, excursions; W. M. Parket, feature exhibits; Joseph Strawser, finance; John Anderson, fruit exhibits; O. F. Heilborn, illuminations; W. T. Smith, industrial exhibits; R. C. Harbison, information and accommodations; H. M. Hays, installation; R. D. McCook, invitation; L. A. Stromee, parades; C. B. Hansen, program; R. E. Swing, property; George N. Haven, publicity and posters; F. E. Peachey, transportation.

ORGANIZE DECIDUOUS GROWERS DEPARTMENT

Friday, October 13, had no terrors for members of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, who were growers of deciduous fruits, for on that day the deciduous growers department of the bureau was finally organized.

J. C. Hayes of Roscoe was elected chairman of the Executive Committee of the department, and I. S. Roach of Zelzah, vice-chairman. Mr. Hayes will serve as director-at-large on the Farm Bureau Board. Other members of the committee are E. M. Allen, Downey; F. L. Williamson, Lankershim; John T. Russell, Van Nuys; C. B. Sexsmith, Owensmouth.

Avocado Problem

erant of standing water, the avocado needs a uniformly moist soil during the growing season, with the moisture well distributed throughout the root zone. The tree comes from a region where an abundance of rain falls during the entire growing season. Where found in regions of scant rainfall, such as the Chota Valley in Ecuador, the trees are generally found bordering streams. Some observers recommend that at least a third more water be used than for citrus trees. This is a point that field investigation tests must settle. Present irrigation practices are too varied to permit of general conclusions. Probably at least one and one-half acre inches of water, applied every two weeks, would be the minimum requirement of an avocado orchard on medium sandy and loam soils. Heavy soils, on the other hand, need to be handled differently. Cases of tree drowning have occurred where too much water was applied on such soil types and where proper drainage was not provided.

FERTILIZATION STUDY

There is no normal fertilizer practice in avocado culture. Some growers have attempted to apply the same practices that are used in citrus orchards, and this at least furnishes a basis to make a beginning. The avocado is a fruit higher in protein content than is the orange or lemon, and it is high in salts. It probably makes a greater draft on plant food in the soil than do citrus trees where consistent crops are borne. No definite information has been made available on this point.

Primarily, the greatest needs of soils in Southern California are nitrogen and organic matter. Where these two requirements are met, the question of potash and phosphoric acid can be dismissed as far as most soils are concerned. These elements are present in sufficient amounts in most of our soils in arid regions. They are released by acids formed during the decay of organic matter in the soil. Organic matter can be added either in the form of bulky manures and straws, such as bean straw, or can be secured by growing cover crops and turning them under. Cover cropping with leguminous crops is not as general with avocados as it should be. Many of the plantings are relatively small, and systematic orchard practice is not so common. All the advantages secured from the use of cover crops in citrus orchards also apply in avocado orchards. According to investigations in California and in the Middle West, $40 to $50 an acre is a conservative estimate of the value of a cover crop.

While some nitrogen is added to the soil by leguminous cover crops, yet the full nitrogen requirement of the avocado tree cannot be met this way. Additional nitrogen will be required from other sources, such as manures, organic fertilizers and chemical fertilizers. It is estimated that a citrus tree needs at least two pounds of nitrogen per year. This may be secured from different sources mentioned. Where obtained from organic sources, such as tankage, cottonseed meal, dried blood, etc., Florida experience seems to indicate that better results are obtained than when chemical nitrates are used. The use of from 100 to 200 pounds of barnyard manure per tree per year, especially when cover crops are used as well, is a practice that seems to solve the nitrogen problem in many citrus groves. These factors must be taken into consideration when working out any satisfactory avocado fertilizing program.

ROOT STOCKS—PRUNING

So far, both Guatemalan and Mexican seedling root stocks have been used for budding. Congeniality of varieties and root stocks has not been studied. Certain varieties make weak unions and poor tops, and have had to be discarded as commercial varieties, though the parent trees are themselves satisfactory. Some of these, placed in older vigorous growing trees, develop thrifty fruiting branches. The recent discovery by Mr. Popenoe of the primitive form of the avocado adds a new possibility for root stock trials. This field, like the others, awaits study.

It is well to know that different varieties of the avocado have very different growing habits, and present different pruning problems in making satisfactory orchard trees. A study of the different kinds of wood produced by the tree is needed to formulate a rational pruning system. The avocado produces both fruiting wood and vegetative growth of a non-fruiting character. No system has yet been worked out completely for a maximum production of desirable fruiting branches.

In addition to the above problems, various others of greater or less importance have presented themselves. The work on the composition of the avocado, its vitamine content, and the possibility of increasing protein content, remains as a future problem awaiting the time when the mysteries of production and culture have been solved so that normal crops can be assured. The industry at present needs the assistance of Federal and State agencies if it is to make continued progress.

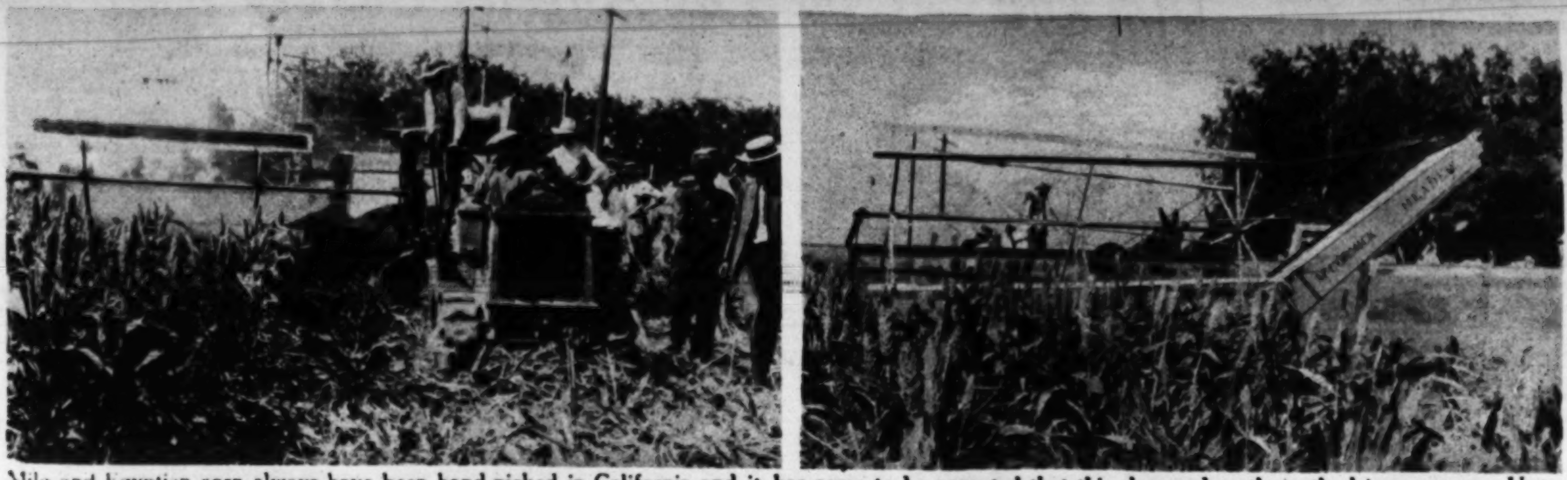
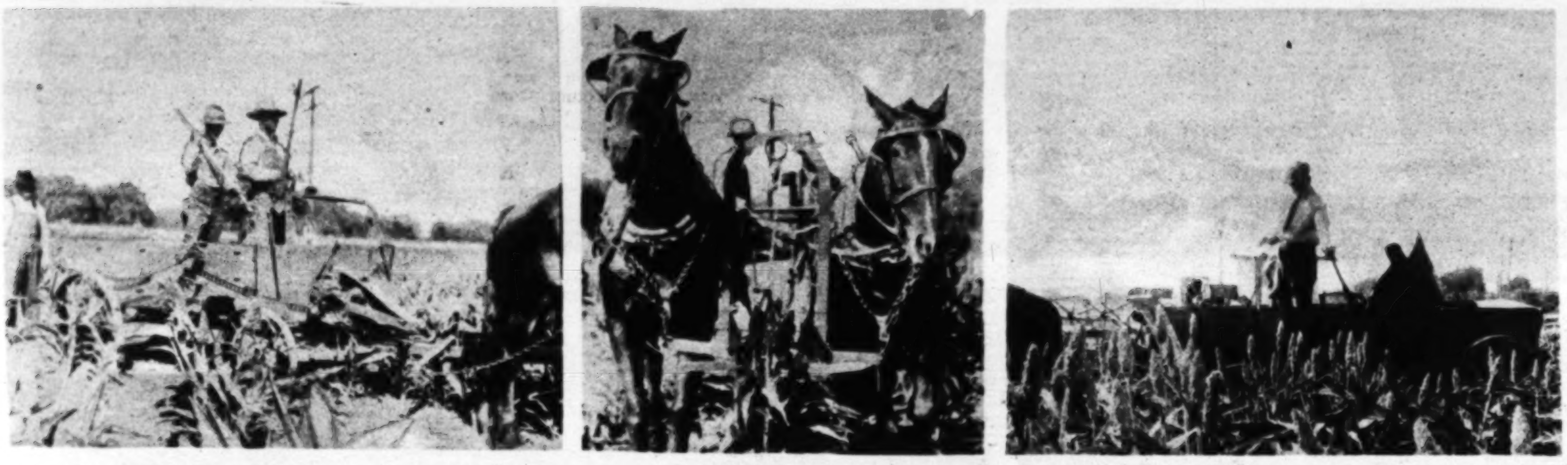
Labor-Saving Machines Harvest New Dry Land Crop



Milo and Egyptian corn always have been hand-picked in California and it has come to be accepted that this slow and costly method is necessary. Up at the University Farm at Davis, however, they decided recently to invite the farm machinery firms to try harvesting a similar crop, the new Yolo, of which there was a forty-acre field at the Farm, with machines. The invitation was accepted by several concerns and no less than six machines were brought forward and satisfactorily demonstrated. Above are a small Deering combined harvester (left) and a McCormick push header, two of the machines successfully used.



Three one-row headers were also used with successful results in the harvesting of the Yolo. All were of the type which may be attached to a farm wagon bed. Left to right—Reschke header placed in front of wagon box; close up of split tongue used in connection with outfit; side view of John Deere header, showing operator adjusting cutting height. On an old irregular growing Milo field, the headers did not give the results had with the even-growing Yolo, according to the University Farm specialist.
